A school picnic was held on Friday p. m. last in which three districts united. The Venice Center district, Miss Lena Mosher teacher; the Wood district on the Indian Field, Miss Clara Andrews teacher; and the next school south, Miss Myra Reynolds teacher. It was held on the school grounds in the Wood district and the fine shade which the grounds afford. made it an ideal place for such a gathering It was well patronized, it being estimated that there were 175 people present. A very bountiful supper was served and all felt that it was an enjoyable occasion.

A very severe electrical storm visited this place Saturday night about 12 o'clock. The thunder and lightning were teriffic and lights were seen in homes which are usually dark at that time of night.

There will be a strawberry and ice cream social the fore part of next week probably at the hall. Further announcement will be made later.

r was only the car that was disabled. Beyond a severe shaking up neither Patricia nor Blount was seriously hurt. Recovering from the shock and being assured of Patricia's wholeness and his own, Blount sprang out to see what the collision had done to the car. The inspection was brief. With the front axle bent, the radiator crushed and one cylinder of the engine broken, the little car was safely out of commission.

"We're done for," he said shortly, helping his companion down from the driving seat.

Patricia was still trembling and pale, and he thought that the accident was accountable.

"Do you mean-that we can't-go on to the city?" she quavered.

"Not unless we walk, and it is exactly fifteen miles. I happened to notice the speedometer record on the roadster when we turned around here last Sunday."

"What shall we do?" she asked when the improbability of any timely rescue made itself apparent.

Blount looked at his watch. It was already a few minutes past 3 o'clock. "We'll sit down and walt for somebody to come along and rescue us," he said, striving to say it lightly. "I'm sure we ought to be glad and thankful that it is no worse. We stood a good chance of being killed. both of us."

She shuddered and said: "I might have stopped sooner. There-there was time, don't you think?"

Evan had thought so, and he was regarding her curiously. There had demanded. "The boss'." "Mr. Hathaway?" "Not on your life. It was the big boss this time." Blount's quick glance aside at his companion was a sorrowful "I told you so," and he did not question Barto further.

"Well," he said, turning back to the outlaw, "what is to be done with us?" Barto pursed his thick lips. "If the lady can make out to ride one of the bronc's," he began, "there's a right in it-not even in the outer edges of it, comfortable little shack of a hotel at the head of the gulch, and"-

"But we are on our way to the city." Blount interposed, still trying to master his impatience. The timber looker shrugged.

"All right. I reckon there ain't no law ag'inst your walkin' or settin' down to wait till somebuddy comes along. But it might be a good while." Blount turned to Patricia.

"Shall we wait?" he asked, and she nodded quickly, with a look in her eyes that he could not interpret. "I don't believe we care to go and look for your shack hotel," he said to

"Gimme them papers you got in your pocket and do it sudden!" he commanded. "Then you can stay here till the cows come home if you want to. Quick, I say!"

"No." Blount said crisply. Instantly Barto's pistol was out.

Then, with the quizzical smile wrinkling at the eye corners, "How does the political wrestle strike you by this time, son?" "It strikes me that I haven't been dad. Isn't that about the size of it?" "Oh, no; you've been doing good work-mighty good work, for your company. McVickar recognizes it. You've helped out in the only way that help could come in this campaign. You've worked up a good, healthy public sentiment in favor of a square deal for everybody. McVickar was fixing to lose it all; cooking the registration lists and buying votes and making deals right and left, the same as usual. But it's all off now, and he's gone, and we're going to have one clean, straight up and down election, son. The 'machine' says so."

"The machine?" queried the younger man.

"Yes; you didn't know that a machine organization could be put to any really righteous use, did you, boy? But this is one time when it has gone in to knock out the crookedness, big and little. Listen, son. When you wired me that you were coming out here I lay awake nights thinking how I'd put you in training and then when the time came I'd help you up into the saddle and make you the boss of the roundup, as I'd been. Want to hear the rest of it?"

Blount nodded.

"Then it came over me all of a sudden that I'd been as crooked as a dog's hind leg; that we'd all been crooked. Not that I'd ever taken a dollar for my personal pocket, for I haven't, but I've bought and sold and dickered and schemed with the best of 'em and the worst of 'em, just as McVickar's been doing for the past two months. Then asked myself if I'd like to see you wallowing in the same mudhole, andwell. Evan, you may have a son of your own some day, and then you'll' know. I thought I'd try you a little weapon missed at first, and I did-that first day out at Wartrace. When you ripped out at

I was trying to do; but, Lord love you, one more thing. Have you come to know Honoria any better in these last few days?"

"Yes; much better within the last hour, dad."

"Good. That does my old heart a heap of good, son. Let's go and get those two good women and take 'em down to dinner; then we'll drive back One Dollar will to Wartrace and get ready to touch off the fireworks when the returns come in. I tell vou, son, tomorrow's election is going to be a regular old fashioned, heave 'em up and keep 'em a-going landslide!"

Evan Blount was turning to goback to the inner sitting room, where Patricia was-when he suddenly remembered little Blenkinsop.

"Don't let that worry you for a minute, son," said the man who seemed to be at the heart of everything that was happening. "Half an hour after you left Blenkinsop this morning that stuff that they had stolen from your safe and then garbled up to sult themselves was all killed. When I told Blenkinsop over the phone that there wouldn't be any crooked lists used tomorrow-that he was merely fixing to promptly. put himself on record as the biggest liar on two continents-he came down.

The Work of the Church. The modern church, I contend, has no function to merely save souls. The modern church shall be an educative, a restraining and a controlling force. It shall take its place as the power to help, mold and shape and direct this mass of struggling humanity and make out of this world here and now the kingdom of God. Souls are not lost. Anything that is lost doesn't know its way, and the Lord knows that we all know our way well enough. What is needed is an institution that shall help strengthen the will and ennoble the personality so that it will do as well as it knows. This is the work of the modern church. - Rev. E. J. Prescott, Unitarian, Sanford, Me.

The look that she gave him was pathetically pleading.

"I stopped-just one little instant to think-of your father-and-and those terrible papers in your pocket and what was going to happen if you should reach Judge Hemingway in time, Evan." she confessed brokenly. "Can you ever forgive me?"

It was a moment for the brushing aside of obstacles once and for all. and he took her in his arms-would have done it if the lonely Quaretaro road had been the busiest street in the capital.

"You are my brave, loyal darling," he said. And because she let him say it and hid the face, from which the cold pallor had suddenly fled, on his shoulder the political struggle and everything pertaining to it became as things of naught and the lonely road the way to paradise.

The silence of the immensities held them for a moment-a golden silence for the lover, but a moment of keen self reproachings for the maiden sobbing on his shoulder.

"Oh. I don't know how I could have done it-but I did!" she wept. "1-1 was ac-actually glad when I saw the tree. I didn't have the courage to-to upset the car in the ditch."

Again he comforted her, and the political venalities withdrew into a still remoter region.

"It was to be." he said. "That is what the tree was put here for-to stop us."

She looked up at that.

"Why, that is so, isn't it? There are no trees growing around here-none at all. Who did it, Evan?"

Blount shook his head sadly. "There is only one person in the world who could have any strong reason for stopping us," he asserted. "I can't imagine how my father managed it in the short time at his disposal. That, tree has been dragged down out of the little canyon since we passed going north. Tou can see the trail of it in the road."

"Please, Evan," she pleaded, "don't ask me to believe that your father planned it! Why, we might & .ve been killed outright, both of us!"

"I know," he returned gloomily, "but -hello, here comes our rescue!"

It was rather a figure of speech than an assurance. Around a turn in the canyon road came three horsemen pointing for the main highway and ambling gently. They were hardly withis halling distance before Blount recognized his three waylayers of the night of mysteries in the Lost River mountains, with Barto in the lead.

"Howdy?" said the timber looker, riding up to hang with one knee over the suddle while he grinned at the two castaways. "Lost out again, Mr. Blounz? Couldn't make out to run your dhug wagon over that there pine ping to strip off his dust coat, the vice tree, elt?"

was bagged the senator swung down from the driving seat of the big Italian car and gave his orders briefly. "Take these fellows up yonder to the hotel at the canyon head and see that they're kept out of mischief till tomorrow night, Granger," he said, singling out the leader of his tonneau squad. "Then tell the gentleman you'll find bossing things up there that the jig is up and he may as well come to the city. He'll find me at the Inter-Mountain when he wants to talk it over."

A little engineering feat, made possible by the big car's towrope, soon cleared the way, and when the great car, with the two women in the tonneau and Evan in the seat beside his father, was devouring the miles in the straightaway race to the city the young man said what was due.

"I was blaming you for the tree and for Barto's attempt to get those affidavits away from me," was what he broke the humming silence to say, and the senator nodded.

"I guess it was pretty lucky we had our ears to the cut-in on McVickar's private wire up yonder at Wartrace," he said, but that was all that he said. The courthouse clock was just striking 4 when the huge touring car, with its radiator sizzling hot, came to a stand before the entrance to Judge Hemingway's chambers.

"You're still in time, son," said the senator quietly.

But Evan Blount made no move to get out of the car. "Was I jumping at conclusions, dad?"

he asked half shamefacedly. "A little that way-just a little that way," was the gentle reply. "You see, Gryson did sure enough turn traitor this morning when he gave you those affidavits. He'd had a quarrel with Mr. McVickar. Every one of those crooked names means a vote for your railroad, son. That was why I told.

you you'd better not holler out about it. It was against your own side." Evan Blount's hesitation might have been measured by a clock tick. "Then there is all the more reason why"- he began, but his father was once more putting the clutch in.

"No," he interrupted, still in the same gentle tone; "don't let's jump at any more conclusions, Evan. Wait just a little while. There's more to come-and I shouldn't be surprised if

It came before dinner time." It did come before dinner time-came when a dust covered car driven at reckless speed tore in over the northern road and was pulled up with a jork at the Inter-Mountain entrance to let Mr. Hardwick McVickar debark and hurry to the clerk's desk.

"Benator Blount? Yes, his he's in rooms; he said you were to come right up." said the clerk, and, without stoppresident hastened to an elevator.

'And I've been fighting you and your organization at every turn?"

"No, you haven't," was the quick rejoinder. "You've been fighting graft, and that was what you thought you were hired to do. McVickar wasn't playing just fair with you. He gave you your job in the first place to take more. you away from me, but you've been in the hands of your friends right from the start, Evan. It was the organization that gave you all these chances to preach the new gospel of the square deal. It was the organization that pushed Hathaway up against you, so that you'd know that the rallroad people were running around in the same old circles, hollering for justice and doing everything they could to defeat the ends of justice-muddying the spring because, they say, they don't know what else to do. "Lastly, it's the organization that's going to see to it that your word to the people of this state is made good, son. Maybe we'll never be able to do it again, but this one time we shall do it. Gordon is going in by the biggest majority ever given to a governor of old Sagebrush, and the legislature will be five to one in favor of the square deal." The younger man left his chair and walked to one of the windows to stand, looking down upon the lights of the busy street. When he turned again it was to say, "I don't see where I am to break in, dad."

"You have already broken in. While the legislature is going to be anti-corporation, it is also going to be fair when it finds out that all the railroad deals have been called off and canceled. You're the man to show the lawmakers that this has actually been done. McVickar made a hard and fast point of that when he consented to wipe the slate clean and go away and let us run our politics to suit ourselves. He made me promise to put it up to you fair and square, with a handsome increase in salary and an ironclad agreement to back up every claim you should make when you assert that the railroad company will fire the first man that is caught evading the laws. That's what I've been fighting for in this campaign. Evan, and it's what you must fight for."

The son took the two steps necessary to reach the father's chair and held out his han-l.

"I'm with you, dad," he said heartily. "I'll stay, and I'll make Mr. Mc-Vickar respect me and my wrinciples before I'm through with it. But I'm still a little bit afraid that you and your kind are a menace to civilization and a free government. You won't mind my saying that, will you?"

"Lawzee gracious, no! Say anything you like, son, or, rather, let me say something else first. How about this 'career' business of Patricia's? Have you fixed that up yet?"

Evan shook his head despondently. "She's going home with her father in October," he said, then: "Do you know what she did today, dad? She ran the little red car into that tree intentionally so I couldn't get back here in time to use those amdavits which she and I both supposed would incriminate you."

Faith and Doubt. Faith is not the opposite of doubt, for doubt is not the black vice it is too often painted to be. Doubt is really the reverse of the side of the coin that men call "faith." Unbelief is the antonym of faith. And unbelief never yet did anything that was worth the doing. It never wrote a poem for the ages in which the word was the suitable garment for the idea, singing itself into the soul. Unbelief never yet painted a picture on the canvas of the world's memory with sunset colors mixed on the palette of time. Unbelief never yet saw great promise in the little baby boy and tolled and molled that it might grow wise and beautiful. Unbellef writes no laws for the bettering of social life. delivers no eloquent orations that inspire multitudes to noble deeds, sings no songs that delight the sense of sound like an acolian harp in the wind .- Rev. CHAPTER XX. THE LANDSLIDE.

ONTRARY to all expectation, the election proved to be one of the quietest ever known in the Sagebrush State. A few editors there were, like Blenkinsop of abroad and in this country who would the Daily Capital, who later on maintained that it was merely another triumph for the machine, but there was no gainsaying the result. The reform ticket, with or without the help of the machine, was elected by sweeping majorities everywhere, and Gantry, sitting in his office and reading the wire returns as they came in, gasped for breath and swore despairingly over each fresh batch of messages.

> At Wartrace Hall the Hon. David turned to his son.

"Well, Evan, are the tangles all straightened out for you now?" he asked gently.

"Just about all of them," laughed Blount. He had spent a very happy evening, chiefly because Patricia had been occupying the other half of the small divan he had dragged out to face the fire. "But I'm still unalterably opposed to the machine in politics," he added.

The senator laughed silently.

"Call it 'organization' instead of 'machine,' son, and you've got the power that moves the civilized world today. You've heard me called the 'boss' from the time Gantry had his first talk with you back yonder in Massachusetts. Call me a man with friends enough to make me a sort of leader in the old home state and you've got it about right. I don't say that I've always used the power justly. The Lord knows I'm no more infallible than other people. But, as I said to you yesterday, son, no matter what you've heard or who said it, I've never used the power to fatten my own pocketbook. I've bought and trafficked and bargained-I don't deny it-but only when it seemed as though the end justified the means."

"But the end never justifies evil means, dad," was the son's steadfast rejoinder. Then he looked up quickly from his place beside Patricia. "Is that the secret of all the invitations I've been getting?". The humorous crow's feet were wrinconsumption was increased this year by 200, pneumonia by 400, other acute respiratory diseases by 60, Bright's disease and other diseases of the genitourinary system by 300, diseases of the nervous system by 300, and diseases of the circulatory system by over 800. This last group of diseases is the largest contributor to mortality of any, being accredited with about 2,000 deaths a month, against 1,300 from pneumonia and the same number from other acute diseases of the lungs.

The annual winter epidemic of influenza has this season been of exceptional severity, and crediting it with having caused last year 10,000 deaths it is safe to say that the eurrent epidemic, which began in December and reaches its acme in March is still persistent, has added not less than 12,000 deaths to the mortality thus far. Deaths directly due to it in April are about one-half as many as in March.

Of communicable diseases there were reported a total of 17,600 cases which is a few less than in March. The only one which has shown an increase is measles. Scarlet fever, diphtheria, whooring cough and typhoid fever have decreased in the number of reported cases; fewer new cases of pulmonary tuberculosis are reported. The deaths from measles and for ethical conduct and right living likewise from scarlet fever are increased could object to that definition. There and have been increasing during the is surely enough of ethics and sociolyear; diphtheria shows little change but ogy and philanthropy in that definition the deaths from it are a good deal fewer than they were last year at this time. The winter typhoid fever mortality is a little in excess of last year.

Smallpox is rather on the increase although but 6 cases are reported for the month. Later in occurrence than April are 4 cases in Albany and there are a few cases in Buffalo and at Massena in St. Lawrence county. There were aside from influenza 800 deaths from epidemic diseases in March and 822 in April.

It will regulate the bowels, tone up the whole intestinal tract, give you an appetite, make food taste good and digest well, and increase vigor. Joy and happiness will take the place of that "don't care whether I live or die" feeling.

meeting was called, and the idea was laid before the people. The ogre "cost" thrust his head among them in the shape of a hirsute head of patriarchal cut and croaked as usual, "But where is the money to come from?" He was told that the leaders had secured an option at a fair price, that there would be no touching of the community purse and that the money would come from the people, a dollar from each citizen and the people went to work. The land was bought and a landscape architect employed to develop it.

And the people learned to use what they had provided. Tramping, picnicking and even camping became the vogue, for any reasonable use is allowed so long as the people scatter no rubbish.

Streets as Necessary as Arteries. As the arteries are to the human system, so are the streets to the physical well being of a city, says A. T. Erwin in the American City. A well planned city is a highly developed organism with one member or district devoted to places of living, another to manufacturing, another to mercantile pursuits, etc. A ready means of fail to attend. communication between these various members is a fundamental requisite. The street provides the means of circulation, and any factor which checks or impedes its flow is a serious menace to the public good.

There are many who think that the mapping out of streets is about all there is to city planning and that the laying of a sidewalk and paving represents the sum total of a street problem. That these are fundamental no one will deny, but there are other important considerations which should and beauty.

The city comes into possession of its streets in one of three ways-through public usage during a stated period (adverse possession), by condemnation and by dedication. Probably 90 per cent of our streets in the middle west have become public property through the last method. A street so dedicated involves two interests, the one being public, the other proprietary. In too many "additions" the later has been the active party, and plans are shaped too largely from the personal and pecuniary point of view. "It becomes the duty of the city officials, acting as the trustees of the people, to guide and mold these plans in the interest of the public.

Sellen - Purinton.

The marriage of Miss Gertrude L Purinton, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Purinton, to Lewis A. Sellen, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Sellen of Did they wait for a second asking, Genoa, took place on Wednesday evening, June 14, at half after six o'clock at the home of the bride. The house decorations throughout were carried out in yellow and white. The canopy, beneath For killing this dog which is somebody's pet" which the young couple took their marriage vows, was banked with green pine and garlanded with ropes of daisies. Daisies were used effectively on the bride's table and on the several small tables where the guests were served. Place cards in gold and white and a yellow rose at each guest's place further carried out the color scheme.

The solemn and impressive marriage ceremony of the Presbyterian church with the ring service was used, Rev. T. J. Searls, pastor of the Presbyterian church of Genoa officiating. The wedding march from Lohengrin was played by Miss Edith Pursel of Buffalo, the bride and groom entering unattended. The bride's gown was white, hand embroidered, and she carried an arm bouquet of bride roses. She also wore orange blossoms in her hair.

On being presented to the assembled guests, the happy young couple received congratulations.

A well appointed supper was at once served, the bride and groom soon leaving for their wedding journey.

The bride received many handsome and useful gifts.

About sixty-five guests were present, among those from a distance being Mr. and Mrs. Claude Sellen of Shelby, Ohio, Mrs. J. Murl Burt and children of Erie, Pa., Dr. and Mrs. S. S. Greene, Dr. and Mrs. W. D. Greene, Dr. C. W. Greene, Mr. and Mrs. Mortimer T. Green, and Miss Edith Pursel of Buffalo, N. Y.

A Cry for Help. In a beautiful town of New England, One pleasant summer day, The wise men all had assembled To talk in a friendly way. About the laws they themselves had made

How some were broken and others obeyed:

When in, through the open doorway, Her face full of fear and alarm, Rushed a little girl, ex laiming: "O, save us, save us from harm ! A mad dog is tearing through the streets, And biitng all the people he meets !"

Those men so brave and true? Did they stop to get a majority vote Before they dared to do? Did they say:"The times are not ripe just yet

No, only one thought inspired them-A danger was threatening them all And before any more of the people were hurt This terrible foe must fall. Of course it is legal a mad dog to slay, And they killed him without a moment's del: y.

O men of this land, our brothers, What binds your eyes to-day, That you cannot see the worst of foes Is holding unbridled away Over this country so dear to us all? Will you not join in the fight for his fall Will you vote for what ruins the father, The husband, the brother, the son? Shall we license by law this monster Which has so much mischief done? Nay, let us join hands and solemnly swear This foe to our country we'll none of us spare !

An Interesting Meeting.

Genoa W. C. T. U. met at the home of Mrs. A. H. Smith on Friday afternoon last. It being Flower Mission day, the program was in charge of Mrs. Minnie Sisson, the superintendent of that department.

After a short business meeting, all joined in singing "While the Days are Going By," and the leader read a part of the 103rd Psalm, and Mrs. Beach offered prayer, closing with the Lord's prayer in which all joined. Mrs. Sisson read a sketch of the work of Jennie Casseday and of the formation of the Flower Mission depart-

Tragedy at Ledyard. The town of Ledyard was shocked last I hursday night by the report of a double tragedy which resulted in the d ath of a husband and wife, and which was perpetrated by the husband.

The family consisted of Herbert Myers, aged 39, who lived with his wife, Minnie Dixon Myers, their son, Lee Myers, and their nephew, Louis Myers, who was the hired man on their farm, about one mile west of Ledyard.

The report as near as we can obtain it was to the effect that at about 9:30 in the evening Myers attacked his wife with a razor in the bedroom on the first floor of their home and elashed her throat, inflicting a wound from which she died within a few minutes. Within a very short time Myers turned the weapon upon him. self and cut his throat, in the same room, and died upon the floor within a few feet of his dead wife.

The direct cause of the atrocious deed is not known, but it seems that a man who could commit such a horrible crime, must have been insane There was no witness of the died and the other members of the family knew of no unusual occurrence which may have provoked the act. Hearing sounds from the bedroom below as of some one moaning, the son and the nephew, Louis Myers, went to the room and finding the door locked, burst it open, and beheld the awful sight of the woman lying on the bed with her throat gashed, and standing near was the man, holding a razor, and bleeding from gashes in his throat. He gasped "I've killed her' and fell dead

Dr. Hatch of King Ferry and Coroner Smith of Fleming were summoned at once, and an inquest was conducted.

Beside the 12-year-old son Lee, Mrs. Myers is survived by her father, Richard Dixon of Ledyard and two brothers, Arthur of Ledyard and Frank of Venice, Herbert Myers, the husband, is survived by several brothers and sisters.

The funeral of the husband and wife was held on Sunday at the Led-

And Have a Cheerful Home

Good-by, painters; farewell, varnishers; adieu, hard work. To keep the home looking bright and new, and everything in it spic and span, dust every day with LIQUID VENEER. My!-how it does make things "Cheer Up." Removes dust, dirt, marks and scratches, and brings out the original factory newness all in the one dusting operation.

Try it on the piano and see that dull blue, smoky appearance vanish like magic. Use it for hardwood floors and see how new they look-how clean-how bright. Try it on everything in the home-even the chandeliers and picture frames-and see how the whole house "Cheers Up." No extra trouble-just dust with it.

Nolan, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Nolan, and Miss Gertrude Sullivan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Sullivan, both of Genoa, took place at 10:30 o'clock. Rev. J. B. Doran, assisted by Revs. Chas. Chappee and C. A. Silke officiated, the the solemn nuptial mass being used.

The couple were attended by Miss Lena Sullivan, sister of the bride, and by Mr. Thomas Nolan, brother of the groom. The bride wore a gown of white touser, ine with veil held in place by a dainty wreath of green and white, and carried white bride roses. The bridesmaid wore a dress of white touserine and carried pink roses.

Messrs. Louis Sullivan, John Sullivan, Thomas McDermott of Genoa and James Fagan of Bath acted as ushers. The wedding march was played by Miss Nellie Fagan of Rush, N. Y.

A wedding reception followed the ceremony at the home of the bride's parents, at which there were present 150 guests, a number from Ithaca, Auburn, Watkins, Bath, Rush and Moravia.

An elaborate wedding dinner was served and the young couple soon departed for a trip after which they will reside with the groom's parents.

The bride was the recipient of a large number of valuable presents, including silver, cut glass, linen, gold coin and a check for one hundred dollars from the groom's father.

HEALTH HINT FOR TODAY.

Deep Breathing For Drooping Shoulders.

Full and deep breathing will do more to straighten drooping shoulders than the wearing of braces, and if every one would take special pains to lift and hold the chest in its proper position round shoulders would disappear. Lifting the chest does not include any other exercise and is one of the simplest when once it is_understood, but for some reason is one of the hardest ones to comprehend. It consists simply in the muscular movement of lifting up the chest, as though you were trying to lift it high enough to touch the chin. The arms and shoulders should be left in their natural position, and on no account should the shoulders be lifted at the same time you are lifting up the chest. Try the exercise. Stand perfectly easy and relaxed. Avoid tense muscles or any undue exertion, and see if you can accomplish the You will readily underfest. stand that when the chest is no longer hollow, but is well up in its normal position, the shoulders cannot be rounded, but will naturally settle into their por-

The leader closed with a few more words on the Flower Mission work, of which we give the closing:

As I think of the hours spent in the unselfish devotion to others which made possible this beautiful service with the flowers, the words of Mrs. Browning come to my mind as very true of the Flower Missioner. Thy love shall chant itself in its own beatitudes after its own life's working, A child's kiss set on thy sighing lips shall make thee glad,

Of service which thou renderest."

The program closed by singing, 'Your Mission."

Supper was served on the lawn and eighteen people were seated at the tables. A most enjoyable afternoon was spent by those present and it was greatly regretted that there was not a larger attendance.

At the business meeting, a motion was carried that a committee be ap pointed to confer with a committee from the Sunday School, and make arrangements for a celebration of the Fourth of July.

Just What He Wanted. A young minister settled over a small country parish was instructed by his parishioners to procure a plano for their use. He did so, telling the dealer to charge the bill for rental to the secretary of the parish. When the bill amounted to $25. the society being unable to pay it as well as the salary of the pastor, the music dealer dunned the minister for the money, telling him that he assumed the responsibility. The latter replied that he never assumed the responsibility of another, having all he could do to pay his own bills, whereupon the dealer threatened to sue him.

A short time after our friend received a letter from a New York collection agency, to which as well as several following he paid no attention until the following short but definite letter came:

Dear Sir-Unless you remit at once we shall publish you all over the country as a delinquent debtor.

To which he replied:

Gentlemen - Ever since I entered the ministry I have been struggling for the title of D. D. Go ahead.

Unwearied Life.

Why should we ever weary of this life? Our souls should widen ever, not contract:

Grow stronger and not harder in the strife,

Filling each moment with a noble act. If we live thus, of vigor all compact, Doing our duty to our fellow men

And striving rather to exalt our race Than our poor selves with earnest hand

We shall erect our names a dwelling place

Which not all ages shall cast down again. Offspring of time shall then be born each hour. Which, as of old, earth lovingly shall guard

To live forever in youth's perfect flower And guide her future children heaven-

His Precious Decoration.

An actor who had attained some reputation in Berlin once played in a small German principality for a fortnight. The grand duke, to the actor's disap-pointment, failed to decorate him. He mentioned this oversight at a court dinner to a champerlain, and the next day he was sent for. "My friend," said the grand duke, handing the actor a box, "here is something to remember me by."

The overjoyed actor departed, but his cab had hardly gone ten yards when, ordering it to return again, the actor was once more ushered into the grand duke's presence. "Ob, sir." he said, "I had to drive back. There are two crosses in the - MARINE COMPANY ¹¹Oh, no matter," said the grand duke. "Girs the other to the cabman."

HOW TO GROW PERENNIALS.

· de au internationale verdite a mar de production

General Practice is to Divide Them Every Two or Three Years.

Perennials as a rule are easy to cultivate. Prepare the ground to a depth of two feet and see that good drainage is provided. The roots rot quickly in the wet spring months unless the ground is well drained. Deep cultivation of the soil is advisable, as the plants have deep roots. Stable manure, well rotted, should be dug into the soil, and potash and phosphoric acid used in addition. Use only healthy plants and plant them at once if possible after their arrival from the nursery. The roots should be equally distributed in planting and the soil firmed well.

Most cultivated perennials need no winter protection, but are benefited by a light covering. Any suitable material may be used which will keep out the frost and will not be too close or moist. Straw is an excellent material when mice are not troublesome: when they are, a light covering made of be found satisfactory.

It is the general practice to divide but this remarkable dog can really perennials every two or three years, as they are mostly strong growing Whole Corn, plants and deplete the soil food. Another reason for dividing is that the crowns flower only two or three years and then die, and as new crowus are formed continually, the growth will become scattered and loose.

Kept on Feeling Bad. Judge W. C. Adamson, chairman of the committee on interstate and foreign commerce in the House of repreentatives, was brought up on a farm in Georgia. One day his father told him he must go to Atlanta for three Cays, and he set young Adamson a stint to hoe a field of ground peas during the parental absence, thinking to keep the young man busy.

"I went out and looked over the field the first morning," said Adamson, "and decided 1. could do the work in two days, so I went fishing. I had poor luck and came back feeling mighty bad. Next morning I went out and looked at the peas and decided if I worked like fury I could hoe it all in one day, and I went fishing again. I had no luck and came back feeling mighty bad.

"Next morning 1 took another look at the field, decided I couldn't hoe it in a day and went fishing again. I had poor luck and came back feeling mighty bad. Then father came home, saw the field and led me to the barn." "Well," Representative Hughes of Georgia said. "what happened?" "Why," Adamson said, "I argued the case, but 1 had poor luck and came back feeling mighty bad."-Saturday Evening Post.

A Court Fool's Joke.

Scogan, the famous court jester of Edward IV., dearly loved a practical joke. Once he borrowed money of the king and when the day for payment came was unable to make good his word. He feared the king's anger and decided to appease him by a joke. Feigning death, he had his friends carry his body before Edward. The king fell a ready victim to the deception and in his lamentations over the supposed dead fool said he freely forgave the debt. Scogan immediately sprang to his feet, exclaiming, "The news is so revivifying that it has called me back to life."

Mutual Distrust.

On one occasion Daniel Webster was on his way to Washington and was compelled to proceed at night by stage from Baltimore. He had ho traveling companion and the driver had a sort of felon lok, which produced no inconsiderable alarm in the senator. "I endeavored to tranquilize myself," said Mr. Webster, "and had partly succeeded when we reached the dark woods between Bladensburg and Washington, a proper scene for murder or outrage, and here, I confess, my courage again deserted me. Just theu the driver turned to me and with a gruff voice inquired my name. I gave it to him. "Where are you going? said he. The reply was: 'To Washington. I am # menator.' One Exception.

It used to be told of General Logan, who was a member of congress at the breaking out of the war, that when he saw there was really going to be a fight he seized a musket, slipped out of Washington and walked all the way to Bull Run, where he arrived just in time to have a hand in the fray.

He wore a dress coat, but he stood his ground as long as any one. The rout was complete, and the next morning, a good deal out of breath, he was back at the capitol, telling some of his fellow congressmen what he had seen

"Are the cars running?" "No," said Logan; "the cars ain't running, but every other thing in the state of Virginia is, as near as I could make out."

He Didn't Care.

The usual large crowd was gathered at the New York end of the Brooklyn bridge waiting for trolley cars. An elderly lady, red in face, flustered and fussy, dug her elbows into convenient ribs irrespegtive of owners. A fat man on her left was the recipient of a particularly vicious jab. She yelled at him, "Say!"

He winced slightly and moved to one side.

She, too, sidestepped and thumped him vigorously on the back. "Say," she persisted, "does it make Short coated dogs need grooming as well as the long baired varieties. To keep them in mood condition they should be well brushed every morning. Opinions differ as to the washing of terriers, many people saying they should not be washed frequently, bran or sawdust being rubbed well into their coats to cleanse them, but personal experience with for terriers proves that thoroughly washing them with good soap and warm water and a disinfectant once a week will keep them sweet and clean and absolutely free from fleas and vermin of any de-

How to Keep Flies From a Horse. For a good way to keep flies from a horse the following methods are recommended: 1. Take the horse into the yard and, having provided a pailful of water, a sponge and a piece of carbolic or whale oil soap, first wash the legs of the horse and then the whole body, leaving some soapsuds to dry upon the skin.

2. Moisten the hair, especially of the tail and nostrils, with a strong decoction of hazelnut leaves. By means of this decoction the eggs which the flies lay on the skin of the horse are also

How to Wash Tires.

Under no circumstances should tires be washed with water in which kerosene has been accidentally or purpose ly mixed. It kills the rubber in a short time. When washing tires it is best to simply dampen a sponge with clean water, care being taken that the sponge is not soaked and dripping. Then wipe the tires dry with a cloth or handful of waste.

Hoop Games.

The hoop race is a very good game because of the exercise derived from it. Besides being & good runner, the winner in this game must be skillful in the use of the hoop. The players should be allowed to start according to the size of their hoops, as, of course, a large hoop can be bowled faster than a small one. BUILD SILO IN THE BARN.

Then You Have a Combination That Defies All Weather Happenings.

Here is positively the latest and cleverest thing in the great silo question. The cement tank is built in the center of a circular barn, where its contents are not only protected against all weather conditions, but the animals to

The power plant in the up to date barn is easily and cheaply applied for cutting and handling the enslage, and the whole arrangement seems to be a fine application of the old Latin phrase "multum in parvo."

The word silo comes from the French and means ditch or pit, and this method of keeping green forage seems to have been first used by the French people, but in the last few years the farmers of America have surpassed not only the French people, but all others, in developing this method of preserving green forage, and of course the American farmers and manufacturers have made great improvements in the

The original making of ensilage was nothing more than in imitation of the dog that digs in the ground to cover up and keep a bone or something else he wanted to keep and eat at a later date. But, while the silo in the ground serves a great deal better than none at all, it falls short of being as satisfactory as those built above ground. Of course the practical use of the silo is the keeping of forage in a succulent condition, and the most general adaptation is for the use of dairy cows. In this use of it the consumption of ensilage has increased very rapidly in the last ten years. It may be that a chemical analysis does not prove that forage of any sort contains more nutriment than the same would have cut and cured in the regular way, but it has been the experience of all who have used good corn ensilage that it is the best method to preserve corn for cattle. The digestive nutrients in forage of any sort seems to be kept in a more satisfactory condition as ensilage than any other way, and a far greater quantity per acre can be got from the land, so that any farmer who keeps many cattle will be certain to find that the silo is very necessary on his farm.

GOOD AND CHEAP HOGPEN. Place It So as to Give the Piggies

Plenty of Sun-They Need It. A good and economical cot for hog raising is shown in the accompanying cut. It is made of skids 4 by 6 and 9 feet long. The joists are 2.2 by 6 and are laid flat. The roof doors are eighteen inches wide, and paper and lap siding are used for the walls. The pen is a convenient knockdown arrangement. The whole thing can be built for $25.

About the best floor is the ground, with woven wire stretched on top to prevent the hogs from rooting. Electrically welded conrcrib wire is very satisfactory. This makes a floor which is easy on the hogs, almost free from rats and, if properly bedded, warm and dry. It is, however, more difficult to keep free from dust than some other floors. Many concrete floors are used, but they are cold, liable to be wet and are hard on the hogs' feet. Often almost an entire pig crop and many sows are lost by taking cold on concrete floors. Concrete floors are, however, very satisfactory when covered with plank overlays or false floors, which should be raised from the concrete about an inch by nailing cleats on the under side.

lived, cold if up off the ground and make the worst kind of rat harbors. Rats may be kept out by packing sand or cinders to the top of the joists before laying the floor, but these materials are often too expensive to be used for this purpose. It is still hard for many farmers to get rid of the notion that anything is good enough for a hog. Yet there is no animal on the farm which requires better protection from cold than the hog, none for which a good bed is more necessary and none so much in need of sunshine as the little pig. The horse and the cow have good coats of hair, even a calf or a colt when left in the cold is provided with a good fur coat, the hen's feathers are the best of protection against cold, but the hog has almost

Cheers For the Glass Hen.

The "frost proof" hen may be coming, says the Rural New Yorker, but the glass hen is here, and one of her June eggs in January does very well. Water glass or silicate of soda is the best family preservative for eggs, and it will pay any farmer to breed the glass hen. Eggs laid in April, May and June are best for preserving.

Boil nine gallons of water. After it has cooled pour in one gallon of water glass and stir it thoroughly. Put in a stone jar and gently place in the mixture about thirty dozen eggs. Get them as close to laying as possible and have them clean. Put the jar in the cellar it alone until you want the eggs. For family use the glass hen is a wonderin its way a good partner for alfalfa. vetch and the rest of the farm helpers.

The governor of Maine was at the school and was telling the pupils what the people of the different states were called.

These Hens Roost High.

Possibly the most remarkable poultry establishment in this part of the country is lecated in Boston on the roof of one of the leading hotels. air. A little pig takes cold very easily and recovers slowly if at all. To prevent taking cold he must be kept dry, warm, away from drafts and provided with fresh air.

A little pig loves sunshine and needs it almost as much as he needs food. No piggery is fit for the purpose unless it admits direct sunshine on to the floor of every pen at the time the pigs are farrowed, furnishes plenty of fresh air and provides for exercise in the open air. Dryness, sunshine, warmth, fresh air, freedom from drafts and exercise are of primary importance in raising pigs. These secured, the battle is half won. In putting up buildings the six requirements just mentioned must be kept constantly in mind. Not one can be neglected. Whitewashing the inside of the house is an excellent practice. Besides going a long way toward disinfecting. it increases the light materially. When the sunshine strikes a whitewashed wall much of it is reflected to the floor and does a great deal of good. Dark houses which must be used will be much improved by whitewashing.

Keep the egg record up every day. If you skip one day even the rest will be a guess, and guessing tan't business. Trap nests are not expensive, but they are very essential to the well directed poultry farm. By using trap nests you can keep a record of the eggs.

THE REVISION OF THE BIBLE.

Circumstances Under Which King James' Version Was Made.

In connection with the three hundredth anniversary of the publication of King James' version of the holy Scriptures it may be interesting to recall a few historical facts.

The revision of what was known as "the Bishops' Bible," which was then generally used by theologians and the clergy, was suggested by Dr. John Rainolds, president of Corpus Christi college, Oxford, and leader of the Puritan party in England. Dr. Rainolds argued that "one of the things amiss in the church" was the imperfect translation of the holy Scriptures, and he recommended to the king that "the best learned in both universities (Oxford and Cambridge) should take some special pains in behalf of one uniform translation and that after them it should be reviewed by the bishops and the chief learned of the church and from them presented to the privy council and lastly be ratified by his royal authority, so that this whole church should be bound unto it and none other."

Dr. Bancroft, bishop of London, opposed the suggestion with great encizy and declared that "if every man's humor should be followed there would be no end of translations." but King James was mightily pleased with the idea, and in January, 1604, he called together a conference on ecclesiastical matters at Hampton Court palace.

The king himself selected the "four and fifty learned men" to revise the text of the "Bishops' Bible," with the aid of other translations, and on the Both of June, 1604, he wrote Dr. Bancroft, bishop of London, commanding him to "take measures to compensate the revisers by church preferment."

In a very royal way the king indicated that he would like to have borne the expenses of these committees, but some of his lords "did hold it inconvenient." so he requested "the bishops and chapters to contribute toward this work," with the suggestion that "his majesty would be acquainted with every man's liberality." But nothing seems to have been subscribed, and all the compensation the translators received was free entertainment in the colleges at Oxford and Cambridge until a few of them met for the final revision in London, when they were each paid presumably by the printer 30 shillings, or $7.50, a week.

Six committees of scholars were selected, two to meet in Oxford, two to meet in Cambridge and two to meet in Westminster, and to each of these committees were assigned groups of books. The first Westminster company consisted of ten scholars, and Launcelot Andrews, dean of Westmin-

HOW TO CLEAN OILCLOTH.

Six Hints For Cleaning and Preserving Oilcloths and Linoleums.

Always take milk and water to clean an oilcloth. Never use soapsuds, as this dulls the colors. Rub over with a mixture of one-half beeswax, melted, and while warm stirred into a saucer of turpentine. Apply with a dry flannel cloth and polish with a dry flannel. Or wash as above and oil with sweet oil or butter. Polish.

It is a good plan to scrub a floor which is covered with linoleum once a month with a brush dipped in paraffin and hot water-about two tablespoons of the paraffin to a small pall of water. This removes stains and marks and prepares the linoleum for a polish of beeswax and turpentine. Do not scrub more often, but wash weekly with a flannel. Never use soda or strong soaps for oilcloths or linos, as it takes the color out and effaces the pattern.

Very little water should be used in washing ollcloth, as some of it will seep through to the cloth beneath and rot it. Use a flannel cloth well wrung out and wipe the floor until clean. Salsoda will aid greatly. Wipe the white spots caused by spilling any hot liquid on the oilcloth with a few drops of spirits of camphor.

To keep cork linoleum in good condition wipe it off daily with a cloth wrung out in tepid water and once a week with skimmilk.

Never scrub olicioths with a brush and never use soap in cleaning them. Those which have lain in stock for several years are the best to buy, as the paint is thoroughly hardened Wash with a soft rag dipped in milk and water.

Buttermilk is the best possible thing to clean linoleum and oilcloth.

How to Make Canna Bed.

As the canna is a deep rooted plant the bed should be dug deep. It is also important to provide plenty of plant food. Three inches of well rotted manure spuded into the soil is not too much. Do not elevate the center of the bed, but leave it level so water will not run off.

If the bed is to contain several varieties of cannas much care should be given to the selection of varieties. If the bed is to be viewed from all sides put the taller varieties in the center and use the shorter kinds for the border rows. Your florist can give advice about varieties best suited for your purpose.

Do not plant too many varieties. Unless it is an exceptionally large bed two or three will be better than more. For small beds of a dozen to eighteen plants it is good taste to use some other plant for a border. If tall growing cannas are used the fountain grass is unsurpassed, and for dwarf kinds such plants as coleus dwarf salvias and Dusty Miller are serviceable. As cannas are subtropical they thrive only in the warm months and should be planted only when the season is well advanced. May 20 to June 15 is best for the territory between latitudes 40 and 45. The plants should be set a foot to a foot and a half apart each way, according to their size.

Measles.

The Monthly Health Bulletin, sent out by the State Department, contained the following article on "Measles," which contains some interesting statements: The control of the communicable disease, measles, is one of the most difficult problems that confronts the health of-days before the eruption appears, therefore it frequently happens that numbers of persons are exposed to the contagion before the diagnosis is made. Nearly every human being is susceptible to the disease, and unless protected by a previous attack, contracts measles if brought in contact with the virus.

Parents and guardians do not realize the grave nature of the disease and treat it lightly, often purposely exposing the children to the contagion with the mistaken idea that they must at some time during life have measles, and that the younger the b tter as it is the popular idea that it is more severe later in life. ster, afterward bisbop of Winchester. was chairman, the same Bishop Andrews whose "Preces Privatae" is one of the choicest books of private devotion ever issued.

By the king's orders the Bishops' Bible, which was made by Wiclif & Tyndale, was the foundation of the translation, and it was the new practice for one member of a committee to read the text while the rest held in their hands French, Spanish. Italian, Hebrew and Greek translations. "If they found any fault they spoke; if not he read on." This indicates the method employed in this Important undertaking. The committee did not fairly get to work before 1607, and it was engaged four years at its task. Finally, when each group had finished its work, they came together in London and after nine months of wrangling succeeded in putting together the new volume and gave the manuscript to Robert Barker, "Printer to His Majesty the King in Powles Churchyard, at the syne of the tygres head."

Not one of the Bibles used by the six committees is known to exist. None of the manuscript notes, annotations or commentaries has been preserved. and the original manuscript furnished Mr. Barker also has disappeared. The king interfered continually with the work of the committee, but does not seem to have done much damage. He ordered all marginal comments stricken out on the ground that they "savored too much of dangerous and He continually traitorous conceit." expressed contempt for the Puritans and "hated them worse than the papists," saying that their criticism of the clergy of the Established church "was only a new toot on an auld horn." There has always been a difference of opinion as to the number of the first edition, but it was probably in the neighborhood of 3.000 copies, and the selling price was £5, or about $25, a copy. Copies of the first edition now bring about $200 at auction, and there are believed to be between 300 and 400 in existence at present. They are found in nearly all the important libraries both in Europe and the United States. J. P. Morgan has several copies in his remarkable collection of Bibles, which, by the way, is unrivaled by any except that of the British museum, and they have a special value, because nearly all of them were once the property of famous men. A second edition of King James' vernion was published in 1612 and a third in 1613. There is very little difference except in the style of the type.

How to Remove Rusty Nuts.

Every man who has to work with nuts and bolts doubtless has his own method of removing rusted, stubborn nuts. There are many workmen who apply a blow torch to the obstreperous nut on the principle that it will expand in the heat. The difficulty about this is that the torch beats the bolt as well and when it expands the nut is as tight as ever. Marine engineers have a way of bandling the nuts on pipe flanges which work on the same principle, but is surer and at the same time simpler. Heat an open end wrench that fits the nut and while almost red hot apply it to the nut. After a sufficient time has elapsed for the put to be heated through it will be found an easy matter to twist it off, for in this fashion a minimum of heat reaches the bolt. It is safe to say that any nut which refuses to move when thus attacked will have to be cut away with a chisel.

How to Care For Onion Beds.

Be sure that your onion beds receive plenty of water and with regularity. After the ground bas been irrigated till it will not absorb any more wait until the surface soil has dried out somewhat and then give the plants a little surface cultivation, just enough to keep the soil sifted and to prevent any possible caking around the roots.

If you are trying to raise onions on a semi-muck soil watch to see that your surface soil does not bake following a heavy rainstorm. Keep it well stirred and free of weeds and you should have a flourishing bed of onlons.

How to Mix Shellao.

Shellac comes in two colors, orange and white, and can be obtained in fiskes at hardware and drug stores. Put some into a bottle and cover with alcohol (denatured is cheapest), set in a warm place for several bours, shaking occasionally. Thin with more alcohol as desired. Keep the bottle well stopped, as the alcohol evaporates readily. -

How to Save Tablecloths. It is well to have your tablecloths and sheets folded widthways occasionally, instead of lengthways, as this prevents the fold from always coming in the same place and thus causing that place to wear out first.

How to Make Salad Sandwich. For salad sandwiches mix chopped celery and mayonnaise with shredded white lettuce and spread on thin slices of bread.

Tompkins County Salt.

That the deepest salt deposits worked in the state are in Tompkins county. where the salt is encountered at depths exceeding 2.000 feet in beds of unusual size and that Tompkins county leads in Aug 29, 30, 31 and Sept. 1. the production of evaporated salt, is one of the features of a report by John M. Clarke, state geologist, made public in Albany.

The companies engaged in salt mining and manufacture in New York state have reported to Geologist Clarke that conditions last year were rather unfavorable to their business, as prices ruled very low, in fact were more depressed than at any time previously for a number of years. Yet the volume of production showed a moderate gain, with a total outturn of 10,270,273 barrels as compared with 9,880,618 barrels in 1909. The industry thus continued its record of growth which has scarcely been broken during the last quarter of a century and probably supplied as usual about onethird of the salt output of the entire country.

Competition in the salt trade has been very keen of late and has reduced the margin of profit to a minimum. The New York industry has had to contest for its markets not only with the Michigan and Ohio salt producers who are favored by cheaper fuel supplies, but also with the foreign salt which is imported in large quantities into the seaboard districts.

The average net selling price of the salt produced last year was less than thirty cents a barrel. It is apparent that the main items in the cost of salt to the consumer are represented by freight and package charges and the dealers' profits rather than the actual production price. -- Ithaca Journal.

QUAIL SHOOTING.

Some of the Difficulties That Confront the Man With the Gun.

"One of the difficulties of quail shooting lies in the very fact that would apparently make his killing a simple proposition, his rising near the gun," says Charles Askin in Outing. "Let me illustrate: If a quail rose within ten feet of the gun and continued sailing around the shooter's head at a mile a minute gait the chances are that he couldn't be killed in ten U.S. Bonds to secure circushots, both the bird and the gun changing angle with a rapidity beyond the ability of the mind to calculate. In the same way a close springing bird may change his angle with regard to the gun so rapidly as to entail a long and accurate swing before he can be covered

The nature of the quall's flight frequently makes this long swing unavoidable. The bird may rise to the north, pass to the west and be killed to the south. Had it been possible to foresee that the bird would swing about to the south before being killed the gun might have been pointed there. rendering unnecessary a complex gun movement, but meantime the quarry would probably have gone in some other direction. The quail work that calls for care and skill is cover shooting, and the only safe rule there is to point your gun as near the bird as you can when he breaks and shoot as quickly as you can get on."

> Giboias are a species of small boa constrictor employed very generally in Brazil for the purpose above mentioned. They are not at all venomous. They sleep in the house, generally taking up their position at the foot of the stairs. When nightfall approaches they begin to wake up, and during the night they slide swiftly about the premises, looking for rats.

Giboias are offered for sale in the markets of Bahia and Pernambuco for prices ranging from $1 to $5, according to the size of the creature. It is said that they are so easily domesticated that if removed from one house to another they invariably return to the house whence they have been taken. Often when one is bargaining with a broker for the sale or lease of a residence in certain parts of Brazil the broker will expetiate with great eloquence upon the virtues and skills of the gibeis that goes with it-Harper's Wester.
