AEROPLANE IN WAR.

Possibilities For Using It to Be Tried Out at State Fair,

After deciding to contract for at aeroplane for exhibition flights about the New York State Fair grounds at the exposition in September, the State Fair commission went a step further and arranged to have a bipiane of sufficient size and power to permit of the carrying of passengers. The object of this move is to demonstrate the possibilities in the utilization of the aeroplane in war by carrying messengers, throwing fake bombs and firing rifles from the machine. It promises to be one of the most spectacular series of exhibitions where the heavier than air flying machine plays the important part ever seen in this coun-

The Wright brothers positively in vented the aeroplane, constructed the first man carrying machine and sold to the United States government its first aeroplane. The Wright machine was the first to fly in America, France Germany, England, and, in fact, all tle warmth, affection, enthusiasm, into of the European countries.

The State Fair commission felt it very important in arranging for aeroplane exhibitions that a machine be secured that would fly at the times advertised. An investigation showed that at all of the large aviation meets last year the Wright machines were in the air all of the time regardless of wind or rain. At the Boston meet where twenty-five machines of different makes were entered, Ralph Johnstone, who was later killed in executing his famous spiral glide, flew for two hours in a Wright machine for the duration prize when other avi ators dared not leave the ground.

Concerts by Famous Band.

It will be a source of pleasure to many lovers of good music to learn that the band concerts which have furnished one of the very enjoyable fea tures at the State Fair will be con tinued this year. Arthur Pryor and his famous American band, which have entertained critical audiences ir all of the large cities of the United States, will be heard in the morning in Empire State court and in the aft ernoon in front of the grand stand a the race course.

Mr. Pryor is known as a leader of exceptional ability, and he has sur rounded himself with very able mu sicians. The musical programs will it is promised, compare with anything that has been heard at out of dom concerts in this country.

taken-sick headache that day! It's a mighty hard mile for those who walk prudence or necessity. There is no virtue in compulsory obedience. No wonder some religion is irksome. Christians are to be known in their excess of the claims of duty, custom or conventionality. The extra miles are the marks of a Christian.

Sublime Concession.

"But that 'extra mile' isn't practicable; it isn't good working hypothesis. The world isn't ruled by men with velvet gloves." True enough. But we've tried the mailed fist ever since the days of Christ and before. It isn't such a glowing success either. The armed camp of Europe is the answer, Millennium's far off as ever. The millions and energy had better be spent on our gigantic social wrongs. The toiler needs that extra mile. Our great thinkers believe society is making the criminal and underdog instead demnity money to heathen China-the extra mile. Did it pay? You and your workmate had words long ago. You're recognition the other morning. You gave chilly response. Shame! 'Twas for you to make the advance. "If you" only, "what reward have you? Do not even the publicans the same?" Do the weak, the wounded, the erring, make you impatient? You've "done enough for them." Say, try another mile! You've done your part to "make up" with your friend? Yes, but it was cold. frigid. punctilious. Throw a litit; go an extra mile and watch results. You'll break his heart and bind him to you with hoops of gold.

The Extra Mile,

"Do you mean meet a person half way, preacher?" Yes, and, more than that, always be a little kinder than you need be; do a little more than could be reasonably looked for. Mary's week in the kitchen, Martha's upstairs. "Say, Martha," calls Mary, "I've a blinding headache; would you kindly dry the dishes if I wash them?" "Certainly, girlle; just you go lie down; I'll both wash and dry them." Next week Martha calls to Mary, "Sister mine, don't you have to meet Mr. Eligible at the 4:30 train?" "Yes," "Well, you'll never make it, child." "I know it. Would you mind sewing on a button for me?" "Sure I will. And just let me finish the parlor dusting for you while you run and get dressed." Listen, brother. Is your employer very exacting? Rest of the fellows do what they're paid for-no more? Do they "leave their hammers banging in the air" when the whistle blows? Other clerks watch the clock and loaf in the dressing room? You the only Christian in the crowd? All right. "What do ye more than others?" Now, tomorrow superior. work just a little harder and a little betfer than the boss could reasonably expect. It's the service not down in the contract that wins respect. Facts For Swimmers. In an article on swimming in the August Woman's Home Companion, the author records a great deal of information that is just as interesting to landlubbers as it is helpful to young swimmers. Following is a brief extract: "It may surprise some new swimmers to know that one can both see and hear under the water. Seeing is not difficult, when once you have the idea firmly planted in your mind that water will not hurt your eyes. Particularly is this true of sea water, the salt in which is soothing, rather than irritating. But never open your eyes to see under water before you are under water; never dive with the eyes open, or go from surface to underneath, or vice versa, with the eyes open. The water at its surface seems to have an actual edge, which stings the eye. Learn to swim with

A FEAST IN SAMOA

Develops Into a Conglomerated Scramble For Food.

A SCENE OF WILD DISORDER.

The Native Guests Steal All the Eatables Within Reach, Which They Pass Over to Crowds of Waiting. Relatives Gathered on the Outside.

The principal native foods of Samoa are bananas, breadfruit, taro, fish and pork. Bananas prepared "Fa Samoa" would not appeal very strongly to an epicurean taste, for they are gathered unripe and baked under heated stones. as all Samoan cooking is accomplished. A baked green banana favors somewhat a roasted chestnut, but not enough to cause any mistake between the two.

The breadfruit, in my estimation. appeals more strongly to a white tiresome to swim without one arm or one man's taste than any other Samoan food. The large, mealy balls are bak ed, broken open and eaten, usually with one or other of the two Samoan sauces palusami and fai-al. Palusami is made from the young shoots of the taro plant, cocoanut milk and sea water. Fai-ai is evaporated cocoanut milk. The milk is poured into a leaf, the ends and edges tied at the top, and it is then baked until the water evaporates, leaving a thick cream, which is very rich and quite palatable. Faro is the root or bulb of a plant which is an exact counterpart of what we call "elephant ear" in the United States and is somewhat like a yam, but inclined to be stingy or shreddy. The inside of a baked faro bulb is very solid and of a bluish tint. The fish needs no explanation.

Pork is the supreme delicacy, according to the Samoan mind, and it is always eaten in a half cooked state. Since a Samoan will sell his birthright worth $30 or $40 and will always find a market; therefore it is easily seen that pork can be afforded only on holiday occasions. The Samoan method of killing a pig is unique. The auimal's feet are tied together, and it is laid upon its back. Then two large. heavy natives place a 2 by 4 scantling across its neck, after which they seat themselves one on each end of the scantling.

CLOTH IN THE MAKING.

The Way the Uncouth Product of the Loom is Finished.

woven fabric is made by Every crossing or interlacing two distinct series of threads together. When the yarn comes from the spinner it is mounted upon the loom in spools. writes Rupert Bowers in Harper's Weekly. So wonderfully automatic are these modern looms that when a bobbin is emptied it is forced out and a full spool is put in its place without stopping the loom. There are all classes of looms for all classes of material, from the thinnest fabrics up to the thickest felts. To attempt to describe one of them or the principles on which they are constructed would involve the reader in a wilderness of technicalities. The power loom is one of the most remarkable and complex of mechanical products, the growth of many years of experience and ingenuity and the crystallization of the inventive genius of many minds.

The cloth in the shop window resembles the cloth as it comes from the loom so remotely that there would seem to be no relationship between them. The first product of the loom is usually uncouth, harsh and anything but inviting in appearance. It has to pass through many processes before it is finished and made ready for the market. It is first mended so as to correct weaving faults as far as possible. Then it is scoured and thoroughly cleansed. Again it is looked over and mended before it passes to the fulling or milling machine which, with soap and fuller's earth, produces the finish that is required. Then it is scoured again.

Tentering is the next process. This sets the cloth at a satisfactory width and straightens it for the operations that follow, the first of which is called raising. The millions of tiny hooks on the gigging machine raise up the fibers on the surface of the cloth and leave them in an upright position. The pile or nap is the result. This produces a remarkable change in the appearance and condition of the fabric. Shearing is the pext thing. This cuts off all the raised fibers, leaving them of a uniform length. The required gloss and solidity are obtained by the pressing

Alfalfa is the great farm enricher. Those who are learning how to grow it successfully connect it in their minds with lime, and with inoculation of the field where it is sown. The field can be inoculated by spreading over it 200 pounds or more per acre of soil from a good alfalfa field, and harrowing it ard the seed in together at once. Dr. E. H. Jenkins of the Connecticut Experiment Station, states that soil from a good sweet-clover field is equally able to provide the bacteria which lives in the L. nodules of the alfalfa roots, and which enables this plant to take the nitrogen from the air .- From July Farm Journal.

Silas's Contribution. Mrs. Wiggins had "run in" for a minute to talk over the latest news of the village with her friend, Mrs. Hopkins. The conversation that followed is thus given in the "Youth's Companion:"

"Do you know," she said. "they tell me that old Mr. Magee didn't subscribe but 50 cents to the minister's salary. That doesn't seem possible, does it ?" "To anybody that knows Silas Magee real well, it does," replied Mrs. Hopkins. 'You haven't lived in this town all your life, Mis' Wiggins, and you don't know what Silas is capable of. Why, I remember once when he was a young fellow, going to singing school with the rest of us, we got up a picnic. "One of the girls spoke up and said she'd bring some chicken sandwiches.

"'I'll bring some frosted cake,' says nother.

"I'll bring some sliced ham,' says nother.

"I'll fetch some jelly and cookies,' says somebody else, and so it went on till we had most everything we could eat, promised. Then one of the boys who had no sisters said he would bring the coffee. That gave Silas his chance. He'd been sitting by, listening to it all, and now he spoke up real brisk, and says he:

"I'll bring the water for the coffee.' "No, Mis' Wiggins, I ain't surprised a mite at his subscribing only 50 cents. the man on my right for the purpose The only surprising thing is that it wasn't a quarter."

The Value of Good Manners.

Some mothers lament that they cannot give their children "advantages," They cannot give them the education they would like to, or the fine clothes. They cannot send them to dancing school, where they can get into society. All these may be desirable things to do, and a mother may be justified in lamenting that she cannot do them. But because she cannot do these things, she need not think she can do nothing. She can, without cost give her children an "advantage" that often outruns education and clothes and position, in gaining them the desirable things of life. She can give them good manners.

strangled to death his beartless executioners calmly talk politics. The reason for strangulation in putting a hog to death is simply this: A pig is held in such high esteem that it breaks the Samoan heart to see even the blood being wasted. The blood is used in conjunction with the fatty parts of the entrails and when baked forms some kind of pudding. I have never tast ed this kind of pudding myself, but a Samoan will tell you that it is simply delicious, and I am willing to take his word for it. Even the cleaned entrails are utilized, and right here in Samos we can again bring into use the Chicago stockyard phrase that "only the squeal is lost." I well remember the first and only Samoan feast I ever had the pleas ure of attending. I received an invitation one day from a Samoan whose friendship I had formed to attend a feast the following night which he was giving to dedicate his new home There were several white men present and about fifty natives. We were arranged in two rows facing each other. sitting cross legged, and in front of each was a small mat on which was a profusion of food, including a lupe (or pigeon), a piece of pork (palusami). taro (breadfruit)-in fact, everything which goes to make a Samoan feastall to be washed down with cocoanut I had taken two or three milk. mouthfuls of the pigeon when I noticed that there was a ring of natives each with a basket waiting impatiently just outside the house. As I turned to of asking why these people were assembled outside I sensed a movement in close proximity on my left. Turning quickly around. I was just in time to catch a farewell glimpse of my fine supper being dumped bodily into one of those waiting baskets. I saw at once the reason for that overflow meeting outside. The woman who sat next to me had taken a favorable opportunity when my back was turned to pick up my mat and dispose of my meal to her waiting relative, who had attend ed the overflow meeting with a basket

Then ensued a conglomerated scram ble, and the feast was turned into a scene of wild disorder as each native strove to outdo his neighbor in securing the most food to send home. The strategy, flank movements and tact that they exhibited under the inspiring grab game so far provoked my comedy bump that I was more than repaid for the loss of my supper in watching their energetic struggles to obtain food gratia.

I was afterward informed that the spectacle I had witnessed was simply the natural course of a Samoan feast, that they always ended the same way and I was indeed fortunate to have secured a taste or so of my pigeon .-Los Angeles Times.

A Washless Washboard. "Women haven't the artistic temperament." complained the orchestra musician to the Cleveland Plain Dealer. "That's why I am unmarried. Oh, yes. I was married once. I thought to acquire a woman who could take care of my home, make a little domestic place of refuge for me and all that, but the dream soon fled.

"A few days after I was married my bride came to me and said: 'Dear, that new washboard you got for me is socks on it.'

Rebuking an Emperor. Once, so the story goes, Emperor Nicholas of Russia asked Liszt to play JOHN C. GAUNTLETT in his presence. "When the emperor speaks," said Liszt, "every one must be silent."

The czar smilingly took the hint, and the playing proceeded.

wall Jackson.

Among the many battle steeds ridden during the war between the states by the celebrated Confederate Corps Commander Stonewall Jackson of Lee's army his favorite was a charger affectionately named Little Sorrel by the Becond corps of the Army of Virginia. He was about fifteen hands and, as General Longstreet said to the writer. strongly resembled, except in color, President Zachary 'Taylor's Old Whitey of the Mexican war. Jackson rode him at Bull Run, Winchester, Cedar Mountain, Manassas, Antietam, Harpers Ferry, Fredericksburg and on many other battlefields. He mounted Little Sorrel for the last time at Chancellorsville May 2, 1863, and in the battle was mortally wounded by his own men and died a week later.

General Bradley T. Johnson of Maryland in a letter to the present writer remarks: "Jackson was an ungainly borseman, and when he rode by the troops Little Sorrel would strike off on a run. The general would pull off his cap and ride bareheaded at full speed past miles of shouting Confederates. The saying was when you heard that yell before or behind you on the march. "There goes old Jack on a rabbit." When the soldiers started a rabbit they'd scare him to death with yelling."

TROWBRIDGE CASE A Lesson as to Circumstantial Evidence By EDITH V. ROSS

Copyright by American Press Assoclation, 1911. **********************

The case of the state against Edith Trowbridge, a girl of twenty-two, had been tried before Judge Griffiths, and the evidence had proved her guilty beyond a doubt. The charge was grand larceny, though it was afterward changed to receiving stolen property. Some goods had been missed from a store. A woman was seen to take them and had been followed. She was tracked to an apartment house, where she was lost. Among others the apartments in which Miss Trowbridge lived was searched, and the articles-some Lagerie-were found between the mattresses of her bed.

Miss Trowbridge had captured both judge and jury by her innocent and modest appearance, but the evidence was so strong against her that it was impossible for the twelve jurymen to acquit her. The judge gave her the lightest sentence the law would allow-two years in the penitentiary. But even so light a sentence was a horror to one who had been carefully reared and well educated. After it had been pronounced the prisoner, having been embraced by her mother, turned to George Whitcomb, to whom she was engaged to be married and on whose face were written horror and indignation.

"Cheer up. George!" she said. "You and I know that I am innocent. Two years will soon pass, and then we will be reunited."

"It's horrible!" was his only reply. When Judge Griffiths left the courtroom at the end of a day's work he thrust from his mind, as was his custom, the scenes of the day. A happier scene to come took their place. In a few days would occur a birthday to his daughter, a girl just emerging from her teens, and her father was thinking of giving her a present of some article of jewelry. On his way home he stopped at Benkard's, the principal jeweler of the town. There he looked over various articles until his fancy was caught by a bracelet, a golden serpent with two ruby eyes. He asked the price, but found it to be greater than what he had laid out for his purpose. The salesman showed him others, which he examined approvingly, but always returned to the snake with the ruby eyes. "I wish it." he said. "for my daughter, whose twentieth birthday comes around in a few days. But I'll not decide today. Perhaps I'll come in tomorrow," When after Judge Griffiths' departure the clerk put away a dozen or more articles that he had been showing the judge he missed the bracelet. Frightened, he looked over every article on and in the case, thinking that he might have overlooked it, then on the floor to see if it had been dropped. The bracelet was not to'be found. One thing was certain-the bracelet had been taken. The salesman reported that while showing goods to an eminently respectable appearing gentleman a bracelet had been lost. A member of the firm questioned him closely, but got no further information than has been given here. The sales. man had recently been given a position on trial. He was very anxious to make sales, and both he and his employer considered that his anxiety in this respect had momentarily diverted his attention from what every sales- before him. The governor yielded to for-theft. A week passed and nothing had been heard from the missing bracelet. Then one day an anonymous note in an evidently disguised hand was received at Benkard's. It was as follows: "On Wednesday, the 7th of June last, I was in your store looking at some jewelry. I stood near a case at which a gentleman was examining different articles. I saw a lady standing at the same case. She picked up several articles, looked at them, examined the tags attached to them and put them down. While the salesman was intent on his customer she took up a bracelet. held it in both hands and examined it closely. She wore loose flowing sleeves, and while the salesman was examining the tag on a brooch for the purpose of learning its price she dropped the bracelet into one of her sleeves. "The young lady was evidently not a common thief. At any rate, she was handsomely dressed. Curiosity led me to discover whom she was and what her object might be in stealing the bracelet. She went directly from the store, hurrying as soon as she reached the door. I followed her and saw her get on a trolley car. I boarded the car myself and left it when the thief left it. Passing off the main street. she furned into a residential avenue, stopped at a stone front dwelling and entered with a latchkey. "The adventure interested me, and I took pains to investigate as to who lived in the house. I learned that it was the residence of a prominent citisen. Describing the girl thief to those who were familiar with the family, I was told that I had described his only daughter.

tial man, of theft without corrobora tive evidence would be out of the question. To permit a theft without reporting it would be a violation of the duties of citizenship. After much thought I hit upon the following plan: I gave the facts to a detective agency and asked that it endeavor to put a man in the house with a view to making a search for the stolen property. It gave one of its best men the job, and by watching the house for some time he finally found the premises left in the care of a servant. Entering surreptitiously, he searched a sentence on a criminal-a burry call rame over the telephone for him to adjourned the court and, calling a cab, drove to his residence. Hastily entering, he found his family in a most dishad in their possession the identical ruby eyed bracelet he had thought of present. It had been found between the mattresses of her bed. That some of the constables recognized a judge of the criminal court did not absolve them from doing their duty. Miss Griffiths was taken by them in a carriage to court, her father accompanying her, where a charge of father gave bail for her appearance for trial, and she returned with him to their home.

A mystery loomed up before Judge Griffiths. Not for a moment did he suspect that his daughter was guilty of theft. What puzzled him was that he had examined this very bracelet with a view to buying it. He was sure that he could not have taken it from the store by mistake. And if he had done so how could it have come between the mattresses of his daughter's bed? But the mystery was nothing to the terror with which the incident inspired the judge. Without an explanation his daughter must be tried. convicted and sentenced to the penitentiary. On just such evidence he had sentenced hundreds of criminals.

TAYLOR FLAYED JONES.

And Then, to Get Square, the Revivalist Told a Story.

Here is a well authenticated story of Sam P. Jones, revivalist and lecturer: Jones and ex-Governor Bob Taylor. now a United States senator from Tennessee, seldom met professionally in public. They were two such amazingly good drawing cards that few Chautauqua managements ever felt able to afford both of them in one day. However, one management made the plunge, and the two witty southerners found themselves on the same platform

Taylor introduced Jones. He flayed Jones unmercifully, leaving little cuticle on him. The crowd laughed heartily and waited for Jones to take his revenge.

Jones arose. He was always cool as ice. This time was no exception. The audience held its collective breath. The scathing was about to begin.

Jones, however, said nothing to indicate that he had even heard what Taylor had said. The crowd felt that at last Jones was overmatched. He delivered his lecture and made the usual hit. Yet there was much surprise that he had not replied to Taylor.

Just as Jones finished his set talk he turned and looked at Taylor. Then he drawled out, with a jerk of his thumb toward Taylor:

"Whenever 1 see that man anywheh I'm reminded of a little dawg I used to know down in Gawgy. That dawg lived close to the railroad track, and every evening when the fast express train went shooting through that little dawg ran out and tried to eat that train. Every night he would seem to say: 'Last night I didn't get it, but I've figured out since why it was. I'll get it this time. I'm just so hungry for an express train!' Everybody around there knew that dawg would be killed some time by that train. Bound to. Couldn't help it.

"One hot summeh evening that train came along fasteh than eveh. It was just one big, noisy cloud of dust. That little dawg ran out as usual and ran along by the tracks. He was sucked in by the draft from the train and disappeared under the trucks. Everybody said: 'Theh he went-fool dawg! We always knew he'd get it. Now he's killed, all right.'

"But when that train had gone theb came that little dawg trotting back up the track. The train badn't killed him at all-only made a bobtailer of him " Presently the audience began to see the joke in sections, and before long it thereof to the undersigned, the exteuror of, etc., of said deceased, at his place of rest-was in a scream of laughter.-Strick- dence in the town of Genoa, County of Cavuga. land W. AWIER

He went at once to Benkard's and was closeted with the head of the firm.

On hearing the judge's errand, Mr. Benkard told him of the anonymous letter he had received and showed him another that had just come in apparently from a different person, authorizing him to say to Judge Griffiths that it would be to his advantage to recommend to the governor of the state that a pardon be granted to Edith Trowbridge, whom he had sentenced to serve two years in state prison. This was all the information received on the subject, except that Benkard had recovered his lost property by acting on the advice of his first correspondent.

For the first time the judge recalled the Trowbridge case. It was plain that some one interested in that case placing his daughter in the same position as that occupied by the girl he had sentenced. Furthermore, he saw at once that the scheme had been so adroitly managed that there was Httle hope of exposing the perpetrators.

Whether the scheme had been worked in the interest of an innocent or guilty person the judge did not know. He had no evidence to prove that a court. He went at once to the governor of the state and laid the case for Edith Trowbridge.

As soon as Miss Trowbridge was free Judge Griffiths received word that the person who had worked up the case against his daughter would explain on a promise of immunity. The judge, glad to remove the obloquy that rested upon his child, acceded to the terms and soon after received a visit from George Whitcomb, who said to him:

"You convicted an innocent girl on circumstantial evidence. After the trial I saw you walk-up the street and enter a jewelry store. I went in after you, stood beside you at the counter. saw you look at the bracelet and heard all you said. When the clerk's back was turned and you were intent upon another article I saw an opportunity to steal the bracelet. To do so and make a plan for laying the theft at your door occurred to me. At the risk of you or some other criminal judge sending me where you sent Miss Trowbridge I slipped the bracelet into my sleeve.

"My object thus far was revenge upon you for sending an innocent girl, the girl I loved, to state prison. Then it occurred to me that my case would be stronger and my revenge greater if I could fix it on your daughter. A third idea was to show you the fallibility of circumstantial evidence, and, lastly. I saw an opportunity to compel you to use your influence to secure the release of the girl you had wrongfully sent to prison. "I wrote the note to Benkard & Co. and employed a detective to steal into your house and place the bracelet between the mattresses of your daughter's bed."

The peak of Tenerife projects a buge shadow stretching upward of fifty and howled, and a crowd of neighbors miles across the deep and partly eclipshad planned an ingenious method of ing the adjoining islands. Exaggerated shadows of immense size are commonly seen in many other places. On the Harz mountains the so called Specter of the Brocken throws gigantic shadows of mountain climbers into the sky, repeating every movement made by them. The same occurs on the summit of Pambamarca, in Peru.

On the tops of Alpine peaks and on the summit of Ben Lomond, in Scotscheme had been worked at all that land, mists in one case and rarefied could be satisfactorily presented to a air in the other explain these optical illusions. As to the Fireplace.

The sides of a fireplace should be well splayed or beveled in order to reflect the heat, says Arts and Decoration. The back should lean forward at the top for the same purpose, and the fireplace should not be too deep. A projecting chimney produces an effect of pushing the guest away, whereas a receding one beckons him Learer to enjoy the hospitality of the open fire. For this reason the inglencok-that is, the fireplace built into the wall of the room-is especially cozy and attractive.

A Bird Mystery.

After years of study devoted to the topic Professor Alfred Newton of Cambridge stated that without doubt bird migration is the greatest mystert in the entire animal kingdom, "a mrstery." he added, "that can be no more explained by the modern man of science than by the simple minded savage of antiquity."

Inquisitiveness.

He Got Even.

Justus Miles Forman once in writing a story for Harper's Magazine used the name of an artist friend for the character of a chap who fell in love with a peasant girl in the Milanese "It made all his friends roar with glee," said Mr. Forman. "But he got even with me by making a large twenty-four sheet poster for a musical comedy. There was a lady, the star, stepping out of a stage door and a long line of Johnnies waiting for her with silly smirks and bunches of violets. And every Johnnie was a portrait of me.'

A Witty Retort. As is generally the case with people who have nothing to say worth hearing, a conceited drummer talked a great deal, to the evident disgust of a number of his commercial friends who were dining at a country hotel. When cheese was served it was of a decided "lively" brand, much to the delight of the irrepressible. He attacked it with great gusto, remarking, "I'm like Samson-slaying them by the thousand!"

"Yes," replied a quick witted diner at the end of the table, "and with the same weapon too!". "I trust you slept comfortably and had everything you needed." said

There the two stop-"Verra hot," responded Macpherson, ped and began to talk. The car stopped, too, but the women did not appear to realize that it was there. Cer

'but ye forgot to put anything in it."

"A rather finicky old chap who was traveling off the beaten paths struck a somewhat shabby hotel, which was principally used by workmen from a nearby construction camp. He paid a dollar in advance for room and breakfast, the clerk remarking caustically that "a suit case isn't 'a guarantee that the bill will be paid, especially when a guy has a room on the second floor." And just before midnight the indignant Mr. Smith piled down into the hotel office, almost dressed.

"What's the matter?" asked the sleepy clerk, shifting his pipe to the other corner. "Anything wrong?"

"Wrong!" gasped Mr. Smith, trembling. "Wrong! Confound your old dump, anyhow! I saw a pair of rats as big as hedgehogs fighting in the middle of my room."

"Huh," said the clerk, closing his eyes and preparing to return to sleep. "What do you want for a dollar-a bullfight?"-Herbert Corey in Cincinnati Times-Star.

CELERY GROWING.

Directions Given by Successful Cultivator of Vegetable in Pennsylvania. Last year's experience proves very forcefully that celery needs considerable moisture as well as to be well fertilized, says a Pennsylvania grower in a letter to the American Agriculturist. Nearly all of our celery plants are started in small greenhouses, sowing the seed from the last of February to the latter part of March. Our soil is Rows are three feet apart where we expect to blanch with boards and two and a half when it is to go into the celery house. Plants are set four or five inches apart in the rows. If the soil is too dry when we wish to set we have water poured along the rows in a little stream, being careful to follow the mark, made with a light wheelbarrow frame, along the side of a line.

After the plants are set we put on about 1,300 pounds of 12 per cent dried blood to the acre, running it right along the rows close to the plants. As soon as the plants are four inches high insects or plant lice, should not be employed, but stomach poisons, such as paris green, arsenate of lead or other arsenicals, must be used. Second, the insect enters the fruit usually within forty-eight hours after hatching and is thereafter beyond our reach, so the spray must be applied in time. Third, the hatching period for the eggs of one brood extends over a considerable space of time: therefore to get the best results two or more sprayings must be given. Fourth, in Maryland there are two broods of the codling moth, and to prevent injury by the second brood larvae one or more midsummer sprayings may be applied. In spraying for first brood larvae it must be borne in mind that they enter the fruit at the calyx; therefore the spray must be applied before the lobes of the calyx close enough to exclude the spray.

Fifth, sprays followed immediately by heavy rains should be repeated. Sixth, spray only with a pump which will give good pressure, not less than eighty pounds, and over a hundred pounds is much better, so as to force the spray into the calyx. Do not spray until nearly all the petals have fallen from the blossoms, on account of danger of injury to the blossoms and risk of killing bees, which are important agents of pollination.

Kill More Than Wild Beasts. The number of people killed yearly by wild beasts don't approach the vast number killed by disease germs. No life is safe from their attacks. They're in air, water, dust, even food. But grand protection is afforded by Electric Bitters, which destroy and expel these deadly disease germs from the system. That's why chills, fever and ague, all malarial and many blood diseases yield promptly to this wonderful blood purihealth and new strength they'll give you.

The scheme, the purpose of which is to stimulate a greater interest in improved agriculture and at the same time to make the great benefits of the Fair more widely known, is meeting with general commendation. Commissioner Pearson has taken an important step, it is declared, in carrying out the broader educational mission of the Institution.

The applications will be considered with the greatest care with the object of having the scholarships go to boys of good character who are actually engaged in farm work and anxious to learn the best methods of farming. To encourage a careful study of all the subjects arranged by Commissioner Pearson for the benefit of the boys, prizes will be offered for the best essays on what was seen and learned at the Fair. The prizes will include pairs of pure bred calves. sheep, pigs and chickens, also fruit trees and seed corn.

Famous Miracle Painting.

Arrangements have been made for the exhibition at the State Fair of the famous miracle painting, "In the Shadow of the Cross," which created a furor of comment at the Jamestown, St. Louis and Buffais expositions. It is a life sized portrait of Christ standing with folded arms in the simple costume of a peasant and, while not a remarkable production as a work of art, being unfinished, has a most interesting effect when seen in the dark. While the artist, Henry Hammond

Ahl, was at work upon the picture he went into his studio one evening in the dark and to his surprise found his painting illuminated with a soft radiance. The light was playing upon the figure, while back of it there was the shadow of the cross. The artist had not painted in this shadow, and in daylight it was not visible. He left the picture unfluished. It has been examined by experts, and no satisfactory explanation has been given, it is declared, of this strange light and the Water With Meals.

A difference of opinion has existed as to whether water should be drunk with food. Recent experiments have seemed to indicate that water may be drunk with benefit at mealtime. This is not finally settled, but it is certain that the practice of following a bit of food immediately with a mouthful of water or other liquid, washing it down without proper mastication and mixture with the saliva, is injurious. Children should especially be trained to avoid this babit. There is no doubt that in a case in which food is imperfectly musticated the drinking of a moderate amount of water slowly after eating would facilitate digestion, but the bit and sup babit is obviously bad.
