She speaks with the authority of one who has voted and sat as delegate in political conventions both local and national. I will give a few comments on her work:

"Mrs. Reynolds made more than 100 speeches during the Washington campaign, wrote innumerable columns for the press and carried on a heavy correspondence from the Spokane headquarters. She stumped the state of Washington from end to end. A Spokane minister says "Her address was the safest and sanest, and yet most aggressive argument for Equal Suffrage that I ever heard."

Another says, "Mrs. Reynolds is going to be the bright and particular star at what has been widely proclaimed as a legislative demonstrative meeting at the Broadway Theater late to-day. She was delegated yesterday to attend the Barry lecture." It would be well to add that Richard Barry is a very active anti-suffragist.

FRECKLES

By
Gene Stratton-Porter

COPYRIGHT, 1904, BY DOUBLEDAY, PAGE & CO.

"They've been hanging round out there for several days past," said Freckles. "I'll tell you what I think it means. I think the old rattler has killed something too big for him to swallow, and he's keeping guard and won't let me chickens have it. I'm just sure, from the way the birds have acted out there all summer, that it is the rattler's den. You watch them now. See the way they dip and then rise, frightened like!"

Suddenly McLean turned on him with a blanching face.

"Freckles!" he cried.

"You think it's Jack!" shuddered Freckles.

He dropped the orter, caught up his club, and plunged into the swale. Reaching for his revolver, McLean followed. The chickens circled higher at their coming, and the big snake lifted his head and rattled angrily. It sank in sinuous coils at the report of McLean's revolver, and together he and Freckles stood beside Black Jack. His fate was evident and most horrible.

"Come," said the boss at last. "We don't dare touch him. We will get a sheet from Mrs. Duncan and tuck over him, to keep these swarms of insects away, and set Hall on guard, while we go for the officers."

Freckles' lips closed resolutely. He deliberately thrust his club under Black Jack's body and, raising him, rested it on his knee. He pulled a long silver pin from the front of the dead man's shirt and sent it spinning out into the swale. Then he gathered up a few crumpled bright flowers and dropped them into the pool far away.

"My soul is sick with the horror of this thing," said McLean as he and Freckles drove toward town. "I can't understand how Jack dared risk creeping through the swale even in desperation. No one knew its dangers better than he. And why did he choose the rankest, muckiest place to cross the swamp?"

"Don't you think, sir, it was because it was on a line with the Limberlost south of the corduroy? The grass was tallest there, and he counted on those willows to screen him. Once he got among them he would have been safe to walk by stooping. If he'd made it past that place he'd been sure to get out."

"Well, I'm as sorry for Jack as I know how to be," said McLean, "but I can't help feeling relieved that our troubles are over with this dreadful punishment for Jack, Wessner safe in jail and warrants out for the others. Jack knew the swamp better than anyone about here. When he found there were two companies trying to lease he wanted to stand in with the one from which he could realize the most. Even then he had trees marked here that he was trying to dispose of. I think his sole intention in forcing me to discharge him from my gang was to come up here and try to steal timber. We had no idea when we took the lease what a gold mine it was."

"That's exactly what Wessner said that first day," said Freckles eagerly. "That 'twas a gold mine." He said he didn't know where the marked trees were, but he knew a man that did, and if I would hold off and let them get the marked ones there were a dozen they could take out in a few days."

"Freckles," cried McLean, "you don't mean a dozen?"

"That's what he said, sir—a dozen. He said they couldn't tell how the grain of all of them would work up, of course, but they were all worth taking out, and five or six were real gold mines. This makes three they've tried, so there must be nine more marked, and several of them for being just

"Well, I wish I knew which they were," said McLean, "so that I could get them out first."

CHAPTER XVIII. TAKING A PICTURE.

"I HAVE been thinking," said Freckles. "I believe if you will leave one of the guards on the line—say Hall—that I will begin on the swamp at the north end and lay it off in sections and try to hunt out the marked trees. I suppose they are all marked something like that first maple on the line was. Wessner mentioned another good one not so far from that. He said it was best of all. I'd be having the swelled head if I could find that. Of course I don't know a thing about the trees, but I could hunt for the marks. Jack was so good at it he could tell some of them by the mark, but all he wanted to take that we've got on to so far have just had a deep chip cut out rather low down and where the bushes were thick over it. I believe I could be finding some of them."

"Good head!" said McLean. "We will do that. You may begin as soon as you are rested. And about things you came across in the swamp, Freckles, the most trifling little thing that you think the Bird Woman would want, take your wheel and go after her at any time. I'll leave two men on the line, so that you will have one on either side, and you can come and go as you please. Have you stopped to think of all we owe her, my boy?"

"Yes; and the angel—we owe her a lot, too," said Freckles. "I owe her my life and honor. It's lying awake nights I'll have to be trying to think how I'm ever to pay her up."

"Well, begin with the muff," suggested McLean. "That should be fine."

Freckles told McLean of Mrs. Duncan's desire for a hat like the angel's. He hesitated a little in the telling and kept sharp watch on McLean's face. When he saw the boss' eyes were full of sympathy he loved him anew, for, as ever, McLean was quick to understand. Instead of laughing he said: "I guess you'll have to let me in on that too. You mustn't be selfish, you know. I'll tell you what we'll do. Get it for Christmas. I'll be home then, and we can send a box. You get the hat. I'll add a dress and wrap. You get Duncan a hat and gloves. I'll send him a big overcoat, and we'll put in a lot of little stuff for the babies."

"That would be away too serious for fun," said Freckles. "That would be heavenly."

A week later everything at the Limberlost was precisely as it had been before the tragedy, except the case in Freckles' room now rested on the stump of the newly felled tree. Enough of the vines were left to cover it prettily, and every vestige of the havoc of a few days before was gone. The new guards were patrolling the trail. Freckles was roughly laying off the swamp in sections and searching for marked trees. In that time he had found one deeply chipped and the chip cunningly replaced and tacked in. It promised to be quite rare, so he was jubilant. He also found so many subjects for the Bird Woman that her coming was of almost daily occurrence, and the hours he spent with her and the angel were nothing less than golden.

The Limberlost now was arrayed like the queen of Sheba in all her glory. The first frosts of autumn had bejeweled her crown in flashing topaz, ruby and emerald. About her feet trailed the purple of her garments, and in her hand was her golden scepter. Everything was at full tide. It seemed as if nothing could grow lovelier, and it was all standing still a few weeks, waiting coming destruction.

The swamp was palpitant with life. Every pair of birds that had flocked to it in the spring was now multiplied by from two to ten. The young were tame from Freckles' tripartenthood, and so plump and sleek that they were quite as beautiful as their elders, even if in many cases they lacked their brilliant plumage. There were chubby little groundhogs scudding along the trail. There were cunning baby coons and opossums peeping from hollow logs and trees. Young muskrats followed their parents across the lagoons.

If you could come upon a family of foxes that had not yet disbanded and see the young playing with a wild duck's carcass that their mother had brought and note the pride and satisfaction in her eyes as she lay at one side guarding them it would be a picture not to be forgotten. Freckles never tired of studying the devotion of a fox mother to her babies.

The angel was wild about the baby rabbits and squirrels. Earlier in the season, when the young were still very small, it had so happened that at times Freckles could give into her hands one of these little ones. Then it was pure joy to stand back and watch her heaving breast, flushed cheek and shining eyes. Hers were such lovely eyes. They were forever changing. Now sparkling and darkling with wit, now humid with sympathy, now burning with the fire of courage, now taking on strength of color with ambition, now flashing indignantly at the abuse of any creature. She had carried several of the squirrel and bunny babies home and had the conservatory littered with them. Her care of them was perfect.

Brown butterfly time had come. The outer edge of the swale was filled with milkweed and other plants beloved of them, and the air was golden with the flashing satin wings of the monarch, viceroy and argynnis. They outnumbered those of any other color three to one.

Among the birds it really seemed as if the little yellow fellows were in the preponderance. At least they were until the red winged blackbirds and bobolinks that had nested on the upland came swarming by hundreds for these last few weeks before migration. Never was there a finer feast spread for the birds. The grasses were filled with seeds; so, too, were weeds of every variety. Fall berries were ripe. Wild grapes and black haws were ready.

They seemed to feel the new reign of peace and fullness most of all. As for hunting, they didn't even have to hunt for themselves these days, for the bounty now being spread before Little Chicken every day was more than he could master, and he was glad to have his parents come down and feast with him.

He was a fine, overgrown fellow, and his wings, with quills of jetty black, gleaming with bronze, were so strong they almost lifted his body. The funny little hops, springs and sidewise bounds he gave set Freckles and the angel, hidden out in the swamp watching him, into smothered chuckles of delight.

Sometimes he fell to coquetting with himself, and that was the funniest thing of all, for he turned his head up, down, from side to side, and drew in his chin with prinkly little jerks and tils. He would stretch his neck, throw up his head, turn it to one side and smirk—actually smirk, the most complacent and self satisfied smirk that any one ever saw on the face of a bird. It was so comical that Freckles and the angel told the Bird Woman of it one day.

When she finished her work on Little Chicken she left them the camera all ready for use, telling them they might hide back in the bushes and watch. If Little Chicken came out and truly smirked and they could squeeze the bulb at just the proper moment to snub him she would be more than delighted.

Freckles and the angel quietly curled down beside a log and with eager eyes and softest breathing patiently waited. They were becoming anxious, for the light would soon be gone and they had so wanted to try for the picture. At last Little Chicken lifted his head, opened his beak and gaped widely. He dozed a minute or two more. The angel said that was his beauty sleep. Then he lazily gaped again and stood up, stretching and yawning. He ambled leisurely down toward the gateway, and the angel said, "Now, we may have a chance, at last."

"I do hope so," shivered Freckles. With one accord they rose to their knees and trained their eyes on the south of the log. The light was full and strong. Little Chicken prospected again with no results. He dressed his plumage, polished his beak, and when he felt fine and in full toilet he began to flirt with himself. Freckles' eyes snapped and his breath sucked between his clenched teeth.

"He's going to do it," whispered the angel.

Little Chicken nodded daintily and ruffled his feathers. He gave his head sundry little sidewise jerks and rapidly shifted his point of vision. Once there was the fleeting little ghost of a smirk.

"Now! No!" snapped the angel.

Freckles leaned toward the bird. Tense as a steel trap he waited. Unconsciously the hand of the angel clasped his. He scarcely knew it was there. Suddenly Little Chicken sprang straight up in the air and landed with a thud. The angel started slightly, but Freckles was immovable. Then, as if in approval of his last performance, the overgrown baby wheeled until he was more than three-quarters, almost full side, toward the camera, straightened on his legs, squared his shoulders, stretched his neck full height, drew in his chin and smirked his most pronounced smirk directly in the face of the lens.

Freckles' fingers closed on the bulb convulsively, and the angel's closed on his at the instant. Then the angel heaved a great sigh of relief and lifted her hands to push back the damp, clustering hair from her face.

Hand in hand they ran for the north end of the swamp, yelling, "We got it!"

The Bird Woman plunged into the swale at the mouth of Sleepy Snake creek and came wading out with a couple of cameras and dripping trigods.

Moved by an impulse she never afterward regretted, she bent and laid her lips on Freckles' forehead, kissing him gently and thanking him for his many kindnesses to her in her loved work. Freckles started off walking on air, and he felt inclined to keep watching behind to see if the trail were not curling up and rolling down the line after him.

Next day Freckles saw them coming. The angel was standing, waving her hat. He sprang on his wheel and raced, jolting and pounding, down the corduroy to meet them. The Bird Woman stopped the horse, and the angel gave him the bit of print paper. Freckles leaned the wheel against a tree and took the proof with eager fingers. He had never before seen a study from any of his chickens. He stood staring. When he lifted his face to them it was transfigured with delight.

"You see!" he exclaimed, and fell to gazing again. "Oh, me little chicken!" he cried. "Oh, me elegant little chicken! I'd be giving all me money in the bank for you!"

Then he thought of the angel's muff and Mrs. Duncan's hat and added: "Or at least all but what I'm needing for something else. Would you mind my stopping at the cabin a minute and showing this to Mother Duncan?" he asked.

Freckles went hurrying on ahead, and they drove up in time to see Mrs. Duncan gazing as if awestruck and to hear her bewildered "Weel, I be drawed on!"

Freckles and the angel helped the Bird Woman to establish herself for a long stay at the mouth of Sleepy Snake creek. Then she sent them away and waited what luck would bring to her.

"Looks as if some one had been cutting a flagpole," said the angel, running the toe of her shoe around a small stump, evidently cut that season. "Freckles, what would anybody cut a tree as small as that for?"

"I don't know," said Freckles. "Well, but I want to know!" said the angel. "Nobody came away in here and cut it just for fun. They've taken it away. Let's go back and see if we can see it anywhere around there."

She retraced her steps and began searching eagerly. Freckles did the same.

"There it is," he exclaimed at last "leaning just as naturally against the trunk of that big maple."

"Yes, and leaning there has killed a patch of bark," said the angel. "See how dried up it looks."

Freckles stared at her.

"Angel," he shouted. "I bet you it's a marked tree!"

"Course it is!" cried the angel. "It is one of Jack's marked trees."

The clear, ringing echo of strongly swung axes came crashing through the Limberlost.

"'Tis the gang," shouted Freckles. "They're clearing a place to make the camp. Let's go help!"

"Get out your hatchet," commanded the angel. "I predict this is the most valuable tree in the swamp. You found it. I'm going to play that you're my knight. Now, you nail my colors on it!"

She untied a blue bow in her hair and doubled it against the tree. The angel had called him her knight! How he loved her! She must not see his face or surely her quick eyes would read what he was fighting to hide. He did not dare lay his lips on that ribbon then, but that night he would return to it. When they had gone a little distance they both looked back, and the morning breeze set the bit of blue waving them a farewell.

She reached him her hand, and, like two children, they broke into a run as they came nearer the gang. They left the swamp by the west road and followed the trail until they found the men. To the angel it seemed complete chaos.

In the shadiest spot on the west side of the line, close to the swamp and very close to Freckles' room, they were cutting down bushes and clearing out space for a tent for the men's sleeping quarters, another for a dining hall and a board shack for the cook. The teamsters were unloading, the horses were cropping leaves from the bushes, and each man was doing his part toward the construction of the new Limberlost quarters.

OF INTEREST TO WOMEN.

How to Wear Your Jewels to Most Advantage.

While the average woman will spend infinite care over the choosing of a dress, its color, its texture, its fit and, above all, its suitability as regards her hair and complexion, there are few who are half as careful over the choice of jewelry they intend to wear.

Rubies should be worn only by dark haired, dark eyed women. They lose their beauty if accompanying a complexion of lilies and roses and hair like spun gold. The woman whom the latter description fits will find the turquoise the stone par excellence for her. The fair complexioned woman who has dark eyes will find garnets becoming.

Every woman should study the color of her eyes when choosing jewelry. Thus a woman with light eyes should never wear emeralds, as these detract from the color and render the eyes almost lifeless looking. On the other hand, a woman with dark eyes will find if she wears coral that her eyes seem to have increased a hundred times in brilliancy. A fair woman may wear pearls, moonstones, sapphires, opals and the exquisitely colored beryl stone, while amethysts are becoming to the woman with warm lights of gold in her hair.

Dark women look best wearing rubies, emeralds, garnets, jacinths, topazes, amber and pink coral, but sapphires should be left to the fair women. Nearly all women can wear diamonds, but she who has a sallow skin will be well advised not to wear these stones unrelieved. Rubies and diamonds mingled with sapphires are a charming mixture for her whose skin is fair.

Now that earrings have again come into fashion women of all ages and of all ranks of life have taken to wearing them, quite regardless of the fact as to whether they are becoming or not. This, again, is an instance where woman's love of finery has overcome her better judgment. Women with large, prominent or ill shaped ears should never don this style of ornament, and a long ear, even though it is exquisitely shaped, is not improved by the addition of earrings. On the other hand, a tiny, shell-like ear is beautified if dainty drops are worn. The oriental style of earring should be worn by that type of woman who can only be described as exotic, and diamonds give a harsh appearance if the skin is at all inclined to be sallow.

INTEREST AT FEVER HEAT

Miss Florence Norman Wins First Count.
Miss Clara Cook In Second Place.

Second Count On March 28th.

The "Votes for Women" are being polled in large numbers, as enthusiasm in the contest increases. But all must remember that it is good, honest work that gets the votes. Now let all the contestants start out for a straight fair race to the next count.

The first count in THE TRIBUNE'S big voting contest took place last Friday afternoon, Supervisor Loomis, Rev. T. J. Searls and E. H. Sharp acting as judges, with a representative of the contest company also in charge. The result of the count was as follows:

Florence Norman.....	95,125
Clara Cook.....	87,000
Mrs. Lewis Sellen.....	45,850
Lillian Warren.....	37,200
Mrs. Titus VanMarter.....	23,300
Ethel Bower.....	6,700
Mrs. Leslie Underwood.....	6,525
Mrs. Jay E. Smith.....	100
Agnes Kelley.....	125
Mrs. Howard Bush.....	50
Hazel Brogan.....	50
Lida Nolan.....	25
Lora Armistead.....	25

The second lap of the big race will end on March 28th. At this time we will give $10 in gold to the contestant who has made the GREATEST GAIN in votes over her standing at the first count. To the contestant making the second GREATEST GAIN in votes we will give $5 in gold. No matter what your standing on the first count, if you secure the most votes between the first and second counts you will be awarded the $10 in gold and if second best you will get $5 in gold. This gives every contestant, new or old, the same chance on this count and, of course, all votes count on the piano as on the previous count.

The bonuses on this count will be as follows:
For every seven new subscriptions 4,000 extra, making a total of 8,200.
For every seven renewal subscriptions 3,000 extra, making a total of 6,500.
For every seven back subscriptions 2,000 extra, making a total of 4,800.
For every 40 merchants coupons brought to this office and counted by the publisher or her assistant, we will give 500 extra votes, a total of 1,500 votes.

Remember to have your friends trade with the merchants giving coupons.

The contestants will soon have the pleasure of seeing the piano, which will arrive in a week or ten days probably. Shipment has been delayed somewhat on account of the very cold weather, as the company has had some bad luck with instruments that have been shipped during the severe weather.

The following leading merchants of Genoa are giving 25 votes on each one dollar cash purchase. Don't fail to ask for coupons when you do your trading, as they will not be given out later.

School Superintendents Meet.

A meeting of district superintendents of Onondaga, Seneca, Tompkins and Cayuga counties, was held in Auburn Tuesday. The many phases and departments of school work were discussed, including the 36 week school year, work for boys, better ventilation of school rooms and better sanitary surroundings, domestic science, etc.

Those in attendance were: E D McDowell of Memphis, M. D. Green of Liverpool and R B Searle of Syracuse, representing Onondaga county; C B Earle of Waterloo, representing Seneca county; Mrs Hattie K Buck of North Lansing and J. D. Bigelow of Ithaca, representing Tompkins county, and Horace S. E. Murphy of Cato, Henry Greenfield of Niles, Mrs Anna M Kent of Union Springs and O. W. Wood of Sennett, representing Cayuga county.

Many points were brought out which will be of benefit to the superintendents and to the schools under their charge. O. W. Wood of Sennett presided and the superintendents will hold similar gatherings in Auburn on the first Tuesday of each month.

What It Really Means.

Zona Gale, whose stories of "Friendship Village" are familiar to lovers of good literature, is one of the most enthusiastic workers in the Wisconsin campaign for equal suffrage. Writing in La Follette's Weekly Magazine Miss Gale says that the greatest need is general education on the subject. "Most objectors," says Miss Gale, "are not objecting to the essential equal suffrage idea. They are objecting to what they think that idea is. Prejudice, caricature, outgrown conditions and tradition occupy them, and not the truth about equal suffrage at all." Many men associate the idea of equal suffrage with absurdities. They seem to think that if women voted men would be called upon to keep house and take care of the baby. When they learn that equal suffrage means improved schools, cleaner streets, better garbage disposal, fairer methods of assessing taxes and better men in office, they will be as enthusiastic in favor of votes for women as the most ardent member of the suffrage association.

Don't Do It, Boys.

A good deal has been said about the evils of cigarette smoking, says Dr. A. C. Clinton, but one-half the truth has never been told. Cigarette smoking first dulls the whole moral nature. It has an appalling effect upon the physical system, as well. It first stimulates and then stupefies the nerves. It sends boys into consumption. It gives them enlargement of the heart and sends them to the insane asylum. I have seen bright boys turned into dunces, and straightforward boys made into miserable cowards, by cigarette smoking.

David Starr Jordan says: Boys who smoke cigarettes are like wormy apples—they drop long before harvest-time.—Farm Journal.

Gampton on the Farm.

(From March Farm Journal.)

It is better to sell what you cannot eat than to eat what you cannot sell.

If you are in doubt as to whether you have religion or not, ask your wife; she knows.

Plant less ground to corn and give it better culture. That is all there is to intensive farming.

Drive some strong, pointed irons in the bottom of your ladders before they slip and perhaps cost a life.

It is time to look through the cellar and see that there are no rotten turnips, cabbages or potatoes to pollute the air.

"There's a lot of girls that don't ever intend to get married." "How do you know?" "I've asked several of them."

If a man would lead a contented life, he must keep on the best of terms with his stomach, his conscience and his wife.

When you spill hot grease upon the floor, immediately pour cold water upon it. This cools it before it can strike into the wood.

When going for a long drive in cold weather, button a newspaper under your vest or jacket. It makes a cheap and warm lung protector.

"How many sisters has Billy White?" "He's got one. He tried to catch me by saying he had two half sisters, but he'd find out I've studied fractions."

It often takes lumpy ground years to get over one time of working it when too wet. Can't afford that. We need the use of every foot of our land.

An excellent spring tonic, after several months of hovering around the fireside, is a good sawbuck, a sharp saw and a pile of hard wood. We know it for we have tried it.

Some things smell worse the more you stir them. One of these is a polecat, another is a neighborhood quarrel. The polecat you may sometimes have to tackle; but steer clear of the other thing, if you have to run for dear life.

It is not natural for children to snore; if they do so, take them to a doctor to learn the cause of the obstruction to the free passage of air from nose to throat. The tonsils may be enlarged or there may be some growth in the nasal passage, or catarrh of the throat or nose.

Blind Man an Educator.

In the March American Magazine there is an interesting account of J. E. Swearingen, who, though totally blind since youth, fills the office of State Superintendent of Education for South Carolina. It is for the most part due to him that the practical side of South Carolina's agricultural revival—the children's corn clubs and tomato clubs—has such great vitality. Following is a brief extract from the article:

"The old expression, 'there are none so blind as those who will not see,' might with propriety be revived in the light of modern achievements of blind workers; as an instance, J. E. Swearingen, the blind State Superintendent of Education for South Carolina, is seeing wonderfully well for thousands of wide awake boys and girls. Although Mr. Swearingen has lived in darkness since his eleventh year when an accident while hunting destroyed his eyesight, his vision of the needs of his great army of young people has quite as likely been improved instead of injured. Dr. Samuel Gridley Howe, early in the thirties the founder of the first school for the blind in this country, was wont to say that 'blindness is an inconvenience, but not an affliction.' Sometimes a human handicap is the spur that makes a career. When I asked Mr. Swearingen if he felt his growth had been because of his blindness, rather than in spite of it, he was inclined to believe his 'inconvenience' had been a fillip to his ambition. He has conquered so far as to pass through the prescribed course in the University of South Carolina, leading his class, to become a teacher in the State institution for the blind, and finally to be accepted, through the civic suffrage of his people, as the best equipped educator in the State to direct the training of its future citizenship."

Improving School Houses.

A new report of the United States Bureau of Education, Washington, entitled "American School Houses," pays a high tribute to the women who, through their clubs and associations, are working to improve village and country schools. Speaking of the movement in favor of better and more artistic country school houses, the report says: "For this progress we are largely indebted to the good women of our land, who have organized school improvement associations and are grappling bravely with the problems of rural architecture, better school gardens, larger playgrounds, better sanitary arrangements and everything that looks to a more wholesome environment of country school children." Does anyone suppose that if these same women had a vote they would fall to use that vote in favor of school improvement?

BROWNING'S "SORDELLO."

Mystery of That "Colossal Derelict on the Ocean of Poetry."

The impenetrable nature of Robert Browning's "Sordello," published in 1840, "a colossal derelict on the ocean of poetry," as William Sharp terms it, has been the theme of many anecdotes. Tennyson declared, writes Lillian Whiting in "The Brownings—Their Life and Art," that there were only two lines in it—the opening and the closing ones—which he understood, and "they are both lies," he feelingly added.

Douglas Jerrold tackled it when he was just recovering from an illness and despairingly set down his inability to comprehend it to the probability that his mind was impaired by disease, and, thrusting the book into the hands of his wife, he entreated her to read it at once. He watched her breathlessly, and when she exclaimed, "I don't know what this means; it is gibberish," Jerrold exclaimed, "Thank God, I am not an idiot."

A French critic, Odysse Barot, quotes a passage where the poet says, "God gave man two faculties," and adds, "I wish while he was about it God had supplied another—namely, the power of understanding Mr. Browning." Mrs. Carlyle declared that she read "Sordello" attentively twice, but was unable to discover whether the title referred to "a man, a city or a tree."

SNAKES ARE USEFUL

They Are a Check Upon the Lesser Reptiles of the Tropics.

What is the use of snakes? In their "going on their belly," the circumstance that so offended Bacon, lies one of their greatest uses, because that, together with their internal formation and external covering, enables them to penetrate where no larger carnivorous animal could venture, into dark and noisome morasses, bog jungles, swamps amid the tangled vegetation of the tropics, where swarms of the lesser reptiles, on which so many of them feed, would otherwise outbalance the harmony of nature.

Wonderously and exquisitely constructed for their habitat, they are able to exist where the higher animals could not, and while they help to clear those inaccessible places of the lesser vermin, they themselves supply food for a number of the smaller mammalia, which, with many carnivorous birds, devour vast numbers of young snakes.

The hedgehog, weasel, ichneumon, rat, peccary, badger, goat, hog and an immense number of birds keep snakes within due limits, while the latter perform their part among the grain devouring and herbivorous lesser creatures.—Harper's Weekly.

Thinking While Asleep.
It is rather startling to hear that man thinks as intelligently asleep as awake, but no less an authority than Sir Arthur Mitchell admits that thinking is essential to life, says the Chicago Tribune. Thinking when we sleep may be different from when we are awake, but the process goes on just the same. Man cannot think unless he is alive, and he cannot be alive without thinking. Dreams are not as confused as we think. They become confused from the standpoint of memory, but are not from the point of the dream organ. Memory half-blurred in trying to recall them makes dreaming seem confused. Dreams born under normal conditions are normal. It is only those that are created under abnormal conditions that are strange, for, as Cicero said: "It cannot be doubted the number of true dreams would be greater if we were to fall asleep in a better condition. Filling ourselves with wine and flesh obscures our dreams."

Hitch in the System.
A Boston tramp has begged reduced to a system. He has his regular customers. He knocked at the door of a house. The owner came out. As soon as he saw the tramp he said:

"Now, look here; last week I gave you a nickel to stay away for ten days, and here you are back again."

The tramp put his hand to his forehead and was lost in thought for several minutes. Then he said:

"You are right, colonel. Your assessment does not come due for a week yet. When I get back to my counting room I'll pay off my head bookkeeper and discharge him. He has neglected to give you the proper credit on the ledger."—New York American.

Woman's World

Mrs. Timmons Back in Washington's Official Set.

Copyright by Cinedinat.

MRS. JOHN W. TIMMONS.

Another charming young hostess has recently been added to Washington's official set. Mrs. John W. Timmons, wife of Lieutenant Timmons, President Taft's new naval aid.

Mrs. Timmons is a Miss Fairbanks, and during her father's term of office as vice president in the Roosevelt administration she ably assisted her mother in doing the social honors of the position. Her elevation to Washington's official circle will cause much pleasure to her many friends at the capitol.

Mrs. Timmons is a stunning looking woman who is always beautifully gowned and, like her mother, Mrs. Fairbanks, is an enthusiastic clubwoman and deeply interested in the new woman movement. She is remarkably well informed on all public questions of the day.

Deeds of Great Women.

The lady chapel of the new Liverpool cathedral, which was opened recently, will be adorned by a magnificent scheme of stained glass windows in commemoration of the deeds of good women. All the famous women of the Old and New Testaments are commemorated in some way in the scheme, but perhaps the most interesting innovations are the windows commemorating the deeds of great women of recent times. The list is as follows: Mary Collet and all prayerful women.

Louise Stewart and all the noble army of martyrs.

Christina Rossetti and all sweet singers.

Grace Darling and all courageous maidens.

Dr. Alice Marvel and all who have laid down their lives for their sisters.

Catherine Gladstone and all loyal hearted wives.

Elizabeth Barrett Browning and all who have seen the infinite in things.

Josephine Butler and all brave champions of purity.

Annie Hinderer and all missionary pioneers.

Margaret Godolphin and all who have kept themselves unspotted in a corrupt world.

Angela Burdett-Coutts and all almoners of the King of heaven.

Mother Cecile and all women loving and large hearted in counsel.

Elizabeth Fry and all pitiful women.

Agnes Jones and all devoted nurses.

Queen Victoria and all noble queens.

Lady Margaret Banford and all patronesses of sacred learning.

Mary Rogers, stewardess of the Steles and all faithful servants.

Ann Clough and all true teachers.

Mary Somerville and all earnest students.

Susannah Wesley and all devoted mothers.—Presbyterian.

Dainty Bits of Neckwear.

About the newest thing in neckwear is the white velvet collar with square or oval back finished at the front with two huge buttons covered with the velvet. Cuffs are provided with the collar, but they are sold separately. They, too, have the buttons.

One of the daintiest bits of neckwear is the flower buckle, the little blossoms being arranged around a wire that keeps them in shape. A velvet ribbon threads through the buckle, and it is worn low down around the bottom of the stock or at the top if the buckle is very small. The same buckles are used on ribbons that have long cravat ends finished with pendent flowers or tassels. Many of the new silk bows are finished on their mitred or straight ends with tassels or fringes.

An Interesting Meeting.

An interesting meeting between two blind women poets occurred recently when Miss Fanny Crosby, the famous hymn writer, and Miss Alice A. Holmes spent a quarter hour together in Jersey City. Miss Holmes and Miss Crosby were students at the New York Institution For the Blind when they were girls, and they discussed school days as eagerly as if they had been Vassar or Bryn Mawr alumnae. Miss Crosby is ninety-one years of age and has been blind since birth. Miss Holmes is a few years younger. She lost her sight through an accident when she was nine years old.

Cookery Points

How to Serve an Informal Dinner.
An informal home dinner, if there are guests, is served much as the formal one. An exception may be made in the item of soup. This may be served on the table from the tureen. But one soup plate at a time is placed before the host or hostess, whichever one may serve. These are taken from the sideboard by the maid as each is required. Then it is passed to the guest at the right of the hostess.

Fish may be served by the host and in the same manner, but as many as four plates at a time may be placed for serving before the host.

Entrees are always served from the side table.

All sauces and also the vegetables are served from the side table and at the left side of each guest.

If the host desires the salad may be dressed and served at the table.

It is the duty of the hostess to serve dessert if this is not served from the side and pour the coffee.

Though the cream and sugar for the coffee are passed at the left of the diner, the coffee is placed at the right.

Wine is not necessary. The ice water and bread are on the table before the guests enter the dining room; also bonbons and hors d'oeuvres may be on the table.

At informal dinners and luncheons the service plate may be omitted.

Wholesome Sandwiches.

It was the memory of a childhood appetite which inspired a woman to serve brown bread sandwiches spread with horseradish and sugar with her afternoon tea the other day. It was a crisp kind of afternoon, and the snappy pungency of the horseradish was delightful. The horseradish had, of course, been mixed with vinegar, the slightest possible amount used, and it was sprinkled lightly with powdered sugar. The brown bread was made of whole wheat and graham flour and was cut as thin as possible. White bread sandwiches sprinkled with sugar are a delight in one household where everybody has a sweet tooth. It may be that the fashionable "nervous stomach" has been cultivated as much by the goodies in the way of cakes and bonbons served at daily teas as anything else. Sweet sandwiches are twice as healthy and to most persons are a welcome relief from the universal American cake habit.

Turkey Salad.

Roast turkey left from dinner makes delicious salad mixed with celery seasoned with capers and dressed with mayonnaise. The usual directions call for equal parts of meat and celery, but there is no hard and fast rule. The amount of the meat on hand and the taste of the family are strong considerations. The meat left from roast fowl of any kind makes a delicious soufflé. An old rule calls for two cups of meat chopped fine, a cupful of breadcrumbs, a cupful of white sauce and two eggs, the yolks beaten creamy and added to the mixture, and the whites beaten stiff, folded in at the last minute. Bake about fifteen or twenty minutes and send directly from the oven to the table.

Homemade Corn Popper.

A woman looking for an electric corn popper the other day found that she had everything needful for such a utensil except a ten cent popper of the usual long handle and wire cage kind. There is a little oblong electric stove that comes complete with griddle and toaster which makes an ideal arrangement for popping corn, and it is a great improvement over the gas or coal stove, for it may be used on any table in the house with a tray under it. It does not heat the face, and the heat is very even. The smallest popper is best for it.

Chicken a la King.

One breast of chicken, two boiled potatoes, one pint of cream sauce and two boiled green peppers. Fry in a saucepan the sliced green peppers, pour over them a thin cream sauce and let boil for about five minutes. Add to it the sliced chicken and sliced potatoes, let simmer for awhile, season with salt and pepper to taste, finish with a slice of butter and serve very hot in a chafing dish with toast on the side. Mushrooms may be used instead of potatoes if desired.

Pot Roast.

Take any kind of meat; put into an iron pot a tablespoonful of meat fryings or butter; let it brown; wash off the roast and put into the pot. After it begins to fry pour in enough water to half cover the meat, season with pepper and salt, cover and stew slowly. As the meat begins to fry add more water; turn it often and cook about three hours. A half hour before serving add either Irish or sweet potatoes or turnips and let them brown with the meat.

Split Pea Soup.

Take one pint of split peas and two quarts of water, cold. Wash the peas and let soak overnight in water. In the morning simmer them until noon at least, strain through a sieve, removing all hard particles. Season with pepper and salt. Add one-half cupful of sweet cream or small lumps of butter. This recipe makes one quart of soup.

Ten Rules For Beauty.

Lillian Russell in one of her beauty essays gives the following rules:

Keep in the open as much as possible. Breathe deeply and regularly while walking.

Live on a diet of eggs, fruit, vegetables and milk as much as possible.

Take a warm bath daily and a sweat bath once a week.

Dress loosely and not too warmly. Wear no heavy clothes or heavy hats. Go to bed early and get up early.

Sleep in a dark room with windows open and take from seven to eight hours' sleep.

Take one absolutely quiet day every two weeks without reading, writing or visiting.

Avoid worrying. Talk or hear no scandal.

Marry and be the best friend it is possible for you to be to your husband.

Be temperate in all pleasures. Remember, when these things become habits you are far on the road to beauty, health and happiness.

Are You Happy?

If you are it is safe to say that you enjoy good health, as it is impossible to be happy unless you are well. Noted physicians will tell you that bad stomachs and torpid livers are the cause of 95 per cent of all diseases.

For the past 42 years SEVEN BARKS has proved to be the unequalled remedy for all STOMACH, LIVER and KIDNEY troubles, and the greatest tonic and blood purifier known. It makes your digestion what it should be and keeps your entire system in good condition. Price of SEVEN BARKS is but 50 cents a bottle at all druggists. Money refunded if not satisfied. Address: LYMAN BROWN, 63 Murray St., New York, N.Y.

Partial Eclipse of the Honeymoon.

In early American households maternal authority was not lightly to be defied. When Charlotte Fenwick, a southern beauty of the Revolutionary period, was fifteen years old she took advantage of the absence of her mother in England to fall in love with a northerner, Major William Leigh Pierce, and to marry him. On Mrs. Fenwick's return to Savannah, which had been hastened by news of the approach of the English army to Charleston, she was highly indignant to find her daughter married to a stranger.

"And who is this Major Pierce?" she demanded.

"A gentleman, madam!" young Mrs. Pierce naughtily replied.

"Go to your room, madam," commanded Mrs. Fenwick severely, "and stay the rest of the day!"

And the little bride meekly obeyed.—Youth's Companion.

The "Tawdry Saint."

St. Etheldreda has been unfortunate, inasmuch as her memory is perpetuated in the disagreeable adjective "tawdry," and she is sometimes even referred to as the "tawdry saint." In the Isle of Ely, where she died, a fair was formerly held in her honor, at which a peculiar kind of cheap but showy lace was sold, which, as St. Etheldreda's or St. Audrey's lace soon became proverbial and tawdry, an easy corruption of the saint's abbreviated name, was used to denote all things more gaudy than valuable.—London Chronicle.

Economics.

Mr. Nubridge—Why do you do all your shopping at this store? Mrs. Nubridge—It's the grandest place I ever found. They sell all their goods by the foot instead of by the yard, and the price is only a third as much.—Philadelphia Bulletin.

A Spanish Custom.

It is customary throughout Spain for the waiters of cafes to fill a glass of wine or liquor so that it overflows upon the saucer. This custom, in which it is desired to show an appearance of liberality, is called "the foot bath."

THE MERE MAN'S VIEWPOINT

THE WOMAN WHO DARES

By BYRON WILLIAMS

I WANT to tell you a true story of a woman who should wear one of Carnegie's gold medals, but she doesn't. I want to tell you this story because it may cheer you and make you more thankful for what you have and what you are. I want to tell you this that you may compare your trials and your efforts with those of this woman and gain strength from her bravery.

They lived in the city. Her husband was a dentist. Reverse came, and the physician sent them to the country. The man would not live long, he said, but it would be nicer for him to die in the suburb. They had a little money—so little! He could not work at his profession. Somebody had to earn bread and clothes and fuel. While discussing preservation they bought a small plot of ground, paying a little down. The husband, dressed in his city clothes, went to the local lumberman and ordered the lumber for a small house. He knew he could not pay when the bill came, but one cannot sleep in the park. It had become a desperate situation, and he met it thus.

While he was building the house the wife got a position as a schoolteacher. The fare to the city was $6.40 a month. Upon arriving in the metropolis it was necessary to take a street car to the schoolhouse or walk two miles. She walked it twice a day to save the 10 cents.

That was almost ten years ago. What is the situation now? The man is still alive, in better health and has made a pretty home of the place they bought and built. The woman still teaches school in the city. Every morning she arises at 3:30 o'clock, does the necessary work, walks over half a mile to the suburban station (in winter through the heavy drifts of snow), walks to the schoolhouse, teaches all day, returns home, repeating the walks, attends to the household duties and retires.

"Pooh!" you may say. "That isn't much."

Yes, but wait. All these years she has been the only support of this home, barring what came from the garden, and throughout this interim she has kept as sweet and as cheerful as a summer morning. After all she has been through, after all she has suffered and been resigned to, she is as light hearted and as happy as a child. When petty sorrows beset her neighbors they have but to drop in for a moment that the influence of her gladness may drive away the clouds of worryment. She has kept sweet.

That is the wonder of it all. Day after day she has done the thing that fate seems to have planned for her, braving the wet and the cold, the humdrum and wearisome toil of teaching school, riding on drafty cars, getting up in the middle of the night to prepare for another round of irksome duties, and she has done all this without becoming sour and disgruntled.

For weeks and weeks she plans some little addition to the home, and when it is acquired after denial and careful planning the enjoyment to her seems manifold, and because she must thus plan and wait for sufficient funds her purchases are always in good taste. She takes time to think over what best fits, what is most suited, and she buys accordingly.

Perhaps you have trials. None of us escapes them. But how have you borne them? Have they made you a pessimist? Are you prone to find fault with the world and complain against an unknown providence?

If so you are not great like this woman. You merely are unfortunate. You have not the divine philosophy which makes life so dear to her despite the cross she bears. Is not her sweetness an inspiration to you? Is she not greater than Napoleon or Alexander or Caesar? Here is the true soul of Tolstoy, the heart that will not bleed, although we crush it.

Adversity has no power to singe her garments; misfortune is but the wintry wind that blows around her cottage. She is supreme in her own strength, in her own gladness, in her own effervescence of spirit, and, while she never has rescued a child from drowning or a miner from his burning mine, I believe she is entitled to a Carnegie medal—of gold.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN

His Character Analyzed by a President, an Ex-President and Other Noted Americans.

By WILLIAM HOWARD TAFT:

I DON'T think it is too much to say that Lincoln had the most judicial temperament of any man in history. He considered the arguments of his opponents with all the fairness of John Stuart Mill and preserved that calm judicial consideration of the views of every one that became important, and in his disagreement with them he left nothing more than the application of an apt story or a clear Euclid-like demonstration of error without sting. With his love of truth, the supreme trait of his intellect, accompanied by a conscience that insisted on the right as he knew it, with a great heart full of tenderness, we have the combination that made Lincoln one of the two greatest Americans.

The south knows as the north knows now that there is no soul that unites them in perfect amity like that of Abraham Lincoln. The south knows as the north knows that every administration that removes another cause of misunderstanding between the sections or that brings them closer together in any way is acting under the inspiration of him who could love his entire country with undiminished ardor when nearly one-half was seeking to destroy its integrity.

By THEODORE ROOSEVELT:

LINCOLN saw into the future with the prophetic imagination usually vouchsafed only to the poet and the seer. He had in him all the lift toward greatness of the visionary, without any of the visionary's fanaticism or egotism, without any of the visionary's narrow jealousy of the practical man and inability to strive in practical fashion for the realization of an ideal. He had the practical man's hard common sense and willingness to adapt means to ends, but there was in him none of that morbid growth of mind and soul which blinds so many practical men to the higher things of life. No more practical man ever lived than this homely backwoods idealist, but he had nothing in common with those practical men whose consciences are warped until they fail to distinguish between good and evil, fail to understand that strength, ability, shrewdness, whether in the world of business or of politics, only serve to make their possessor a more noxious, a more evil member of the community if they are not guided and controlled by a fine and high moral sense.

By HENRY WATTERSON:

REVILED even as the Man of Galilee, slain even as the Man of Galilee, yet as gentle and unoffending, a man who died for men! Roll the stone from the grave and what shall we see? Just an American, the Declaration of Independence his confession of faith, the constitution of the United States his ark and covenant of liberty, the Union his redoubt, the flag his shibboleth.

Called like one of old, within a handful of years he rose at a supreme moment to supreme command, fulfilled the law of his being and passed from the scene an exhalation of the dawn of freedom. We may still hear his cheery voice bidding us be of good heart, sure that "right makes might," entreating us to pursue "with firmness in the right as God gives us to see the right."

By Justice CHARLES E. HUGHES:

ABRAHAM LINCOLN was an acute man. But we erect no monuments to shrewdness. . . . Lincoln was a man of principle. . . . He ever sought for the foundation principle and built upon it with sure confidence that the house which was founded upon the rock could not be destroyed by the storm. He was profoundly an apostle of liberty, but for liberty under the law, developed and applied in accordance with constitutional principle. He was a man who met each demand as it arose. To the radicals he was too conservative; to the conservatives he was too radical.

By BOOKER T. WASHINGTON:

MY first knowledge of Abraham Lincoln came in this way: I was awakened early one morning before the dawn of day, as I lay wrapped in a bundle of rags on the dirt floor of our slave cabin, by the prayers of my mother, just before leaving for her day's work, as she was kneeling over me, earnestly praying that Abraham Lincoln might succeed and that one day she and her boy might be free. . . . As an individual, grateful as I am to Lincoln for freedom of body, my gratitude is still greater for freedom of soul, the liberty which permits one to live up in that atmosphere where he refuses to permit sectional or racial hatred to drag down, to warp and narrow his soul. . . . Lincoln lives today because he had the courage which made him refuse to hate the man at the south and the man at the north when they did not agree with him.

HOW TO STUDY CHARACTER.

Interesting Use of Mental Powers in Close Observation of Faces.

Study the faces you see and try to form some idea of the characters of their owners. Notice ears, noses, mouths, eyes, chin. Observe how few beautiful mouths and ears you will find compared with other features. It is an interesting use of your mental powers, this study of faces, and will teach you sympathy, if nothing more.

If you find yourself without faces to study, then memorize verses, phrases or numbers to retain your memory. Learn to recall the numbers of a dozen or a score of your acquaintances' homes, instead of always referring to an address book.

Commit the words of songs to memory even if you do not sing—it will make you popular with people who do—or memorize a dozen lines of prose from the daily paper if you have nothing else at hand, just for practice.

It is better than allowing your brain forces to become weak and slipshod from lack of direction.

Make the most of the odd ends of time, and you will make the most of yourself with little cost and no loss.

How to Treat Auto Tires in Winter.
Now that some automobilists are laying up their cars for the winter information as to the proper care of tires during this period is timely. The following advice is being spread broadcast by the Firestone:

First jack up car off all tires and allow enough air to escape to release the internal pressure on the fabric, but not enough to totally collapse the inner tube. The tires in this condition should be kept from heat and wrapped to exclude the light. If the tires are in perfect condition this will suffice; otherwise observe the following directions:

Take off the tires, clean outside carefully, removing all dirt, oil, grease and foreign material. Do not allow water to get inside the casing. If any of the cuts penetrate to the fabric have the tire inspected by a competent repair man and repaired or retreated, as deemed advisable. Wrap each casing and tube in paper or cloth to keep away light and air and store tires in a cool, dark place. Clean all rust off the inside of rims and polish with graphite or stove polish to prevent further rust.

How to Make New England Muffins.
The following recipe for muffins comes from New England: Sift two teaspoonfuls of cream of tartar and one of soda with three cupfuls of flour and rub in a piece of butter the size of an egg. Beat three eggs well and mix them with half a cupful of sugar, then add a cupful of milk. Stir this mixture through the flour and butter and bake thirty minutes in a quick oven.

SATURDAY NIGHT SERMONS

BY REV. SAMUEL W. PURVIS, D.D.

ASHAMED OF THE GOSPEL.
Text, "I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ."—Romans 1, 16.

Who's the speaker? Often value of a thing depends on who said it. The man behind the message may be as important as the man behind the gun. These words have been shot around the world and across nineteen centuries. Who said them? Paul. And he was a Jew, with intense Jewish prejudices. His God had been a God of the Jews only. When Paul became an apostle to the gentiles he had to step up on his own dead self to become tall enough to look over those prejudices. As the Roman had a genius for government, the Greek for culture, so the Jew had for religion. Paul was well qualified by birth, ancestry and training to express an opinion. This was a brave confession, for he was writing to the Romans. Rome was world's metropolis, center of power, mistress of the sea, victor of a thousand campaigns. Her whole career was the march of the conqueror. Christianity was despised. In a nation of warriors it said, "Blessed are the peacemakers." Among the proud it said, "Blessed are the meek!" Defeat, to be vanquished, was Roman disgrace. The founder of Christianity was executed as the most common criminal. Indeed, his death companions were a couple of thieves. "What, Paul! Are you measuring your words? Unblushingly declaring for a man rejected by your own people and crucified by the power that sits on the seven hills?" "No," answers Paul, "I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ, for it is the power of God unto salvation."

"O Shams, Where is Thy Blush?" I do not believe there is any false religion in the world whose adherents are not proud of it. The only religion of which I have ever heard that men were ashamed is the religion of Jesus Christ. Take any freak religions anywhere or any odd form of Christianity and the devotees are crazily anxious to tell their religion. I never met a Chinaman who wasn't proud of being a Confucian nor a Buddhist of Buddhism. The Mohammedan will drop on his praying mat before hundreds announcing there is no God but Allah and Mahomet is his prophet. But how many times I have found men ashamed to acknowledge the gospel of Christ, the only religion in the world that gives power over sin. If there were some back door by which some men could enter into heaven they would like to do so, but they won't admit that they are followers of Christ. And I'll confess that I get weary of the constant hammering against the church by certain kinds of Socialists, temperance workers and other reformers whose chief stock in trade is decrying the one organization in the world that more generously and persistently than any other supports every righteous and sensible reform. No; let us be ashamed of pharisaism, ritualism, denominationalism, heresy trials and prosecutions and of our own weaknesses, sins and follies, but

When we blush be this our shame—That we no more revere his name.

The Power of God.

I've heard the dumb beast beat and low with terror at the approach of storm, instinct of coming danger, but man alone stands amid the storms to admire the sublimity of God's power in action. I've felt tremor of earthquake, the horrid feeling that the eternal rocks could split up under one's feet. I've stood in Cave of Winds at Niagara falls, felt the rain of mist in my face and shook under the thunder of the mighty cataract. Tremendous impressions they were of God's power locked up in bowels of earth or released through rushing of mighty waters. Or you've stood under the stars at night or felt throb of running sap and burning life in warmth of April forest rain or irresistible swelling of flood tide as it surged in filling every cove, inlet and harbor along the shore of a giant continent. Gravitation's ceaseless tension, lightning's dazzling flashes, unseen cables holding planets, stars, constellations by power centripetal and centrifugal. All spelling out the power of God in physical alphabet.

"Unto Salvation"

It's a magnificent spectacle to contemplate, a God hurling worlds from his finger tips, speaking beautiful thoughts in flowers, flashing anger in crash of storms, but it is greater to contemplate his breathing soul into man, and that man mastering torrents of passion and waves of trouble through the God power in him. Education, sanitation, better environments, larger economic opportunities are products of man's own effort toward the physical salvation of the race, but not any one nor all these can solve the problem of arresting man's proclivity toward sin and cleansing it from the heart. We are hastening eternityward. There's a casket and an open grave somewhere ahead waiting for us, if not today, then tomorrow. This "power of God unto salvation" triumphs over the grave. Paul gloried in that. The power is "to every one that believeth." Last week I was savagely attacked by the tongue of a poor deluded fellow who lives entirely in the prophecies of Daniel and Revelation. He wildly cried that all others were rushing down into the maws of eternal death. No man need be ashamed of the Almighty and his plan for the salvation of the race—the gospel of Jesus Christ.

Parcels Post in Germany.

In the current issue of Farm and Fireside is the following description of the practical workings of parcels post in Germany:

"For over a hundred years Germany has had a parcels post, and since 1873 her present very effective and successful system. When I first came to Germany, I at once noticed the immense number of packages that were being loaded and unloaded at the railroad stations, and that special cars carrying nothing but these packages, and sometimes three and four such cars, were seen on every train. In the cities I frequently saw long lines of post-office wagons, and I could not understand why it took so many wagons to haul the mail. Upon inquiry, I was told in a very disinterested way that they were the 'paket post' wagons. Then it dawned upon me that this was parcels post, the thing that we have been beseeching Congress to establish and the thing that the Grange and other farm organizations in the United States have been endorsing in their resolutions for years. I had come here to study European agriculture and here was my opportunity to see what parcels post actually means to the farmers, and I began to investigate.

"At my boarding-house in central Germany I asked my landlady where she got her butter, which was of excellent quality. She told me it came from Holstein in the northwestern part of Germany, two hundred miles away. I asked if it was not expensive to have it come so far. 'Oh, no,' she said, 'we have it come by post and have gotten it every week for several years from the same man. You know we can send a package by post up to five kilograms (eleven pounds) to any place in Germany for fifty pfennigs (twelve cents.)' I then understood why I had seen such quantities of packages in the railroad stations and so many parcel-post wagons on the streets in the cities. I inquired about how commonly it was used for the marketing of farm products. Here in Halle, which is a city of about 200,000 population in the central part of Germany, I find that it is a very general practice for families to get their supply of butter, eggs and poultry sent to them every week through the parcels post, and they are delivered to their door just as a letter would be."

PRESENCE OF MIND.

The Way Two Englishmen Captured Four Hundred Prisoners.

Toward the close of the peninsular war 400 prisoners were captured by John Colborne, afterward Field Marshal Lord Seaton. Colborne, who was wounded at Talavera, had been disabled for some time, but in 1813 he was in active service again, and when Wellington's army crossed the frontier into France he performed what was indeed the most amazing feat of his career.

When riding, with no comrade but the famous Sir Henry Smith, separated from his column, he saw 400 French soldiers passing along a ravine below him. "The only way was to put a good face on the matter," he wrote. "So I went up to them, desiring them to surrender. The officer, thinking, of course, the column was behind me, surrendered his sword, saying theatrically, 'Je vous rends cette epee, qui a bien fait son devoir.' (I surrender this sword, which has done its duty well.) The 400 followed his example."

Sir Henry Smith used to declare that he had never seen such cool presence of mind as Colborne displayed on this occasion.—London Spectator.

Sanger's White Elephant.

"I was exhibiting 'the only white elephant ever seen in the western world,'" relates Lord George Sanger in his book, "Seventy Years a Showman," "when I was honored by a visit from King Edward, then Prince of Wales. After the performance I conducted the prince through the stables and showed him all there was to see. When we came to the 'white elephant' stall his royal highness suddenly turned to me and said, 'Sanger, is this really one of the sacred white elephants?'"

"To this I replied: 'Well, your royal highness, a showman is entitled to practice a little deception on the crowd, but I should never think of deceiving my future king. It is certainly a 'white' elephant—in fact, a very white elephant, but only because we give him a coat of special whitewash twice a day!'"

The Backteriologist.

A Richmond negro chanced to meet on the street a friend who complained of much "mis'ry." Indeed, the afflicted one was in despair, so "tuckered out" was he.

"'Wot seems to be de matter?' asked the first negro.
'Jim,' said the other with a moan and a gesture indicating the portion of his anatomy that was giving him so much trouble, 'It's got sech awful pains in mah back heeb!'"

Jim assumed an air of great solemnity and wisdom. "In dat case," said he, "dere's only one thing fo' yo' to do. Jee' yo' put yo's'f in de hands o' dat Doctah Blank. I hears dat he's de finest backteriologist in de whole souf."—New York Press.

Buddhism.

Buddhism started with Gautama Buddha about 900 years before the Christian era, and it numbers among its adherents more than a third of the human race. Buddhism is confined mainly to Asia—Manchuria, Mongolia, Korea, Tibet, China, Japan and the large islands off the Asiatic coast. Though born in India, Buddhism is not strong in that country today, being driven out by the old Hinduism of which it is the offshoot.

Distraction Needed.

"You don't seem to be making much progress in golf."
"No," replied Mr. Cumrox. "It worries. Do you know I sometimes wish that I was back in business so as to have something to take my mind off the game."—Washington Star.
