Under the Shadow of Baldhead

A Mining Expert Who Held Honor Above Love

By George Ethelbert Walsh Copyright by American Press Asso-

The sickly light from the single oil lamp gave a peculiarly weird, fantastic effect to the men seated around the plain pine table.

In the murky light the dark, heavy bearded faces took on a grimmer expression than by daylight, and the shifting gaze of eyes were of a nature to cause uneasiness. But Bertran had not followed his profession of expert mining engineer without ac quiring a certain amount of courage to carry him through unpleasant and even dangerous situations.

"Well, gentlemen," he exclaimed. after a nod of welcome from the circle, "I suppose you have something to

"You have finished the examination of the mine, I suppose, Mr. Bertran?" tentatively queried Carstack, a thickset mining adventurer, who Bertran understood was at the head of the syndicate anxious to acquire the Baldhead mine.

"Yes, my work is finished, and I shall return in a few days to report to the owners. "You haven't sent any word yet-by letter or by telegraph!" "No, I have sent no word."

"And the report is to be"-A flush of annoyance mounted to his cheeks at this unfinished question.

"My report is a matter of business secrecy with my employers," he answered simply, but with emphasis. "We understand your position, Mr.

Bertran," said Carstack. "Business honor-professional etiquette - makes you sensitive about giving us an inkling of your report. But as our offer for this mine is a liberal one and we have much at stake in the transaction you can realize our anxiety to know what you have found."

Bertran turned slowly toward the speaker and replied evasively:

"You know what my findings have been and can guess what the tenor of my report will be."

"Then your estimation of its value is far greater than the price we've offered. Would you mind stating what value you place on it?" Bertran laughed.

"It would be dishonorable for me to do so," he replied quietly.

Topham, who up to this point had remained a passive listener, suddenly burst all restraint and said sharply:

"What is your price for the information? We'll meet you on reasonable grounds.

Bertram swung around angrily, a sharp retort on his lips. But the row of grim faces disauaded him. They were not men easily intimidated. The zugged, scarred faces were not pleasant to look at. With a sudden change of his features Montrous took up his companion's lead and added:

"We'll not mince matters, Mr. Bertran. There are millions in that mine. You know it, and we know it, Send in a report to suit us and your fortune is made. One-fourth interest-a million or more will be your share,"

The full extent of their plan was revealed by this blunt speech, Bertran disliked circumlocution, and now that he knew fully their scheme he breathed easier. He breathed easier for anoffier reason. A fourth share of the mine meant that there were only three in the conspiracy. This let out Charkey Ross-Charley, who had been so dear to him in the old college days. Good patured, but weak in character and easily led, Bertran had feared that the friend of his younger days had become involved in the swindle. It was for Charley's sake-and another's that he had felt the painfulness of his position.

"I regret, gentlemen," he begar slowly, but with such evident mean ing in his words that the three mer frowned.

Topliam; impulsive and brutal i speech, interrupted quickly:

"You know the alternative." He placed his hand menacingly or his hip. "Wait one minute!"

Carstack held up a warning hand and moved toward the door. The others passively watched him, and Bertran instinctively sensed new danger. The door opened and closed behind the man, then opened again and admitted another. Bertran looked through the smoke laden atmosphere at the new comer and then started visibly.

"Charley-you here?" he said at ruptly.

Charley Ross, vigorously supported by Carstack in the rear, stepped half lieve that bribery had had any weight willingly toward the center of the in the decision. He had scorned to room. His eyes did not look at his friend and his bronzed face was pale. Bertran surveyed him silently and apprehensively.

"Charley," he said softly, "I am sor ry that you have come. This is no place for us. Come away with me."

For reply the boy-he was not much more than a boy in looks-glanced ferent to her." swiftly down the row of grim faces and then pleadingly into the eyes of Bertran.

I do it because-because"-Then he flung himself from the room, his whole body trembling with

"If it makes you love me less to say it, you must hear it from my lips now. It was not Charley's appeal for you that made me apparently yield."

She looked bewildered, but an expression of relief came into her face. Still holding her a half willing prisoner, he continued:

"I have not compromised my honor, nor shall I break my word with those conspirators. They have bungled and been caught in their own trap, and I left them gloating over their supposed triumph. The mine is not worth more than they offered the owners. The vein of gold which they thought meant fabulous wealth to them is a false lead. It does not extend down attempting to blot the ink, he handed a dozen feet. I knew that before I went to the meeting, and I shall so report to the owners. make me and poor Charley a party to it they have actually paved the way to their own ruin. Let them have the mine. It will never reward them for their villainy." The moon's white light was obscured by the peak of old Baldhead, and the grim shadow cast athwart the landscape encompassed them. When it deepened so their figures were invisible they were entwined as one. In the cabin near by the three conspirators gloated over their blundering swindle, a beardless boy cowering before them in abject mental torture. But the lovers waited long and patiently for his release-waited until the dews of night grew heavy and chilly-until the glow of a new day bathed old Baldhead in a new light on with his declaration. An Amusing Game.

Most mothers are sometimes at a loss for new ways of amusing the little ones. The game of "hold fast" is one that they will appreciate. The only requisite is a number of lengths of tape, all of the same number of inches, or if the tape is not at hand cut silesia or any cotton goods into narrow strips and use this. The person who leads the game holds one end of each of the tapes. The opposite end of each strip is held by some other player, and all players other than the leader form a semicircle, which the leader himself must stand facing. When the leader says "hold fast," all players must let go their tapes, and when he says "Let go!" they must, on the contrary, hold them fast. Any one obeying the commands literally, as some are sure to do, must pay forfeits.

Developing the Muscles.

Prevention is better than cure, and it is generally easier than cure too. The prevention of ungraceful figures ease rests chiefly boon simple exercises, which, without fatiguing the muscles, expand its chest, straighten its figure and interest its mind. This last is most necessary. There are few things children hate more than the old fashloned dready "calisthenic exercises." which are almost as penitential as the exercise of the prison yard. The mind affects the body. The dull routine of calisthenics will not produce the same beneficial effect as interesting of the mind as well as the development of the body.

The Terrors of the Tub. Many an infant cherub has been known to set up a loud wall when put in its tub for a bath, and its people have grown to dread the hour of the daily bath. A writer declares that many babies are frightened at the tub because they feel insecure and slip around in it and that this fright does not wear off

She suggests that a thick towel be placed in the bottom of the tub. Baby will be delighted, she says, and even the most timid will lose all fear when he finds he does not slip about.

until the little one is well grown.

A child compelled to sit still for a long time in one position-during lesson hours, for instance-is very apt to contort its body into injurious postures, and if this goes on unheeded, especially if the child is at all weakly. some kind of permanent and mischiev ous result is almost sure to follow.

It is in this way that round backs, which contract the lungs and often lead to consumption, curvature of the spine, pigeon chests and such very common deformities, frequently arise

Sunshine For Childhood.

Every mother should give due thought to the situation of the rooms she is to use for the children. The day nursery should always be on the south side of the house, where part of the day it is flooded in sunshine, and where the north winds do not reach it. The night nursery should always be the quietest room in the house, and should face north, for babies should have absolute quiet to sleep in and plenty of cold fresh air.

Pulling the First Teeth. A child's first tooth should not be pulled until it fairly drops at the touch. If it is pulled from the jaw before the permanent tooth is well formed the jaw shrinks. When the permanent tooth appears, being larger than its predecessor, it does not find the proper room which growth of the jaw would otherwise give, and the re sult is ugly, everlapping teeth, so dis-figuring, so painful and so costly to

If you run short of night lights try this: Take a wax candle, cover the top, which has been burnt level, with a thin layer of salt, leaving only the blackened end of the wick exposed. Light the candle, and it will give a Call, 'Phone or write, faint but steady light all night.

MASTERING A TEMPER.

The Method by Which Marion Crawford Controlled His Anger.

Mrs. Hugh Fraser, sister of the late F. Marion Crawford, tells some interesting stories of him in her book. "A Diplomatist's Wife In Many Lands." It was at the Villa Negroni. Rome, that Crawford was born, an event which so delighted his father that, as Mrs Fraser says, "my father was beside himself with joy and showered presents on all of us to make us understand and share it."

When young Francis was about ten years old it dawned upon him that he had a violent and uncontrollable temper, and with the simplicity which barked all his character he decided to et it in hand.

'One member of the family constantly irritated him to the verge of frenzy, and he invented a form of self discipline which very few children would have thought of imposing on themselves. My mother entered his room one day and found him walking round and round it, carrying on his back a heavy wooden shutter which he had lifted off its hinges at the window.

"'My dear child,' she exclaimed. 'what are you doing?' "'Getting over a rage,' he replied loggedly, continuing the exercise 'When I am so angry that I want to kill somebody I come in here and carry the shutter three times round the room before I answer them. It is the only

Such accomplishments are partly a matter of inheritance and environment. for Japan is a country where tea has been raised and used for centuries. With tea plantations five centuries old and tea plants 200 years of age there is no need for tea commissions to fix customs standards. As for the household standards, the Japanese house wife decides them herself.

FIREPROOF SMOKEHOUSE.

Combined With Storeroom, but the Latter May Be Omitted.

The Country Gentleman, from which these cuts and this article are reproduced, gives the following directions for the erection of a fireproof smokehouse and storeroom combined which has given satisfaction:

The building is divided into two sections. That facing the dwelling and situated at the right end in the diagram given herewith, being incased in stone walls and closed with dark shutters when desired, answers a useful purpose for keeping fruit, fresh meat and provisions generally. The left hand half of the building is occupied with the smokehouse. The diagram shows the position of the different parts. The ash pit, surrounded by stone walls and a layer of stone beneath, laid in water lime mortar and securely coated with the same, keeps the ashes dry, and no water can enter. The ash pit is entered by an iron door, Over it is a brick arch containing several holes the size of a half brick, through which the smoke passes into the smoke apartment above, which is entered by the outside door on the left end of the building by the assistance of a stepladder. This smoke room is 6 by 10 feet in the clear. The ventilating window at the end and the ventilating chimney at the top are both opened when the hams are smoking and closely shut when the operation is completed. The top of the arch forms the floor of the smoke room.

A large number of hams may be placed in this room by the followon a ledge or projection from the walls have hooks driven in on both edges far enough apart to receive the hams, so that a row may be hung on each |  side. When full each is pushed along to one side and another filled, and so on till all are in their places. The ventllators above are then opened, and smoke is started on the heap of ashes below. For this purpose cobs are used or unseasoned maple or body hickory.

DIAGRAM OF SMOREBOUSE.

time the smoke has passed up through the openings in the arch it has become cold and cannot heat the hams. Ten or twelve days will usually be enough for the completion of the operation, when the ventilators at the end and in the chimney above are closely shut. The hams, being now kept perfectly dark and thoroughly excluded from the air outside, will keep in good condition. Flies will do no injury through the summer with a small fire started once a month and with the upper ventilator partly open at the time. This obviates the common and troublesome task of incasing the hams in muslin, whitewashing them or packing them in oats or ashes, It is obvious that the apartment used as a storeroom may be omitted and the smokehouse built alone. Double brick, hollow walls might be even better than stone. The rafters should be ten inches wide, strongly lathed, plastered and filled with sawdust to keep the room cool.

CLEARING LOGGED OFF LANDS

Char Pit Method Recommended Highly

by Washington Professor. That logged off lands can be cleared of stumps, removing roots to a depth below the reach of a plow, and at a cost of less than 50 cents a stump has been demonstrated by the experiments of Professor H. W. Sparks of the state college at Pullman, Wash.

Professor Sparks' successful experiments have been with the char pit method. Once understood this method is the most simple and inexpensive that can be imagined. A little fire, a little clayey earth and a little watchfulness are the essentials in the process by the combination of which the most hopeless looking stumpy acreage can be prepared for the plow in the course of two weeks.

The char pit method is simply an adaptation of the old and well known method of making charcoal by burning in closed pits. It depends for its efficiency on concentration of heat. A ring of loose wood, bark, etc., is first laid all the way round the stump and as close to it as possible, and this is then covered to a depth of about six inches with earth, leaving a small opening in the direction from which the wind is blowing. The wood is then lighted at this point and left for about half an hour, until the fire is well started, when this hole is then covered up like the rest. As the fire burns back into the stump the blanket of earth must be kept right up to the stump so that the fire never has an opportunity to break out. The top of the stump doesn't burn, but is simply cut off cleanly at a point about level with the top of the earthen blanket. When the top has been cut off by the fire and rolls off the whole crown of the stump should be covered with earth and can then be left without much further attention until the roots have been burned out. This is sometimes done to a depth of fifteen feet or

The length of time required to destroy the stump depends on what kind of wood it is and whether green, dry or rotten. The most stubborn stumps will disappear in two weeks at the most, while many are done away with in three or four days. The record of Professor Sparks' experiment shows an average cost of between 40 and 50 cents a stump. In some of these he has used fuel oil and coal tar.

The experiments which have so far been successful have been with clay soil. This, baked and hardened by the fire, conserves the highest degree of ing arrangement: Pieces of hardwood heat. Sandy or stony soil sifts in and plank eight inches wide and long puts out the fire or permits it to enough to reach across the room rest spread. Professor Sparks is now working out certain theories by which he on each side. These pieces of plank expects to perfect a similar method adapted to other soils than clay.

The farmer gets value received from seed sown. He who drops good seed into the ground will have an excellent crop of painted buildings, clean ditches, good fences, good live stock, profits and good humor. He who feeds the soil with poor seed will get and regret a splendid crop of weeds, broken gates, leaky roofs, poor machinery, scrub animals and back taxes .- Ohio Department of Agriculture Bulletin.

A Good Word For Buckwheat. No crop will bring in better returns in the northern states for the time it occupies the ground than buckwheat. It is put in after all other crops have been planted and are growing. It is the best grain to raise to subdue a patch of troublesome weeds and to starve out worms in the soil. It also comes handy to sow on vacant pieces of ground which have been left be cause too late to be sown to some other crop. It is also a valuable crop to plow under to enrich the soil and give humus, Hum of the Hive.

Be sure that your bees have a good prolific Italian queen, and the ants el stained a little polishing with fine sand or emery paper will remove it. There are many who advocate the non-use of the queen excluding honey board, but some authorities strongly advise its use in connection with the production of extracted honey. A large number of farmers scattered over the southern states are engaged extensively in honey production along with farming. Some of them ship over a car of honey each senson. Heartsease was formerly not worth considering as a honey plant, because of its scarcity, but of late years it has become plentier, and now it is worth many dollars. Same with daudelion. The present improved system of management requires that hives should not stand too near each other. There should be at least six feet between them, and ten would be a preferable

A bee expert gives away this little secret: If bees are kept in a shed the crossest of them can be handled with out fear of being stung. The Wedding Reception.

Congratulations are usually offered as soon as an engagement is made known, and therefore there is no need to repeat them at the wedding reception. At the reception it suffices to shake hands with the bride and bridegroom after having shaken hands with the bride's mother. If unacquainted with the bride you should not wait to be introduced to her. She will offer to shake hands with you as a matter of course, you being a friend of the bridegroom and a guest in her mother's house. If you are a friend of the bride and unacquainted with the bridegroom she will introduce him to you after you have shaken hands with Six Months Gain her. If you have not had an opportunity of congratulating her on her engagement you might say, "I must wish you both every happiness," but it is an old fashioned custom to offer good wishes to a bride at a reception. and therefore it is seldom done. Guests pass the bride and bridegroom so quickly that to pause and to make polite speeches would occupy too much time and would weary the newly married couple greatly if all the guests were to follow this lead. Handshakes and smiles are all that circumstances admit of on such occasions. Oftener than not the bride has a word or two to say of thanks for a wedding present received on the previous evening, and sender before she can make room for shake hands.

Restaurant Etiquette.

It is the custom when dining at a restaurant for a woman to precede a is not uncommon for the man to go first, and good taste and common sense will probably make this latter the rule.

A menu card is given to the woman as well as to the man, but she has nothing to do with ordering the dinner unless the man asks her to make some selection. Even then she should not do much suggesting.

If her escort asks her to choose a salad or her own sweet she should do so without hesitation, as she should answer any question frankly before the food has been ordered. After the order has been given she should refrain from suggestion or critical com-

If she wishes the waiter to give her a fork or any other small article that may be required through the meal she is not to ask the waiter for it, but to tell her escort that he may send for it A woman is not supposed to give a waiter any order, but to act in all ways as though she were in a private On leaving the table the woman follows or precedes the man, as she wishes. She should put on her gloves before leaving the table. About Invitations.

A first invitation should be accepted if possible.

A note of invitation to a dinner, luncheon or theater party should have a written note of reply within twentyfour hours so that the hostess may have time to fill the place should a guest be unable to accept.

It is polite to give reasons for de clining an invitation, such as a previous engagement or absence from town. If a previous engagement is mentioned it is courteous to explain its nature.

An invitation should never be accepted provisionally-as, for instance; "I should be delighted to accept your charming invitation if I am well enough" or "if I am in town."

An invitation once accepted is a binding obligation. If illness or any other cause arises, making it impossible to go to a dinner or luncheon after explanation and regret should be sent to the hostess.

There must be no delay in answering an invitation to a dinner, breakfast, home wedding, luncheon, card party, wedding breakfast or theater party.

Real Good Manners.

It is the greatest mistake to think that manners are only for society and are to be set aside with our outdoor garments when we come home. If manners are meant to hide the unsightly side of human nature, to clothe the nakedness which shocks our highly cultivated sense of what is fitting, it is surely at home that this primitive aspect is most likely to obtrude, and It is just as shocking when displayed at our own fireside as to the world at large. If parents thught the sons of the house to be polite to their sisters and if they themselves were polite to each other there would be fewer unhappy homes. Boys often think that manners are only meant for girls, but they would be none the worse or less manly for knowing how to behave. while it is the greatest help to a girl when she goes out in the world to be able to feel at ease in society, to enter and leave a room gracefully and to find the right thing to say when her mother's friends speak to her.

Bath Tonics.

A strong spray that can be attached to the faucet of the bathtub is indispensable. It is essential in shampooing, as it removes the soap from the hair quickly and with little effort.

Genoa Bank Statement.

To the directors of The First National Bank of Genoa, N. Y.

Gentlemen: Your auditing committee respectfully reports as follows: The full committee met at the banking house July 7th and examined in detail the resources of the bank. The cash was counted and found correct. The 300discounted notes individually examined; and the discounts tallied with the books. The vouchers of all the other principal resource items were found to correspond with the records. We have about 125 accounts subject to check and 175 accounts bearing interest.

It may not be out of place to report that the books, vouchers and other records of the business are, in our judgment, most systematically kept, and the committee commends in emphatic terms the work and fidelity of the cashier. We append the statement of The First

A man was dining in an Italian restaurant in New York when two other men entered. "Hello, Fabroni!" exclaimed one of the two who entered.

"Hello yourself. Zanella. Sit down at this table.' "I have a friend with me." "There is room for your friend, too.

and I shall be happy to know him." "Giuseppe, Attanasio, this is my friend Andrea Fabroni."

The two men who were thus introduced stretched forth a hand each to the other. In doing so Attanasio's coat sleeve was raised, exposing his cuff. Fabroni's eyes lighted on the linked button, but only for the fraction of a second-indeed, not long enough for Attanasio to notice that Fabroni repressed a start.

"What are you doing now, Fabroni?" asked Zanella after the party had been seated.

"I have taken an agency for an olive oil house in Naples," said the man addressed. "I shall open an office soon with a warehouse in rear."

"You like New York?" "Very much. The bay here is not the bay of Naples, but the city is better adapted to money making than Naples. Are you a resident here, Senor Attanasio?" "Temporarily. I am looking for a business opening." "You will need some capital. There is room in the importing of foreign fruits." "Thank you for the information. shall look into the matter."

"Have you been here long?" asked Fabroni of Attanasio.

"A couple of weeks." "What news did you bring from our Carissima Italia? When I left every one was talking about the Archeopoli murder." When Fabroni said this his eyes were fixed upon those of Attanasio. It seemed to Zanella, who had been looking over the menu and at the moment raised his eyes, that this merely happened so, but he was surprised to notice a slight change come over the countenance of the man addressed. "There was nothing of importance taking place when I sailed," said Attanasio

"Had the police got any clew as to who murdered Archeopoli?"

"I don't know." "Do you think that fellow Di Guida had anything to do with it?" "It was the general opinion when left that he was the murderer.'

"Is there any evidence to prove it?" "I really don't know. These criminal matters don't interest me. They are grewsome affairs." Attanasio spoke impatiently.

"The only reason I don't like New York," said Fabroni, "is the bad name these Black Hand people give us Italians. I'm almost ashamed to look an American in the face and own am an Italian. New York is full of our countrymen who should be behind bars. As soon as one of our criminals at home does something to cause the sleepy police to wake up and go for him he skips over here."

"The carabinieri are not lazy," re marked Zanella.

"Yes, but they pride themselves so far on being a national police that they have no stomach for such cases as they think belong to the municipal force. They could if they would, but they won't. It is my opinion that if the government had put the carabinierl on the Archeopoli murder case as soon as it occurred they would have secured the murderer. As it is, he has got away safely enough. Likely he has come over here."

When Fabroni spoke this last sentence he again fixed his eyes on those of Attanasio. But the latter as soon as the conversation had been turned back to criminal matters sat drumusing with his fingers on the table as though, not relishing such talk, he preferred to drop out of it.

"These criminals"- Fabroui was beginning again whee Zanelia interrupt-

"Oh, sink criminals!" he said. "Let's and something better to converse upon. Do you think our people at home will ever be able to disband our army and save the cost of supporting 300,000 idle men?"

"We may," said Fabroni, "If we wish to see some of our old enemies come down on us and occupy our territory again. That's what has ruined us Bad government is what has made so many criminals"-"Criminals again!" exclaimed Attanasio. "Your friend, my dear Zanella, has criminal on the brain."

"Really, gentlemen." Fabroni went on, "you must permit me to finish. We have bad more bad government in Naples than any other part of Europe, and that is what has made so many of our people cutthroats. I wish to tell you one bit of criminality, and then I will let up. It is a matter that was told me by a friend of mine in the municipal police of Naples. It is about a murder perpetrated not long ago. A member of the celebrated Camorra had got rich by his robberies and wished officers of the law. I have no authority to live a life of case without danger. to deal with you in that matter, informed upon them. No sooner had he done so than he was condemued to wine. Zaneila glanced at his friend Attanasio and saw that Fabroni's story was naving a powerful effect on him. He fingered his glass nervously, and his restless eye was never fixed but RARELY USED IN THE SENATE for a few moments on any object. "A man whom we will call Amadeo," continued Fabroni, "was deputed to do the deed. He and the person to be dispatched had been and were supposed to be bosom friends. He knew the doomed man's residence, the room he siept in and bow to get in and out without being seen. One night he climbed a lattice, got on a roof, entered his friend's room, and-well, the next morning his friend was found dead in his bed and quantities of jewelry he had gained by stealth were missing. The stealing of the jewelry was to give the impression that the man had been murdered for that especially."

The speaker again paused and took a sip of wine. Attanasio had become more and more agitated till he was lic business is being done. now trembling.

"Go ahead," said Zanella, "if you will give us your horrid stories, and get through with it."

"Be patient. I am nearly finished. The murder was reported to the police, who at once took possession of their offices, their committee rooms or the premises. On the door they found at their residences. an article of jewelry that had been doubtless dropped by the murderer in his hurry. It would form a good clew if its mate-for it was one of twocould be found on any one. The case was put into the hands of Marshal Rizzuto of the carabinieri, who at once began investigations. He learned that the murdered man's intimate friend. Amadeo, was missing. The problem was to find Amadeo.

"But to do this he must first gain the confidence of the man's friends. Rizzuto disguised himself as a peddler of trinkets such as are sold on the streets of Naples for a few centesimi each to tourists, mostly Americans. and, making his living in this way, he was not suspected when he told certain criminals that he would like to go into crime as a means of subsistence. He was not long in finding persons who were anxious to help him for a share of the plunder. But his ultimate object was to effect an entrance into the noble society of the Camorra as the only way to hear of Amadeo. He failed in this, but learned the whereabouts of his man in another way. One of Amadeo's former acquaintances, an Italian American, wrote anonymously to the commander of the carabinieri that he had seen Amadeo, whom he knew to be wanted for the Archeopoli murder, in New York." The story was drawing to a close, and Attanasio looked as if it had been wound about him as an anacouda will wind itself about its prey. He looked for a loophole for escape, but none appeared. Besides, the story teller was holding him with his eyes.

"Rizzufo," continued Fabroni, "at once took a steamer for America. Ar riving in New York, he sought some information of Amadeo. Unfortunately he had never seen the murderer, and there were no pictures of him. Rizzu to, too, visited many Italian resorts, but made no headway. One day he went into an Italian restaurant to dine. An acquaintance came in with a friend. whom he introduced to Rizzuto. In stretching forth his arm this man displayed a linked cuff button." The speaker paused again to fix his eyes on Attanasio. They seemed to paralyze the man. Then Fabroni

"Pull up your coat sleeve, please." Attanasio reluctantly and with a trembling hand did as he was told Fabroni put his thumb and finger in his vest pocket and pulled out a link cuff button. It matched the one dis played.

"Raise the other sleeve, please." Attanasio, with the same reluctance.

obeyed the order. The two buttons were not mates.

"Chance," exclaimed Fabroni, "or. rather, Amadeo's footbardiness or vanity, gave Rizzuto not only a clew but absolute proof as to the identity of his man'

The story teller turned to Zanella 'Pardon me," he said, "for inflicting upon you this uninteresting story. have really been operating the third degree upon your friend, Senor Attanasio. I came here to find him, and, as I have said, blind luck and his own folly have delivered him into my hands. You may introduce me aright as Marshal Rizzato of the National Italian carabinieri." Attanasio quick as a flash put his hand under his coat and drew a knife, which he raised ready to strike his tormentor, but the eye of the carabinier never for a moment left that of the man he wanted and saw the design before it had even begun to be executed. A cocked revolver was thrust under the criminal's nose before he could bring the stiletto down. Then Zanella took the weapon, and this flash in the pan was all that interfered with the arrest. Some disturbance was caused in the restaurant by the scene, and, the landlord coming over to the table where It occurred. Rizzuto said to him calmly;

"The police, please." While the telephone bell was ringing the criminal, recovering something o his nerve, said to the carabinier;

"I can put you on to a far more important person or persons than myself. Leave me out and take them in."

"Who are they?" "Petrosino's murderers." "If you know anything about those men you will have to tell it to the

To former members of the senate and house "the privilege of the floor" is given, but they do not often avail themselves of that right. This, however, is in strong contrast to the customs of twenty years ago and longer, when it was not uncommon to see former members moving about on the floor of the house when it was notoriously known that they were lobbying for some private claim or public

There is an unwritten law, however, governing the privilege of the floor of the senate, and it is the unwritten law of good breeding, good manners and common sense. Every ex-senator has the privilege of the door, but it is never occurred, nor is it ever likely to occur.

Former members of the senate are never seen there unless it is well known that they have proper business calling them to Washington, such as appearing before the supreme court as attorneys for clients in great cases, and even then it seldom happens that an ex-senator thus engaged ever en- linen coats and dresses. ters upon the senate floor, although in going to and from the room of the supreme court they are obliged to pass by its doors.

After James G. Blaine ceased to be a senator he avoided the senate chamber forever. After resigning from that body Senator Roscoe Conkling of New York never entered the senate chamber, although be was often in the capitol on business before the supreme court. There was an exception, however, in one instance. By invitation he was one of the pallbearers of Senator Logan of Illinois, who was buried with obsequies from the senate chamber, and on that occasion Senator Conkling was present. Senator Benjamin Harrison upon leaving the senate never crossed its threshold until he went there to be inaugurated as president. Senator Dawes of Massachusetts, Senator Blair of New Hampshire, Senator Don Cameron of Penn sylvania, Senator Thurman of Ohio and Senator McDonald of Indiana are examples of distinguished senators who remained away from the senate after heir terms expired. During the pe riod of four years when he was in retirement Senator Gorman of Maryland never availed himself of the privilege of the floor, and during the two years he was without election Senator Quay of Pennsylvania absented himself from the senate cham-

From a veteran employee of the senate there is gleaned an unusually interesting story concerning the late Senator Evarts of New York. This senator was one of the greatest intellects in public life for many years, but he was absentminded in small things. On one occasion he overlook ed the rule about the privilege of the floor. He was entertaining Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes at his Washington home and invited his guest to accompany him to the capitol. they walked along the capitol corridor, and when they came to the door of the senare they entered together.

There was a copy of the senate rules on each side of the doors, but Senator Evarts did not look at them, nor, of course, did his guest. The doorkeepers did not interfere or ask any ques-

After awhile Senator Hoar went to Senator Everts and, calling his attention to the rule concerning the privilege of the floor, asked, "How did you get him in?"

Miscrief is Contagious. Lawlessness breeds disaster. Every daring repudiation of those regulative principles of social relation which preserve the integrity of the body politic must eventually issue in the breaking down of a civilization. Graft, gambling and political corruption in the exposures of which these times are startling are indicative of a spirit of mischief in the social order which is contagious. If there are social wrongs the shame of the evil must rest ultimately upon the society which allows its laws to be ignored and its conventions repudiated. - Rev. Ingram

Your Own Scales.

Anybody can weigh himself. If I'm Ingratitude is monstrous, and for the too stout I'll juggle the tigures when I multitude to be ungrateful were to come to tell. If too thin the probmake a monster of the multitude .- lem's easier still. Figures don't lie, but liars figure. But then I myself know the truth. A pound's a pound-Mount Macy, in the Adirondacks, is sixteen ounces. Not thirty-five, but thirty-six, inches is a yard. Right's right; wrong's wrong. Whether the Bible story of beaven and hell is correct or no doesn't matter. They are within us, now and here. And the black pages, the closed chapters, the bushed up balancing.

Your Neighbor's Scales.

The world's scales are a little uncertain. Depends on when, where and who. In one age "witchcraft" is a serious thing; in another it's laughed at. The world swings from a Puritan to a "wide open" Sunday. Follow the crowd on Sunday night in Toronto you'll go to church; in San Francisco you'll go to the theater. One state hangs for murder; another adds rape. another train wrecking, another arson. Your friends, your enemies, your neighbors, your community, is weighing you. But their scales are mighty imperfect, liable to ignorance, mistake, prejudice. They know only part of the facts. You're neither so good as your friends think nor so bad as your enemies think. Their judgments are a queer mixture of bate, love, kindness and selfishness. There's very little sympathy and a great deal of cruelty in your fellow's weighing, because he takes your worst trait and measures it against his best. He doesn't mention his greed when he condemns your passion. He forgets his untruthfulness when he excoriates your fondness for drink. Nevertheless your neighbor's judgment can be deep, searching and fearfully just. If your shopmates unite in declaring you are untruthful, if your neighbors as a whole declare you are an imprudent woman. If your best friends or even your worst enemies hint that your capital is empty, swelling, flaunting, pretentious, then it is at least time to stop and take account of stock. It may be that you are misjudged and ill abused, but it looks as if the scales may be giving you your true weight.

God's Scales.

You cannot weigh all things in same | that is to belfound in a first-class daily. scales. Coal scales and gold scales are different. One scale will weigh a freight car, another an eyelash. The Doctor's Twins.

An Irish doctor while enjoying a holiday in the country took the opportunity, along with a friend, to go fishing. During operations the doctor's sinker came off and was lost. Here was a dilemma-no sinker, no more fishing that day. Happy thought he had a bottle in his pocket. The bottle was filled with water, carefully corked and sent down on its mission.

After a few minutes' interval the doctor had a bite and pulled up his line at racing speed, finding a fine pair of fish, one on each book. "Ha. doctor, twins this time," ex-practicing law at Newton he fell out with the district judge over some trivial matter. One day the court wanted him as a witness in a case and sent the sheriff after him.

Changed His Mind. When Representative Brown was

"Just tell the judge to go to -," said Brown when the sheriff told him to come to court.

"All right," said the sheriff. The latter wheeled around and started toward the courthouse. Brown turned and looked at him. The longer he looked the more convinced was he he had made a mistake. So he started after the sheriff. But the sheriff was too fast for him and reached the courtroom unmolested, "May it please the court," said the sheriff, "Mr. Brown told me to tell the court to go to -

Just then Brown rushed through the door to the courtroom, and before anything could be said or done by the judge Brown remarked:

"May it please your honor, I have changed my mind. You needn't go I'll testify."

It Was Taken, Hook and All, but Not by the Innocent Fish.

Senator Frye of Maine, who is an ardent devotee of the piscatorial art, loves now and then to relate a fish story, and he once told of a memorable trip on which Senator Spooner joined him at his choicest trout stream. They had it all arranged, after having called into counsel a reliable fish dealer and a trustworthy expressman, that a box of trout should arrive every other day at Senator Frye's home to indicate the success with which they were casting the fly.

The plan worked beautifully-"of course we caught some, and some we didn't"-but the expressman was fairly regular in the weight of fish forwarded, and the prepaid charges were about the same from day to day. All. went well until one day a dispatch came from the Frye domicile:

"Rush two more boxes smoked herring. They are great. Are the salt mackerel running also?"

There was a busy time with the wires just then, for the fish dealer had got his orders mixed, and instead of shipping fresh trout to Frye's home he had sent herring, thoroughly smoked. But the senator was equal to it. Camp supplies had been mixed with the fish caught that day, of course. He hastened his reply:

"You received the bait by mistake. Nothing but smoked herring will ever catch fresh trout, you know."

Senator Spooner concluded the tale truthfully by giving the return mes-

Too Eager.

Sir Henry Irving once had an amusing experience in Glasgow. For the part of the young prince in "Charles I" a little Scotch girl had been engaged. She had been carefully coached, and all went well until she appeared in the poignant scene where Mr. Irving as Charles has an agonizing leave taking with his wife and children and goes out to execution. "Promise me,"

Charles says to the little prince, "that you will take care of your mother. And swear that you will never let them make you king while your brother Charles is alive," to which the child is supposed to reply, "I'll be torn to pieces first."

On this dreadful night, however, Mr. Irving only got as far as "promise me that you will take care of your mother' when out piped shrilly the annihilating reply, "I'll be tor-r-ren to pieces

Debate at Mrs. Beach's.

The Baraca class of the Presbyterian bunday school of Genoa held a debate at the home of their teacher, Mrs W. W Beach, on the evening of July 10. The Philathea class was also invited to enjoy the proceeding of the debate.

After a large majority of both classes had gathered at the appointed place, the Baracas held a business meeting, after which Miss Clyde Mastin rendered an excellent piano solo which was followed by the delate. Ray Bancroft, president of the Baraca class, presided as chairman. Debate: Resolved-That war is never justifiable.

Affirmative-Leland Singer, (chief) Edgar O'Hara.

Negative-Russel Norman (chief) William Wilson.

The debate proved to be a most excellent discussion and gave good practice to the opposing parties. At the end each side seemed to be about evenly balanced. The judges considered the question very carefully in four different points. The number of arguments were considered to be about even on each side, but the manner of delivery, the refutation and the summing up, were all decided the quickest possible time and easiest manner, and the large crowds and increased number of patrons have necessitated these improvements. in favor of the affirmative.

A couple of contests next proved interesting features of the evening's Few of the Many Specials. amusements. In the contests Miss Agnes Conklin was awarded first prize while Edgar O'Hara was given second prize.

Tasty refreshments were served, followed by a toast list presided over by the toast master, Mr. Singer. The speakers were Russel Norman, W. W. Beach, Miss Agnes Conklin, Miss Blanche Norman, Ray Bancroft, and Mrs. Beach. In the course of the list several jokes were sprung on the toastmaster. Miss June Skinner, our vocal soloist, rendered some charming songs which pleased all who were present Throughout the evening many familiar songs had been sung by the company

Before leaving most hearty thanks were returned to the host and hostess who had entertained the company in such a pleasing manner, but the en tertainment was not over as one of the horses of the several carriages which were lined up in the front yard had yet exhibition to give and it proved the most exciting feature of the evening

The guests then took their departure in the several carriages and returned to their respective homes under the light of the silvery moon. If the reader does not think there was a silvery moon the writer refers him to the driver of a certain grey
