Sherwood.

MARCH 25—Mrs. Minnie J. Reynolds of New York City spoke in As association Hall last Friday night to an interested if not large audience. The meeting was called to order by Miss Emily Howland Mrs. Reynolds took her subject "Votes for Women." She has lived in Colorado and voted for a number of years. She said that women with the vote secure laws which protect their property rights. The late pension bill for teachers in Massachusetts showed a discrimination of 10 percent against women teachers, preference all going to the men. The vote in the hands of women will do away with such injustice forever. She showed what the women do for communities where they have the vote. Took Colorado for example. It placed a state home for dependent children, a state industrial school for delinquent girls, a state traveling library, sending books to remote places a hundred miles from a railway, an act by Congress to preserve the cliff dwellings as a national reservation; a law against life insurance on babies, and many other things in which they are interested. She thinks, and with good reason, perhaps, that the men in the Eastern states have not the confidence in their women, that they are afraid of what they would do with their vote if they had it.

Thursday, Friday and Saturday evenings of this week there will be a play at the hall, "Gyp the Heiress." We hope to see a full house. Proceeds to be given to the Old Scholars' Association.

A few changes to take place here this spring. Calvin Judge and family will go to Auburn. Mrs. Judge has always lived here and Mr. Judge for a good many years. They will be greatly missed. Each member of the family will take with them the good wishes of their many friends.

"Save him!" he commanded. "Save him!" he implored. "He is too fine to be sacrificed."

"His salvation lies here," said the surgeon, stroking the angel's sunshiny hair, "and I can read in the face of her that she knows how she is going to work it out. She will save him!"

The angel sped laughing down the hall, and into the street, just as she was.

"I have come," she said to the matron of the home. "To ask if you will allow me to examine, or, better still, to take with me, the little clothes that a boy you called Freckles, discharged last fall, wore the night you took him in."

The woman eyed her in greater astonishment than the case called for. "Well, I'd be glad to let you see them," she said, "but the fact is we haven't them. I do hope we haven't made some mistake. I was thoroughly convinced, and so was the superintendent. We let his people take those things away yesterday. Who are you, and what do you want with them?"

The angel looked at the matron dazed and speechless.

"There couldn't have been a mistake," she continued, seeing the girl's distress. "Freckles was here when I took charge, ten years ago. These people had it all proved plain as day that he belonged to them. They had him traced to where he ran away down in Illinois last fall, and there they completely lost track of him. I'm sorry you seem so terribly disappointed, but it was all right. The man was his uncle, and as like the boy as he could possibly be. He was almost killed to go back without him. If you know where Freckles is, they'd give big money to find out."

"Who are they?" stammered the angel. "Where are they going back to?" "They are Irish folks, Miss," said the matron. "They have been in Chi-ago and over the country for the last three months, hunting him everywhere. They have given up and are starting home today. They—

"Did they leave an address? Where could I find them?" burst in the angel.

"They left a card, and I notice the morning paper has the man's picture and is full of them. They've advertised a great deal in the city papers. It's a wonder you haven't seen something."

"Trains don't run right. We never get Chicago papers," snapped the angel. "Please give me that card quickly. They may get away from me. I simply have to catch them!"

The matron came back with a card.

"Their addresses are on there," she said. "Both here in Chicago and at their home. They made them full and plain, and I was to cable at once if I got the least clew of him at any time. If they've left the city, you can stop them in New York. You're sure to catch them before they sail—if you hurry."

The matron caught up a paper and thrust it into the angel's hand as she rushed for the street.

CHAPTER XXII.

THE ANGEL'S GLAD STORY.

THE angel glanced at the card. The Chicago address was suit 11, Auditorium. She laid her hand on her driver's sleeve.

"There's a fast driving limit!" she asked.

"Yes, miss."

"Will you crowd it all you can without danger of arrest? I will pay well. I must catch some people!"

Then she smiled at him. The hospital, an orphan's home, and the Auditorium seemed a queer combination to that driver, but the angel was always and everywhere the angel, and her ways were strictly her own.

"I will get you there just as quickly as any man could with a team," he said promptly.

She clung to the card and paper, and, as best she could in the lurching, swaying cab, read the addresses over.

"O'More, suite eleven, Auditorium." "O'More," she repeated. "Seems to fit Freckles to a dot. Wonder if that could be his name? Suite eleven, means that you are pretty well fixed. Suites in the Auditorium come high."

Then she turned the card and read on its reverse, Lord Maxwell O'More, M. P., Killivany place, County Clare, Ireland.

"A lord man!" she groaned despairingly. "A lord man! Bet my hoe cake's scorched!"

She blinked back the tears and, spreading the paper on her knee, read: "After three months' fruitless search, Lord O'More gives up the quest for his lost nephew, and leaves Chicago today for his home in Ireland."

She read on, and realized every word of it. The likeness seemed very fixed. Freckles over again, only older and elegantly dressed. There was not a chance to doubt.

"Thank you; and wait, no matter how long," she said to her driver.

Catching up the paper, she hurried to the desk and laid down Lord O'More's card.

"Has my uncle started yet?" she asked, sweetly.

The surprised clerk stepped back on a bellboy, and covertly kicked him for being in the way.

"His lordship is in his room," he said, with a low bow.

The clerk shoved the bellboy toward the angel.

"Show her ladyship to the elevator and Lord O'More's suit," he said, bowing double.

At the bellboy's tap the door swung open and the liveried servant thrust a card tray before the angel.

The opening of the door created a current that swayed a curtain aside, and in an adjoining room, lounging in a great chair, with a paper in his hand, sat the man who was, beyond question of Freckles' blood and race.

With perfect control the angel dropped Lord O'More's card on the tray, whipped past his servant and stood before his lordship.

"Good morning," she said with tense politeness.

Lord O'More glanced her over with amused curiosity until her color began to deepen and her blood to run hotly.

"Well, my dear," he said at last, "how can I serve you?"

Instantly the angel bristled. She had been so shielded in the midst of almost entire freedom, owing to the circumstances of her life, that the words and the look appealed to her as almost insulting. She lifted her head with a proud gesture.

"I am not your 'dear,'" she said, with slow distinctness. "There isn't a thing in the world you can do for me. I came here to see if I could do something—a very great something—for you; but if I don't like you I won't do it!"

There was a silken rustle and a beautiful woman with cheeks of cherry bloom, hair of jet and eyes of pure Irish blue, moved to Lord O'More's side and, catching his arm, shook him impatiently.

"Terence! Have you lost your senses?" she cried. "Didn't you understand what the child said? Look at her face! See what she has!"

"I beg your pardon," he said. "The fact is, I am leaving Chicago sorely disappointed. It makes me bitter and reckless. I thought it was some more of those queer, useless people that have thrust themselves on me constantly, and I was careless. Forgive me and tell me why you came."

"I will if I like you," said the angel stoutly, "and if I don't I won't!"

"But I began all wrong, and now I don't know how to make you like me," said his lordship, with sincere penitence in his tone.

The angel looked into the beautiful woman's face.

"Are you his wife?" she asked.

"Yes," said the woman. "I am his wife."

"Well," said the angel judicially, "the Bird Woman says no one in the whole world knows all a man's business and all his littlenesses as his wife does. What you think of him ought to do for me. Do you like him?"

"Better than for any one in the whole world," said Lady O'More promptly.

The angel mused a second, and then her legal tinge came to the fore again.

"Yes, but have you any one you could like better if he wasn't all right?" she persisted.

"I have three of his sons, two little daughters, a father, mother and several brothers and sisters," came the quick reply.

"And you like him best?" persisted the angel with finality.

"I love him so much that I would give up every one of them with dry eyes, if by so doing I could save him," said Lord O'More's wife.

"Oh!" cried the angel. "Oh, my!" She lifted her clear eyes to Lord O'More's and shook her head.

"She never, never could do that!" she said. "But it's a mighty big thing to your credit that she thinks she could. I guess I'll tell you why I came."

She laid down the paper and touched the portrait.

"When you were just a boy, did people call you Freckles?" she asked.

"Dozens of good fellows all over Ireland and the continent are doing it today," answered Lord O'More.

The angel's face lighted with her most beautiful smile.

"I was sure of it," she said winningly. "That's what we call him, and he is so like you. I doubt if any one of those three boys of yours are more so. But it's been twenty years coming!"

Lord O'More caught the angel's wrists and his wife slipped her arms about her.

"Steady, my girl!" said the man's voice hoarsely. "Don't make me think you've brought word of the boy at this last hour unless you know surely."

"It's all right," said the angel. "We have him, and there's no chance of a mistake. If I hadn't gone to that home for his little clothes and heard of you and been hunting you and had met you on the street, or anywhere, I should have stopped you and asked you who you were just because you are so like him. It's all right. I can tell you where Freckles is; but whether you deserve to know—that's another matter!"

Lord O'More did not hear her. He dropped back in his chair and, covering his face, burst into those terrible sobs that shake and read a strong man.

Lady O'More hovered over him, weeping.

"Umph! Looks pretty fair for Freckles," muttered the angel. "Lots of things can be explained. Now perhaps they can explain this."

They did explain so fully that in a few minutes the angel was on her feet, hurrying Lord and Lady O'More to reach the hospital.

"You said Freckles' old nurse knew his mother's picture instantly," said the angel. "I want that picture and the bundle of little clothes."

Lady O'More gave them into her hands.

The likeness was a large miniature painted on ivory, with a frame of beaten gold, and the face that looked out of it was of extreme beauty and surpassing sweetness. Surrounded by masses of dark hair was a delicately cut face, with big eyes. In the upper part of it there was no trace of Freckles, but the lips curving in a smile were his very own. The angel gazed as if she could never leave off. Then with a quivering breath she laid the portrait aside and reached both arms for Lord O'More's neck.

"That will save Freckles' life and insure his happiness," she said positively. "Thank you, oh, thank you for coming!"

She kissed and hugged him and then the wife who had come with him. She opened the bundle of yellow and brown linen and gave just a glance at the texture and work. Then she gathered the little clothes and the picture to her heart and led the way to the cab.

Ushering Lord and Lady O'More into the reception room, she said to McLean, "Please go call up my father and ask him to come on the first train."

She swung the door after him.

"These are Freckles' people," she said to the Bird Woman. "You can find out about each other. I'm going to him."

And she was gone.

The nurse left the room quietly as the angel entered, still carrying the bundle and the picture. When they were alone the angel turned to Freckles and saw that the crisis was, indeed, at hand.

"Angel," he panted. "Oh, angel! Did you get them? Are they white? Are the little stitches there? Oh, angel! Did me mother love me?"

The words seemed to leap from his burning lips. The angel dropped the bundle on the bed and laid the picture, face down, across his knees. She gently pushed his head to the pillow and caught his arms in a firm grasp.

"Yes, dear heart," she said with fullest assurance. "No little clothes were ever whiter. I never in all my life saw such dainty, fine little stitches, and, as for loving you, no boy's mother ever loved him more!"

A great trembling seized Freckles.

"Sure? Are you sure?" he urged, with clicking teeth.

"I know," said the angel firmly. "And, Freckles, while you rest and be glad I want to tell you a little story. When you feel stronger we will look at the clothes together. They are here. They are all right. But when I was at the home getting them I heard of some people that were hunting a lost boy. I went to see them, and what they told me was all so exactly like what might have happened to you that I must tell you. Then you'll see that things could be very different from what you have always tortured yourself with thinking."

Freckles lay quiet under her touch, but he did not hear a word that she was saying until his roving eyes rested on her face; and he immediately noticed a remarkable thing. For the first time she was talking to him and doing everything but meet his eyes.

That was not like the angel at all. It was the delight of hearing her speak that she always looked one squarely in the face and with perfect frankness.

"—and he was a sour, grumpy old man," she was saying. "He always had been spoiled, because he was an only son and had a title and a big estate. He would have just his way, no matter about his sweet little wife, or his boys, or any one. So when his eldest son fell in love with a beautiful girl with a title, the very girl of all the world his father wanted him to, and added a big adjoining estate to his, why, that pleased him mightily."

"Then he went and ordered his other son to marry a poky kind of a girl that nobody liked to get another big estate on the other side, and that was different. That was all the world different, because the eldest son had been in love all his life with the girl he married, and, oh, Freckles, it's no wonder, for I saw her! Freckles, it's a royal beauty and she has the sweetest way. "But that poor younger son, he had been in love with the village vicar's daughter all his life. That's no wonder either, for she was more beautiful yet. She could sing like the angels, but she hadn't a cent. She loved him to death, too, if he was bony and freckled and red haired—I don't mean that! They didn't say what color his hair was, but his father's must have been the reddest ever, for when he found out about them, and it wasn't anything so terrible, he just caved!"

"The old man went to see the girl—the pretty one with no money, of course—and he hurt her feelings until she ran away. She went over to London and began studying music. Soon she grew to be a lovely singer, and then she joined a company and came to this country."

CHAPTER XXIII.

THREE GUESSES.

WHEN the younger son found that she had left London, he ran off and followed her," continued the angel. Freckles was listening most attentively now. "When she got here all alone and afraid, the angel went on, "and saw him coming to her, why, she was so glad she up and married him, just like anybody else would have done. He didn't want her to travel with the troupe, so when they got to Chicago they thought that would be a good place, and they stopped, and he hunted work. It was slow business, because he had never been taught to do a useful thing, and he didn't even know how to hunt work, least of all to do it when he found it; so pretty soon things were going wrong. But if he couldn't find work, she could always sing, so she sang at night, and made little things in the daytime. He didn't like her to sing in public, and he wouldn't let her when he could help himself; but winter came, it was very cold, and fire was expensive. Rents went up, and they had to move farther out to cheaper and cheaper places; and you were coming—I mean, the boy that is lost was coming—and they were almost distracted. Then the man went and told his father all about it, and his father sent him after back money, and wrote him to never write again."

"When the baby came, there was a mighty little left to paw for food and a doctor, and nothing at all for a nurse, so an old neighbor woman went in and took care of the young mother and the little baby, just because she was so sorry for them. By that time they were away out in the suburbs on the top floor of a little wooden house, among a lot of factories, and it kept getting colder, with less to eat. Then the man got desperate, and he went out to just do something to eat; and the woman was desperate, too. She got up, left the old woman to take care of her baby and went into the city to sing for some money. The woman got so cold she put the baby in bed and went home. Then a boiler blew up in a factory beside the little house and set it on fire. A piece of iron was pitched across the little house and broke through the roof. It came down smash, and cut just one little hand off the poor baby. It screamed and screamed, and the fire kept coming closer and closer."

"The old woman ran out with the rest of the people and saw what had happened. She knew there wasn't going to be time to wait for the firemen or anything, and she ran into the building. She could hear the poor little baby screaming, and she couldn't stand that, so she worked her way up to it. There it was, all hurt and bleed to it. Then she was scared almost to death over thinking what its mother would do to her for going off and leaving it, so she ran to a home for little friendless babies that was near and banged on the door. Then she hid across the street until the baby was taken in, and then she ran back to see if her own house was burning up. The factory and the little house and a lot of others were all gone. The people there told her that the beautiful lady came back and ran into the house to find her baby. She had just gone in when her husband came, and he went in after her, and the house went down over both of them."

Freckles lay rigid, with his eyes on the angel's face, and she talked rapidly to the ceiling.

"Then the old woman was just sick about that poor little baby. She was afraid to tell them at the home, because she knew she never should have left it, but she wrote a letter and sent it to where the beautiful woman, when she was ill, had said her husband's people lived. She told all about the little baby that she could remember; when it was born, how it was named for the man's elder brother, that its hand had been cut off in the fire, and where she had put it to be doctored and taken care of. She told them that its mother and father were both burned, and she begged and implored them to come and get it."

"You think it would have melted a heart of ice, but that old man hadn't any heart to melt, for he got that letter and read it. He hid it away among his papers and never told a soul. A few months ago he died. When his elder son went to settle up his business he found that letter almost the first thing. He dropped everything, and came, with his wife, to hunt that baby, because he had always loved his brother dearly, and wanted him back. He had hunted for him all he dared all these years, and when he got here you were gone—I mean the baby was gone—and I had to tell you, Freckles, for you see it might have happened to you like that just as easy as to that other lost boy."

Friday Morning, Mar. 29, 1912

Published every Friday and entered at the postoffice at Genoa, N. Y., as second class mail matter.

Fortune For Somebody.

We are in receipt of a letter from a relative of the Miller family in regard to the death of Theodore Miller, who was years ago a resident of Genoa. It is thought by some that the person said to be Theodore Miller was really Theodore Moe, the son of Mrs. Margaret Nichols, by her first marriage, and that he took the name Miller (his mother's family name) on account of some family trouble. We reprint the following from the Auburn Advertiser, in which will be noticed the name "Mark Moe." This should be Ben Moe.

Southern Cayuga relatives of Theodore Miller, formerly of Genoa, who died recently in Spokane, Wash., believe that they are the legitimate heirs to an estate valued at $50,000 which he left. The fortune is deposited in a Spokane bank awaiting the investigation of the registrar of the Board of Health and the Judge of Probate court, who are endeavoring to locate heirs of Miller. As far as is known to the Spokane authorities, Mr. Miller left no relatives. There are a number of people in Genoa who believe that they are the lawful heirs to the estate and they will soon take steps to establish their claim.

B. C. Tallman while in Los Angeles, learned of Miller's death through Adelbert Hudson, of Elmira, who is spending the winter in Los Angeles, Cal. Mr. Tallman forwarded the information to Theodore Miller of Genoa, advising him of the large fortune.

There was at first some doubt as to whether Miller was the former Genoa man, but they now believe that he was. J. J. Toyles, of Waverly, who was a close friend of Miller's years ago, writes the following to a Waverly paper which may throw some light on the matter:

Theodore Miller was born in Genoa, Cayuga county, N. Y., on his father's farm. He ran a general store in Genoa for several years, and finally sold it, came to Elmira and kept books for G. H. Post. Post's was a wholesale tea, coffee and spice store, opposite the Rathbun house on Water street. He was the bookkeeper and I was a clerk in the same store. Post failed in business and Miller went West and bought a farm in Mason City, Iowa. He came back to Elmira and sold his house on Church street and moved to Mason City with his family. This was, as near as I can remember about 38 years ago. His family consisted of his wife, a son of about eight years, named Arthur, his wife's two sisters and two brothers. Their names were Brownell. They were quite wealthy when they left Elmira, but their farming was not prosperous and Miller and the eldest Brownell boy went to Texas and went in the cattle business. It was about the time when Texas had that severe snow storm and the cattle died for the want of food and they lost all. They returned to Mason City and Miller drifted to Chicago and left his family in Iowa. I was then with the Deering Harvester company in Chicago and Miller found me through the directory and came to the factory to see me. He found a job in a coal office on the south side and worked there several months, finally going to Seattle, Wash. I received a letter from him, that is the last I ever heard from Theodore Miller. The last I knew of his family they were in Mason City, Iowa. He had a brother on his father's farm by the name of George Miller and one sister married to Mark Moe. He kept a feed store on Carroll street. The firm name was Boles & Moe. I went to Chicago about 35 years ago and have just returned to this state and now live in Waverly, N. Y.

Respectfully yours,
J. J. TOYLES,
31 Lyman Ave., Waverly, N. Y.

The following is taken from the Elmira Star-Gazette of recent date: Elmira members of the Miller families are interested in the search being made by attorneys in Spokane, Wash., for the missing heirs of Theodore Miller, who died recently in that city and who was formerly from New York state. It is thought that some of his heirs may live in this vicinity.

Theodore Miller, who was over seventy years of age, had been living in the West for the past 20 years. He never told anyone, not even his closest friends, anything of his past life or where he came from except that he had formerly lived in the southern part of New York state. Miller died without a will and in case no heirs are found within a certain time all of his fortune, which amounts to over $50,000, will escheat to the state of Washington.

Another peculiar circumstance which surrounds the estate of Miller is the fact that all of his fortune was in cash and is now in one of the banks of the state of Washington. Unlike other western men who invest practically all of their money in land, Mr. Miller preferred to be sure of his cash and so made no speculation in the western real estate market.

Why They Moved.

A family living near me at Potato Hill farm lately moved to town to educate the children. Joe, the oldest boy, is three; Anna, the baby, will be a year old in December—E. W. Howe's "Monthly."

No Food at All.
"Lady," began Hungry Higgins, "I'd thank yer fur a meal."
"Ah," exclaimed the bright housekeeper, "you're one of those after dinner speakers."
"Not exactly, lady, or I wouldn't be so hungry. I ain't got so much as a chestnut about me."—Catholic Standard and Times.

"And now for an enjoyable evening with this 50¢ novel"

Without leaving the warmth and comfort of your home, you can enjoy the company of the world's greatest novelists. You can meet them in their prime—when their powers of narration are at their best. They will delight you with whatever stories you may desire—tales of mystery and adventure—tales of love, intrigue and romance—sad tales, glad tales—and the very best of each.

Grosset & Dunlap have gotten together a list of more than 400 novels that represent the best in fiction. They comprise the works of such popular authors as Robert W. Chambers, Harold MacGrath, George Barr McCutcheon, Meredith Nicholson and William De Morgan. They are books that were formerly "best sellers" and originally published at a much higher price.

Here are a few of the new arrivals. Buy one and spend this evening at home—you'll be delighted!

- Truett King.....George Barr McCutcheon
- Christopher Hibbald, Roadmaker.....Marguerite Bryan
- The Witching Hour.....Augustus Thomas

—The business men of Whitney's Point have bought a lot, paying $150, on which to erect sheds for the use of people driving into that village to trade.

—The Venice Center Dramatic Club will present "Brother Josiah" in Academy hall Saturday evening of this week. Admission 25 cents; children 10 cents.

—Mrs. Emeline Alling, who fell last week Thursday and suffered quite painful injuries about the head and face, is improving and is able to be about. Her daughter, Mrs. W. W. Potter, of Auburn is with her.

Easter opening of millinery at Mrs. D. E. Singer's on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, April 1, 2 and 3. Call and see the spring styles in hats and ladies' furnishings.

—The prize piano to be given to the winner in THE TRIBUNE Voting Contest, arrived Saturday last and is on exhibition in R. & H. P. Mastin's store, where it will remain until the close of the contest and may be seen by all interested.

—Sunday morning theme at the Presbyterian church "Behold the sower goeth forth." Sunday school following morning service. Young people's meeting and evening service as usual. All very cordially invited to all of these services.

—From now on kill very fly possible. Each one killed now means 5,000,000,000,000,000 less before the summer ends. About April 15th the female fly that survives the winter lays her eggs; fifteen days later these are hatched and in ten days more are laying. Kill the first flies.

—Mrs. O. M. Avery of Earlville, formerly of Genoa, recently received a postcard shower from Genoa friends and relatives on the occasion of her birthday. She wishes to thank all the dear friends in the old home who remembered her so handsomely—a reminder that the absent are not forgotten.

—The Forward Movement convention of the Central New York conference of the M. E. church is to be held in the First M. E. church in Ithaca, April 2, 3 and 4. There are 250 churches in the conference and it is expected as many as 800 delegates will attend. Four bishops of the M. E. church are expected to attend the services, viz. Bishop Earl Cranston, of Washington, D. C.; Bishop W. S. Lewis, of Foo Chow, China; Bishop F. W. Warner, of India, and Bishop T. B. Neely, who will represent the South American field.

—It is said that under the workings of no-license, the village of Homer has become so peaceable that the question is being agitated of doing away with the police justice and constable.

—A Walton man bought a go-cart of a mail-order house, paid freight and delivery charges, and upon unpacking the cart found that it was made in Walton and that he could have bought it at home for half the price he paid.

—G. B. Springer, who underwent a minor operation on Monday of this week, is doing nicely and it is expected that he will soon recover, and be able in a few weeks to resume his work as superintendent of schools of the Fourth district.

—George Carmody, of New York City, a blind student, has been elected valedictorian of the class of 1912 at Syracuse University. He is one of the best students in the university, as well as being a splendid pianist and an expert typewriter. Here is a striking example of perseverance and accomplishment in spite of difficulty.

—It looks a little strange that apparently level-headed business men, who are quite extensive advertisers during the holiday season and get very satisfactory results, should at other seasons of the year almost if not quite refrain from calling the attention of the public to the wares displayed on their shelves and counters. The necessities of life are in demand the year round, and those who consistently, persistently call attention to their goods and prices are the ones most likely to receive the larger share of the patronage of the public.—Ex.

—Mrs. Christina Robinson, aged 79 years, was burned to death in her home, about four miles east of Moravia, last Friday evening. Her son was called away on business, and left his mother, who was an invalid, alone. She was comfortable when he left her. In less than an hour, the house was discovered to be on fire by neighbors, George Letts being the first one to arrive. Mrs. Robinson had been obliged to sleep in a chair for some time, and it is supposed that her clothing caught fire in some way while she was asleep. It is thought that, being awakened by the flames, she started to get out of the house and set fire to it in several places. As the building was burning fiercely when neighbors arrived, it was impossible to get inside. The remains of the woman were found in the shed adjoining the house. The funeral was held on Tuesday at the Lickville church and burial was in the Lickville cemetery.

—Delwin Decker has been spending a few days with relatives in West Groton.

—Mrs. Robert Mastin leaves today to visit her mother and sister in Buffalo.

—Wm. J. Breen of Cortland has been a guest of his brother, Thos. Breen and family this week.

—Miss Alice Montgomery of Auburn was a guest of her sister, Mrs. Morell Wilson, over Sunday.

—The Groton High school is closed for a few weeks on account of a few cases of scarlet fever in that village.

—Mrs. David Lowe died at her home at West Groton, Wednesday. The funeral services will be held to-morrow (Saturday) at 2 o'clock at the house.

Our feed mill at the Genoa elevator is now ready for custom business. We can handle grain or ear corn; Will grind Tuesday and Friday of each week. J. G. ATWATER & SON.

—Clay Tarbell and Miss Alma Sobers of North Lansing were married at the parsonage at North Lansing by Rev. F. Allington on Wednesday evening, March 27.

—Eugene Younglove and family have moved to their home near East Genoa, and Edwin Thayer and family have moved to the place vacated by Younglove.

—Mrs. Christina Lester and grandson, Leland Conger of Owego, came to Genoa Tuesday, the latter returning Wednesday evening. Mrs. Lester is the guest of Mrs. D. C. Mosher.

—The New York Central bridge across the lake at Cayuga is to be raised from eight to ten feet to make room for boats on the barge canal system and to do away with the present drawbridge.

—The dealer of weights and measures has, it is said, sent orders to maple syrup producers that henceforth in compliance with the law, that the gallon cans must hold 231 cubic inches. It has been the custom to give 11 pounds, but this will no longer be permitted.

—Rev. J. W. Terry, who has been conducting meetings here for two weeks, left Tuesday afternoon expecting to reach his home in Ohio the latter part of the week. On Monday evening he gave a very fine lecture on "Jean Valjean" which was greatly enjoyed by the audience.

—Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Buchanan and daughter, who have been in Florida for several weeks, arrived home last evening. . . . Mrs. Ernest Denson and children of Fostoria, Ohio, are spending some time with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Fawcett.—Moravia Republican.

If you have anything to sell, if you want anything, have lost or found an article, make it known through a Special Notice in THE TRIBUNE.

—Harlan G. DeWitt who resided near Moravia died last Friday afternoon from blood poisoning which developed from an operation for appendicitis only three days before. He is survived by his widow. He was 41 years old. The funeral was held Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the house. Burial was made in Indian Mound cemetery.

—Joseph Dobbins reported that he had about 40 cars of cabbage at his storage house last Monday and 400 or 500 tons laid down on the ground near Apulia. They will be shipped as rapidly as possible. Fifty dollars per ton was the record price reached Monday. A few farmers have a few loads left which they kept hoping for the big price now offered. The season will now be over soon and all who have any cabbage to sell will soon have disposed of them.—Homer Republican.

Wiley's New Position.

Good Housekeeping announces that Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, late chief chemist of the Department of Agriculture, will on April 1 become contributing editor of Good Housekeeping Magazine, which will thereafter be the exclusive channel for his writings on pure food, health and like topics which have so long been associated with his name.

The magazine has established and will maintain permanently at Washington a Bureau of Foods, Sanitation and Health, with Dr. Wiley in charge as its director. He will be assisted by a staff of trained men and women, all of whom come with him from the Department of Agriculture. He will be untrammelled in the conduct of the Bureau by any interference from persons whose mercenary interests his investigations and publications may menace.

The Bureau will continue and carry on the aggressive campaign against food adulteration and kindred abuses which Dr. Wiley has prosecuted for years as an officer of the Department of Agriculture. In addition it will be put at the service of the public for examination of suspected food and toilet products, by whomsoever manufactured, and for protection against false weights and measures of every description.

Clarke General Manager.

In order to better centralize and increase the efficiency of the management of the Ithaca Street Railway Company and the Short Line between Ithaca and Auburn the management has been consolidated, to take effect April 1. Announcement to that effect was issued from the officers of the receivers of the Ithaca trolley company last Saturday.

Engineer H. A. Clarke will be general manager of both roads and T. B. Clancy, general superintendent and purchasing agent. Under the general superintendent, among the department heads, the following appointments have been made: Master mechanic steam division, J. H. Doyle of Auburn; dispatcher, steam division B. G. Webster, Auburn; road master, all divisions, John Graney.

The receivers have under consideration the purchase of a gasoline motor car, costing approximately $25,000 to be used on the Short Line for through trips.

They have received a miniature model of the gasoline car which was sent by the company which makes them.

Don't Lose Money On Sick Cows.

KOW-KURE has doubled the value of thousands of ailing cows by its wonderful medicinal qualities. Hundreds of unprofitable cows have been rescued from the butcher and made big profit-producers. KOW-KURE is not a "milk-dodger." It is a powder. It positively cures and prevents the ailments that sap the strength of the ailing cow and prevent the offspring from growing well. It regulates the digestion and generative organs and tones up the entire system. It is the only medicine that cures BIRTH, ABORTION, MILK FEVER, LOST APPETITE and other ills.

Every farmer should use KOW-KURE to keep his herd healthy, because healthy cows produce more.

HENRY LANE WILSON, AMERICAN AMBASSADOR TO MEXICO

IF newspaper men are not born diplomats a good many of them achieve diplomatic posts and acquit themselves creditably. The American ambassador to Mexico has been walking no primrose path during the late unpleasantness in the neighboring republic, and there may have been times when the Hon. Henry Lane Wilson looked with regret upon the time when he edited the Lafayette (Ind.) Journal and had no weightier worries than pacifying irate citizens who had been mentioned or hadn't in local "stories." But his genial manners brought him and the United States safely through the perplexities of the anti-Diaz rising, and the correctness of his attitude was admitted by both parties in the revolution. Mr. Wilson left Indiana in the eighties and became a banker in Spokane, Wash. He has been minister to Chile and Belgium and has served the country in various important international conferences.

New Veil For Easter Hat.
 The shadow lace veil really has a face, so sheer and fine is the ground mesh and so delicate the shadow pattern. This veil has a leaf and flower design on very thin silk mesh, and the pattern is so irregular that half of the face is in shadow. Such veils are very fashionable now and will be worn with large and small hats on Easter Sunday.

SHADOW VEILS QUEER, BUT MODISH.

A Basket Pincushion.
 A dainty use for discarded Easter egg baskets such as children have in quantities—is to turn them into pincushions. Glid the baskets with gold paint. Two coats are usually sufficient. Stuff with wool and cover the top with colored satin, over which is stretched gold lace. Inside the edge of the basket, concealing the sewing of the cushion, add a wreath of tiny ribbon flowers in rich colorings. These cushions are equally lovely if the baskets are silver and silver lace is used over a color or white cushion top.

Helpful Hint.
 A good way to avoid getting the fingers inky if one has a tendency that way is to save the fingers of discarded kid gloves and keep them in the writing desk, slipping one over the middle finger and another, if necessary, over the forefinger, when sitting down to write. This often saves time and annoyance when a note has to be written just before going out.
