We wish to rectify the mistake in the items of last week in regard to the death of the infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Will Knox. It was three months old, instead of two, and a very peculiar incident in connection with its death. It died on the same day of the week and at the same hour it was born, Francis Hollister offered prayer at the home, instead of Rev. E. L. Dresser. THE ADOPTION DANCE.

Curious Ceremonial of Taking a Child into a Shawnee Tribe. The adoption dance is one of the ceremonial dances of the Shawnees.

MUCH OF LITTLE.

A London Sign That Seems Queer, but is Entirely Correct. The stranger in any city half a hundred years old, if he knew nothing of the city's history, would learn from many of the business signs that the second and third generations had succeeded to the business of father and grandfather.

Napoleon's Carriage.

The carriage in which Napoleon I. made his famous retreat from Moscow and in which he as emperor general set out from Paris in the campaign which closed at Waterloo is preserved in London by the trustees of the Wellington estate, the relic having formerly been the property of the "Iron Duke."

Planet Peculiarities.

The irregularities of the great group of minor planets forming a ring between Mars and Jupiter are sensational. Several hundred of them are now known to follow their normal orbits between the two great planets.

Good Grounds.

"Why do you wish to be divorced from your husband, madam?" "Well, for one thing, he comes home nearly every day of his life smelling of Limburger cheese."

Farm and Garden

PLANNING THE FARM HOME.

Worth Any Farmer's While to Pay Close Attention to the Details. In the introduction of a bulletin recently prepared by A. T. Irwin of the Iowa Agricultural college relating to the adornment of the farm home attention is called to the fact that neat, conveniently arranged buildings and a well kept lawn attractively bordered with trees and shrubs add greatly to the appearance and value of the farm and to the happiness of its occupants.

Photograph by Iowa State college.

BARE AND DESOLATE FARM HOME.

Buildings are put up, though the best results are obtained where things are planned right from the start. In selecting a site for the house good drainage is the first requisite. A south or east slope is generally to be preferred, while a north slope is undesirable.

The Useful Radish.

When sowing onion seed mix in some radish seed. It germinates more quickly than onions, and the rows can be cultivated before the weeds are fairly started.

Orchard and Garden.

The quickest growing tree for a shelter belt is the willow. Straw, stinky manure makes an ideal mulching fertilizer for both young and old apple trees.

Protect Sheep From Dogs.

A Minnesota farmer says that he keeps dogs away from his flock by putting up in his pasture the dummy of a man holding a stick for a gun.

Value of Mulch For Fruit.

With coarse mulch close around fruit plants and a fine earth mulch between the rows large crops may be carried safely through severe droughts.

THE SMALL FRUIT SUPPLY.

Very Few Farms Have Enough to Keep Home Tables Filled.

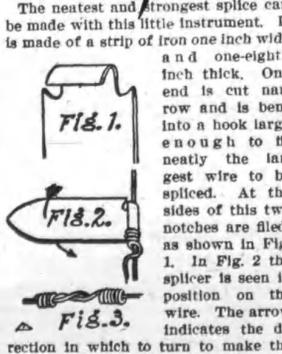

Very few farms are supplied with half enough small fruit. In the way of strawberries I have had all we could use for many years, but it is accomplished by setting out a new patch each alternate spring, says a correspondent of Orange Judd Farmer.

WANT FRUIT? SPRAY.

Everybody likes fruit. Fruit can no longer be grown without spraying. Nobody likes to spray. And so we are up against it. It is spray or go without fruit.

Excellent Wire Splicer.

The neatest and strongest splice can be made with this little instrument. It is made of a strip of iron one inch wide and one-eighth inch thick.

LET us think a little in millions—not, my speculative friend, millions of dollars, but, to begin with, in millions of miles.

Two Views of Life's Journey.

It is quite true, of course, in one sense, that the pleasures of this prodigious journey are largely out of sight. But do not the world and your fellow travelers take on a different aspect because you are not marooned in some corner of the universe, but travel in the midst of stars and suns?

AMBASSADOR W. W. ROCKHILL KNOWS THE ORIENT WELL

THE greater part of Ambassador Rockhill's long diplomatic career (he entered the service twenty-seven years ago) has been spent in China. His first appointment, at the age of thirty, was as second secretary of the American legation at Peking. He has made two scientific expeditions on behalf of the Smithsonian Institution to China and Tibet; was minister to China from 1905 to 1909, besides serving as special commissioner to China in 1900 and 1901, in which latter year he took part in the signing of the final protocol providing for the settlement of the Boxer troubles. Before becoming ambassador to St. Petersburg, from which post he was transferred to Turkey last summer, he had been minister to Greece and Roumania. Li Hung Chang was one of Mr. Rockhill's warm friends, and he is also well acquainted with Yuan Shih Kai, whom he met in the latter's first period of power. Mr. Rockhill is the author of various works on oriental subjects.

THE MERE MAN'S VIEWPOINT

MEMORIES THAT PLEASE

By BYRON WILLIAMS

I KNOW a woman who once had a beautiful little girl, all curls and dimples and winning ways. Suddenly death flashed down upon that household, and there was no longer the sound of childish laughter litting like a babbling brook over the moss covered stones. Throughout the rooms every glance brought recurring thoughts of the sweet bit of heaven flown back to the turquoise sky.

This woman, the mother, is a frail reed, unused to sorrow, and we feared that the loss would overwhelm her. But after the first shock she rallied, and never once have I known her to show other than a smiling face to the world. On one occasion, and only one, did she discuss her cross with me.

"Oh, when the full realization came to me," she said, "after the excitement of the funeral was over, I thought I should die of sorrow. Everything I touched, everywhere I went about the house, brought up her image. I felt I must meet her at every doorway or find her in every shadow.

"All day long I suffered, and when sleep had mercifully thrown its spell upon me I would dream of her, see apparitions in which she faded almost unto death, arousing me from my sleep and forcing from my paralyzed lips a shrill, troubled cry of anguish. I grew worse steadily and felt that I was losing my hold of things.

"And then I decided to make a determined effort to control myself. I sat one afternoon until the evening shadows came blurring my rescue. At last I resolved to force myself to think only of the pleasant things of my life. I went back to my girlhood, away back to the first recollections of my dear mother's knee. She was piecing a quilt—the log cabin pattern—and I was greatly interested in the bright colors of her pieces.

"I recalled how I hung at her knee and watched this wonderful quilt grow to completion. It is upstairs now, a well preserved memorial of mother's providence and tact. And then I forced my mind to wander along scenes of the golden days when, a pig tailed youngster, I gathered the wild phlox in Bailey's woods and found the first pasque flower on Waverly hill. I bade my unwilling feet once more stray out through the meadows to where the marsh marigolds grew, and in my fancy I returned with an armful of these golden blooms, happy and blithesome. I reviewed again the spellbinding schools, the romps in the woods, my first party and my first beau. His name was George Andrews. He was a fine looking fellow, but terribly bashful. One evening, when everybody in town knew of our calf love, he was to call for me at the church where we were having rhetorical exercises. He came in late and was taken to a chair in the main aisle just prior to my number on the program.

"Miss Hawks arose just as George took his chair and announced that Miss Cecil Brown would recite 'The First Blow,' but Miss Hawks' mind must have been wandering, for she almost said 'The First Bean,' stumbling a bit over the word. The result was instantaneous. Everybody who did not look at me turned to look at George, and everybody laughed except Deacon Storey, who didn't dare for fear he would break his store teeth. Well, poor George got as red in the face as an August sunset, and I shook like a leaf when I began to deliver 'The First Blow.' George deserted me after that night, and I have put him away in memory as my most bashful lover.

"From this first sweetheart my mind wandered down shady paths into real womanhood and real love. Once again I stood in the old arbor at my mother's home and felt the strong arms of my accepted fiance about me, felt his strong, constant kiss of affection upon my lips. I lived over again our wedding and our honeymoon. I recalled our successes and triumphed once more in my husband's achievements. I reviewed everything that was glad and happy in my life, and I stopped always at the breakers, turning aside into some path that led to happy memories.

"And thus I counted my blessings. The good to me was immediate. I realized that I would win back my hope and my life, and since that day I never have failed, when sorrow approached or threatened to send its shadow on ahead from out the terrible things of the past, to recall the happy memories of my life."

Lecturer Declares They Are Ahead of Other Nations in Municipal Government.

That western ideas of civilization have permeated Japan to such an extent that it is rapidly forging ahead of some of the recognized leading nations of the world was the declaration made by Harvey N. Shepard of Boston, former attorney general of Massachusetts, in an address on "Japanese Municipal Governments" to the members of the Philadelphia City Club. Mr. Shepard also declared that the Japanese people were far ahead of Americans in solving municipal affairs.

"In no other countries on the face of the earth," he said, "are the municipal governments closer to the will of the people than they are in the Flowery Kingdom, and graft and extravagances such as often charged against the officials of cities and towns in our own country are practically unknown. While the municipalities of Japan are of a more recent development than our own they are founded on a firmer basis to further the prosperity of the people. Patterned after the cities of France and Prussia their administration corresponds greatly to that of the municipalities of those two European countries. All over Japan there is a marked progress in municipal affairs. Public works are being forwarded and they are constructing good roads and developing their harbors."

Mr. Shepard spent many years in Japan and studied closely the phases of life in that empire. "As skilled workmen," he said, "the Japanese are rapidly becoming proficient and are equal to the skilled workmen of our own country. There is no child labor in the factories, and because of this wages have increased perceptibly. While modern and ancient civilizations are contrasted sharply with each other in some parts of the Japanese islands, they are rather a modern country with telegraphs, railroads and other conveniences such as we in America enjoy."

SEES ONLY THE BIG CITIES

Brooklyn Minister Would Have Them Beautified as the Centers of Our Civilization.

Dr. Hillis of Brooklyn, while holding pronounced views on the disgraceful condition at present prevailing in many American cities, has very optimistic views of the future.

"There is a new spirit abroad in the nations of the earth," he said. "A spirit of revolt against the ugliness of large towns is now sweeping over the Old World and the New. This revolt has taken on the majesty of a destroying wave. London and Paris, Berlin and Vienna are tired of the old ugliness."

"In Germany alone I have found this summer twenty volumes fresh from the press, with the ink scarcely dry on the pages, on the new science of town planning and city building."

"In our own country 180 cities are now organized and formally committed to a commission for laying out the lines of growth for twenty years to come."

"All of our cities of the first class having over 1,000,000 population, most of our cities of the second class, with 100,000 population to 1,000,000, and more than 100 cities of the third class have their organized municipal commission on city building."

"The time was when our civilization was largely rooted in the country, in the farm and the rural village, while the city was only a ganglion and nerve center rather than the brain."

"Now every year the pull of the metropolis upon the heartstrings of boys and girls in rural districts is a stronger pull. The city is the center of business, with manufacturing and financial life. The city is the home of music, art and eloquence. The city is home of the college, the library, professional schools, and for all these reasons it is quite certain that as the city goes so will go the republic."

Free Shade Trees.
Free trees will be distributed to the householders of Denver by the city on municipal arbor day in April. The expense of purchasing the saplings will come from the streets and boulevards fund, as provided in the mayor's budget. It is believed that about 15,000 trees, mostly maples and elms, will be given away.

Last year's distribution was a great success. The trees were in excellent condition, and practically all were planted, according to the rules laid down by the city forester. It is estimated that 88 per cent. of last year's crop are thriving.—Denver Municipal Facts.

Move in Right Direction.
Galveston, Texas, which is doing its best to improve every aspect of civic life, is not satisfied with the thatched huts in which the poorer Mexican population lives. There is a feeling that no building should be uncomfortable or unsightly, even if it is in the sections of the city which are inhabited by the "foreign element."

NEW NEWS OF YESTERDAY

When William C. Whitney Would Not Trust Anybody.

In Making His Generous Contributions to Political Campaign Funds He Never Took Chances, Even With His Friends.

By E. J. EDWARDS.

The late William C. Whitney, secretary of the navy during Cleveland's first term as president, and before and after that period in his career one of the leading Democratic politicians of the nation, was one of the most generous distributors of campaign funds the country has ever known, and he was as successful in collecting funds for campaign purposes as any man of his generation in either party, with the possible exception of Governor Marshall Jewell of Connecticut, who was chairman of the Republican national committee during the presidential campaign of 1880. Yet, despite his lavishness of distribution, Mr. Whitney knew what he was about every time he distributed campaign funds. He was not one of those who disbursed campaign subscriptions lavishly and then was indifferent as to the uses to which they were put. He knew of the temptation to which some politicians yielded of keeping for personal purposes a part of the campaign funds that passed through their hands—an easy thing to do in the old days, when no detailed record of disbursements was made.

Mr. Whitney was a firm believer in the expediency campaign contributions by large corporations that might have favors to ask of the politicians or of the legislature. He warmly approved of the method pursued by the late Henry O. Havemeyer, president of the so-called sugar trust, who testified before a congressional committee at Washington in 1814, when the trust was on the coals of publicity, that his company was accustomed to sea apart a lump sum when political campaigns were pending, and then, dividing it into two equal parts, give one-half to the Republican and one half to the Democratic party, simply for the purpose of obtaining "protection." When Mr. Whitney was in the brains of the old Metropolitan traction system of New York, Democrat as he was, he nevertheless recognized with perfect impartiality each of the political parties. The Democratic party received precisely the same contribution in the name of that company which the Republican party received, and in each case the contribution was made with the implied understanding that the company would be "protected" against adverse legislation and against the approach of political blackmailers.

The late Senator Thomas C. Platt used to tell his friends with much chuckling an incident which came under his own observation, illustrating both the generosity and the subtlety of Mr. Whitney with respect to campaign contributions.

"I received information one day that Mr. Whitney would be glad to see me at a certain office and at a certain hour," said Mr. Platt. "I did not doubt what the purpose of the summons was, for a campaign was under way. So I went to the office named at the hour appointed. Mr. Whitney received me cordially and then he asked: 'But where is Chauncey? I sent for him.'"

"Chauncey who?" I started to ask in reply, when suddenly it flashed over me that Mr. Whitney had also sent for Chauncey M. Depew, and did not propose to go on with the business he had with me until Depew was present. So once more a message was sent to Depew that Mr. Whitney wanted to see him, and when he had arrived in the presence of both of us Mr. Whitney made in behalf of his traction company a campaign contribution to the Republican party. And he said to us very frankly, as he handed out the money, that he was treating both parties exactly alike—that the Republicans were getting no more and no less than the Democrats were.

"But note how shrewd he was; he was so shrewd and careful that he didn't purpose to pay over the contribution to just one member of the party—another member had to be present also when the contribution was made. He didn't distrust me any more than he did Chauncey; he trusted us both, but, nevertheless, he wasn't going to pay over that money until we both were present and could verbally acknowledge receipt of the sum. And so far as I know, he was always that way; he never took any chances even with men whom he trusted. He was the shrewdest, as well as the most generous dispenser of campaign funds of any man I ever met."

Prophecy Came True.

In the June American Magazine there is reproduced an extract from a conversation held in 1827 by Goethe, the great German poet and a friend of his, in which Goethe made the following extraordinary prophecies: "It may be foreseen that the United States, with its decided predilection to the West, will, in thirty or forty years, have occupied and peopled the large tract of land beyond the Rocky Mountains. It may, furthermore, be foreseen that along the whole coast of the Pacific Ocean, where nature has already formed the most capacious and secure harbors, important commercial towns will gradually arise, for the furtherance of a great intercourse between China and the East Indies and the United States. In such a case, it would not only be desirable, but almost necessary, that a more rapid communication should be maintained between the eastern and western shores of North America, both by merchant-ships and men-of-war, than has hitherto been possible with the tedious, disagreeable and expensive voyage round Cape Horn. I therefore repeat, that it is absolutely indispensable for the United States to effect a passage from the Mexican Gulf to the Pacific Ocean; and I am certain they will do it.

"Would that I might live to see it—but I shall not. I should like to see another thing—a junction of the Danube and the Rhine. But this undertaking is so gigantic that I have doubts of its completion, particularly when I consider our German resources. And thirdly, and lastly, I should wish to see England in possession of a canal through the Isthmus of Suez.

"Would I could live to see these three great works! It would be very worth the trouble to last some fifty years more for the very purpose."

A Great Year for Union.

The annual meeting of the Law and Order Union of the state of New York was recently held at Utica and was a most interesting session. The report of the State Superintendent, the Rev. F. E. Tower, D. D., of Albany, N. Y., awakened much enthusiasm. He was given a rising vote of thanks for the splendid achievement of the Law and Order Union of the state during the past year.

Under the management there have been thirty indictments, and nineteen convictions, with fines and forfeits amounting to $1,550, two jail sentences, one of thirty days and another of ninety days.

When we consider that the liquor interests possess the means to engage the most skillful lawyers in the State, with ample funds for defense, we get some idea what it has meant for the superintendent to bring about the remarkable results as stated above. Yet the Law and Order Union closes the fiscal year with every bill paid and fully free of debt. No wonder that the clergy and laymen of the state are turning to the Law and Order Union to champion their interests against law-breakers and lawlessness.

An Aged Document.

Chas. G. Barger of Five Corners has in his possession an interesting and aged document—the military commission of his father, Phileman Barger, which was issued in March, 1820. We give it in full below. It will be noticed that the commission is signed by DeWitt Clinton, the seventh governor of New York State, and who served from 1817 to 1822.

The people of the State of New York by the grace of God, free and independent: To Phileman Barger greeting:

We, reposing especial trust and confidence, as well in your patriotism, conduct and loyalty, as in your integrity and readiness to do us good and faithful service, have appointed and constituted, and by these presents do appoint and constitute you the said Phileman Barger captain of a company in the 21st Regiment of Infantry of our said State: You are therefore to take the said company into your charge and care, as captain thereof, and duly to exercise the officers and soldiers of that company in arms, who are hereby commanded to obey you as their captain; and you are also to observe and follow such orders and directions as you shall from time to time receive from our General and Commander in Chief of the Militia of our said State, or any other your superior officer, according to the rules and discipline of war, in pursuance of the trust reposed in you; and for so doing this shall be your commission, for and during our good pleasure, to be signified by our council of appointment.

In testimony whereof, We have caused our seal for Military Commissions to be hereunto affixed: Witness our trusty and well-beloved DeWitt Clinton, esquire, governor of our said State, General and Commander in Chief of all the Militia, and Admiral of the Navy of the same, by and with the advice and consent of our said council of appointment, at our City of Albany, the seventeenth day of February in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and twenty and in the 44th year of our independence.

DEWITT CLINTON.

Passed the secretary's office, the 1st day of March, 1820

Was Born at King Ferry.

Loton L. Downing died at his home in Moravia, May 23, after a long illness, aged 57 years.

The deceased was the son of Marshall and Angellette Downing and was born at King Ferry, N. Y., March 3, 1855. When a young child his parents moved to Locke, where they remained until 1865 when the family took up their residence in Moravia. For fourteen years Mr. Downing was in the employ of the Mergenthaler Linotype company in Brooklyn and during that period he was not absent from his duty for a single day. Five years ago failing health obliged him to give up the work and he returned to Moravia. He is survived by an aged mother, a sister, and three brothers. The funeral was held on Sunday last and interment was made in Indian Mound cemetery.

Armor-Plated Boys.

It is important these days that there should be armor-plated boys. A boy needs to be iron-clad on:

His lips—against the first taste of liquor.

His ears—against impure words.

His hands—against wrong-doing.

His heart—against going with bad company.

His eyes—against dangerous books and pictures.

His pocket—against dishonest money.

His tongue—against evil speaking.

The Christian armor on her citizens gives more security to the Nation than all the armor-plates that are on her ships.

An Inheritance

Should It Go to the Church or to an Heir of the Third Generation?

By F. A. MITCHEL

"Mrs. Whitridge," said Mr. Trevor, "I have called to ask your assistance in a very important matter to me. You have six daughters, all of whom are well married. While I am willing to admit, madam, that these ladies are most attractive, I cannot but attribute something of the management of their matrimonial affairs to you."

"You are quite right, Mr. Trevor. Many of the best women in the world are not married, and many of the most undesirable are. I believe this is due more to a lack of management for the girls on the part of their mothers when they come to a marriageable age than any other cause. My daughters, as you say, are by no means unattractive, but the fact that they are all well and happily married is due far more to management than their own charms. What can I do for you, Mr. Trevor?"

"I have but one son, as you know—Arthur. I have spent my whole life in building up a fortune and from my boy's birth have set my heart in handing it down through him to my descendants. He disappointed me by taking orders and now, being very high church, has declared for celibacy and refuses to marry."

"I see. You wish me to take such measures as will break his resolution."

"If you will be so kind, Mrs. Whitridge, I would like you to throw in his way some young woman of fine character, of irreproachable reputation, of intellect."

"I beg your pardon, Mr. Trevor. I thought you said you wished me to manage the affair."

"So I do."

"Well, then, permit me to say that I think you must put up with a daughter-in-law of entirely different caliber from the kind you name or none at all. It does not strike me that such a woman would serve our purpose in the present case. I have known you for years and am sure no son of such a father can be reasoned or persuaded into changing a resolution, once made."

"How is he to be handled?"

"Bamboozled."

"You flatter me indirectly, Mrs. Whitridge."

"A strong man doesn't need a strong woman."

"I see."

"I have in mind a young lady who at school stood at the foot of her class, but as a flirt was at the head. She has had many offers, but if she is a fool at books she has practical sense enough to wish for an establishment when she marries. If you desire it I will endeavor, with your assistance, to make a match between your son and her."

"Any port in a storm. What I want is an heir of the third generation."

"Very well. To begin I shall invite you and your son to dinner. The young lady will be present. When you have left us tell your son that you have been much pleased with her and you wish she might become your daughter-in-law. He will demur, and you will insist. After a number of conversations on the matter you will tell him that either he must give up inheriting your fortune or marry the girl of your choice, provided, of course, that she will have him."

"He wishes my fortune for the purpose of building a cathedral."

"So much the better. I shall see something of him myself and perhaps may be able to make certain suggestions."

"For what purpose?"

"To entangle him."

These preliminary arrangements having been made, Mr. Trevor arose to go.

"By the bye, Mrs. Whitridge," he said, "I believe you are managing director of St. Luke's hospital."

"I am."

"You have not called on me for any help. I should esteem it a favor if you would permit me to send you a check."

"I should be very grateful."

"I will give you $10,000 now and $20,000—be heitated."

"On the first of the year?"

"No; on the day of my son's wedding."

"Thank you very much, Mr. Trevor. I think we understand each other. You will receive invitations for dinner within a few days."

The preliminaries to this scheme of involvement were carried out as they had been laid down by Mrs. Whitridge. Miss Annette Seaton, commonly called "Nan" by her intimate friends, was the girl selected by Mrs. Whitridge for drawing the Rev. Arthur Trevor from celibacy. A month passed, at the end of which it was reported that Mr. Trevor, Sr., had set his heart on Nan Seaton for a daughter-in-law, but his son objected naturally to one who was to be described in two words, "stupid" and "pretty." It was admitted that she had been fancied by men of her own caliber, but a match with one of the spiritual and intellectual power of Arthur Trevor was preposterous.

One day the clergyman called on Mrs. Whitridge for assistance. "My dear Mrs. Whitridge," he said, "by introducing Arthur and me to Miss Seaton you are being unintentionally to the church of a cathedral I propose to build with my inheritance. Please see that she does not marry any other man than me."

"That's too bad. Does your father consider that the young lady may have other plans for her future?"

"Oh, yes; he says that if she won't have me he must give up his plan."

"And if she accepts?"

"In that event if I don't wed her father will disinherit me."

"And how can I help you?"

"You might say to Miss Seaton that by refusing me she will be instrumental in saving to the church the finest Episcopal cathedral on this continent."

"My dear Mr. Trevor, I would advise you to make yourself an appeal to Miss Seaton's higher nature. I know, though I suppose I should not tell you, that she admires you very much. That will make her sacrifice nobler."

"Do you really think that, Mrs. Whitridge?"

"I am sure of it. But I am violating a confidence in letting you know her feelings."

"And you advise me to tell Miss Seaton that this great work of mine depends upon her refusing an offer of marriage from me?"

"I do; but, of course, if you put her on her pride and she refuses you because you do not wish her on personal grounds your father will not consider that excusable in you."

"Certainly not. It is a very delicate matter to put to a young lady. That's why I come to you, hoping you would do it for me."

"I am sure your father would not be satisfied except by your making Miss Seaton a proposal, intimating that if you had not embraced the doctrine of celibacy you would be happy to have her accept you. It would also, I think, be legitimate for you to give her the alternative of making the sacrifice for the church. It would be a great satisfaction to you to have so worked on her religious nature as to induce her to give up a husband that the church might have a cathedral."

Mr. Trevor was only partially persuaded, but he said he would consider the matter of putting the case to Miss Seaton. Mrs. Whitridge went so far as to suggest that if he would do so at her home she might be of some assistance in the matter. Upon this assurance he asked her to invite the young lady there on the following evening and give him the necessary opportunity.

Now there was as much chance of Miss Seaton's giving up an attractive husband and a fortune that the church might have a cathedral as there would be of a small boy giving the lion's share of his candy to his playmates. She dined the next day with Mrs. Whitridge, who posted her on the sacrifice the clergyman hoped she would make.

When Mr. Trevor called in the evening he found the two ladies in a cozy little side parlor illuminated by dimly shaded lamps. Mrs. Whitridge soon after arose to leave them, the clergyman casting a wistful look after her as she retired. She drew a portiere after her that Mr. Trevor might submit his proposition without observation or interruption.

It was nearly an hour before he got his courage up to a point that warranted a beginning. Then he spoke of those persons, most of them saints, who had made sacrifices. From that he spoke of his own resolution to give up for the church wife and children. Then he dwelt on the temples that had from time immemorial been erected for the worship of a divine power; the myriad of souls that had found comfort in them.

Here he paused to note the effect on his listener and was much encouraged. He saw in her eyes a beautiful far-away look which seemed as if she were gazing into heaven, seeming to drink in the lesson as from a divine teacher. She had drawn nearer to him, so near that he inhaled her warm breath and a delicate violet perfume that hung about her.

Then he began the work for which he had been preparing her. He spoke of his father's wishes, of the fortune which he desired to turn into stone and mortar for the Lord's service. Then, having dwelt on what a beautiful thing it would be for her to resign this fortune—he modestly left himself out of the question—to the church, he made his proposal.

Meanwhile a few invited guests had been coming in and were received by the hostess in the drawing room. While they were chatting a sob was heard coming from the little side parlor. Mrs. Whitridge started.

"I must see who's in trouble," she said, and, crossing the hall, she drew the portiere that screened the clergyman and Nan Seaton, exposing them to her guests. Nan was sobbing with her head on the man's shoulder, while he clasped her in an endeavor to console her.

The trap was sprung. Leaving his companion, the clergyman, red as a turkey cock, stepped forward and asked to be congratulated on his engagement.

When Mrs. Whitridge and Miss Seaton were alone for a few moments previous to the latter's departure for her home escorted by her fiancé, Miss Seaton asked:

"Did you hear the signal?"

"Yes; you gave it loud enough to wake the dead."

The morning after the clergyman wedded Nan Seaton Mrs. Whitridge announced to the director of her hospital that she had received a donation of $20,000.

The Rev. Mr. Trevor is rising in the ministry. He sometimes speaks of gifts he would like to make with the fortune his father left him, but receives no encouragement from his wife. She has given the house of Trevor an heir in the third generation and proposes that she shall come into his whole inheritance.

SATURDAY NIGHT SERMONS

BY REV. SAMUEL W. PURVIS, D.D.

THE FATHERHOOD OF GOD.

Text: "Our Father who art in heaven"—Matt. vi, 9.

This is the simple though grand beginning of a grand though simple prayer, so simple that a child may lip the words and understand, so grand that the wisest of the race cannot fathom its meaning. One of two things is true—either Christ was juggling with words when he called God our Father and we are only kin with the beast of the field or else he stated a tremendous truth that makes us kin with the great Lord of the universe. Then earth is but the beautiful carpet across which we walk the narrow isthmus of time from the eternity that was to that which is to come. I know that Christ merely restated the doctrine of the Fatherhood of God. The Jews frequently used it figuratively. "Like as a father pitieth his children." Eleven times in a single chapter Jesus repeated the endearing title. It's the key to our greatest problems. I think the hungry heart of the world is craving to experience this truth.

The Universal Father.

And he is the God of all—Caucasian, Mongolian, African, Indian and Malay. The sun does not shine for a few trees and flowers, but for the wide world's joy. The lonely pine on the mountain top waves its somber boughs and cries, "Thou art my sun!" The modest little meadow violet lifts its cup of blue and whispers with its perfume breath, "Thou art my sun!" And the grain in a thousand fields rustles in the wind and makes answer, "Thou art my sun!" So God makes his face to shine toward humanity, and there is no creature so poor or so low that he may not look up with childlike confidence and say, "Thou art my Father!" I have met men to whom God was a thunderstorm in their sky. They approached him only with umbrellas of fear. I pity them.

Like a little Indian reservation orphan child in our home, who seemed to shrink away from every approach of kindness in fear it might be a blow, so some men seem to interpret God's arm is always uplifted to strike, never extended in welcome as the Father of the prodigal. There is one thing more pitiable, almost worse than the cold, darkness and loneliness of atheism, and that is to kneel down and say "Our Father" and then to get up and live the life of an orphan; to say, "I believe in God the Father Almighty," but he's far off in heaven. Then we go on fretting and fearing—having a Father, yet fatherless.

Resembling a Father.

God is the accessible. When Lincoln was burdened with the cares of a great nation and the agonies of a fearful war sometimes great dignitaries found him difficult of access, but little Tad, his boy, could come when the door to others was closed. If God is simply crushing, grinding, impersonal force, then the infidel is not bitter enough. If God is the all-wise, all-loving Father, then the Christian is understating it. I can now glory in my hardships since a kind father is directing his child. He is not merely a bright essence inebriate, but a personal God. Some people are proud because they are sons or daughters of a millionaire, a senator, a governor or a president; thousands throng London streets to see the son of a king. I would rather be reckoned with the lowest and meanest of the children of God than take rank with the crowned kings of earth without him. He hath made us in his image. Bands were playing, crowds were cheering at a Chicago parade. A sturdy, thickset, square jawed, bearded soldier was astride a horse. "It is General Fred Grant." Said a bronze button veteran near. "He reminds me so much of his father!" Wonder if any of us Christians make folks think of God? Sometimes the world gets hold of us and we become warped and gnarled and twisted. The image of God in us becomes mighty blurred and indistinct.

The Swift Flying Answer.

He bears your prayers and answers them while the world swings on. The Pennsylvania limited was thundering on eastward of Pittsburgh. "Why, we've been switched to one of the inner four tracks," remarked a Pullman passenger to the conductor. "Here comes the reason," answered the latter as a "special" passed like a flash on the outer track, both running with great speed, the latter a swift engine with two cars, in one a young girl and a friend. The special was an answer to prayer. A wife was dangerously sick in a cottage in the Alleghenies. "I want to see Ethel before I die." The president of that great system beckoned a servant, handed him a slip of paper. In a few moments the prayer was being answered and was completed without a hitch on that finely organized road. If the president of an earthly organization can use his power for a deed of love shall not the far more loving Father use his almighty power for his child? His power is omnipotent. The giant Dreadnought is but an eggshell on the crest of the typhoon. Man's greatest buildings are but leaves before the breath of the cyclone. His proud cities dissolve at the stroke of the earthquake. No athlete is safe in health. There's death in a drop of water. Blinded with mist and the dash of rain, man enters his Gethsemane. Alone? No; Angels of God come and minister to him. God is near.

EXPERIENCES OF ONE NURSE

Baroness Von Hansen Tells of Work Performed Among Men in English Hospital—Labor Is Joy.

Interesting echoes of the great Anti-Alcohol congress held in London continue to come to hand.

Baroness Von Hansen, at the public meeting by the congress is reported to have given her own experience in temperance work as a hospital nurse. In the wards she found the men, as they were recovering, very ready to listen and open to influence. She told them that she was a keen abstainer, and why she was anxious to persuade everyone else to be so. Diagrams were obtained showing the effect of alcohol on the various organs, and hung up where the men could see them, and as she moved from one patient to another the baroness would explain or draw attention to some point. It was surprising how the interest grew, and one after another resolved to sign the pledge.

The baroness after giving some touching incidents of such work among the patients, proceeded to explain that her family had thought her much too intent upon total abstinence, and had therefore consented to her taking up nursing in the hospital to draw her thoughts in another direction, adding: "But the stay in the hospital—seeing so much sickness and disease that had come through the drinking habits, made me keener than ever. I would I could persuade all nurses to become total abstainers, to learn all about this question, and to speak gently and earnestly to the patients, and explain why alcohol is hurtful. We nurses have such great opportunity, our patients are so ready to learn, and we can do so much to help them to better ways. There is great happiness to be found in this work. I would like to have all sisters and nurses in hospitals have a keen desire to take it up. We can very greatly help this great temperance reform. If each patient returns to his home an abstainer, and keen to persuade others, and to tell 'what our sister told us.' Then our labors will be one of joy, and will be its own reward."

Lowers Bodily Temperature.

As long ago as 1866 Sir B. W. Richardson, M. D., laid the facts of many careful investigations before the British association, all of which went to show that alcohol lowered bodily temperature. These were questioned but proved perfectly accurate, and showed that under the influence of alcohol the temperature of the body was liable to fall from three-quarters to three degrees (Cantor lectures, page 70). This condition was proved not transient, but persisted for several days.

Abstainers Effective Workers.

Sven Hedlin, the Central Asia explorer, says in his last book: "In a caravan a drop of wine or brandy should not be found. To be dependent on these things is a curse, and especially objectionable on a journey which demands great exertion. The people, whether inside or outside the borders of civilization, who abstain from alcohol are the most competent and effective workers."

TEMPERANCE NOTES

DIRE INFLUENCE OF ALCOHOL

Prof. Harald Westergaard, Noted Statistician of Copenhagen, Gives Interesting Figures.

The noted statistician, Prof. Harald Westergaard of the University of Copenhagen, is regarded as the greatest living authority on the statistics of mortality. He has just given a course of lectures in Christiania on the relation of drink to death, which throw a striking light on the practical result which such a reduction in consumption as that recorded in the Faroes, means for a people. He says: "The influence of alcohol on health is far greater than we have hitherto imagined."

According to the just published report of the Danish commission, of every hundred deaths among Danish men twenty-three are caused by alcohol. In the most valuable periods of life the mortality is even greater. Thus:

Age.	Male deaths.
35-40.	34.8 in 100 are due to alcohol.
40-45.	31.1 in 100 are due to alcohol.
45-50.	37.7 in 100 are due to alcohol.
50-55.	38.7 in 100 are due to alcohol.

On the basis of these government figures, which are doubtless below the actual level, as doctors are usually reluctant to report alcohol as the cause of a death, Professor Westergaard has worked out how much each of the 350,000,000 potters of brandy consumed yearly in Denmark shortens life. He concludes this to be eleven hours. If alcohol mortality, concludes Professor Westergaard, could be eliminated a man of twenty would have on the lowest average 19.3 years to look forward to instead of 15.4. Further, one-third of all the accidents in Denmark would vanish and two-fifths of the suicides.

In view of such facts it is not to be wondered that Prof. Dr. Gaupp of Tubingen should exclaim: "It is our earnest duty to drive these drinking customs from the world with every means at our disposal."

NOTES from MEADOWBROOK FARM

Screen alfalfa seed. Destroy the little weeds. Good dairymen keep no dogs. Horses can be pastured on alfalfa. The right kind of seed is half the crop. Kill the small weeds and there will be no big ones. Chicks raised in brooders are not bothered with lice. Grass was never more welcome to cows than this spring. Broiler prices are somewhat better than they were last month. It is well to assume when chickens are dying that the disease is contagious. Put a slatted frame over the drinking trough and the water will be kept cleaner. The early spring chicken catches the good price. Raise early spring chickens. Plant good seeds. Poor seeds are dear, no difference what price you pay for them. Get the incubator at work on the broiler crop as early as possible. Delay means loss. No incubator can make good hatches from poor eggs, that is, those lacking in fertility. More incubator hatches are spoiled by the anxiety of the operator than from any other one cause. Lard, vaseline and enough sulphur to make a paste makes a good remedy for sorehead in chicks. Vegetables delight in having a warm, deep, rich and mellow soil, and will pay generously for the privilege. Lice feed on the young chickens--that is one great reason that they fail to make the growth they should. Carefulness in dressing poultry pays for the extra pains taken. The pin feathers must all be removed. There is genuine satisfaction in owning thoroughbred stock and they cost no more to feed. Go in for the best. Worry along without a trap nest, but keep your eyes open for the best layers, and set their eggs next spring. A little ground charcoal mixed with the chicks' feed now and then will help keep away digestive troubles. Three rules for success in gardening are: Freedom from weeds, thinning out, and keeping the ground mellow. With reasonably good seed and a fairly well prepared seed bed, about 20 pounds of alfalfa seed is required per acre.

It is claimed by some onion growers that carbolic acid emulsion gives satisfactory results in fighting the onion maggot.

Nitrate of soda is the most quickly available source of nitrogen for plants, but buyers should steer clear of low grade nitrate.

Crimson clover makes fairly good ensilage, but, like all plants rich in protein, it develops a strong and rather objectionable odor.

Government reports state that more up-to-date agricultural machinery has been sold the last ten years than during any previous ten years.

It is not safe to pasture either cattle or sheep on alfalfa, as they are liable to bloat when it is fed green. Feed them the hay or practice rolling.

As the price of land increases the condition of the manner of farming must change, provided, of course, one has to make interest on the money value of the land.

The young chicks which are to make our winter layers should be hatched from the middle of March to the middle of May, depending on the breed.

When a man does not mind the bleat of a sheep that wants more feed, salt or water he has not the true spirit of the shepherd. Neither is he worthy of the name of shepherd if he does not do at once those things which should be attended to, but says he will do them tomorrow or some other day.

CHANGED IDEAS OF GOD. In proportion as the centuries have piled up humanity the fierce gods at first imagined by men gradually have given place to sweeter, less coarse and undoubtedly less inaccurate conceptions. In proportion as we pity one another the fraternal pity preached by Buddha and Jesus Christ has made way amid the more ferocious tendencies of our souls, and the notion has become stronger within us that somewhere there must be supreme pity to hear our cries. Thus the sanctuaries have become more and more places of supplication and tears. It is true that in our days there is a layer of half intelligent, quarter instructed persons whom the present social scheme makes rise to the surface and who, in the name of science, wander uncomprehendingly toward the most imbecile materialism. But in the continuous evolution the reign of such poor beings will be merely a negligible episode of slipping back. The supreme pity toward which we extend desperate hands must exist, whatever it is called. It somewhere must be capable of understanding at the moment death separates us, our clamor and our infinite distress; otherwise the creation, which no longer is reasonably attributed to an act of unconsciousness, would be cruelly inconceivable because too odious and cowardly.--Pierre Loti.

NONSENSE DEFENDED. We consecrate a great deal of nonsense because it was allowed by great men.--Emerson. I know that dancin's nonsense, but if you stick at everything because it's nonsense you wanna go far in this life.--George Elliot. I find nonsense singularly refreshing.--Talleyrand.

Volcano Became A Lake.

Unique among the natural wonders of America is the lake in Crater Lake National Park in Oregon, which is described in a publication entitled "Geological History of Crater Lake" just issued by the Department of the Interior. The traveler who, from the rocky rim of the lake, looks across its limpid waters to the cliffs beyond stands where once the molten lava of Mount Mazama boiled and seethed in its efforts to find an outlet, for Crater Lake is all that remains of a great volcano that ages ago reared its lofty summit high above the crest of the Cascade Range.

Before the Cascade Range existed the region now included in the State of Oregon was a great lava plateau that extended from the Rocky Mountains to the present Coast Range. Gradually mountain-making forces became operative; the surface of the plateau was arched and there rose the great mountain system which is now known as the Cascade Range. With the hardening of the crust the centers of eruptions became fewer until they were confined to a few high mountains that were built up by the flows of molten lava. In this way were created Hood, Rainier, and Mazama, from whose sides and lofty summits streams of lava poured across a desolate land. Hood and Rainier still lift their snowy caps to the clouds and fling a defiant challenge to the mountaineer to scale their steep, ice-covered slopes. Mazama alone is gone, engulfed in the earth from which it came. In what is left of its caldera lies Crater Lake.

Mount Mazama in its prime rose to a height of over 14,000 feet above the sea. Mount Scott, which towers above Crater Lake on the east, was only a minor cone on the slope of Mount Mazama. The portion of the mountain that has been destroyed was equal in size to Mount Washington in New Hampshire and had a volume of seventeen cubic miles.

From the crest of the rim surrounding the lake the traveler beholds 20 miles of unbroken cliffs which range from 500 to nearly 2,000 feet in height. The clear waters of the lake reflect the vivid colors of the surrounding walls and whether in the soft glow of early morning, in the glare of the noonday sun, or in the rosy hues of the dying day, the view is one of awe inspiring grandeur and beauty.

This publication contains a detailed account of the formation of this wonderful work of nature. It is well illustrated by photographs and is written in non-technical language so that it may be readily understood by the reader who has not the advantage of scientific training.

Will Open Next Year.

"When the Panama Canal is thrown open for the passage of vessels, which will be, I am confident, the latter part of next year, as Colonel Goethals has estimated, it will be completely fortified," said Jesse Hyatt, of Colon, a former Washingtonian, who has spent many years in the Canal Zone. Mr. Hyatt has been in Washington for several weeks. He knows as much about the work on the big ditch as any man, because he has seen the work progress from the time the Americans took the canal over from the French, and he saw the French themselves at work.

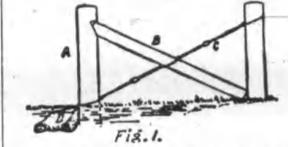

"When this government took hold of the digging of the canal, I knew it would be finished," continued Mr. Hyatt, "because Americans do not start anything they cannot complete. But I was hardly prepared to see my own countrymen go ahead so rapidly. There never has been anything like it in the history of the world, and it is no wonder that the undertaking is amazing to foreigners. Colonel Goethals is not given to extravagance in making statements. If anything I should be inclined to think that the date of the opening will be earlier than Colonel Goethals estimates. Of course, this does not mean that the canal will be thrown open as a highway for all vessels, but merely that it will be possible to send a ship through. The water will be turned in. There is not the slightest doubt in my mind that the Panama Canal will be a paying institution."—Washington Post.

SOLVE CORNER POST PROBLEM

Use of Heavy Stone or Concrete Post Will Be Practically Everlasting—Method Is Shown.

An old method of setting a firm corner post, but one not known by everybody, is the "dead man" way, which is fully described and illustrated by Carl Brann, of Linn county, Kansas, in the Homestead. The corner post is set and the brace extended to the bottom of the second post in the usual way as shown in Fig. 1, but the guy wires from the top of the second post pass on both sides of the brace and of the corner post near the ground, and being crossed back of the post pass around a large stone or piece of durable wood buried in the ground. These wires are then twisted between the posts to make them tight and hold firmly in place about the brace and corner post. A corner so set cannot pull up. However, as the best galvanized wire will rust off in a few years in the ground the life of such a corner is not so long as may be desired. The use of a heavy stone or concrete post set in the same manner without the "dead man" will be practically everlasting, but in many cases the cost of the stone or concrete post, or some other consideration makes the plan impracticable. The following method (shown in Fig. 2) has been successful where it was impossible to dig deeply. Three posts were set at a distance of ten or twelve feet apart. Then the brace and guy wires were attached to the second and third posts in the manner usually employed between the corner and second posts. A guy wire was run from the top of the second post to the corner post at the ground and a stout board or 2x4 nailed to the upper ends of the first and second posts. The wire of the fence was then stretched to the second post and wrapped around it. The space between that and the corner post was closed with fencing boards or wire, as was most convenient.

MAINTENANCE OF GOOD ROADS
Cannot Be Kept in Proper Condition Unless Kept Well Drained and Free From Holes.
No earth road can be maintained in good condition unless it be so constructed as to drain well, and unless it be kept free from ruts and holes. The best method of maintaining an earth road, especially a prairie road, is by the systematic use of the road drag. A sand road is never good under any circumstances, but certainly is not improved by crowning. A sand road is at its best when moist, so it should be left flat. No one wants a sand road, so, if possible, clay should be added to, and mixed with the sand making what is known as a sand clay road. The old way, and it is used today by many, of filling a mud hole with brush with a little earth on top, cannot be too strongly condemned, and is only permissible in cases of emergency when it is impossible to drain the hole or to get sand or stone to fill it. The overseer or foreman should in dry weather center his work on such places until the road is raised to a sufficient height to drain well. Many overseers have brush hauled two miles to fill a mud hole, when sand is within shoveling distance of it. If farmers do not take a community interest in the improvement of the roads and put their shoulders to the wheel we will surely remain "stuck in the mud."

Manure and Silage Corn.
Twenty tons of corn silage an acre were harvested last fall by George L. Hyslop of Ohio. He uses it for fattening cattle and hogs. The most interesting thing about this yield is that it is the result of proper utilization of barnyard manure. The manure shed has an important place on the farm.

Function of Barnyard Manure.
Barnyard manure is very essential in garden making because it furnishes both plant food and humus. It also warms the soil and makes it easier and cheaper cultivated. It cannot easily be dispensed with.

Squash Bugs.
Squash bugs may be trapped by laying shingles near the plants. The bug will be found under them early in the morning.

FRESH STRAWBERRIES.

FRESH strawberries! Well, isn't it nice that they are in the markets again? No fruit is more popular. The berries deserve it, for they are very wholesome.

If you want a nice pastry for a bride's spring luncheon try strawberry hearts. Here's a way of making them:

Bridal Hearts.
Strawberry Hearts.—Roll some puff paste very thick and, with a heart shaped cutter, stamp out, chill and bake. Take from the oven, cut out the centers of the hearts and fill with fresh berries coated with powdered sugar. Decorate with whipped cream.

Strawberry Sponge.—Bake some sponge cake in thin sheets and cut out in fancy shapes. Hull, wash and cut in half some large firm strawberries. Dip in powdered sugar and lay on pieces of sponge cake. Cover each with another layer of cake. Decorate the tops with whipped cream and whole strawberries.

Dainty Cakes.
Strawberry Gems.—Take a granite saucepan and into it put a half pint of milk, a scant quarter of a pound of butter and let boil. Add a cup of sifted flour and boil for two minutes, stirring all the time. It should be quite smooth when taken from the fire. Taking one at a time, beat in four eggs when the mixture has had time to cool. Butter tins and drop by spoonfuls on these. Bake in a hot oven twenty minutes.

While still warm coat with strawberry icing made by adding strained strawberry juice to ordinary icing. When cold break a gem, fill with sweetened strawberries, either crushed or whole, and serve.

A Fruit Mold.
Strawberries and Rice.—Boil a half cup of cleaned and well washed rice in two cups of milk. When it is soft pass it through a sieve.

Str in the strained juice of half a lemon, a cup of powdered sugar and a half teaspoonful of salt. Beat the whites of six eggs stiffly and fold into the mixture.

Butter a border mold, one that provides for a hollow space in the center, and pour the mixture into it. Bake for thirty minutes in a moderate oven. Turn out on a dish and fill the hollow center with berries dipped in powdered sugar. The top may be ornamented with whipped cream and strawberries.

Anna Thompson.

COOKING BEEF HEARTS.

BEEF heart is inexpensive. When well cooked it is a nourishing and appetizing meat. Baked beef heart tastes very much like plain roast beef, and when you consider that one large enough to do an ordinary family may be purchased for about a quarter the economy is obvious.

Baked With Gravy.
Baked Beef Heart.—Wash the heart carefully to remove all the blood; then wipe it dry and stuff with a plain bread or a sausage stuffing.

Place it in a pan with slices of pork skewered on the outside (if the plain dressing is used) and add a little water to keep the pan from burning.

Bake about one hour in a hot oven, basting every ten minutes with the drippings in the pan. A thickening gravy should be served with it. The dressing may be made of bread-crumbs seasoned with onion juice, parsley and minced pepper. A large heart should be parboiled before stuffing and baking.

Mock Rabbit.
Sliced Beef Heart.—This tastes something like rabbit. The heart should be soaked and washed and parboiled very carefully. Stuff it with forcemeat. Sew it up and roast it. When done set it in a deep dish and pour some thick gravy made in the dripping pan over it.

When cold slice the heart with the stuffing and heat in good thick brown gravy in which some red currant jelly is dissolved.

Stewed in Stock.
Stewed Heart.—Clean the heart, cut in pieces and, after washing well, soak for several hours in milk. Then place in a stewpan, add a pint of stock, two slices of lemon, a bay leaf and stew slowly. When tender season with a bit of red pepper pod, a half teaspoonful of salt and a half teaspoonful of pepper. Thicken the gravy with a tablespoonful of browned flour. Then cook ten minutes more and serve.

Highly Spiced.
Spiced Beef Heart.—This is said to be one of the most satisfactory ways of cooking a heart. Clean a moderate sized heart, taking all the muscles from the inside, and wash free of all traces of blood. Then mix a teaspoonful of allspice, a half teaspoonful of cinnamon, a half teaspoonful of cloves, a quarter of a teaspoonful of nutmeg, a little pepper and four tablespoonfuls of vinegar. The spices should be ground ones. Rub some of this over the heart. Pour what is left inside and let it stay there for six or eight hours or overnight. Then bake the heart.

Anna Thompson.

Woman and Charm.
The surest way to convince the opponents of women in politics or business that such women are not unsexed is to be so tactful, so gracious, so ultra feminine that the fiercest critic is silenced.

This does not mean playing up one's sex to reap the benefits of a man and demand favors as a woman. When a woman takes her part in the world of affairs she must be strictly business. She has a big handicap of prejudice to overcome even after all these years.

There is an unfounded belief that the capable woman rarely has charm. Men and the domestic women like to think that the doer of deeds loses her charm in the doing. So they cite every case of bad manners in the woman of affairs, never heeding the worse manners of women in sports or the lack of manners in women who never go out.

The woman who is going to make a success of it these days must have good manners. There are exceptions, but the woman who would win votes for herself or make business for her firm will have an easier time of it for personal charm.

If the suffragists are wise they will let all women work for the cause, but permit only those women to plead for it who have a good presence, a soft voice and a suave manner.

An unfortunate manner neutralizes the good a woman does. We give our love to the Helena Riches of the world rather than to "the iron woman," capable, but forbidding. Yet the iron women often crave the affection they would have if their manners were better.

The capable woman need not grow slack in her work because she leads, not drives; because she is soft of voice, suave of tongue, kindly of heart and gracious to all. The reason most of the workers are otherwise than suave is that the turmoil of life get the upper hand. They let their nerves go and good breeding follows.

It is easier to be snappy and domineering when there is much to do than to keep cool and agreeable. The agreeable woman does not have her capacity for getting work out of others lessened because she is good tempered in the process. Especially where one works with men it pays to be agreeable. The woman who would win her point—in her new office as school director, for instance—may have to fight for it, but her iron hand must be well gloved and her strong will in masquerade, while she leads her way by suave suggestion.

Right Form For Dinner Invitations.
The following is the proper form for a formal dinner invitation.

Mr. and Mrs. John R. Everett request the pleasure of ..... company at dinner on ..... at ..... o'clock.

The blanks are to be filled in with the name or names of the invited guests, the date and the hour.

An invitation to luncheon is in almost the same wording:

Mrs. Thomas Russell requests the pleasure of Mrs. Palmer's company at luncheon on Monday, May 4, at 1:30 o'clock.

The name of the guest and the town and date are filled in, as in the dinner invitation. For a musicale the same form may be used, but the at home card is preferred:

Mrs. Sutherland At Home Tuesday evening, May the first, at nine o'clock.

This card may be ordered of the stationer, leaving the date, hour and form of entertainment to be filled in by writing, or it may be entirely engraved. Women who entertain a good deal always keep a supply of these cards on hand. Visiting cards are used for teas or small afternoon musicals:

Mrs. John Smith, Tuesday, May 4, Music at 4:30. 15 F street.

Points to Remember.
When the luncheon guests are ladies exclusively the hostess leads the way to the dining room, where places are chosen at will or fixed by dainty plate favors with the names inscribed on one side.

Many hostesses prepare for an informal musical and literary program following luncheon. The hostess driving with another woman in a closed carriage allows her guest to take the choice of seats by giving her precedence in entering the carriage.

Eat Right.
Indigestion is anything but conducive to good looks or a clear skin. Avoid overeating, which is bad for the skin as well as the body. Proper diet is absolutely essential to a good complexion. Eat nourishing, well cooked food and drink plenty of water between meals. See that proper elimination takes place each day. Eat sparingly of pastry and confectionery.

Bathing For Beauty.
For a very dry skin the Greek bath is most soothing. Mix seven ounces of pure olive oil with one ounce of lavender water and rub it well into the entire body after the hot bath while the body is still warm.
