Wanted-A Husband

He Was Obtained Through a Singular Courtship

By HARRIET C. BONSALL Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

Helen Trevor had the misfortune to be an heiress. Her father, Donald Trevor, had accumulated a large fortune and Helen, being his only child, would at his death possess it all. Heaping up riches becomes a passion. Rather it is a habit, and we all know that a habit once fixed on an individual is hard to break.

Mr. Trevor illustrated this as follows: Since his daughter was to take his place he laid out a course for her. This course involved her marriage; for he not only laid out for her her future concerning the estate, but for her heir or heirs. The man his daughter should marry did not so much concern him as that she should marry. He made a will tying up the property to her and her children, excluding the husband and father entirely. Therefore it made little difference to him whether Helen married a good man or a

But he found Helen hard to manage in this matter of matrimony. She being twenty and he sixty, the two looked at it from opposite standpoints. He thought he was giving her a great deal of leeway when he told her that he didn't care whether she married Tom, Dick or Harry so long as she chose a husband. A girl who would not be satisfied with that must be very unreasonable. Helen expressed berself as content with the conditions. but since she was either not in love or the man she wanted did not propose to her sue did not choose any one.

The old man fretted and fumed and scolded till the poor girl was driven nearly distracted. Feeling obliged to encourage some man, she hit upon Tom Fisher, who would not only have been glad to marry her for her money. but for love. After a month's dawdling with Fisher she tired of him and took up with Archie Briggs. A fair trial with Archie convinced her that perhaps, after all, she could stand Fisher better. Fisher was recalled and dismissed. Briggs was reinstated and dismissed, and so the game went on.

The one least injured by it was Mf Trevor. Both her suitors were kept on tenterhooks, while her father was made positively III by her indecision. He was ordered to his bed by his physician, who said that he must not be troubled about anything. He must be given his own way in everything. If this rule were not observed the doctor would not answer for the consequences

With the perversity of girlhood Helen Trevor gave her heart to a man who showed no disposition whatever to return it. Dick Thurston, a young lawyer, bright, attractive and in many respects a scapegrace, was the unconscious recipient of her preference. But unfortunately she as a woman could not plead her cause with him. It was hard that, while she might be satisfled with a husband and her father might be restored to health by this young man, he showed no disposition

Mr. Trevor grew worse, and his anxlety to see his daughter married became so serious that she began to fear it would break her down as well as her father. He called her to his bedside and questioned her about her intentions. She told him that she was deliberating whether she should marry Tom Fisher or Archie Briggs and promised him that she would make up her mind as to which she would accept as soon as possible. The look of appeal he gave her went to her heartthat is, it would have gone to ber heart had it not gone out of her possession into that of Dick Thurston.

A week passed. She came to no conclusion, and the doctor told her that the subject of her marriage was affecting her father so seriously that if he did not get it off his mind he would die. Something must be done. Perplexed beyond endurance, she was driven to seek a confidant. She went to Thurston, told him of the situation. excepting that part of it which con cerned himself, and asked him as a lawyer if there was no way of being married so that after her father should recover she could be unmarried. In other words, could she appear to be married without being married?

Thurston asked her if there was any one with whom she would enter upon such a contract, and she told 'im that there were two most favored adividuals-viz, Thomas Fisher and Archabald Briggs. Thurston with that reserve lawyers are accustomed to put on when interviewing a client made a note of the names, put on a look indicating that his brain was staggering under the weight of the problem and said that it would be necessary to look the matter up. He would do so and give her a reply within a few days. Just before she left his office be asked one more question.

"Is there any one who stands above these two most favored gentlemen?" "If they are most favored how could any one be mere favored?" was her "There is nothing beyond the from her attorney within the promised "few days," and her father grew worse. One morning after the doctor had been visiting Mr. Trevor the medical man said to Helen:

"It is a question between your father's mind being relieved of the subject that is worrying him or his succumbing. He fears he will die, you will never marry and the estate that he has been at so much pains to build up will become dissipated. In my opinion if you will decide upon marrying he will get well."

"I'll come to a decision at once," was the reply.

As soon as the doctor had departed Helen hurried to her attorney. She told him that she must decide betwen her two suitors immediately and a decision would not avail without a marriage. A vague hope was in her that Thurston would take pity on her and solve the problem by offering to marry her himself. But he did not.

"I have looked the matter up," she said with the gravity of a judge on the supreme bench, "and I would advise you to marry both your suitors." "Both!"

He treated the affair professionally.

"Yes, both." "But such a marriage would in law

"Not at all. There is no law of the and against marrying two persons at once. There is a law against a married person marrying again during the lifetime of the first consort or without divorce, but your first marriage may be with as many husbands as you like." Helen looked at him in astonish

"I stake my professional reputation on what I say being true," added the lawyer. "If you can induce both these men to marry you at once you can announce to your father that you have married either one of them you choose to name to him. After his recovery you will have no trouble in getting the courts to annul the double marriage."

"But suppose these men will not consent to such a marriage." "Try them."

Helen thought bard for awhile, her formentor regarding her curiously. "My advice is," he added, "for you to write each one of your suitors announcing that you will marry him at an appointed time and place." "Will you be present?"

A ciergyman was called, and as soon as he arrived Thurston and Helen went upstairs to the invalid and Helen, kneeling beside her father, put her arms around him and announced that she had come to a decision. She was to marry Mr. Thurston.

"What! Why. Nell, I thought you were hesitating between two others?" "So I was, father, but that was because Mr. Thurston didn't ask me,"

"So she came to my office and asked me," said Thurston.

"You did."

"I say I didn't."

WHEN TO DISPOSE OF DAIRY CATTLE.

There is a more or less general belief that the milk of the cow deteriorates as she gets older. There can be no question that she requires more food in proportion to her size than she did in her prime, and, of course, there is a continued depreciation in her value for food, for the older she gets the less the sum that will be received from the butcher for her. The ordinary practice on many farms is, therefore, to consider that the animal is best disposed of for beef when she has produced five or six calves, says the American Cultivator. Exceptions are, of course, numerous, and cows of ten or twelve years old or even older are sometimes seen in the herds of dairymen who are keen enough business men to be able to justify their practice by the results. Inquiries that have been made from time to time seem to show that the view that there is any rapid deterioration after the cow has reached her prime-say at six

There is no reason for fearing that the calves produced by a cow late in life are less likely than those born earlier to inherit the good qualities of their dam. There may, perhaps, be a falling off in vigor in the produce of animals in old age, but even this is doubtful, and when the custom is followed of using a young male to compensate for the greater age of the cow. Age of the Boar.

A boar may be used with advantage from the age of nine months to five years; indeed, this is the best period of his life, although in all parts of the country farmers and others have no scruples whatever in breeding from much younger animals, sometimes even under six months old. This is a most unwise practice, as it prevents them from properly maturing. Some persons, however, who have watched with great keenness the effects of breeding, maintain that an old boar is not only the most prolific, but produces the most vigorous and perfect offspring, especially when he is mated with sows which approach him in age. -W. Ration For a Dairy Cow. A very satisfactory ration for dairy cows can be made by letting each an! mal have daily thirty pounds silage and all the mixed hay she will consume. A combination consisting of 300 pounds bran, 400 pounds corn chop and 100 pounds cottonseed meal will go very nicely with the roughage. One pound of this mixture for each three and a half pounds average testing milk produced ought to give very satisfactory results. If the cows do not respond as much as the feeder thinks they should, one-half to one pound of oilmeal might be added to the above ration.-Hoard's Dairyman.

Feeding the Colt.

Colts cannot be kept looking well or doing their best when fed dry feed alone, especially if they be allowed to stuff themselves with hay. If they run with their dams and have plenty of green grass they are at their best, In the absence of grass the silo will supply the best substitute and alfaifa hay the next best.

Clean Wool Pays Best.

Hay troughs should be so fixed that particles will not fall through and bereduces its value.

THE BERKSHIRE HOG.

An Appreciation of the Breed as Profitable Pork Makers.

The name stands for a combination of all the good points that can be got together in one breed of swine. When you say Berkshire it stands for the deepest and longest sides, the best ham, both deep and low on the leg, and smooth shoulders combined with more beauty than has ever been got in any other breed, says a Georgia farmer in the Southern Cultivator.

The Berkshire is a very active hog. He possesses great muscular power and a strong constitution. This renders him less liable to disease and accident than others and gives him strong digestive and assimilative pow ers. For this reason they return the greatest p ssible amount of flesh and fat for food consumed. This is the final test by which all breeds are measured. Is not this what you are after? The sows are careful mothers and good sucklers and are very prolific. They farrow on an average as many pigs as any sow can properly suckle till weaning time and raise a larger per cent of those farrowed than any other breed.

The pigs are strong and vigorous at birth, rendering them less liable to ac the sow to raise a large part of those

They are easily put in shape for market at an early age and yet if you so desire you can feed them up to any reasonable weight. I think I can show Berkshire pigs now, weighing 600 to 800 pounds at from fourteen to twenty-one months of age, and that is good enough for any one. They are unsurpassed for uniformity in color and markings and a Berkshire a splendid type because they are a large and healthy pig," writes a Minnesota hog raiser in Orange Judd Farmer. "They make the best gains on a given amount of feed and finish up smoothly with a large proportion of lean pork. From the standpoint of the consumer they lead all breeds in quality and marbling of flesh. Aside from this the sows rank among the most prolific of the lard type, besides making good mothers to large litters.

boar will transmit all these valuable qualities to a large degree when crossed with other sows.

Lastly they are the acknowledged king of all breeds when it comes down to quality of pork and the right proportion of finely marbled lean and fat. No breed touches them in this respect. If you are breeding hogs for market you cannot afford to overlook these valuable qualities and the increase in price and profits that will be yours if you only get started right. It may cost you a little more to get started right with good Berkshires than with other breeds, but this is only another point in your favor when you have a few extra breeders to sell as you undoubtedly will. It costs no more to

The Milk House, A good milk house is an important addition to the farm. It makes it possible to handle the most valuable crop that the farm raises most economically. The grain farmer would not hesitate to build a granary, so why then should the dairy farmer hesitate to build a milk house?

GOD'S COMMANDS FOR THANKS ARE BUT LOVING REQUESTS.

By Rev. Dr. RUSSELL H. CON-WELL of Philadelphia.

GOD commands us to give thanks, and all his commands are but directions to do those things which are for our good. His commands are in reality but loving requests.

Thanksgiving day is but a reminder of the great privileges and of the blessing which all receive who train themselves to give thanks.

It is of far more benefit to the recipient of a Christmas present to be grateful than it is to receive a gift itself. It is very wise to be grateful for last year's Christmas presents.

Cultivate a habit of mind which will make you grateful to God and to all your friends and ancestors, for with a grateful heart you will appreciate much more and be in every way a better and happier man.

THANKSGIVING'S HILARIOUS ORIGIN

Funny Side of Good Governor Bradford's First Blg Feed.

By WILL ALLEN.

OVERNOR BRADFORD of the New England colony did not, as many people think, invent Thanksgiving in 1621, and if he claimed to it was an out and out infringement on previous patents, for many people of many countries, even rar back in Bible history, had been setting aside times for feasts and rejoicing when they cut their oats, corn, squashes and other conveniences in the fall of the year.

But nevertheless the governor and his colonists no doubt broke the record for intensity of thankfulness, for, having so very little to be thankful for, the job could be done up in fine shape and not be neglected on any point.

During the voyage over on the somewhat unsteady Mayflower if any one had so much as suggested a hearty Thanksgiving dinner he or she would most probably have been tossed over the rail, and some one of us today would be minus a pilgrim ancestor.

It is said that the rough trip over was the real cause of the pilgrims utterly losing their sense of humor

Anyhow, hardships began right at warn of Kidney trouble that may end in had washed up a few old jellyfish, so dropsy, diabetes or Bright's disease. those who secured standing room only their rubbers on and got wet feet, which, as every one knows, is a bad thing to do in December anywhere along the New England coast. Of course these proceedings wound up with coughs, colds in the head and sore throats, which filled up the hospital right from the start.

> As is usual in Massachusetts, there was no policeman around to handle the crowd or all this might have been avoided. It was a mighty bad winter, and, according to the accounts of the sufferers themselves, "lyons" roared and "wolves sat on their tayles and grinned," and if the Indians had not done any worse life would have been much more attractive in Plymouth.

But soon after landing in snooping around a deserted Indian village several baskets of corn, two pumpkin seeds and a recipe for mince pie were found, so that a foundation for the first planting was assured, which at least gave the people something to look forward to.

All this time marvelous appetites were being developed for the big feed in the fall, for, not yet having become

THE ONLY HRIFER CALF IN THE COLONY. familiar with the location of the best grocery stores and ment markets, the colonists were on a diet principally of little neck clams (much cheaper then than now) and eels, which they trod out of the mud at low tide with their bare feet.

This undoubtedly brought into play the stern bearing strength of character of these old fellows more than anything else, for what iron nerve it must have taken to feel a cold, squirming eel suddenly wriggle up between one's bare toes and not lose any dignity or give way to unseemly remarks!

Spring came, and the planting was done under very trying circumstances for the would be agriculturists could hardly stoop over to bed in a grain of corn but that some Indian with a crude, primitive sense of humor would

and were well attended, you may be sure, for the clam and eel diet was losing popularity.

The pumpkins spread all over the place and were diligently "bugged" every day to save the vines, and the extra shoots (technically known as "suckers") were all cut off the corn and fed to the only heifer calf in the colony in hopes that she might be induced to grow up and become a mature cow some day.

The harvest was so abundant that they even spared one pumpkin for the children to make a jack-o'-lantern' of. and by working all day and praying all night everything was at last got in. Now, Governor Bradford noticed how tired, thin and thankful everybody looked, and the most appropriate thing he could think of in the way of celebration was to set aside three days to see how big a hole they could eat in the harvest. All fell right in with this unique notion and set to with a will making preparations.

Men were sent out gunning for tur keys, geese and other feathered poultry, barring crows and Indians. The old flintlock guns kicked so that while the bullet killed one bird the pilgrim progressing through the air in the opposite direction would crush out the life of another unsuspecting fowl which merely considered himself an innocent bystander until so rudely sat

However, this was a great saving of ammunition, and the hunters soon returned with bruises and game a-plenty. The Indians, getting a whiff of mince pie with brandy sauce and other evi dence of a "heap big" free lunch, immediately became friendly and flocked and belts let out to the last hole. This incident gave rise to the custom which we follow to this day of al ways inviting outsiders in to Thanksgiving before they get a chance to in to town with their best feathers on come without asking. It was a merry time indeed. Every body would sit down and eat awhile, then go out and run races with the Indians (which had been done there tofore under very different circumstances) until the violent exercise had so aided digestion that they could eat again.

So, taking it all in all, the feast was such a great success and took so with the public that Manager Bradford decided to reproduce it every year, and thus the grand old custom has come down to the present day, where some are overfed and some are underfed. That is where the old pilgrims got the best of us-they fared and shared equally in want and abundance.

"WOLVES SAT ON THEIR TAYLES AND

We sit down to overloaded boards and hurriedly give thanks, one eye shut and the other on the turkey, never giving a thought to the rows and rows of little teeth with no drumsticks to gnaw or the thousands of mouths that would water at the very scraps from our tables.

Let us back up a few hundred years in spirit this Thanksgiving, good peo ple, and go out and fill somebody up that needs it, then come back to our own meals with that good old fashioned thankfulness whetting up our Simple Decorations For Table. As Thanksgiving is a national custom it becomes us to treat it handsomely and make it not only a feast to the palate, but to the eye. Nothing can do this so well as the adornment of the table with flower and leaf and If you haven't a brilliant little scarlet poinsettia for the center of this table, now is the time and place for the dish of ferns you brought in some time ago from the wet places before the frost had touched them to withered gold and for a wreath-like flat arrangement about it on the snowy cloth of the small leaves of the whortleberry (pressed immediately after plucking), with all their rich tints of orange and carmine yet unfaded. If, however, you are so fortunate as to have an "akebia vine" anywhere on the premises you can have the preferable living green. This is a Japanese hardy vine, acclimated over here for perhaps a century, whose curious flow ers of a reddish purple, male and female in one pendulous cluster, belong to the heats of summer, but whose small leaves are green and delicate even in midwinter.

But if you have foregathered none of these things you can purchase a lay the sprays around the centerpiece and up and down the table just before the guests are seated, as they shrivei so soon. You can hardly have a prettier effect than this in its pure green to it a finy boutonniere at every place,

Pueblos of New Mexico Do the "Rabbit Hunting Dance."

HE Pueblo Indians of the new state of New Mexico have a day for thanksgiving and prayer contemporaneous with that of the paleface. Their prayer is a dance. That is the Pueblo Indian method of praying to the Great Spirit. The prayer dance is held in the latter part of November, according to the phase of the moon by which their days are regulated. The festival is known as the "rabbit hunting dance." Each village has a festival. There is a generous attendance of Pueblos, and whites are admitted as spectators. The villages of Zuni, Acoma and Taos, being remote, are seldom visited by white people on these festivals, but the one at Isleta, a few miles from Albuquerque, is more generally attended, especially by tourists.

When the chief of the village has officially designated the day the official crier mounts to the top of the "estufa," or place of worship, and announces that the prayer dance of the rabbit hunt will begin at daylight on the stated day. Runners are sent out to notify the Pueblo ranchers.

The dancers are dressed in white cotton pantaloons and cotton skirts of all colors, and some wear loose cotton gowns reaching to the feet. Crown hats with broad colored bands are most generally worn, yet some wear the paleface hat. Others are hatless and let their hair hang down over their backs. Each dancer carries a gun. Three or four men are standing at the head of the line, and they are given the signal by striking on a wooden drum, rattling gourds partly filled with pebbles and singing the song of the rabbit hunt, a slow, monotonous chant, punctuated with an occasional grunt.

gins to sway, the men at first moving feet in motion, raising each alternately without moving from their position. Later they chant the song and thump idly and violently, and then they give a yell and trot around the square, claim. one following in the other's footsteps in time to the song and music. After making the round they break into circles after the manner of a quadrille. and the square is filled with parties of dancers. The men forming the circle do not join hands, for they need them in executing the movements with their guns in imitation of the hunt, showing how they will kill the rabbit on the little pot of maidenhair fern and can morrow. The circles dance in a direction opposite to the course of the sunthat is, from west to east. This ceremony is repeated several times.

At first the dance is fast and furious, but finally decreases to a mere "hippewhite contrast unless there is added ty-hop" movement and then into the primary movement. The Indians conmade only of a single bud, together tinue their chant and dance as long as strength and breath remai

Woman's Day is Coming. California is the sixth state to grant full suffrage to women. Wyoming started the ball rolling in 1869, but none followed till 1898, when Colorado gave it a push. Utah, Idaho, Washington and now California have followed since then. Kansas votes on the proposition this fall, and it is predicted that Kansas will line up as the seventh state to adopt it. It would only need the little word "sex" inserted in the Fifteenth Amendment to the Federal Constitution to give the privilege to women everywhere. And it may not be many decades be fore that proposition is attacked by suffragists who already have six states in line and a public sentiment which is increasingly becoming hospitable toward the innovation. The time for sneering at the women who want to vote is rapidly passing away. It was the farmers of California who gave the suffrage amendment ite majurity against the liquor interests, which awang every large city but Los Angeles against the amendment. There is food for thought here, too. -Leslie's.

HANDEL'S TEMPER.

Sorely Tried by a Joker Who Knew the Composer's Weakness.

The celebrated composer Handel had such a remarkable irritation of nerves that he could not bear to hear the tuning of instruments, and therefore this was always done before he arrived at the theater.

A musical wag who knew how to extract some mirth from Handel's irascibility of temper stole into the orchestra on a night when the Prince of Wales was to be present and untuned all the instruments. As soon as the prince arrived Handel gave the signal of beginning, con spirito, but such was the horrible discord that the enraged musician started up from his seat, and, having overturned a double bass, which stood in his way, he seized a kettledrum, which he threw with such violence at the leader of the band that he lost his full bottomed wig in the effort.

Without waiting to replace it he advanced bareheaded to the front of the orchestra, breathing vengeance, but so much choked with passion that utterance was denied him. In this ridiculous attitude he stood staring and stamping for some moments amid a convulsion of laughter, nor could he be prevailed upon to resume his seat until the prince went in person and appeased his wrath.

THE PLANET MARS.

Its Orbit and Its Distance From the Sun and Earth.

While the astronomers are still debating and weighing the problem of Mars and its inhabitants a few words about the distance of the planet from the sun and earth may be of interest.

The average distance of Mars from the sun is 141,500,000 miles. The distance from earth to sun is 93,000,000 miles. When sun, earth and Mars are in line, with the sun and Mars on opposite sides of the earth, Mars is said to be in "opposition," and it is then closest to the earth. If earth and Mars both moved in circles about the sun the distance from earth to Mars at opposition would be forty-eight and a half (1411/2-93) million miles. But neither of the orbits is circular, that of Mars being much more elliptical than that of the earth, with the result that at opposition Mars may be as far away as 61,000,000 miles from the earth when there is an unfavorable opposition, or Mars may come as close as 35.000,000 miles away, when to the earth, and its opposition is then the most favorable possible. At such times Mars is brightest in the sky and appears of greatest size.-New York

Biggest of Cannibal Banquets. Probably the biggest cannibal orgy on record is one of which Miss Beatrice Grimshaw tells in her book "The New New Guinea." "In 1858 a shipload of Chinamen was being take down to Australia. The vessel was wrecked upon a reef close to Rossel island (New Guinea). The officers escaped in boats, but were never afterward heard of. As for the Chinamen, numbering 326, the natives captured them and put them on a small barren island, where they had no food and no means of getting away. They kept their prisoners supplied with food from the mainland and every now and then carried away a few of them to eat until all but one old man had been devoured. This one succeeded eventually in getting away and told some thing of the story, which seems to have met with general disbelief. True it is, however, on the evidence of the sons of those who did the deed."

Knew What He Was Doing. The stalwart policeman who guards the traffic at Euclid and a cross street rescued a well dressed old gentleman from beneath the very wheels of an automobile. "Officer," said the rescued man, "are you married?" "No, sir," answered the policeman. "Ah, well, you will hear from me in a day or two nevertheless."

After he had gone a friend of the officer asked: "Tom, why did you tell the old guy that you wasn't married? You've got a wife an' kid at home and I know it."

"Sure I have. But if I'd told him so he'd have sent me a ham or a basket of grapes. As it is he'll probably come through with a little purse. ain't no fool!"-Cleveland Plain Dealer

Sense of Direction In Bees. The directive sense possessed by bees is the object of research made by M. Gaston Bonnier of Paris, and he seems to have proved that bees possess a special sense like carrier pigeons. Experiments showed that bees can fly two miles to their hives even when deprived of the organs of sight and smell. Many scientists and among others Dadent have always declared that bees are guided by the sense of smell and that they can smell flowers at one and a half miles. Bonnier's experiments proved that bees detect odors at only short distances.

Deep Breathing.

While most persons are aware of the importance of deep breathing. few practise it habitually. They have heard or read that singers, who are obliged to breathe deeply, escape lung troubles, and that the germs of consumption thrive in persons who live in roome the air in which is so tainted or close as to discourage such breathing. Commuters who are in the habit of noting their sensations are familiar with the feeling of exhilaration which comes with the first deep inhalations of fragrant country air, after stepping from the cars. ### DIAMONDS

Anyone can sell you a diamond, yes it will be a "diamond," but many things go to determine the value of diamonds, viz: color, cutting, freedom from flaws, general brilliancy and representation-chiefly the latter. Oftimes diamonds are bought because of their representation. Oftimes they are not what the purchaser suppose them to be.

For years we have been striving to obtain and maintain the confidence of our customers and have succeeded largely, because WE NEVER MISREPRE-SENT OUR GOODS. Just now we have some beautiful diamonds, most of them perfect, from 1-4 to 2 1-2 carats, of Blue Wesselton color, American cutting. We are selling them below their present market value.

A resident of Candor has just been spending five days in jail for not sending his daughter to school. The State Educational Depart ment is insisting on the enforcement of the compulsory educational law, and such schools as fail to comply will lose their public school money. Parents or guardians of children of school age should understand that if such children fail to attend school the prescribed number of weeks in each year that they, the parents, are liable to arrest. If the parents or guardians are found to be at fault they must suffer the penalty, which is a fine or imprisonment. Sickness is the only valid excuse recognized by from attending school.

The Editor of "Byways."

Last week Wednesday evening, a woman giving the name of "Bessie Campbell" and her address as Stamfor. , Conn., reached Genoa, and stayed at the hotel over night. She was taking subscriptions for the"Byways Magazine," of which she said she was the editor and proprietor Thursday morning, she hired Liveryman Fulmer to take her to Locke, making some stops on the way and in Locke, and securing some sulscriptions. For this ride, Mr. Fulmer loaned her a man's fur coat. In the afternoon, she made a number of calls about town, still wearing the coat over her suit. The general appearance of the woman, her actions and remarks that she made to differ ent people, aroused their suspicions. The woman left town Friday morning, going south on foot. She took the train at a point south of the village and went to Ithaca. On arrival there she was arrested as a suspicious character, word having been sent on from here. Demanding an examination that night, the city judge could not find sufficient cause to hold her further, and so the authorities released her. We are informed that the hotel proprietor here has received a letter from her, postmarked Nichols, N. Y While volumes could be written from the reports in circulation, after two thirds of them have been sifted, hardly a grain of truth remains. There are many opinions concerning the woman and many theories as to her real business in the muscular contraction. He says some distance to get the education 60x96 feet with corner posts eight town, but they are merely conjecture as at first. Copies of the "Byways Magazine" are eagerly awaited by those who subscribed.

WISE TURKEYS TRAINING DOWN FOR THANKSGIVING

F only turkey birds were wise they'd read the sporting pages, Discovering there the secret rare of lengthening out their ages. By training down instead of up they'd so reduce their meat That when Thanksgiving day comes round they'd not be fit to eat, And when the buyer came along to talk with Farmer Jones He'd say, "Why, I these birds can't buy---they're only skin and bones!"

AN OLD TIME THANKSGIVING

An aged lady recently contributed to the Brooklyn Citizen this description of a New England Thanksgiving threequarters of a century ago, when life was simpler and saner than today:

The house was cleaned from the roof to the cellar the week before, as Thanksgiving in New England was a greater holiday than Christmas or New Year's and it must be observed by everybody. The house was full of nice odors. One day it was mince pie and fried cakes, then it would be sweet pickles and election cake, then pumpkin pies-my sister Persis counted ten in a row-then plum pudding and Wednesday night a chicken pie that would almost crowd the top of the oven and would come on to the tablea piece of it, I mean, warmed upevery Sunday till the next year. It held the plumpest chickens and sweet apple quarters that had been half dried, and the meat and gravy were sweet as the apples, and spices and other goodies, and all in a large milk pan, with a flaky crust at top and bottom a quarter of an inch thick.

To make that crust Persis and I had to burn clean corncobs in an iron kettle and gather up the ashes, and mother poured hot water on them, then strained the liquid and stirred it into some buttermilk, and that made it bubble and fizzle just as soda nowadays.

Thursday morning we were up bright and early, and mother read a chapter in the Bible. Then we all stood up while father prayed for us, and I felt almost like crying, it was so solemn, but I forgot all over the nice breakfast and the walk of a mile to the church and the music and the return at noon to a dinner smoking hot on the table. Mother had arranged a party for us that evening, but we could not wait out, and we climbed the long hills with for that, so our sleds were brought a group of girls and boys and seated ourselves, letting one boy ride with us on each side to steer it. The parlor was all in order. The floor was covered with white sand swept into curves. The woodwork was a bright blue, white sash curtains at the windows and a plain stand with a green haircloth on it and a large Bible resting on that. Six wooden chairs and a stiff backed rocking chair composed the furniture of the room Stiff and formal as it looked, that was not the place for party or party games. The next room was for our pleasure ground. It was large and roomy.

BUSH & DEAN. ITHACA, NEW YORK.

The Store That Sells Wooltex.

Then He Fled.

A too convivially inclined young clubman was introduced at a reception to a clever society woman whom he understood in some hazy fashion to be a great artist. She was not an artist. nor had she ever made any attempt to be. But the young man, whose wits were apt to go woolgathering at times, thought she was, and he was very anxious to make a sufficiently pretty speech to her.

He murmured the usual conventionalities when he was presented and "You paint, don't you? So many people have told me about it," he then said ingratiatingly.

The young woman stared at him. looked him severely in the eyes, let her glance fall on every feature of his perplexed face, glared her indignation. and then she spoke.

"If I do," she remarked icily, "at least I don't make a mistake and put. it on my nose."-Philadelphia Times.

Discontent.

The landsman through a stormy street And shades of night was going. The ground was paved with shifting sleet The wintry wind was blowing. "Heaven pity grant and help," said he, "To those who live upon the sea!"

The sailor clinched a trembling mast Mid mountains round him flowing, While through the darkness thick and fast The wintry winds were blowing.
"Heaven save the landsman now," he said. With chimneys toppling round his head!

But when the world grew mild once more This tar, despondent growing, Said. "If I could but walk ashore Though all the winds were blowing!" The landsman thought, "Though storm there be, I would that I could sail the sea!"

-Will Carleton.

Going the Other Way.

A St. Louis prelate is credited with this story, told by him at a recent din-

The head of one of the big trusts arrived at the gate of heaven and, as usual, found St. Peter on watch there. Rather pompously the trust magnate

"Pardon, is heaven here?" "It is," said St. Peter. "Step right into the elevator."

After waiting for what seemed a long time the trust president said: "I beg your pardon, but when does this elevator go up?"

"It doesn't go up," said the saint. "It goes down as soon as I get a load." -St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

A Cutlery Salute.

Discipline aboard men-of-war belonging to tropical countries is not as strict as that obtaining on the vessels of colder countries. Indeed, in some instances it is very lax.

The Defense, a Haitian naval vessel, was lying in the harbor of Port au Prince. One day a mess cook for some reason cleaned about a peck of knives and forks on the gun deck, and, being suddenly called away and not wishing to spend time to go to the galley, he selzéd the mess pot full of knives and forks and stuck it in the muzzle of the ten inch gun, putting the tampion in after it. About an hour afterward the admiral came aboard, and as the gun was loaded with blank cartridge they used it to fire a salute.

It happened that the gun was aimed toward the town and almost point blank at the Grand hotel. The guests had assembled on the porch to witness the ceremonies, when they were saluted with a rain of knives and forks, which stuck against the wooden walls like quills on a porcupine and drove the startled sightseers in a mad head over heels scramble indoors in fear of a possible shower of pots and

A Quaint Introduction.

An old Missourian recalls the quaint speech with which an old Federal soldier once introduced General James Shields to a Missouri audience. The introduction included a high tribute to Stonewall Jackson's generalship. Said the old Union soldier:

"Friends and Fellow Citizens-Allow me to introduce General James Shields, a citizen of two countries, a hero of two wars, general in two armies, a senator from two states and the man who came nearer whipping Stonewall Jackson than any other man ever did," and here, looking around and seeing no ladies in the audience, he added, "but didn't do it by a d-d sight!"-St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Made a Great Hit.

A well known ventriloquist was in vited to give a performance at a big institution in connection with some charity, and he beard that steps were being taken to insure for him a large yet critical audience, who would be close enough to watch his every movement. The night came, the attendants carried on three "lay" figures on chairs, and the ventriloquist received a great oyation from those assembled. His performance was unusually brilliant, and notwithstanding the quips and songs which he went through his muscles showed no evidences of his art. The changes of voice were marvelous, and the astonished crowd at the close of the exhibition gave him a rousing cheer. Again and again they called him back, while he expressed his pleasure by innumerable bows. At last the cheering ceased and the artist was permitted to retire. Hardly had he done so when the three "lay" figures got up from their chairs and walked off the stage. The ventriloquist had employed three friends to impersonate his usual mechanical figures, and he had tricked every one of his audience.

WINNING A NAME.

The Incident That Crowned Mr. Kelly as "Honest John."

There have been many stories about the manner in which "Honest John" Kelly, the ex-umpire, first got his nickname. Mr. Kelly himself, according to a New York letter, holds that it came to him naturally, for even as a small boy the purity of his soul shone through his face.

"I think the first time I was ever called Honest John was when I was quite a youngster," said Kelly. "A man engaged as an ambulatory salesman of tinware observed the ingenuous countenance I presented to the world and hailed me. 'You look honest, boy,' said he. 'What might your name be?

"'John,' said I, quite simply-'John' -just like that. 'Then hold my horse while I go in the saloon and get a drink,' said he. And so I held his horse while he went in the saloon and got a drink.

"But this was on lower Ninth avenue, in a day when the avenue's honors went to the man who could clean up the most cops in a given time. By and by the gang came along and beheld that wagon full of tinware. The peddler was detained within by a sore thirst, and they took the tinware, and then they came back and took the cushions off the wagon. Eventually. becoming daring, they unhitched the wagon and took it away.

"True to my trust, I stood there. holding the horse. And by and by the peddler came out of the saloon and sized up the situation. 'Well.' said he warmly, 'vou're Honest John, all right. You saved the horse."

A New Brand.

A group of normal school girls from an interior New York town were to gether at a fashionable restaurant in Albany, bent upon a lark, which they agreed could best be attained by ordering some real drinks, like the men. The waiter, on being directed to bring "some drinks" all around, asked, "What kind?" The leader replied with firmness, "Cocktails."

"Yes, miss," said the waiter, "what kind of cocktails?"

This threw the girls into confusion until one of them saved the situation by suddenly exclaiming, "Oh, lager!"

In Doubt.

An exceedingly pompous and supercilious old chap engaged rooms at a hotel, where he made himself pretty obnoxious by his petty faultfinding among the employees. One day be haughtily approached the clerk's desk and announced that he wanted to lodge a complaint. "A complaint," said the clerk. "Well, guess you'll have to see the boss about that. That's him there." The pompous one turned to the boss, who stood at his elbow smoking a

"Are you the proprietor of this hotel?" he began.

The proprietor took his cigar from his mouth, looked the old chap up and down and drawled:

"Well, I thought I was till you came."

Made His Heart Glad. When Dolly Madison was mistress of the White House, Meley Meley, the first Turkish minister to this country, arrived in Washington, and a grand ball was given in his bonor, to which the beauty and fashion of the town flocked, curious to see his elaborate dress and turban. Meley Meley, however, showed perfect indifference to the open admiration about him until. spying a large, fat negress on her way from the kitchen, he rushed to her and, with much enthusiasm, threw his arms around her, saying she reminded him of home and his best and most expensive wife-"a load for a camel."

It Suited Him. Garrett P. Serviss, the noted science writer, said at the Brooklyn University club apropos of Halley's comet:

"The ignorant and superstitious dread that the comet evoked in some quarters reminds me of the Millerites. The Millerites back in seventy-two, when Grant was up for a second term, were preaching the immediate destruction of the world. They were even giving their property away.

"Well, at a Millerite camp meeting one night in Maine a Millerite preacher preached that the end of the world would come on Oct. 1, just a month before election.

"The preacher noticed a man in a front seat who manifested every symptom of satisfaction whenever the date was driven home. Perplexed, he accosted the man at the end of the service and asked him why he had shown pleasure over such a terrible matter.

"'Anything to best Grant!" was the

THE INSANITY OF JESUS. Text, "They said. He is beside himself."

Here's the most pathetic biography ever written. Every chapter tells a new woe. Surely prophecy was truehe would be "a man of sorrow, acquainted with grief," but no imagination had ever pictured the least of it. Thirty years of enforced silence. Wrongs there to be righted, but his hour "not yet come." The regiment under fire and permission withheld to charge. Truth everywhere on the scaffold, wrong everywhere on the throne. Hypocrisy, violence, poor downtrodden, widows unavenged, religion a hollow mockery. Yet he "was dumb; he opened not his mouth." He must wait till the slow years drag their leaden heels. His face aged under it. The Jews said, "Thou art not yet fifty years old." Then came the public life, the temptations, hardships, insults of Pharisees, contempt of rulers, stupidity of followers, rejection of the people, attempted assassinations, Gethsemane, the judgment hall, Cal-

"Et tu, Brute!"

If there are shades of darkness this is the blackest. The text event has a bitterness all of its own. The hatred of the Pharisees was one thing, the vindictiveness of the rulers another. This blow was from hands that loved him. They had doubted him from the first. John says, "Neither did his brothers believe in him," and among the Jews there was a grave suspicion. Many of them said: "He hath a devil and is mad. Why hear ye him?" Catch the significance of it? When he stands at the door of the carpenter shop, brushing the shavings from his hair, looking toward the setting sun, there's a gigantic dream in his heart. He dreams, this carpenter. Foolish fellow! They are watching him. For some time they remark a growing strangeness in his manner. He has said so many strange things, done so many strange acts. What does it all mean? Where end? One sad day it culminated. It was clear enough now. He was not quite responsible for what he was doing. They tapped their heads significantly. It was his mind. alas, that was affected. In plain English, he was mad. An awful thing not. Fearful when coming from enemies, more fearful when from those we love. There should have been one spot on God's earth for the Son of Man, one roof under which he would be understood, where there would be a mother's pride, sister's love, brother's affection. But even that is denied him. Furtive eyes are watching him askance; one whispers to another aside: suspicious glances instead of frankness; hands once kind itch to restrain, finally the overwhelming announcement, "He is beside himself!"

Truly, "He came unto his own and his own received him not!" The Truth of a Falsehood.

Sometimes our saintliest men, driven by overwork, pain or quivering nerves. become "sweet bells out of tune" for a season. Alexander Cruden at work upon his concordance; William Cowper, the sweet singer; Maltbie Babcock, the Christ man of a century-the world loves them more tenderly for the shadow of the mental cloud. But, listen. oh, my soul! From the world's standpoint the charge against my Lord is true. It is useless to denounce it as libel, a bitter, blasphemous calumny. It is not so. It is true! They had no alternative. Either he was the Christ. the Son of the living God, or he was beside himself. Either he was God-"The Father and I are one"-or he was a maniac prating of his kingdom. Three years pass, three brief, swift years. He is hunted as a criminal, seized. hung on the cross, a laughingstock. They mock him; they taunt him; they spit upon him. The bubble's burst, The dream's ended. A dead man's on the gibbet. That is the end of all. But, oh, my God! Two hundred centuries later his name is whispered with awe; he leads armies who never buckled sword; be fills libraries who never wrote a book; he lights the world's canvas who never held a brush. At his name the world's millions bow their heads. Is this the Carpenter? Yes, the mighty Builder, the great Architect of the uni verse, who framed the vault of the sky and the dome of eternity.

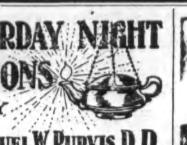

"beside himself" in the eyes of the world. It was always so. "Paul, thou art beside thyself," said his lustful, wicked accuser. Truly, a holy life is always a phenomenon. What is being beside oneself? What is madness? Man acts different from others. We say he is eccentric. He gathers old coins or collects stamps or bugs or beetles. Other wheels in the machine shop revolve about a central axis, describing a perfect circle. Over at one side is one with a changing curve. The engineer tells you it has a peculiar center, is eccentric. When the Christ came the world revolved about one circle. one center to human life-self. He came to teach a new center-God. If man's center was right, then Christ was wrong, eccentric, a lunatic, If Christ's center was right, then not he. but man, was eccentric, insane. God is the center of the universe. Whatever is out of God is out of center.

Sin draws men away from the center.

Fin, not goodness, is madness.

The Eccentricity of Goodness.

And the Christian? Yes, he. too, is

BUYING A MULE.

Noise and Abuse a Part of the Transaction In Algiers.

Americans who travel in eastern lands are amused as well as aggravated by the business methods which prevail there. A recent traveler in Algiers concluded to buy a mule and finally found one for sale.

He went to the owner with an interpreter, and a dialogue then ensued as follows:

The interpreter, with a vell: "I will give you $10 for that mule."

The Arab: "Ten dollars! Murder!

Thief! Brigand! The interpreter: "I will make it $11. Do you hear, you scoundrel? I offer you $11 for your old mule, which will die in about a week. You are a robber and a thief to take that much, but I am a generous man, and I serve a great man, so I offer you $11, you scum of Africa!"

Then they both yelled and shook American it looked as if they were going for each other hammer and tongs. The row they made was terrible, but no one seemed to notice it. Finally a bargain was struck, and then they fell upon each other's neck and embraced.

And the American got his mule for $11.-St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

KINGS TALKED OF A DUEL.

But George II. and Frederick of Prussia Didn't Fight.

The personal enmity which existed between George II. and Frederick, king of Prussia, reached at one time to such a height that, as Baron Byfield was informed on good authority, the monarchs conceived the very singular design of gratifying it in a duel.

King George made a choice of Brigadier Sutton for his second and the king of Prussia of Colonel Derschau. The territory of Hilderscheim was picked on for the meeting. His Britannic majesty was then at Hanover, and his Prussian majesty had come as far as Salzdahl, near Brunswick. Baron Borck, the Prussian minister at London and lately dismissed from the court in a very abrupt manner, having repaired to the king, his master, at Salzdahl, found him in such a violent ollowing officers were elected; passion that he did not think it advisable directly to oppose his design, but to gain time feigned to approve of the extraordinary combat which his majesty meditated, and he even offered to carry the challenge.

The challenge was not sent. Ministers on both sides gained time, the choler of both parties evaporated, and the following year the quarrel was made up.—"The Percy Anecdotes."
