From Nearby Towns.

Lake Ridge.

FEB 5—Ed Starks is under the care of Dr. Hatch.

Mrs. Hannah Blue spent Saturday with Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Buck of North Lansing.

Miss Edna Campbell entertained a party of friends Friday evening.

William Davis of Cornell is spending a few days at home.

Mr. and Mrs. Willis Perkins and Miss Helen Sobers of North Lansing were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Bert Moseley.

Casper Fenner and Curtis Hebbard were in Auburn last week on business connected with the proposed Ithaca-Auburn State road.

Miss Alice Keyes of Ithaca and Chas. Moseley of Belltown were week end guests of Edna and John Campbell.

Floyd Shaddock will work a part of the Henry Dean farm the coming season.

Melvin and LeGrand Bush will move onto the J D Dates farm in the spring.

Stephen Starks will work the Bradford farm this year.

James Sullivan, owing to impaired health, has leased his farm to the Quigley Bros and O'Brien.

Will Hamilton has purchased the James O Daniels place and with his mother will take possession in the spring.

John Clinton will move onto and work the Barney Fenner farm in the spring.

Venice Center.

FEB 6—There was a surprise party for Miss Bessie Clark on Saturday evening, it being her twentieth birthday.

A son was born to Mr. and Mrs. John Heffernan, Sunday, Jan 28.

On Tuesday evening of last week, a surprise was given Warren Beardsley at the hall. About a hundred of his friends gathered there and presented him with a beautiful leather spring rocker, to show their appreciation of his efforts in building the hall. The presentation speech was made by J. F. Streeter and Mr. Beardsley replied in a pleasing manner. A very sumptuous supper was served. Musicians from Genoa furnished music for those who desired to dance. The "surprise" was complete as Mr. Beardsley had to be summoned to the hall twice before he realized what was going on and that it was for him that the crowd assembled. Judging from appearances every one present enjoyed the occasion.

The snowplow which has been idle all winter until last week, is now brought into use every day.

Atwater.

JAN. 30—The Farmers' Institute held at Jump's hall was well attended and was by far the best one ever held here. The subjects presented were of great interest to the farmers in this locality. The advance of a milk-testing association, among dairymen was made so plain that the farmers present improved the time between sessions to form a testing association, expecting all those not present to join them and so help make dairying more profitable to all engaged in it.

Mr. and Mrs. James Young, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Shaw and Mr. and Mrs. Glenn King went to Auburn in company last week Friday. The gentlemen attended the Masonic banquet, while the ladies did their shopping and found other amusements. They returned home on the noon train Saturday.

Mr. Crossley is improving. We all enjoyed Mr. Ivey's sermon last Sunday.

Horses For Sale.

Thirty head Iowa horses and mares weighing from eleven to fourteen hundred pounds, bought direct by me from the farmer. So you will get horses ready for work, not sick ones. Now on sale at my barn in Moravia.

W. P. PARKER,
Moravia, N. Y.
Sale Barn, Central St.

North Lansing.

FEB 6—The donation advertised last week has been changed, and will be held at the parsonage and not at the hall, on Thursday, Feb. 15, afternoon and evening. Supper will be served from 4 to 5 and from 7 to 8 o'clock. All are invited.

Mr. and Mrs. Benton Buck attended the reception given by Governor and Mrs. Dix at the executive mansion in Albany Jan. 31. They had a most enjoyable time, and stopped in Utica on the way home.

The Ladies' Aid society have just filled an order for six new comfortable.

Pauline Boyles has been sick but is better.

Mrs. Hugh Shaw is sick.

No school on Monday because of drifted roads.

Mrs. Margaret Boyles, who has been suffering with grip, is better.

Three Remarkable Women.

In the February Woman's Home Companion there is an article entitled "Three Interesting Women." Each of these women in her distinct field is accomplishing something big and fine. One, Helen M. Gould, has enormous wealth and her cheerful philanthropies have no strings tied to them; another, Kathleen Norris, is the author of "Mother," one of the year's great fiction successes. The third, Minnie Maddern Fiske, is both an actress and a manager of great courage and ability. Of Helen Gould the author says in part:

"Miss Gould brings gifts, she doesn't send them. She loves humanity, not in the abstract and at a distance, but close at hand. When the firemen of New York voted her their characteristic present, a fire-line badge, it was not so much because of generous financial aid as in recognition of the fact that, at the time of the terrible Windsor Hotel fire, she, first of all the neighboring residents, threw open her doors and converted her beautiful Fifth Avenue mansion into an emergency hospital. When the veterans of the Spanish War gave the marching salute as they saw her face at her window, it was not by way of acknowledgment of a check for $100,000 to the War Department, or of another $25,000 to the Woman's Relief Association, or even of many smaller gifts to save the families of soldiers from want, but in recognition of personal visits to Camp Wikoff and the car-loads of fruits and medical supplies that followed them. Admiral Dewey has said, 'If the men on the American battleships had their way, there would be a statue of Helen Gould on every fighting craft that flies the Stars and Stripes.'"

"Miss Gould is a small, dark-haired, sweet-faced young woman, addicted to quiet, tailor-made gowns of black or gray. She has an easy, vivacious manner and a girlish laugh, is fond of horse back-riding—and is afraid of thunder. She is rather pleasantly old-fashioned. There is nothing new or startling in her earnest phrase, 'I want to be of use in the world'; but she has at least lived and worked in accordance with that simple ambition, and has learned for herself that 'The more one tries to help others, the more one loves to do it.'"

Moral—Don't Be a Goat.

The goat while out browsing thoughtlessly stopped and rubbed his head in the way that goats have—against the side of the house of the wolf. Out rushed the tenant and fiercely upbraided the hairy butler.

"But I'm quite sure," said the letter, "that I've done your house no harm. Besides, I saw the elephant stop here only yesterday and scratch his back against your dwelling in a way that almost overturned it. And you didn't say a word to him. Why should there be any difference in your treatment of us?"

The wolf licked his chops.

"There is a marked difference," he said, "even if it is only a simple one I can eat a goat, but I can't eat an elephant."

Whereupon he fell to and made a quick and satisfying meal of the unhappy creature.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Gold Filled.

A gold filled tooth and your gold filled watch case may be said to be inversely analogous—that is to say, your gold filled tooth has more or less of the tooth structure of enamel on the outside with gold on a core filling the center. Your gold filled watch case consists of two sheets of gold, having between each sheet some baser metal to which the gold is soldered. As to the gold in the case, it may be of any fineness and any thickness commensurate with the term "gold filled." A jeweler will tell you that 10 carat gold is not gold, having too great an admixture of baser metals. Many persons have the idea that the gold filled case is an amalgam of the kind instead of a "sandwich" of gold treated in the inside with the base metals.

Reunion at Greeley, Colo.

The following account of a reunion at Greeley, Colo., of former pupils in the "little red schoolhouse" of Ledyard, N. Y., is copied from a Denver, paper:

"Coming from half way across the continent, from Denver, from the neighboring towns of Fort Collins, Brush and Fort Morgan, 12 persons, all of whom were schoolmates in the little red school house in Ledyard, N. Y., when Alexander Mead, the well known irrigationist, was their teacher 50 years ago, met today for the first time since then. They surprised their former school master by participating in a celebration given in his honor at the Mead homestead, 1363 Ninth avenue.

The old schoolmates were William Mason of the Denver Tramway company; William Gilbertson, a farmer of Fort Morgan; John Gilbertson, a farmer of Brush; Henry Gilbertson, head of the commissary department of Ringling Brothers' circus; Mrs. Louise Revelle, a deputy in the office of the state superintendent of public instruction; Mrs. Margaret Scott, wife of Judge Scott of Greeley; Frank Avery, banker, and Rev. George Avery, of Fort Collins; Miss Jennie Avery of King Ferry, N. Y.; Mrs. Eliza Hoaglan, of Long Branch, N. J.; Mrs. Lucy Lyons of Paola, Kan., and Mrs. Louise Mead, wife of Alexander Mead. The entire party numbered over 20. Mrs. Mead was let into the secret and for several weeks the company has been planning to duplicate as nearly as possible the big exhibition at the old school house almost half a century ago.

Not an inkling of the affair did Mead have until he arrived home for dinner Saturday at noon and found his former pupils there, offering him congratulations. Then a big turkey dinner was served by Dr. Ella Mead, a daughter, and Miss Maud Meeker, niece of the founder of Greeley. The place cards reminded all of the school days and were done by Miss Lexie Mead, teacher of art in the schools of Cheney, Wash., and Miss Wilmenia Mead, an art student in New York. Mrs. Mead sent her daughters a pencil sketch of the little red school house, drawn from memory, and this was the main design on the dinner cards.

After dinner Rev. George Avery acted as master of ceremonies and the fun began. William Mason spoke his piece of 50 years ago. Miss Jennie Avery read her old essay on "The Battle Fields of Life," and Frank Avery was orator with "Rezi's Address to the Romans." Mrs. Revelle sang and Mrs. Hoaglan recited "Curfew Shall Not Ring Tonight." Two of the others presented a dialogue, after which they gathered about the fire and gave reminiscences of the old school days and he who failed to call each schoolmate by his first name paid a forfeit.

Schoolmaster Mead then for the first time told his pupils of the difficulties he had in arranging for the exhibition of long ago. At that time revival services were going on in Ledyard and the young teacher was criticised for getting up an entertainment which would interfere with them. The schoolhouse was too small and not daring to ask for the church, the only public building, young Mead secured a vacant store building, went to the woods and cut trees to make benches and began to arrange his hall. The minister, hearing what the determined teacher was doing, much to the surprise of his people, approved of it, offered to call off services for a night and the exhibition took place in the church, with the whole country attending.

Probably there is no man better known and liked in all of northern Colorado than Alex. Mead. Coming to Greeley in the '70s, he has lived here ever since. He has developed farms adjoining Windsor, Ault and Greeley, is largely interested in numerous ditches and reservoirs in the country and is said to be the best posted man on northern Colorado irrigation matters in the state. Although three score he looks but 50. He is over six feet tall and weighs over 300 pounds. About 40 years ago he married Louise Avery, who was in the first reader when she attended his school, and they have six children. The Mead homestead has been the scene of many a jolly gathering but that of to-day eclipsed them all."

"A Soft Answer."

A somewhat tactless youth had taken an unwarranted liberty in criticizing the new hat of a lady friend, and she was about to say that she was not inclined to be dictated to by any man. "I do not propose"—she began, but he interrupted her.

"If you did," he murmured, "I should certainly say 'Yes!'"

And his offense was forgiven.

FRECKLES

By
Gene Stratton-Porter

COPYRIGHT, 1904, BY DOUBLEDAY, PAGE & CO.

Freckles stood before her, holding the angel's hat.

"I've been thinking this long time that ye or Duncan would see that sunbonnets weren't a braw enough for a woman of my standing, and ye're a guid laddie to bring me this beautiful hat."

She turned it about, examining the weave of the straw and the foliage trimmings, passing her rough fingers over the satin ties delightedly. As she held it up, admiring it, Freckles' astonished eyes saw a new side of Sarah Duncan. She was jesting, but under the jest the fact loomed strong that there was something in her soul crying out after that bit of feminine finery. He resolved that when he reached the city he would send her as fine a hat as the angel's if it took $50 to do it.

She hesitatingly handed it back to him.

"It's unco guid of ye to think of me," she said lightly, "but I maun question your taste a wee. D'ye no think ye had best return this and get a woman with half her hair gray a little plainer headdress? Seems like that's far ower gay for me. I'm no' saying that it's no' exactly what I'd like to hae, but I maun mak' mysel' ridiculous. Ye'd best give this to somebody young and pretty, say about sixteen. Where did ye come by it, Freckles? If there's anything been drooping lately ye hae forgotten to mention it."

"Do you see any thing heavenly about that hat?" queried Freckles, holding it up.

The morning breeze waved the ribbons gracefully, binding one about Freckles' sleeve and the other across his chest, where they caught and clung as if magnetized.

"Yes," said Sarah Duncan, "it's exactly what I'd call a heavenly hat."

"Sure," said Freckles, "for it's belonging to an angel!"

Then he told her about the hat and asked her what he should do with it.

"Take it to her, of course!" said Sarah Duncan.

"You think I should be taking it home?" he said.

"Of course ye must," said Mrs. Duncan. "Ye gang awa and take the blessed little angel her beautiful hat."

"Are you sure it will be all right?" urged Freckles. "Do you think if Mr. McLean came he would care?"

"Na," said Mrs. Duncan, "I dinna. If ye and me agree that a thing ought to be done, and I watch in your place, why, it's bound to be all right with McLean. Ought ye put on your Sabbath day clothes?"

Freckles shook his head. He knew what he had to do, but there was no use in taking time to try to explain it to Mrs. Duncan while he was so hurried. He exchanged his wading boots for shoes, gave her his club and went spinning toward town. He knew very well where the angel lived. He had passed her home many times, and he passed it again without even taking his eyes from the street, steering straight for her father's place of business.

Carrying the hat, Freckles passed a long line of clerks and at the door of the private office asked to see the proprietor. When he had waited a moment a tall, spare, keen-eyed man faced him and in brisk, nervous tones asked, "How can I serve you, sir?"

Freckles handed him the package and answered, "By delivering to your daughter this hat, which she was after leaving at me place the other day when she went off in a hurry. And by saying to her and the Bird Woman that I'm more thankful than I'll be having words to express for the brave thing they was doing for me. I'm McLean's Lumberlost guard, sir."

CHAPTER XI

THE MAN OF AFFAIRS.

"WHY don't you take it yourself?" questioned the man of affairs.

Freckles' clear gray eyes met those of the angel's father squarely, and he said, "If you were in my place would you take it to her yourself?"

"No, I would not," said that gentleman quickly.

"Then why ask why I did not?" came Freckles' lamblike query.

"Bless me!" said the angel's father. He stared at the package, then at the lifted chin of the boy and then at the package again and muttered, "Excuse me."

Freckles bowed.

"It would be favoring me greatly if you would deliver the hat and the message. Good morning, sir," and he turned away.

"One minute," said the angel's father. "Suppose I give you permission to return this hat in person and make your own acknowledgments."

Freckles stood one moment thinking intently, and then he lifted those eyes of unswerving truth and asked: "Why should you, sir? You are kind indeed to mention it, and it's thinking you I am for your good intentions, but my wanting to go or your being willing to have me ain't proving that your daughter would be wanting me or care to bother with me."

The angel's father looked keenly into the face of this extraordinary young man, and he found it to his liking.

"There's one other thing I meant to say," said Freckles. "Every day I see something and at times a lot of things that I think the Bird Woman would be wanting pictures of badly if she knew. You might be speaking of it to her, and if she'd want me to I can send her word when I find things she wouldn't likely get elsewhere."

"If that's the case," said the angel's father, "and you feel under obligations for her assistance the other day you can discharge them in that way. She is spending all her time in the fields and woods searching for subjects. By all means let her know if you find subjects you think she could use, and we will do anything we can for you if you will give her what help you can and see that she is as safe as possible."

"It's hungry for human beings I get," said Freckles, "and it's like heaven to me to have them come. When it comes to protecting them I'd risk my life, to be sure, but even that mightn't do any good in some cases. There's a good many dangers to be reckoned with in the swamp, sir."

"There was no way in which Freckles could know it, but by following his best instincts and being what he conceived a gentleman should be he surprised the man of affairs into thinking of him and seeing his face over his books many times that morning. He stepped to the curb to mount his wheel and heard a voice that thrilled through and through him, calling: "Freckles! Oh, Freckles!"

The angel separated herself from a group of girls and came hurrying up to him. She was in snowy white—a quaint little frock with a marvel of soft lace about her throat and wrists. Through the sheer sleeves of it her beautiful, rounded arms showed distinctly, and it was cut just to the base of her perfect neck. On her head was a pure white creation of fancy braid with folds on folds of tulle, soft and silken as cobwebs, lining the brim, and a great mass of white roses clustered against the gold of her hair crept about the crown and fell in a riot to her shoulders at the back. There were gleams of gold with settings of blue on her fingers, and altogether she was the dearest, sweetest sight he had ever seen.

"Oh, Freckles!" she cried. "I was wondering about you the other day. Is there any trouble? Are you just starting back to the Lumberlost?"

"I came to bring your hat," said Freckles. "You forgot it in the rush the other day. I have just left it with your father and a message trying to express the gratitude of me for how you and the Bird Woman were for helping me out."

The angel nodded gravely, and Freckles saw in a flash that he had done the proper thing in going to her father. Then she was saying that she could scarcely wait for the time to come for the next picture of the Little Chickens series. "I want to hear the rest of that song, and I hadn't even begun seeing your room yet," she complained. "I wonder if I couldn't bring my banjo and some of the songs I like best. I'll play and you'll sing."

Freckles felt that if he lifted his eyes the adoration in them would frighten her.

"I was afraid your experience the other day would scare you so that you'd never be coming again," he found himself saying.

The angel laughed gayly.

"Did I look scared?" she questioned.

"No," said Freckles; "you did not."

"Oh, I just enjoyed that," she cried. "Those hateful, stealing old things!—I had a big notion to pink one of them, but I thought maybe some way it would be best for you that I shouldn't. They needed it. That didn't scare me, and as for the Bird Woman, she's accustomed to finding snakes, tramps, cross dogs, sheep, cattle and goodness knows what. You can't frighten her when she's after a picture. Did they come back?"

"No," said Freckles. "The gang got there a little after noon and took out the tree, but I must tell you and you must tell the Bird Woman that there's no doubt but they will be coming back, and they will have to make it before long now, for it's soon the gang will be there to work on the swamp."

"Oh, what a shame!" cried the angel. "They'll clear out roads, cut down the beautiful trees and tear up everything. They'll drive away the birds and spoil the cathedral. When they have done their worst all these mills about here will follow in and take out the cheap timber. Then the land-owners will dig a few ditches, build some dikes, and in two summers more the Lumberlost will be in corn and potatoes."

"You like it, too," said Freckles.

"Yes," said the angel; "I love it. Your room is a little piece right out of the heart of fairyland, and the cathedral is God's work, not yours. You only found it and opened the door after he had it completed. Come get a cool drink before you start back. It won't take but a minute, and you can ride fast enough to make up for it."

Freckles looked into the beautiful face of the angel in sheer wonderment. Did she truly mean it? Would she walk down that street with him, crippled, homely, in mean clothing?

"I really must be off," said Freckles earnestly, "but I'm thanking you more than you'll ever know for your kindness. I'll just be drinking bowls of ky things all me way home in the thoughts of it."

Down came the angel's foot. Her eyes flashed. "There's no sense in that," she said. "How do you think you would have felt when you knew I was warm and thirsty and you went and brought me a drink and I wouldn't take it because—because goodness knows why!"

She deliberately slipped her hand under his arm—the right arm that ended in an empty sleeve.

"You are coming," she said firmly. Freckles' head swam.

"Please don't, angel," he said softly. "You don't understand. If your father came on to me on the street in my station and dress with you on me arm he'd have every right to be caning me before the people, and not a finger would I lift to stay him."

The angel's eyes snapped. "If you think my father cares about my doing a thing that is right and kind and that makes me happy to do, why, then you completely failed in reading my father, and I'll ask him and just show you."

She dropped Freckles' arm and turned toward the entrance to the building. "Why, look there!" she exclaimed.

Her father stood at a window, watching the scene with eyes that comprehended quite as thoroughly as if he had heard every word. The angel made a despairing gesture toward Freckles. The man of affairs answered her with a look of infinite tenderness. He nodded his head, and the veriest dot could have read the words his lips formed. "Take him along!"

A sudden trembling seized Freckles.

The angel turned on him with triumphant eyes. She was highly strung and not accustomed to being thwarted. "Did you see that?" she demanded. "Now are you satisfied? Will you come?" Freckles went.

On every hand she was kept busy giving and receiving the cheeriest greetings. She walked into the parlors exactly as if she owned them. A long row of people started with varying degrees of insolence and curiosity as Freckles had felt they would. He glanced at the angel. Now would she see?

"On my soul!" he muttered under his breath. "They don't even touch her!" She turned the full battery of her eyes on the attendant.

"I want to mix a drink for my friend," she said. "He has a long, hot ride before him, and I don't want him started off with one of those old palate-teasing sweetmeats that you mix just on purpose to drive a man back in ten minutes. I want a clear, cool, sparkling drink that has a taint of acid in it."

The angel compounded the drink and carried the brimming glass to Freckles. He said in the mellowest of all the mellow tones of his voice, "I'll be drinking it to the Swamp Angel."

And as he had said to her that first day the angel now cautioned him, "Be drinking slowly."

As the screen door swung behind them one of the men at the counter asked of the attendant, "Now, what did that mean?"

"Exactly what you saw," replied he rather curtly. "We're accustomed to it in here. Hardly a day passes this hot weather but she's picking up some poor, god-forsaken mortal and bringing him in. Then she comes behind the counter herself and fixes up a drink to suit the occasion."

"Mighty queer specimen she had this time," volunteered another. "Wonder who he is?"

"I think," said a third, "that he's McLean's Lumberlost guard, and I suspect she's gone to the swamp with the Bird Woman for pictures and knows him that way."

Out on the street the angel walked beside Freckles to the first crossing, and there she stopped.

"Did you insist on fixing that drink because you knew how intoxicating 't would be?" asked Freckles.

There was subtlety in the compliment, and the angel laughed gleefully.

"Next time maybe you won't take so much coaxing," she said.

"I wouldn't this if I had known your father and been understanding you better. Do you really think the Bird Woman will be coming again?"

The angel jeered. "Wild horses couldn't drag her away," she cried. "She will have hard work to wait the week out. I shouldn't be in the least surprised to see her start any hour."

Freckles couldn't bear the suspense; it had to come.

"And you?" he questioned, but he dared not lift his eyes.

"Wild horses me, too," she laughed, "couldn't keep me away either! Now, goodby."

Freckles was half way to the Lumberlost when he dismounted. He could ride no farther, because he could not see the road. He sat down under a tree and, leaning against it, burst into a storm of sobs that shook, twisted and rent him. If they would remind him of his position, speak condescendingly or notice his hand he could bear it, but this—it would surely kill him! His hot, pulsing Irish blood could not bear it. What did they mean? Why did they do it? Were they like that to every one? Was it pity?

It could not be, for he knew that the Bird Woman and the angel's father must know that he was not really McLean's son, and it did not matter to them in the least. In spite of accident and poverty, they evidently expected him to do something worth while in the world. That must be his remedy. He must go to work on his education. He must get away. He must find and do the great thing of which the angel talked. For the first time his thoughts turned anxiously toward the city and the beginning of his studies. McLean and the Duncan's spoke of him as "the boy," but he was a man. He must face life bravely and act a man's part. The angel was a mere child. He must not allow her to torture him past bearing with her frank comradeship that meant to him high heaven, earth's richness and all that lay between and just nothing to her.

There was an ominous growl of thunder, and Freckles snatched up his wheel and raced for the swamp. He was worried to find his boots lying at the cabin door. The children playing on the wood pile told him that mither said they were so heavy she couldn't walk in them and she had come back and taken them off. Thoroughly frightened, he stopped only long enough to slip them on himself and then sped with all his strength for the Lumberlost. To the west the long, black, hard beaten trail lay clear, but far up the east side, straight across the path, he could see what was certainly a limp brown figure.

Face down, Sarah Duncan lay across the trail. When Freckles turned her over his blood chilled at the look of horror frozen on her face. There was a low humming, and something spat, tled against him. Glancing about, Freckles shivered in terror, for there was a swarm of wild bees settled on a scrub thorn only a few yards away. The air was thick with excited, unsettled bees making ready to lead further in search of a suitable location. Then he thought he understood, and with a prayer of thankfulness in his heart that she had escaped even so narrowly he caught her up and hurried down the trail until they were well out of danger.

CHAPTER XII

WITH HIS SWAMP ANGEL.

SARAH DUNCAN had not followed the trail many rods when her trouble began. She was not Freckles, and not a bird of the line was going to be fooled into thinking she was. They kept whizzing from their nests and darting from all sorts of unexpected places about her head and feet with quick whirrs that kept her starting and jumping. Before Freckles was half way to the town poor Mrs. Duncan was hysterical and the Lumberlost had neither sung nor performed for her.

"I wouldn't stay in this place for a million a month," she had said, and the sound of her voice brought no comfort, for it was so little like she had thought it that she glanced hastily about to see if it had really been she that spoke.

Her chin was quivering like a terrified child's. Almost into her face went a night hawk stretched along a limbo for its daytime nap. Mrs. Duncan sprang down the trail, lighting on a frog. The croak it gave as she crushed it sickened her. She screamed wildly and jumped to one side. That carried her into the swale, where the grasses reached almost to her waist, and her horror of snakes returning she made a flying leap for an old log lying along the line. She lit on it squarely, but it was so damp and rotten that she sank straight through it to her knees. She caught at the wire as she went down and, missing, raked her wrist over a barb until she had it open in a bleeding gash. Her fingers closed convulsively around the second strand.

She was too frightened to scream now. Her tongue stiffened. She clung frantically to the sagging wire and finally managed to grasp it with the other hand. Then she could reach the top wire, and so she drew herself up and found solid footing. She picked up the club that she had dropped in order to extricate herself. Leaning heavily on it, she got back to the trail.

The wind rose higher, the changes from light to darkness were more abrupt, and the thunder came nearer and louder. In swarms the blackbirds rose from the swale and came flocking to the interior with a clamorous cry. "Check, check." Grackles marshaled to their tribal call. "Trail-a-hee, trail-a-hee." Red winged blackbirds swept low, calling to belated mates. "Fol-low-me, fol-low-me." Huge jetties crows gathered about her, crying, as if warning her to flee before it was everlastingly too late. A heron, fishing the nearby pool for Freckles' "find-out" frog, fell into trouble with a muskrat and let out a rasping note. Mrs. Duncan was too shaken to run far.

Several bees struck her and were angrily buzzing about before she noticed them. Then the humming swelled to a roar on all sides. A great, convulsive sob shook her, and she ran into the bushes, now into the swale, anywhere to avoid the swarming bees, ducking, dodging, fighting for her very life. Presently the humming seemed to grow a little fainter. She found the trail again and ran with all her might from a few of her angry pursuers.

And as she ran, straining every muscle, she suddenly became aware that crossing the trail before her was a great, round, black body with brown markings on its back, like painted geometrical patterns. She tried to stop, but the louder huzzing behind warned her she dared not. Gathering her skirts still higher, with hair flying about her face and her eyes almost bursting from their sockets, she ran straight forward it. The sound of her feet and the humming of the bees alarmed the rattler, and it stopped squarely across the trail, lifting its head above the grasses of the swale and rattling inquiringly—rattled until the bees were outdone.

Straight at it went the panic stricken woman, running wildly and uncontrollably. She took one great leap, clearing its body on the path, and then flew on with winged feet. The snake, coiling to strike, missed Mrs. Duncan and landed among the bees instead. They settled over and about it, and, realizing that it had found trouble, it sank among the grasses and went thrashing toward the deep willow fringed low ground where its den was until the swale looked as if a mighty reaper were cutting a wide swath. The mass of enraged bees darted angrily about, searching for it, and, colliding with the scrub thorn, began a temporary settling there to discover whether it was a suitable place. Mrs. Duncan staggered on a few steps farther, fell face down on the path, where Freckles found her, and lay still.

Freckles worked with her until she drew a long, quivering breath and opened her eyes.

When she saw him bending over her she closed them tightly and, gripping him, struggled to her feet. He helped her up, and, with his arm about and half carrying her, they made their way to the clearing. Then, braving Scotsman though she was, she keeled over again. The children added their wailing to Freckles' panic.

This time he was so near the cabin

RELIGION.

Religion is anterior to society and more enduring than governments. It is the focus of all social virtues, the basis of all public morals. It is stronger than self interest, more awe inspiring than civil threats, more universal than honor, more active than love of country.—Cardinal Gibbons.

Our Queer Language.

Isn't it a queer language? A New York policeman saw a woman in the street with a carpet and a stick. "Beat it," he harshly commanded. Whereupon the woman struck the carpet with the stick and the policeman arrested her for violating a street ordinance.

The judge heard the woman's story and smiled.

"Beat it," he said to her, and this time she understood and hurried away.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Right in His Line.

"Yes," remarked the sad looking stranger: "I have seen the last of many a good man."

"Doctor or undertaker?" queried the man behind the white apron.

"Neither," replied he of the sad looks. "I'm a shoemaker."

Deafness Cannot Be Cured.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circular free.

—The Artists Trio, of the Ithaca Conservatory Bureau, gave a delightful entertainment in the Presbyterian church Tuesday evening. ### King Ferry.

Feb. 7—There will be a Valentine social at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Smith on Wednesday evening, Feb. 14, under the auspices of the C. E. society. The entertainment provided by the committee is of a "heartly" nature. A full supper will be served, the price of which may be determined from the following lines:

We invite to our social, the great and the small,
And we do not mind saying we hope you are tall.
For each foot you measure you bring us two pence,
If you measure five feet, it will cost you ten cents.
But for every odd inch it will cost one cent over.
So if you are short you are surely in clover;
But it's for a good cause that we issue this call,
And we hope you'll imagine you're twenty feet tall.

Card of Thanks.

We wish to express our appreciation of the kindness and sympathy of friends during our recent bereavement; also thank the I. O. O. F. for their beautiful floral tribute, and the singers for their selections.

—Lake Superior is believed to be freezing over its entire area. If so it will be the first time in the memory of the white man. The ice field is now so great that open water can be seen from only a few points on either shore. With February at hand and its fame as an ice-making month on Superior, there is a great reason for believing the entire surface will become solid.

Shocking Sounds

In the north and sometimes heard before a terrible earthquake, that warn of the coming peril. Nature's warnings are kind. That dull pain or ache in the back warns you the kidneys need attention if you would escape those dangers which include Dropsy, Diabetes or Bright's disease. Take Electric Bitters at once and see backache fly and all your best feelings return. "My son received great benefit from their use for kidney and bladder trouble," writes Peter Borly, South Rockwood, Mich. "It is certainly a great kidney medicine." Try it. 50 cents at J. S. Banker's Genoa, F. T. Atwater's, King Ferry.

The Fatal Weapon

The fatal weapon. "Then the girl warrior brand the mocking toy and un-sheathed her deadly weapon." What does that mean, children? Well, Elvira? Elvira—Please, ma'am, I think it means she stuck out her tongue.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The Difference

The Imprecious—It is just as easy to love a girl with money as to love one without it. The Heirless—But it isn't so easy to get her.—London Titbits.

Almost Lost His Life.

S. A. Stid, of Mason, Mich., will never forget his terrible exposure to a merciless storm. "It gave me a dreadful cold," he writes, "that caused severe pains in my chest so it was hard for me to breathe. A neighbor gave me several doses of Dr. King's New Discovery which brought great relief. The doctor said I was on the verge of pneumonia, but to continue with the Discovery. I did so and two bottles completely cured me." Use only this quick, safe, reliable medicine for coughs, colds, or any throat or lung trouble. Price 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free. Guaranteed by J. S. Banker's, Genoa, F. T. Atwater, King Ferry.

Mysterious.

"That was a mysterious robbery the other day," said Smith to Jones.

"Why, I don't see what mystery there was about it," remarked Jones. "The detectives caught the thieves the same day."

"Yes," returned the first speaker, "that's what I said."—London Answers.

The Scrap Book

Beyond the Judge's Control.
"The courtroom has its fun as well as its tragedy," once observed William Travers Jerome. "Sometimes the humor is not as appreciable to the principal actors as to an outsider, as in the case I once attended in a New England court where a slender trial was on."
"The principal witness was an impetuous old Irishwoman. She talked so fast that the judge was unable to follow her testimony, especially as it was delivered in the broadest of brogues. In vain he attempted to stop her."
"Stop, stop!" he cried, rapping sharply on his desk. But the torrent of words continued as before. "Old woman, shut up!" he shouted in exasperation, but to no avail. The old lady was determined to have her say. Finally the unhappy judge threw down his pen and yelled to the lawyer:
"There, Mr. Murdock: You set her a-going. Now stop her!"—Lippincott's.

Love Much.
Love has enough of bitter in it.
Cast sweets into its cup whenever you can.
No heart so hard but love at last may win it.
Love is the grand primeval quest of man. All hate is foreign to the first great plan.
Love much. Men's souls contract with cold suspicion.
Shine on them with warm love and they expand.
"His love, not creeds, that from a low condition leads mankind up to heights supreme and grand."
Oh, that the world could see and understand!

His Ambition.
Acton Davies, the dramatic critic, tells a story of Oliver Herford, the humorist. Herford never had a serious thought in his life.
"Herford sat next to a soulful poetess at dinner one night," Davies relates, "and that dreamy one turned her sad eyes upon him. 'Have you no other ambition,' she demanded, 'than to force people to degrade themselves by laughter?' Yes, Herford had an ambition—a whole of an ambition. Some day he hoped to gratify it. The woman rested her elbows on the table and propped her face in her long, sad hands and glowed into Mr. Herford's eyes. 'Oh, Mr. Herford,' she said—'Oliver, tell me about it.'"
"I want to throw an egg into an electric fan," said Herford simply."

A Salute Returned.
It was the last music lesson before the Christmas holidays, and the children had been thinking more about the coming festivities than about their studies, so it had been rather unsatisfactory.
"Well, children," said the supervisor as he was about to leave, "I wish you all a merry Christmas, and I hope that when you return after the holidays you will have more music in your heads than you have today."
Without a moment's hesitation came the reply from forty little urchins. "The same to you, Mr. Browning."

Let Him Into a Secret.
A prominent member of the London Stock Exchange was a man who enjoyed his wine and always took great care of it when he happened to pick up a choice vintage. While living in a fashionable quarter of the west end he had a large cask of very fine old port, which he placed at the extreme end of his cellar, and to make perfectly sure that it should not be touched he had a wall built across the cellar and so closed it in.
It was about a year or two later that one evening he accepted an invitation to dine with his next door neighbor when the latter brought out some very fine old port. Several glasses having been drunk, the man of stocks and shares asked his host where he could get some port like it.
"Well, old fellow," returned the other, "I will let you into a secret. I was having some alterations made in my cellar lately when we discovered that some old fool who lived in this house before me had built a wall round a large cask of port and forgotten all about it. This is some of it, but I am afraid there isn't much left."

His Losses.
A prominent Washington official was lunching at the Metropolitan club when he saw one of his society friends sitting near by and looking gloomy and disconsolate.
"What's the matter, Sam?" called out the official.
"Nothing much," sighed the saddened Sam, "only I took too much to drink yesterday. I lost a pair of glasses, a case, a raincoat and a reputation."—Washington Star.

HIS CODE MESSAGE.

It Wasn't Quite So Mysterious as He Intended It to Be.
The frequency with which revolutions occur in Latin American lands makes them "anybody's game," and as a result of this many persons without experience either in conspiracy or battle are likely at any moment to find themselves conspirators and warriors. One of these novices at the gentle art of "revoluting" is the hero of the tale which follows, a favorite in a certain South American republic.
The novice in question, having suddenly acquired a violent distaste for the president of his native land, rushed away from home in a great rage and enlisted in the revolutionary ranks. The next thing he knew he was detailed to raise troops in a certain district.

It was explained to him that he must envelop all his acts in dark secrecy. In order the better to accomplish this the revolutionary commander told the novice that whenever he felt called upon to pen a dispatch he must couch it in the terms of a code, so that government officers might not guess the meaning of any dispatch if it fell into their hands.
The novice promised to follow instructions to the letter. A few weeks later he had collected a force of soldiers and desired to acquaint revolutionary headquarters with the fact. Taking his copy of the code from his pocket, he duly noted that "now" was the code word for soldier and "cigar" the one for rifle.

He sat down and wrote a dispatch. It fell into the enemy's hands. It was concealed in these cryptic terms:
"I have the honor to report that I have 200 cows and 150 cigars, but the cows have no shoes and the cigars no bayonets."—New York Times.

A Good Work.
Edith was light hearted and merry over everything. Nothing appealed to her seriously. So one day her mother decided to invite a very serious young parson to dinner, and he was placed next the light hearted girl. Every thing went well until she asked him:
"You speak of everybody having a mission. What is yours?"
"My mission," said the parson, "is to save young men."
"Good," replied the girl. "I'm glad to meet you. I wish you'd save one for me."

Two Wedding Texts.
John Quincy Adams and John Hancock, "the signer," married two sisters, the daughters of a noted Methodist divine in Connecticut. John Quincy was a favorite with the old people, and Mary's choice was approved by them. So when the banns were published the parent said, "Mary, if you will furnish the text I will preach you a wedding sermon." She was equal to the task and gave the text, "Mary hath chosen the good part, which shall not be taken from her." Needless to say that justice was done to the occasion and the text.

Not so with Margaret, who in the meanwhile was receiving the attentions of her John in a very inexpensive way, as far as her parents were concerned, for it is said that "she never crossed his legs under their festive board." So when the banns were published she said to her father: "Father you preached a wedding sermon for Mary. Cannot you preach one for me?" He at first demurred, but at last consented and called for the text, when Margaret, who was equal to the occasion, said, "And John came, net her eating nor drinking, and yet ye say he hath a devil."—Philadelphia Inquirer.

Gave Him Due Credit.
Sir James Scarlett, the great English lawyer, when practicing at the bar had to examine a witness whose evidence promised to be damaging unless he could be previously confused. The only

"I HAD," REPLIED MR. TOMPKINS, vulnerable point of the man was said to be his self esteem.
The witness, a portly, overdressed person, went into the box, and Scarlett took him in hand.
"Mr. John Tompkins, I believe?"
"Yes."
"You are a stockholder?"
"I am," replied Mr. Tompkins, with a pronounced cockney accent.
Scarlett regarded him attentively for a few moments and then said dryly, "And a very large, well dressed man you are, sir."
The shout of laughter which followed completely disconcerted Mr. Tompkins, and the lawyer's point was gained.

The February number of the Ladies World bears a new imprint—The McClure Publications Inc., but an announcement by the editor states that the only editorial change will be in the way of improvement, and giving even greater value to the subscriber. Certainly this particular issue is all to the good, and the readers may feel well satisfied with what is provided for them. The magazine opens with a story by Keene Abbott called Jeff of the Sheep Ranch, in which the author combines tenderness and strength, the love scenes appealing particularly. Other short fiction of exceptional interest are The Expulsion of Tommy Gerreno, by M. A. Landreux, a school story unusually well told, and The New Mother, by Imogen Clark, in which the sweet nature of the second wife overcomes the prejudice of her small step-son. The serial, The Lord of Content, draws toward the most exciting part of the novel. In special contributions this number is exceptionally good, the Dickens anniversary bringing out a very readable contribution by Peter Freneau. Then there is the third installment of Strickland Gillilan's amusing experiences, another of the Studies in Married Life, and a common sense talk on Economical Dressing. The household department, as usual, is full of practical up-to-date information for the housewife and help for the cook, and the rest of the book deals with many other things that women want to know.—[New York; Fifty Cents a Year.

This Is An Easy Test.

Shake Allen's Foot-Ease in one shoe and not in the other, and notice the difference. Just the thing to use when rubbers or overshoes become necessary, and your shoes seem to pinch. Sold everywhere, 25c. Don't accept any substitute. Sample FREE. Address, Allen S. Olmsted, LeRoy, N. Y.

For Cramps.

A piece of old fashioned candle wick worn around the leg in the garter place next to the skin will prevent or cure cramp in the calf of the leg or in the foot. I have proved this by personal experience. I believe this would prove effectual in preventing swimmers' cramp. Those liable to cramp while in the water would be wise to try it. Cotton batting wrapped around the body from the armpits downward saved the life of a man suffering agony from painters' cramp. It gave instant relief.—National Magazine.

Seeing From Above.

From a height of 3,000 feet a man in an aeroplane can see a submarine gliding eighteen feet below water.

Blamed A Good Worker.

"I blamed my heart for severe distress in my left side for two years," writes W. Evans, Danville, Va., "but I know now it was indigestion, as Dr. King's New Life Pills completely cured me." Best for stomach, liver and kidney troubles, constipation, headache or debility. 25c at J. S. Banker's, Genoa, and F. T. Atwater, King Ferry.

Pimples.

Zinc ointment applied to pimples when they are beginning to form will frequently check them. Applied to them daily after they have formed will in most cases prevent a scar, unless they have been opened and the flesh bruised.
