SYNOPSIS

Private Mark Malone, U. S. A., sent as a spy to Chattanooga by General Thomas. is saved from guerrillas by Souri Slack. Disguised as a countryman, Mark starts for Chattanooga with Jakey, Souri's brother. Mark is to send Souri her red handkerchief if in peril.

Mark and Jakey are given shelter by Laura Fain and her mother. Laura suspects Mark is a Union soldier in disguise. He confesses that he is. Laura is a Confederate. She prevents her lover, Captain Cameron Fitz Hugh, C. S. A., from detaining Mark.

Mark learns that a big Confederate army is massing at Chattanooga and planning a northward dash. He attempts to escape from Chattanooga.

He carries Jakey in safety past the picket line and unexpectedly meets a band of Confederate deserters. He and Jakey are then taken prisoners.

Mark is imprisoned as a spy. Jakey a basket on her arm, smoking a short sends Souri's handkerchief to her by a ne- clay pipe. gro. Mark, defended by Fitz Hugh, is sentenced to death.

Souri receives her handkerchief and, disguised as a colored girl, goes to Mark's Lo'd speaken to his sarvent from de rescue. She becomes a servant in the clouds?" said the old woman, starting jail.

Souri and Mark exchange clothing, and with a blackened face Mark passes the guard. Bloodhounds follow him. He takes to the river.

Reaching the Fain house, Laura conceals him and gives him food and new clothing. She upbraids him for seeking ber protection.

Souri and Jakey are sent home by the eye to the crack. Jakey stood off a Confederate provost marshal. Mark poses as Professor Rhett of South Carolina in the Fain home Laura insists that Fitz Hugh permit Mark to escape. He does so, and their dem po' misable po' white east Ten-engagement is broken. Mark, Laurs and nesseesns dar what dey had in de ber mother start for Nashville.

Mark, endeavoring to pass a Confeder ate picket, says he and Laura are Mr. and Mrs. Green. They are detained. Mark L," said Jakey in a melancholy voice. and Laura agree to be man and wife in reality.

Fits Hugh appears, hears that Mark and Laura are married and aids Mark to becape. Mark reaches the Union lines in safety.

Laura and her mother rejoin Mark, and a legal marriage is performed. Mark as or secesh?" sures Laura he will be a spy no longer. "Why, ho

Mark looked at him with astonishment. In the tall, straight soldier, with black hair and eyes, mustache and goatee, bearing about him that something which indicates "to the manor born," he recognized the officer who had called at the Fains' on the morning he had left them-Captain Cameron Fitz Hugh.

As soon as he entered he beckoned the prisoner to follow him to a corner of the room apart from the others for consultation. It was not a convenient place for such an important interview, but one charged with being a spy was not likely to get many favors, and the exigencies of the case did not admit of aught except the bare forms of justice.

The maps he had studted, being military maps, did not give the counties Then some Tennessee soldiers were brought in-the town swarmed with them- who testified that they lived at Jasper and had never seen the prisoner there. The closing evidence against Mark was given by the recruiting officer with whom he had promised to enlist. Hearing that a spy had been taken, and suspecting it might be his promised recruit, he went to the courtroom and there recognized the prisoner. His testimony was sufficient. The court had made up See hyar, auntie, air you niggers Union its mind before the prisoner's counsel had said a word.

Captain Fitz Hugh seemed distressed

The jaller's wife was standing in an pen window regarding Jakey severe-

"Come away from that ar fence!" Jakey skipped along toward her, doing a little waitzing as he went.

"Ef that ar boy wasn't sich a chile, I'd think he'd b'en up to sumep'n." "What war yer a-doen by that ar ence?" she asked when he came up.

"Nuthen." "What war that y' throwed over?" "Oh, I war only throwen stones." "What yer throwen stones that a-way fur?"

"For fun."

"Well, y' just keep away from th' fence er y' shan't play in th' yard at all. I'll shet y' up with thet big brother o yourn."

"Waal, I won't go thar no more." and Jakey took a top out of his trousers pocket and began plugging imaginary tops on the ground.

Mark hoped that the preparations the Confederates were making for the expected move would cause them to forget him. He was not destined to be so fortunate. The second day after his capture he was taken before a court martial held in a house occupied by the staff department, to be tried on the charge of being a spy.

The court was assembled and ready to proceed with the case. An officer had been detailed to defend the prisoner, but he had not arrived and the court waited. Presently a clatter of horse's boots was heard outside. It stopped before the door of the house, they without being definitely conscious and in another moment Mark's counsel entered the room.

at not being able to bring forth any evidence in behalf of the prisoner. When he arose to speak in Mark's debare back. In a moment the rider was fense the court listened to him with marked attention and respect-indeed. they were as favorably impressed with the accused's counsel as they were unfavorably disposed toward the accused. The captain was obliged to content himself with warning the court against convicting a man of being a spy be cause his identity was not satisfacto rily explained and on circumstantial evidence. He asked that the prisoner might have more time than had been given him in which to gather evidence in his behalf.

The court denied this request and proceeded with a verdict. In forty minutes after Mark entered the courtroom he was found guilty of being a BDY.

"Have you anything to say why the sentence of the court should not be passed upon you?"

"No, sir."

Captain Fitz Hugh interposed once more for delay.

"I would suggest," he said. "that inasmuch as some explanation may come to hand bearing on the case the court fx my client's punishment to take place on a day not nearer than a week from today."

"I had intended to fix it for tomorrow morning at sunrise," said the president, "but in deference to the prisoner's counsel 1 will compromise with thm midway between a week, as he desires, and tomorrow, or allowing three flays. The sentence of the court is that the prisoner be hanged by the neck until he is dead on the twenty. seventh day of August, eighteen hundred and sixty-two, or three days from today."

Before Mark was led out of the courtroom his counsel approached him. Considering the prejudice against the prisoner, another man would have suffered him to go without a word. Not so Captain Fitz Hugh. He strode up to Mark, the officers and soldiers present making a way for him, leaving him alone with the prisoner by withdrawing to another part of the room, and extended his hand

Souri could not read what was written there, but she knew Mark had been captured, and it was fair to suppose that he was at or near Chattanooga.

Souri didn't know whether the jailer had a wife or not, but she hazarded the reply:

"De jailer's wife tole me to come in 'n tote de washen."

The soldier looked at her doubtfully but suffered her to pass in.

She had scarcely entered before she saw a party of soldiers conducting a man from the jail. They passed near her, and she recognized Mark. He was going to his trial. Jakey followed his friend and was going to pass out with him, but was stopped by the guard.

Souri saw tears trickling down the boy's cheeks as he went back and strolled about in the yard. She longed to take him in her arms, but did not dare to even make herself known to him. She did not know where Mark was being taken, so going back to the gnard she asked with apparent idle curiosity:

"Whar dey goen wid dat man?"

"Reckon thar goen ter try him." Souri determined to attempt to get service with the jailer's wife. She went into the jail and found a woman, whose hair was streaked with gray, sweltering over a cooking stove.

"Y' ain't got no washen ner nuffin fur me, hab y'?" said Souri, suddenly appearing before her.

'No! Git out o' hyar." "Any cooken?"

"Cooken? Can yer cook? I don't want no nigger to cook fo' me, but there's niggers in the 'black hole' I wish I had some un ter cook fur." "I'll cook fo' 'em."

"Who owns J'?" "I'ze a free nigger."

"Waal, take hold hyar fur a spell; I'm boilen." And she drew away from the stove and mopped her face. Souri took hold and showed a pleasing aptitude at baking corn bread and boiling some coarse meat which simmered in a pot on the stove.

Presently the jailer came in, and taking some food lifted a trap door and lowered a meal to those below in the she would give him her dress and sunbonnet and leave him to make an attempt. Then she began to think over a plan to gain an entrance at a speci fied time.

In the evening her patience was rewarded. Mark's supper was standing on the stove. Triggs was not in the jail, and Mrs. Triggs went down the stairs outside to get something she wanted in the yard. Souri caught up the supper and walked straight past the guard into Mark's room with it. Mark, who had been informed of her coming by Jakey, was expecting her. When he saw the mulatto girl he grasped her hand.

"Souri! God bless you!" he said in a low tone.

"I ain't got no time ter talk. I'm watchin fur a chance ter give y' my clothes ter go out with." "But what would you and Jakey do?"

he asked hurriedly.

"Th' ain't goen ter hang a boy or a gal. Pertend ter be sick termorrer 'n ask fur some medicine. Mebbe they'll send me ter git it."

With that she went out. When Mrs. Triggs came in she was bending over the stove.

"Whar's the Yank's supper?" she sked.

"Oh, 'twar gitten cold, 'n I toted hit in ter him.' Souri made herself so useful that she was permitted to stay about the jail the next day. She managed to keep an indifferent mien to all about her, but within there was a tempest. The next morning Mark was to swing, and preparations were being made for the purpose. "If there war only time," thought Souri, "I mought help him away, but tomorrer!" and no one being near to see her she wrong her hands. There seemed but little chance that, baving only one evening to effect her plans, she would succeed. It could only be by good luck.

In the afternoon Mark began to moan Triggs went in to see him and asked what was the matter. Mark told him that he was ill. As the afternoon wore away the prisoner groaned and moaned till Triggs went back to him, and Mark told him that he thought be was going to die. Mrs. Triggs carried in his supper, but he refused to eat. "What y' got?" she asked.

"Cholera, I reckon."

"Good Lord!"

"I want some medicine," said Mark. "If you'll send the black girl for it I'll slave. pay you and her well."

CHAPTER IX. FLOATING FOR LIFE.

ARK had very little idea how long a time would elapse before it would be discovered that Souri was in his place and he had escaped. It might be a few minutes, it might be half an hour. it might possibly be not till morning.

though of this he had little hope. He believed that within half an hour he would be pursued by bloodhounds.

He had been about the town enough to know the direction of the river and started toward it. He was at home in the water, and determined that he would not attempt to find a boat, but would plunge in and swim for his life. The width of the river at Chattanooga was only about three-quarters of a mile, and Mark did not regard this a great distance for a good swimmer. Once across the dogs would have to pick up the scent on the other side, and if he should permit the current to carry him far down the stream the difficulty in doing so would be greatly increased. It was a soft summer evening, and the larger stars had already begun to shine. Casting a glance to the right he saw a streak of light over Missionary ridge and knew that before long he would be at a disadvantage from the rising of a full moon. He walked briskly whenever any person was in sight, and when he thought that he was unobserved he ran. No one of the few people who passed the strapping negro girl, whose face was hidden within the blue check sunbonnet. dreamed that a Union soldier was passing; that the scaffold was being cheated; that a messenger with the secret of one of the most important moves any Confederate general had made or was destined to make during the war was on his way north in the person of the negro woman hurrying on toward the river. He sped onward, running and walking briskly alternately, till he came to a place where a board fence was capped by a narrow strip. He mounted it and walked as far as the fence extended, perhaps a bundred yards, hoping by this means to throw the dogs off the scent for a few minutes, and thus gain a little time. Then he jumped down and burried forward. A man

It was about four o'clock in the afternoon when Souri awakened the boy. Seeing a mulatto girl standing by him an old calico dress and a sunbonnet on her head he was astonished.

"Who yo'?" he asked. "Don't y' know me?" "Sho puff!"

"What's yer name?" "Julius."

"What's yer t'other name?"

"Ain't got none!"

"I'm goen with y' t' where y' started from; then I reckon I'll have ter go on alone."

"Ole man dar; he tote y' furder." "Waal, come along. Eat a snack 'n then we'll go."

When Julius had eaten his fill they mounted the horse, the girl sitting straddled behind him. Souri, in a common calico dress and a very large sunbonnet, looked for all the world like a negro girl. Julius took her over hills innumerable, and at midnight drew rein near a large plantation. There they both got down, and Julius, who had surreptitiously taken one of his master's borses, returned it to the stable. Then he led the way to a row of negro cabins. Going to one of them he knocked on the door. It was opened by the negro with whom Mark and Jakey had staid on the creek between the Fains' and Chattanooga.

"Dis de gai," said Julius.

"Goen to Chattanoogy?" asked the old man.

"Reckon." "I show yo' de way. Go righ' off?"

"Yas." "Hab t' foot hit. Ain't got no horse."

"I can do hit." The negro was evidently ready and expecting them, for without going back into the cabin he led the way eastward.

Souri tramped in his company the rest of the night, and at daybreak they were at his cabin on the creek. There she took a few hours' rest, and after the sun was up ate a breakfast which the old man prepared for her. After this he set out to show her the way to Chattanooga. He asked no questions. All he knew was that his efforts were in "de cause ob fredum," and that was quite enough. The old wo man who had brought him the handkerchief had told him where her cabin was in Chattanooga, and he seemed to understand that he was to guide Souri there.

They crossed the river by the regular ferry, having no trouble in doing so, for citizens and negroes were passing all the while. About ten o'clock in the morning they reached the cabin | ing that Mrs. Triggs' wardrobe might of the old negress who had started the handkerchief.

"Fo' de Lo'd!" exclaimed the woman. "How'd yo' git hyar so quick?" "Trabel all night," said the pilot.

"Who dat yaller gal?" "I'm Souri Slack. Whar's th' jail?"

The woman led Souri out to show her the way, and the man left the cab-black hole. "Hyar's a gal," said his wife, "en bankers ter do some cooken fo' me." "Ain't got nothen ter pay with." "Don't want no pay," said Souri, Tze starven. Want sump'n ter eat." "Waal, y' won't git much hyar," said the jailer. "but I reckon it's good nuff fo' niggers."

So Souri was allowed to help, but there was no understanding that her services should extend beyond the present moment.

She was leaning over the stove when Mark was brought back. He had just been sentenced, and there was a haggard, hopeless look on his face as he passed the girl without noticing her. In the afternoon Souri saw that she must make work for herself or there would be no excuse for her to stay about the place. So, without saying a her. word, she took a pail of water and a scrubbing brush and began to scrub the floor. Then she suggested to Mrs. Triggs that she sweep her bedroom. The woman concluded that, as it had not been swept for more than a month, Sourl "mought's well" do it, especially as the girl seemed to be willing to do all this work for a little boiled meat and corn bread.

"Ye' don't look right smart, Miss Triggs," said Souri, after cooking the supper and eating her share, "'n I don' know whar I gwine t' git any breakfast less I come 'n cook fur y'."

Mrs. Triggs succeeded in getting her husband's consent to Souri coming back in the morning, and the man went out to the gate with her and told her if the guard did not pass her in to send for him.

She was at the jail bright and early and got in on telling the sentinel that she was Mrs. Triggs' servant. She cooked the breakfast, and when she saw Triggs about to carry Mark's meat and corn bread into him she offered to do it, but Triggs paid no attention to the offer and carried it in himself.

Then she asked Mrs. Triggs when she did her washing, and as the old woman had no regular time and not many clothes Souri offered to do what there was. When she went out to hang up the clothes to dry Jakey was in the yard. She called him to her and in a whisper made herself known. Jakey, who was wondering what had become of the message he had sent, was both overjoyed and astonished. He turned two or three somersaults on the ground and otherwise demonstrated his childishness to Mrs. Triggs, who at that moment appeared at a window, but not before Souri had told Jakey to inform Mark of her presence.

Again at noon she offered to take in his dinner, but without success. She was at her wits' end for an excuse to stay about till supper time, but thinkneed mending she offered to undertake the task, and spent the afternoon over the old woman's threadbare garments.

All this while Souri was thinking of a plan for Mark's escape. She learned that he was to be hanged in a few days and knew there was little time. The most natural plan under the circumstances occurred to her-a plan by in on his way homeward. Souri was which more prisoners have made their taken to a place where she could see escape than any other one method-it is."

Mrs. Triggs reported the matter to her husband, who, fearing that the prisoner would not be in condition for the hanging which was to occur the next morning, consented. Mark was furnished with a scrap of paper and a pen, and wrote the name of a mixture he remembered for cholera morbus. Souri was furnished with money extracted from Jakey's boot and burried to town.

When she came back it was quite dark. Only a faint line of light was left in the west. As she entered she met Triggs going out of the gate. She went as quickly as she could go without being heard to the prisoner's room. "Medicine," she said to the guard and passed in without waiting permission, leaving the door partly closed behind

"Here, quick! A burnt cork. Rub " on yer face," she whispered.

Mark seized the cork and applied it. Souri stood in the corner with her back to him, and taking off her dress threw it to him. Mark took off his outer clothes and threw them to her. Each seemed to beckon him on to rest upon its bosom, or, as an alternative with the dreadful tragedy of the morning. to find oblivion beneath its surface.

He stood for a moment beneath a low clump of trees on the bank listening and looking up and down the river. A boat was passing, and he felt it necessary to wait for it to go by. He lost five minutes, but it seemed haif an hour. Then taking off his dress and shoes and bonnet he put the dress and the shoes in the bonnet and tied the strings around his neck, resting the bundle on his back. Going down to the margin, and again listening a moment to make sure he was not observed, he waded out as far as he could touch bottom, and then began to swim.

As it was midsummer he had expected to find the water warm. His expectations were realized to a reasonable degree, and he felt that he could remain in it a long while without being chilled. His plan was to drift down a considerable distance. He might be expected to swim across as rapidly as he could, and the current in this case would land him perhaps a mile below the town. Those who would follow him with dogs would doubtless track him to the river margin, then take the dogs across and endeavor to pick up the scent some distance below on the other side. Mark had weighed all these circumstances, and determined to drift down as far as possible, land at the mouth of a creek if he could find one, enter it and swim or walk up it in the water, thus rendering it difficult for the dogs to track him.

He swam slowly till he reached the middle of the river; then, floating with scarcely any motion of his hands and feet, be permitted himself to drift down with the current. A favorite way with him, when a boy, of resting in the water, had been to float on his back. Unmindful of the wetting be would give the clothes tied around his neck, he turned over and drifted with his arms spread beside him, his eyes turned directly to the sky.

HUNTED BY A WALRUS.

The Big Bull Got Quite Sociable Be fore He Was Done For.

In George Borup's "A Tenderfoot With Peary" appears an exciting in cident of walrus hunting. During a raid upon a berd of fifty walrus asleer on a pan "it was blowing some, and the choppy waves made the shooting look as if the guns had spiral barrels.' The ineffective target practice produced these hair raising developments a few seconds later: "Suddenly a giant bull rose out of the water just along side of Wesharkoupsi. He threw his harpoon, but as the barb came off he might as well have heaved a lead pencil. The walrus gave a derisive grunt, div ad, and a second later shot out of the water on the other side, deluged us with liquid and came down slap bang on the gunwale of the boat opposite

"By this time Wesharkoupsi was high in the air and out for an altitude record. Instead of throwing his har poon he threw his soul into his yells and just spat in the brute's face. The other huskles were trying to back water or hit him over the head with the cars, nearly sideswiping me and incidentally short circuiting their cussing at Wesharkoupsi, the walrus and ev erything is general.

"All this time the walrus was sitting alongside of me, asking if there were any more at home like Wesharkoupsi. It was easier to pull his whiskers or smash his mug with my fist than shoot. If I held the gun to my shoulder the muzzie would stick beyond his head, so, firing from the hip, I gave him the entente cordiale."

"I've been insulted. Hinks just met me and called me all sorts of names. We've had trouble over that partition matter, you know. He said I was a pettifogger and a thief and a scoundrel and a perjurer and a wire haired thug."

"Um?" said Mr. Mooney, sitting farther down in his chair and looking at the speaker over his glasses. "Um! And what do you propose to do about It?"

"What do I propose to do about it? Why. I was so astounded at the moment that I could make no reply at all. But, now that I have somewhat recovered myself, I have determined to go down to Hinks' office and knock his block off. I'll beat him to a quivering froth."

"Um!" said Mr. Mooney, slipping down a notch. "Um! So would I if any one called me the names that Hinks called you. But before you go suppose you sit down with me for a moment."

The indignant friend took a chair. "Now." said Mooney, dangling his eyeglasses. "what are the facts in the case?"-Cincinnati Times-Star.

No Caste In Snores.

The cause and cure of snoring concern all classes, says the London Chronicle. We have record that both the house of lords and the workhouse have suffered from it. There was a former Duke of Norfolk who fell into the habit of sleeping andibly in the lords, and it happened that he was hard at it on one occasion when a bill concerning the parish of Great Snoring, in Norfolk, came before the house. The roar of laughter with which the bill's title was greeted awakened the duke and relieved his fellow peers. At the other end of the social scale we have the poor law commission minority's commendation of the ingenious workhouse master who divided the old men at night so that the snorers and the deaf men slept in one ward and the rest in another.

Johnnie Knew.

A teacher in an uptown school was giving her small charges a lesson in politeness the other day.

"Now, when," said she, "should you say 'Excuse me, please?' "

There was a moment's silence, then a very small boy put up his hand.

"Well, Johnnie?" "Please, ma'am, you should say 'Excuse me, please.' when you sneeze at th' table and don't turn away your head quick enough."-Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Fish and Brain.

The saying that fish is the best brain food comes of an old long tongue windbag years ago saying: "Thought is impossible without phosphorous." Bo a Swiss chemist, knowing that fish contained phosphorous, put two and two together, and brought forth a saying that will never die.

The Seismograph.

The seismograph is a most interest ing instrument. It is kept in a subbasement room, far from disturbing induences. There it records upon a strip per" by Leonarde DiVinci. of paper such earthquakes as may happen anywhere. The scientists then study the strip of paper and herald to the world the news that the tremor which shook down several cities was duly registered.

The seismograph is a remarkable contrivance, though in just what way is not yet determined. However, in the interests of science, it is as valuable as would be the imprint of the hoof upon the seat of the trousers of a man who had been kicked by a mule. After the event he could study the imprint and assure himself that he had been kicked.-Life.

Ample Apology.

An Irish lawyer once addressed the court as "gentlemen" instead of "your honors." After he had concluded a brother of the bar reminded him of hours of the day by the civilized his error. He immediately arose and apologized thus: "May it please the court, in the heat of debate I called yer honors gentlemen. I made a mistake, yer honors." Local Press for the People. It is indeed a reflection on the people of any county and community when they fail to back with all their might their local newspaper, which gives local news which larger papers cannot possibly give and informs the outside world of the progress and prosperity of the locality in which the paper is published. When the local paper is not supported, there is unquestionably absent in the community that spirit which makes communities thrive and swells villages into towns and cities. Public spirit ought to be behind the local press, for the local newspaper is the chief and often the sole advertising asset of the community in which it is published. Any person who has the courage and the energy and the constructive purpose to publish a local newspaper ought to have at least the loyalty and material assistance of the people in their midst. -Ex.

SAND-CLAY ROAD Proper Drainage Must Be First Consideration.

HOW TO BUILD A

SIDE DITCHES ARE 6000

Before the Combination of Sand and Clay Has Become Thoroughly Dry It Should Be Dragged Every Morning to Smooth Out the Ruts-Care Should Be Taken to Keep Ditches Clean.

When a sand-clay road is built upon a clay subgrade proper drainage is one of the most essential things, for unless the subgrade of the road is dry and firm the surfacing of sand-clay is sure to break through, says Professor M. G. Homes of the University of South Carolina. Ordinarily side ditches, which must be large enough to carry off all of the water failing on the road, will be sufficient.

These side ditches should be wide and shallow rather than narrow and deep, as thus they will not be hard to keep open nor dangerous to travel. They should be from four to five feet wide and from one to one and a half feet deep, sloping three to one on the side next to the road and down to one on the outer side, and they should have outlets as frequently as possible to carry the water entirely away from the road. When the subgrade is wet or damp most of the time or is through swampy land the subdrains should be laid in order to keep the foundation of the road dry and firm. It must be borne in mind that greater care must be exercised to keep the clay subgrade dry and in the majority of cases of a subgrade in sandy soil.

The roadbed should be graded true to the lines and grades established by the engineer. All spongy material, vegetable matter, trees, roots and stumps should be carefully removed from the roadbed and the space thus filled in with sound material, and the surface of the roadbed should be dry and the sand and clay should be plowed and harrowed with a disk harrow to a depth of four inches until the clay is completely pulverized, and the clay subgrade should be comparatively dry or it will not pulverize. After this has been done the roadbed should be leveled up, and it will then be ready for the sand.

By Building Concrete Macadam Roads. A Success In Michigan.

Concrete macadam roads are being built in many parts of the country in an attempt to secure roadways that will not loosen up under automobile travel nor rut under heavy trucking. Wayne county, Mich., has built these Early Railroad Fliers. When the first passenger railroad ever built was opened in England in 1825 the train traveled from one end of the line to the other, a distance of twelve miles, in two hours. And Wood, one of the best known writers on the subject of railroads at that day, wrote as follows:

"Nothing can do more harm to the adoption of railways than the promulgation of such nonsense as that we shall see locomotives traveling at the rate of twelve miles an hour."

Today, with locomotives traveling at the rate of seventy-five miles an hour, one can look at Wood's warning with feeling of amusement. In 1829 a locomotive was introduced in this country, and in the following year Peter Cooper experimented with a locomotive on the B. and O. railroad. The flues of the boiler were made from gun barrels. The boiler was about the size of a flour barrel. Cooper related with considerable satisfaction how on the trial trip of this engine he passed a gray horse attached to a wagon.-New York World.

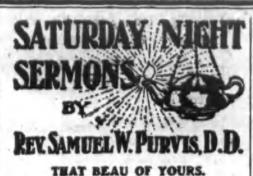

Big Poker Stakes.

Many stories of big poker games among the western cattlemen in the early days have been told, but this story of the game with probably the greatest stakes is really true. Two well known cattlemen of southwestern Kansas, one of whom is now a prominent business man in Kansas City, started to move their herds to the pastures of Wyoming. Each herd contained more than a thousand head of cattle. When they came to the crossing of the Arkansas river near Coolidge they found a flood on. They were unable to cross for two or three days. To while away the time the two men engaged in a poker game. When the flood finally subsided so that the cattle could proceed one of the cattlemen said to his son, who was helping to drive, "Just turn my herd over to our neighbor and we will go back home." He had bet and lost not only all the money he had, but all of the herd of cattle .- Kansas City

"Let us suppose it became necessary to send the entire national guard of for limestone. The concrete is six New York out of the state, how long and one-half inches compacted depth would it take the railroads to handle and from fifteen to nineteen feet in them?" was asked a railroad official In New York.

> "Twenty-four hours, easy," was the instant reply. "This is under war conditions, remember, which means that everything gives way to the movement of troops and their equipment. The railroads of America can handle men and war material of all kinds, including everything from horses and men to cannon and rations, much faster than they can be assembled and delivered to us. In fact, under war conditions the railroads are prepared to do their part quicker and better, with more certainty and better speed, than any other part of the machinery, commercial or military, in America."-Railroad Man's Magazine.

The girl in the text was the seeker Every woman is. That saying about : man being "the conquering male" it true enough, but a woman makes her choice. A man may not make a sec ond advance without her consent. A millionth part of a glance permits him come or bids him depart. She's train ed to it from childhood. She has a queer, subtle, psychic something that will make the laborer take of his hat or the king renounce his crown. The flash of her eye, the dawn of her smile, the flutter of her skirt, may sway a man or nation more than the thunders of Sinai. That's the magnet the Almighty hath given her. It's much of her capital sure ly, but her purity, womanly reserve her very physical self, is a much larger part. When they're gone the beauty soon goes, and she's a miserable pauper. When she has given a kiss or permitted a liberty she has dulled her blade. Still, she's born to marry, and choose she must. A mistake is fatal. If a man blunders be goes to the lodge or club; with glass and pipe he forgets his woes. If a woman blunders chances are nothing but a funeral will help her out.

Princes at School. Dr. Marks tells some amusing stories of the early days of the school in Burma of which he was for so many years the head. Shortly after the school was opened King Thebaw said. "Will you teach some of my sons?" "Certainly," said Dr. Marks. "What ages do you like them at?" Dr. Marks replied, "From tweive to fourteen." The king said, "Bring all my sons between twelve and fourteen to me." Nine princes came in. Four came to school the next day, each riding on an elephant and with two gold umbrellas. Each also was escorted by forty soldiers. Afterward the whole nine came, so there were nine princes, nine elephants, eighteen gold umbrellas and 360 soldiers. The elephants stayed outside, but when the princes came into the schoolroom all the other boys threw themselves flat down on their faces on the ground. It was forbidden for any one to stand or sit in the presence of princes. Dr. Marks found this state of things very inconvenient, and the royal etiquette at school was at his request considerably abated .-London Globe.

The Old Man Reformed.

"I've a sight o' sons-thirteen altogether," remarked a prosperous old farmer, "and all of 'em's done me credit save the three eldest, who sowed wild oats at a pretty rapid rate and then came home and saddled my shoulcontains much sand the amount of sand stated above should be cut down by that much. The sand should be spread evenly and be of a uniform thickness. To get the best results the road bed should be dry when the sand is added, and especially should it be dry when the sand and clay are mixed. as it is very difficult to mix the sand evenly with the clay when the latter is wet and sticky.

The mixing is now carried on with a spike or spring tooth harrow until the sand and clay are thoroughly incorporated and the mixture is brought to a state of fine subdivision. The roadway is now shaped up with road machine. A split log drag may be used. From now until the surface becomes thoroughly consolidated the greatest care should be exercised to keep the surface smooth and properly crowned, and for at least a week the surface of the roadway should be reshaped every morning with the road machine, for if the roadway is worn into rats at first it is a hard matter to ever get a smooth surface.

As soon as it has dried out sufficiently the surface should be smoothed with the road machine and given the proper crown. And just before it becomes entirely dry it should be rolled until it becomes hard and ceases to show the tracks of ordinary loaded" vehicles. The roller should weigh from six to ten tons, never more, and may be either horse power or a steam roller.

The side ditches should be given a general cleaning and repaired at least once in the early spring and once in the early fall. All trash and other obstructions should be thrown out on the sides opposite from the roadway, and all scoured places and boles in the ditches should be filled up with firmly packed rock and clay.

Salt Water For Dust Problem. Balt water taken from the meadow streams will be used by the officials of of the dust pulsance. The efficacy of lan Provides That All Tax Payers Must Keep Highways Clean.

A plan is on foot in some parts of the country to have the whole community see to it that the roads are kept in good condition.

The proposed plan provides that the road authorities shall divide the roads into short sections, according to the number of poll tax payers, and assign to each man the section nearest and most convenient to him, who would assume the responsibility of keeping the same in good condition by working his poll tax on it, not all at once. but at intervals, as needed. It is estimated that in no case would these sections comprise more than a half mile of road.

As soon as the frost is out in the spring and while the road is yet somewhat soft and plastic these men would go on the road each of his own section, dragging it thoroughly, using a homemade split log drag, scraping down the ridges, filling the ruts and holes and crowning and smoothing the surface so that it would shed water. Not more than two hours would be required to do this, and it would be done at a time when it would least interfere with farm work. Later in the season, whenever there was a tend-would again apply the same treatment just following a rain. A very important point may here be noted, viz-that by this plan the roads in any district, no matter how large, even in an entire county, could all be dragged and smoothed and put in good condition within a few hours.

Today the need for better wagon roads is greater than at any previous time in history. The belief has been proved fallacious that as railroad mileage increased the need for good country roads would diminish. The fact has been established that the greater the railroad mileage the greater the movement of freight on the common roads that act as feeders to the railroads. It has been shown that over bad roads in the United States a team on the worst hauling season is able to transport on an average only about 800 or 900 pounds, while in France every good draft horse is expected to be able to draw 3,306 pounds a distance of eighteen miles any day in the year.

UP TO THE WOMEN TOO.

Improvement of Country Roads Should Be of Interest to Mothers.

That the movement for the improve ment of roads now being pushed by the government throughout the coun try affects the women as vitally as it affects the men was the assertion of Logan Waller Page, director of the United States office of public roads, in the course of his address to the Mothers' Congress held in Washington recently.

Black Fridays.

In England the term Black Friday was first applied to Dec. 6, 1745, the day on which news reached London that the pretender, Charles Edward. had reached Derby. Again on May 11. 1866, when the failure of a large English discounting institution brought on a most disastrous panic, the day was called Black Friday. On the day of the suspension the Bank of England raised the rate of discount 9 per cent. Wild speculation in gold in New York and other cities culminated in a monetary crash on Sept. 16, 1875, that swept thousands of firms and individuals into financial ruin and caused a commercial depression that extended into the eighties of the last century; hence the origin ency to develop ruts or holes, each of the term Black Friday in the United States.

To Make Red Ink.

Red ink is easily made by amateurs who follow this recipe: Get a one ounce bottle and see that it is perfectly clean and dry. Place in it one teaspoonful of aqua ammonia, gum arabic the size of two peas and add six grains of carmine. Fill up the bottle with clear soft water, and after standing a little while it will be fit for use.

Fish to Leave Alone. Marriage at best is uncertain, but there's no use insisting on having a rotten apple. When you hear girls say of a young fellow, "Oh, my, ain't he just irresistible?" "He don't care how he spends money on a girl so long's he shows her a good time"that's a good type to leave alone. A weak man needs as much watching as a bad one and does as much damage. If you must marry him do it quick before he goes to jail or skips the town. You don't want to be disgraced before you are married. Don't marry a rake to reform him. It can't be done except on the stage or in fiction. If he won't be decent for his own sake and his mother's he won't be for yours. There's no magic in a marriage ceremony. You want to start a home, not a Keeley cure. Don't marry a scoffer of religion. You don't want a fanatic who is so plous no one can live with him, nor do you want a sneering skeptic. He's a shallow man who doesn't respect the sacred things of another. Don't elope. Occasionally parental tyranny demands radical action, but runaway marriages-ninety-nine out of a hundred-mean abandonment, disgrace, divorce and hell, so the desertion and divorce judges say.

Your Beau Ideal.

Of course you are seeking your ideal and you will expect to find him-until you are thirty. Strange to say, you would tire of him or he of you before the honeymoon would wane. What is your ideal-beauty? Remember Juvenal, "When the gods would torment a woman they give her a handsome husband?" Besides the beauty man will be vain and selfish. Rave over brains? But he's a dull bookworm or has all the rasping irritability of genius. Remember Carlyle's Jane? The college athlete? Next to society divorces and the stage statistics show the woman who marries an athlete is most likely to apply for a divorce. The soldier of fortune, dashing and handsome? But he has a debonair way of slipping off with some other romantic maiden, leaving unpaid bills, broken hearts and unwelcome offspring. Mighty queer, but the picture in the comic papers, uproariously funny for ages, of the man carrying the crying baby is nearest the real ideal. It represents the domestic spirit, the fellow who loves home, willing to share the trying things of a woman's life, the man who laves you in spite of your faults and endures things for your own dear sake. The other ideal, half days

A Wise Provision. Did you ever notice when a man smites his thumb with a hammer while putting down a carpet under his wife's supervision how quickly he thrusts the bruised and throbbing member into his mouth? People think it is because the application is soothing. But the movement is purely involuntarily, like winking. The man cannot help it. The fact is that nature knows what a man is apt to say under such circumstances and so has provided him with an automatic stopper. Whenever he hits his thumb hard enough to hurt-and it doesn't take a very bard blow almost to kill a man when he is doing something he doesn't like to do-by a sort of interlocking system his thumb flies into his mouth, and for the critical moment speech is cut off.

dred tons (sixty to eighty cubic yards) of broken stone per day may be expected if the plant is kept in good condition. Such an output is usually satisfactory, since a single steam road roller will not often roll more than this amount in a day. The crusher will take stones which measure up to approximately 7 by 14 inches in cross section; larger stones require mauling before they can be placed in the receiving oritice.

"In some places it may be found more economical to have the stone shipped in from some permanent crushing plant than to purchase a crushing outfit, and it is well to consider this feature carefully. It should also be stated that, while the first cost of the road is important, the costs of future maintenance must also be taken into account. It is sometimes economical, even at a greater initial cost, to import stone from a distance if thereby a more durable road may be had than is possible by the use of local stone.

"The crusher should be set up as nearly as practicable in the center of the section to be built; but, since much water is needed for the boller, for the roller and for the watering cart, the site is often governed by the location of the water supply.

"If possible the crusher should be set low enough so that a platform may be built at the level of the opening which receives the stone. This platform should be sufficiently strong to bear the weight of the carts loaded with stone for the crusher. With this arrangement the large stones may be dumped upon the platform and fed into the crusher without further lifting.

"The workmen who set up the plant should have had experience in this work. Much depends on the proper alignment of the several parts, and many petty annoyances in operation will be avoided if the work is done properly in the first instance.

"The steam road roller is now used to so great an extent that a discussion of its advantages over the horse roller is unnecessary. Macadam roads may, of course, be built with rollers drawn by horses. They may also be built without any rolling except by the wheels of moving vehicles: But experience has demonstrated that quicker and better work can be done with the steam roller and usually at a less cost. A so called ten ton roller is sufficiently heavy for country roads. Most of the culverts and many of the bridges are too weak to sustain with safety the heavier rollers. There are several excellent makes of such rollers, which may be had at prices ranging from $2,-500 to $3,500.

Since water is always needed in Old newspapers, for shelves and rolling the macadam a watering cart putting under carpets, at this office, or sprinkler should be provided. The road official cannot often afford to wait for rain. Most of these carts are provided with extremely broad tires, so

ROAD BUILDING IN OHIO.

"Boosters" Successful In Getting Legislature to Pass Bills.

The Ohio Good Roads federation has won part of the fight which it started in January, when it proposed the following legislative plans:

First.-The reorganization of the highway department and creation of the bureaus of construction, maintenance and repair and bridges.

Second.-State supervision of all roads constructed in whole or in part by state aid money. Third .- The perpetual maintenance of state aid roads by the highway department Fourth .- The inauguration of the intercounty system of roads connecting important commercial centers in the state and making all necessary surveys and cettmates for the same. Fifth .- A levy of one-half mill on the taxable property of the state to create a fund available in 1918 to construct the ater-county system

All of the above, with the exception of the latter, are provided for in senate bill 165 by Senator McGuire, which is now a law.

The road enthusiasts will now go forth with renewed energy in a state wide campaign for the proper construction and maintenance of roads, for the economical expenditure of all moneys appropriated for road purposes and will present to the constitutional convention which will assemble next January a plan to raise money necessary to complete the inter-county system, which plan will equitably distribute the cost of the same on all the tax-

BRANDENBURG (KY.) WOMEN SUBSCRIBE FOR A GOOD ROAD

Feminine Club Wakes Up to Situation First and Makes Travel Easier.

Everybody is in favor of good roads as an abstract proposition, but when it comes down to the concrete-that is to say, to sand and gravel-there are differences of opinion. Some Kentuckians there are who declare themselves strongly for good roads, but say they do not know how to go about getting them.

One way to go about it has been exemplified recently by the Federated Woman's club of Brandenburg. Ky. The members of that live organization felt the need of a good road from Brandenburg to Weldon, a station on the Louisville, Henderson and St Louis railroad. Brandenburg has no railroad, and when the citizens of that town go traveling they either take a steamboat or drive over to Weldon to take the train.

Meade county mud possibly is a few degrees worse than the mud anywhere else in Kentucky. The male citizens of Meade have been handling the road question in the same way that many other Kentucky counties have been handling it. Mud multiplied by mud produces more mud. but the male citizens of Meade didn't seem to know it.

The women woke up to the situation first, and they determined to "pike" the road from Brandenburg to Weldon. They raised more than $1,200 by private subscription, and they asked the fiscal court to do the rest. The court came across with an appropriation of $3,000 as an evidence of good faith. The road will be completed by the end of summer. Next winter it will be possible to travel from Brandenburg to Weldon without breaking a hamestring or straining a singletree. A wagon will not be a load for a four horse team, and walking will not be an impossibility when a big thaw

A TIP FOR COUNTIES.

The bond plan is the sconomical, equitable and intelligent method to provide permanent municipal improvements, and the same can be said of good roads nstruction. The county which is building roads by special taxes is making a mistake by doing it in a plecement fashion when a bend issue by the entire county will provide a lump sum for sysof voting road bonds by townships is nearly equally as bad, for roads should be constructed by counties in accordance with systematic plans, taking care of all townships and making it decidedly more economical for them than for each township to maintain its own expensive road building service and equipment. This is on the side, but the op-portunity is too fine for us to let t slip by without making known the truth to counties which are going to build good roads by some hook or crook. There is the slipshod way and the right way. Don't piddle-Wilmington (N. C.) Star.

PETRIFIED TREES.

The "Stone Forest" One of California's Natural Wonders.

California, among many other natural wonders, contains a "stone forest." This is located in Sonoma county, only a few miles from the little resort of Calistoga Springs. This "forest" con sists of a great many petrified trees all of which are prostrate.

In respect to the great number of petrified trees and their immense size, the California "stone forest" surpasses that of Arizona. Strange to say, very little is known about these wonder ful Sonoma county petrifactions-so far as the general public is concerned Many of these trees are of enormous size. The famous "Queen of the For est" is a prehistoric redwood about eighty feet long and nearly twelve feet in diameter. It has been broken in several places, and these breaks are as clean as if cut off with a saw. A tree has grown up through one of the breaks and has attained quite a large size. Another giant tree known as the "Monarch" lies near by, which is almost ninety feet long and is without a break. This tree is a fir, and averages ten feet in diameter. Not far away is another giant son of the forest-a redwood that is about sixty feet long and nine feet in diameter. This tree is broken into many hundreds of pieces, yet it retains its shape almost perfectly. Scattered about for the area of several acres are many other pieces of petrifaction. So perfect has been the transmutation into stone that the grain of the wood still remains very clear, and the variety of the tree may be easily determined .- Scientific American.

THE OLD LIBERTY BELL.

History of This Relic of the Revelutionary Patriots.

Overvigorous ringing of the old Liberty bell many years ago on the occasion of the celebration of the Declaration of Independence was what put the crack in it and forever destroyed its resonant tone. It was cast by Pass & Stow in Philadelphia and hung in the belfry of the now historic statehouse in lower Chestnut street early in June, 1753. It contains 2,080 pounds of metal.

Near the top of the bell were cast the words "Proclaim Liberty Throughout All the Land Unto All the Inhabitants Thereof." Prophetic of its destiny, this gave it the name Liberty bell.

When the British army marched on Philadelphia in 1777 the bell was taken down by patriots and carried off in llentown in order that

MODERN ROADMAKING.

Efforts in England to Meet Motor and Trolley Car Traffic.

The following illustrates the efforts in England to meet in roadmaking the conditions imposed by motor and trolley car traffic:

A new and direct roadway is proposed between West Hartlepool and Middlesbrough, near Newcastle, in the county of Northumberland, a direct line of seven and three-fourth miles. In designing the roadway the engineer in charge has given attention to the possible development in both heavy. slow and fast vehicular and motor traffic, each of which demands separate consideration and possibly different methods of road surface treatment.

The plan accordingly provides for a center footpath nine feet in width, on the east side of the footpath a road for motor and light, fast traffic twentyfour feet in width and on the west side of the footpath a road for heavy, slow traffic twenty-two feet in width. This gives a width for highway purposes of fifty-five feet. The plan further shows on the westerninost side of the footpath a width of fourteen feet reserved for light rallway or trolley purposes, making a total width of land to be acquired of sixty-nine feet,

A scheme similar to this will douteless control future roadmaking in England, and existing roads may be reconstructed on a corresponding plan. One of the chief advantages in separating the several kinds of traffic would be in permitting different methods of surfacing the roads to be used and those best adapted to the traffic accommodated. Another advantage would be the lessening of the chances of accidents. A third advantage would be the greater speed permissible to fast traveling .- Consul Walter C. Hamm, Hull, England.

it might not fall into the hands of the enemy. In 1781 it was returned to the tower of the statebouse.

For more than half a bundred years thereafter the bell was rung and bonored on Independence day every year before the crack appeared in it. An effort was made to restore its tone by sawing the crack wider, but this proved of no avail. The bell was finally removed from the tower to a lower story of the statehouse and used only on extraordinary occasions. Subsequently it was rigged up on its original timbers in the vestibule. In 1893 it was exhibited at the Columbian exposition in Chicago.

Shakespeare as an Actor.

Shakespeare once played the ghost in his own "Hamlet." A younger brother of the dramatist in describing the event said that he wore "a long beard and appeared so weak and drooping and unable to walk that he & Messenger. was forced to be supported and carried by another person to a table, at which he was seated among some company."

In "As You Like It" Avon's bard assumed the role of Adam, the old servant. In whom was represented "the constant service of the antique world" and who was "not for the fashions of these times."

Famous Gretna Green.

Gretna Green, Scotland, became famous for its celebration of irregular marriages. For many years the average number was 500. The ceremony consisted only of an admission, before witness, by the couple that they were husband and wife, this being sufficient to constitute a valid marriage. After this the officiating functionary (for many years a blacksmith), together with two witnesses, signed the marriage certificate.
