Young--Strait.

The following, from the Cortland Standard, will be of interest to many relatives and friends in this locality of Earle A. Young of Shelby, Ohio:

"A very pretty wedding took place in the presence of about one hundred guests on Wednesday afternoon, Jan. 7, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C W. Strait, 42 East Court-st., when their daughter, Miss Grace Strait, was united in marriage with Earle A. Young of Shelby, O., son of Mr. and Mrs E.

A Young of Cortland. Shortly after 4 o'clock, to the strains of the Lohengrin Wedding March played by Miss Evelyn Kingsley, pianist, and Miss Helen A Godfrey, violinist, the bridal procession took their places at the altar arranged in the bay window of the parlor. Suspended from the center of this was a large bell of pink carnations apd smilax. The double ring ceremony was performed by Rev. Benj. L Herr, pastor of the Baptist church in Homer.

The bride was attended by Miss Nellie Young, sister of the groom, acting as maid of honor; also by Miss Arlowene Stafford as flower girl, and Miss Charlotte Lyle Stafford as ring bearer, both daughters of Mrs. W. J. Stafford of Homer, sister of the bride. Walter Ford of Cortland acted as best

The bride wore a very handsome gown of white crepe de meteor cut en train, over white silk, draped with princess lace caught with pearl ornaments. She wore a veil caught with lilies of the valley and carried a shower bouquet of white bridal roses. The maid of honor wore pink messaline trimmed with shadow lace and rhinestone ornaments. Following congratulations, delicious refreshments were served under the direction of Mrs. Henry Nixon of Homer as cateress.

Previous to the ceremony, Miss Edith Ring of Homer rendered two solos, "With You, Dear", and "O Promise Me," with violin obligate by Miss Godfrey. Miss Godfrey, accompanied by Miss Evelyn Kingsley, rendered the Mendelssohn Wedding March during congratulations, followed by several other lovely selections during refreshments.

Story of a Drunkard Who Redeemed Himself

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Jim Truscott, sitting on the bench outside the door, heard the indolent voices of the loungers in Dan Mason's

They talked about the weather, about the price of eggs, the projected increase in the minister's salary, about the bitter quarrel between Mrs. Nevins and Sarah Peterby, and then they spoke of Jim Truscott.

"Him?" Sam Finney laughed contempthously. "Jim Truscott ever intount to anything? I guess not!" "Why?" broke in Henry Galen's gentle voice. "It's never too late to mend. Sammy." "Jimmy wa'n't never a real bad boy. Sam," added Dan Mason himself.

Sam Finney laughed outright. "I don't know how bad you want anybody to be," he said harshly, "He gambled as long as he had any money. and after he'd gambled away everything except the property that his pa had tied down hard and fast in trust for him he took to drinking like a fish. What is he now? The village loafer!" There followed a long silence. Then Dan Mason spoke:

"Rich men's sons often turn out that way, boys. I heard Jimmy got in with a fast crowd at college, and that was the end of him. It's a good thing his parents died before he went wrong."

"I know what'll happen to him if he can't turn around and reform." remarked Deacon Prendergast solemnly. "Jim Truscott's doomed to perdition."

"It's too late for him to reform." laughed Sam Finney. "Why. Jim never earned a dollar in his life, and now he's living off the income from what he's got left and from the rental of the house. If that failed he'd go to the poorhouse. He will never get anywhere: it's simply impossible."

"Why is it impossible?" demanded Dan Mason fiercely.

"Because he would never have treated Milly Darrow that way if he'd had a spark of manhood in him-and without the spark of manhood he can't be a man-see?"

In the slience that followed this clinching argument no one heard Jim Truscott's shuffling steps as he left the front porch of the store building and went heavily down the road toward the cottage on the beach where he boarded with the Widow Benson.

Once in the little slant roofed bedroom, which was now his only home. Jim Truscott lighted the kerosene lamp and looked closely at himself in the old fashioned mirror.

He saw n baggard face, still handsome in spite of the lines drawn by dissipation. He saw sullen dark bine eyes and a heavy wave of chestnut hair above a fine forehead. His clothes, once handsome, were worn and untidy.

What would his father have said at the sight? His dearly loved mother? A hot wave of shame passed over his face, and he quickly turned out the light. He threw himself down on the bed and buried his face in his hands. Hour after hour he lay there, reviewing the mad career of the three years that had elapsed since he came into his inheritance. He winced as he recalled, word by word, tone by tone. the conversation he had overheard that

Then his bitter thoughts came reluctantly to dwell upon Milly Darrow; they had been engaged; he came into her presence in an intoxicated condition; she had sept him away. Now they did not even exchange glances when they met in the village.

He had sunk too low! Who was it-Sam Finney?-who had said that Truscott did not possess the necessary spark of manhood to shake off his evil ways and make good? in a lusty greeting to the new year. and ere they had finished Jim Trusand had bessed a bottle out of the wis-dow and heard it shatter on the stoneof the beach.

"Happy New Year, Jim." said 1s: Mason, staring hard at the well groom ed likeness of young Truscott.

"Thanks, same to you, Dan," sale Jim, awkwardly conscious of his changed appearance. "Can I see you alone?"

"Certainly-come in here," said Ma son leading the way into his untidy little office.

"Dan," said Jim, looking straight into the older man's eyes, "I'm going to begin all over again. Somebody's get to help me get a start. Will you?" "Start doing what?" asked Dan.

"Working. I want a job-right here in the store- driving wagon, measuring molasses and kerosene-anything so it's work - I'll keep straight - you needn't worry about that."

"Work in the store? Draw molasses: Why, Jimmy, your pa never would have liked that, boy," protested Dan aghast. "I'm right glad you're going to pick up, and you can count on Dan Mason helping you on both sides; but, now, I need a man in the office, and"-

"Let me begin at the bottom, Dan. and I'll work up to the office," said Jim quietly. "I am not too proud to work, and I want to reinstate myself in the opinion of my neighbors. When shall I begin, Dan?"

"Tomorrow, Jim, and God bless you!" muttered Dan.

The next morning when Jim Truscott appeared behind the counter of Mason's store, there was a sensation in the village. Dan Mason did a rushing business that day, and it is safe to assume that one-half of the customers came merely to catch a glimpse of Squire Truscott's son and heir bus tling around with a pencil behind his ear, a linen duster protecting his clothes, and such a grave courtesy of manner that almost made them forget that he had been an object of con tempt for three years.

Toward supper time trade slackened, and Jim found himself all alone in the store. Mr. Mason had gone to supper.

Jim looked around the long room, now in a state of most unusual neatness owing to his own energy in restoring order out of chaos. Dan Mason had surveyed him with twinkling eyes and had mercifully withheld the remark that trembled on his lips, "A new broom sweeps clean."

"You've got a good head for order. Jim," was all Dan Mason had said as

Now Jim, although weary with the unaccustomed labor of the day, did

He was engaged in the fascinating task of making a pyramid out of cakes of laundry soap, when the door opened and Milly Darrow entered. It was evident that she did not know about Jim's employment in the store, for when she saw him standing there behind the counter in his working clothes, his handsome face deathly pale. Milly's pretty color forsook her. and she leaned heavily against one of the pillars that supported the ceiling. "What can I do for you?" asked Jim. and, try as he might, his voice shook

"What-what are you doing here?" asked the girl in a wondering voice. "I'm-I'm trying to make good." replied Jim, his blue eyes dark with pain. "It's the beginning of the new year-and I'm turning a new leaf-and next year-people will have a different opinion of me." "I'm glad-glad," she whispered. "1 always said you were a man, Jim! I wish I could help you to win out in your noble fight-but, then-I forgot"she broke off and hid her glowing face in her hands. Jim's eyes sparkled now as he leaned across the counter. "Milly." he said softly, "you can help-no one can help in just the way that you canonly have faith in me-that's enough!"

"Faith?" echoed the girl, looking at him with brimming eyes. "I've got faith, Jim-I've blamed myself for not having more-I should have helped you save you from yourself-but it isn't too late-it's never too late when one wants to try to overcome the past. and the man who has fallen and arisen again to take an bonored place among his fellows is greater than the one who has never been tempted to fall-who holds his secure position because he knows no other course! This time next year, Jim, they will all acknowledge that-that"- Her voice broke as she turned away.

"Milly," said Jim huskily, "you know I can't say a word now-only that. God willing, I'll be a man once more. and a year from now, next New Year's day, I hope my friends will be proud of me-Instead of ashamed!"

"I am sure they will, Jim." said Milly quietly, and then in a practical everyday sort of voice she asked for a pound of tea and watched Jim while he wrapped it up in a most business. like manner, and as he gave it to her their eyes met for a brief instant.

"Good luck." she said brightly. "Thank you." he smiled back at her Sam Finney was the next comer. He stood near the stove a long time, warming his red hands, while his pale eyes watched Jim with a skeptical light in their depths. "You're some bustler. Jim," said Sam, after awhile.

"H-m-m-m." returned Jim absently. "Oscar Penny was asking about you," balted the other man slyly. Oscar Penny kept the saloon. .

Jim turned, his eyes flashing, "What did he want with me?" he "Said be missed you-hadn't seen you today," returned the other. "The next time he makes inquiries for me just send him in here, sam," At midnight the village bells rang returned Jim quietly, "Was there something you wanted, or are you just loafing around?" Sam reddened to his generous sars

He had merely dropped into Mason's in order to jeer at Jim and his efforts to make a new beginning. Now he looked around at the shelves in a frau tic endeavor to concoct an errand.

"I'll take a can of lobster." he said hurriedly, and then reluctantly was compelled to pay 45 cents for the delicacy. As a matter of fact Sam Finney hated canned goods of every description and as he was a lobster fisherman by occupation his purchase appeared almost judicrous in his own sight as well as that of the new salesman who could not suppress a delighted grin.

"Gosh, hang it, you no 'count loafer," snarled Sam as he opened the door; "you needn't come around here putting on airs. Next year, at this time, you'll be back in the gutter where you belong!"

"Next year, at this time, you'll come in here and take back those words, or I'll thrash you." was Jim's cool retort . . . . .

Jim Truscott's reformation was not accomplished without heroic effort on the part of the young man himself.

But the thought of his dead mother; his father, whose pride he had been; of Milly, the girl who had faith in him: of Dan Mason, who trusted him: of Henry Galen, who encouraged him with long, confidential talks-all these things belped to keep Jim straight on the way toward the goal of respectability and happiness that he desired.

Little by little he re-established himself in the respect of his townspeople. He was sober and industrious; he earned his own living, and the rental derived from the big house on the hill which had been his home and which still belonged to him went to keep the place in proper repair. "I shall want it myself next year," Jim had said when there had been talk about re newing the lease.

No one could tell whether Milly Darrow and Jim Truscott had actually "made up" their quarrel. Now, they always spoke when they met, but if there were moments of confidential chat in the quiet store at supper time no one knew save Jim and Milly, and it was remarked that both looked happy and contented these days. The year swung around to its close. Again the last day of the old year found the group of loungers gathered about the glowing stove in Dan Ma-

In the little office Dan Mason conferred with Jim Truscott-a changed Jim, indeed; clear eyed, upright and strong in every sense of the word.

While they talked of intimate things Sam Finney shuffled up to the office door and thrust his weather beaten face inside. He grinned sheepishly as his eyes met Jim's blue ones.

"I say, Jim." he blurted out, "I gotter take back something I said a year ago-you remember?"

Jim nodded and held out his hand. "Thank you. Sam; you're a man to ac knowledge it." said Jim heartily.

"Gosh hang it. Jim." muttered Samhuskily. "you're the most respected man in Seaport today."

Dan Mason gave a box of cigars into Sam Finney's hand. "Sam, you can hand those around to the boys, and you can tell 'em that Jim Truscott's a silent partner in this here store, but tomorrow morning he's going to hang out his lawyer shingle in the postoffice building, where his father used to be. And, Sam, here's more news you'd admire to pass around-Jim's going back to live in his own house, and there's going to be a big wedding in Seaport next month, and-well, you can gues:

When the delighted Sam had depart ed to spread the news, together with the cigars, Dan Mason and his erst while clerk looked affectionately at one another. Then their hands met in a strong, warm clasp,

"You made a good beginning. Jim. and you carried it out to the end. I'm proud of you," said the storekeeper

"You gave me the chance, Dan," said Jim, and then for the first time he told him of the conversation he had overheard just one year ago that very night.

"If the men who are up would belp the fellows who are down-well, the world would be better." said Jim. "Every year would find more new beginnings. I'm-I'm going now. Dan-

For the Children

Even though seated on her papa's knee the sedate little lady in the picture looks a wee bit afraid. Perhaps she isn't used to having her picture taken and was wondering what was going to happen. The baby is Princess Ingrid Victoria, daughter of Crown Prince Gustavus Adolphus of Sweden. She gets part of her name from her great-grandmother, who was Queen Victoria of England. Her mother's name is Margaret, and she is the daughter of the Duke of Connaught. the present governor general of Canada. So you see this young lady is highly connected. Not that she pays much attention to those things at present, for she is only a little over three years old. Perhaps when she grows up she may be a queen, but she need not be envied on that account. Kings and queens are often unhappy persons.

"Oh. dear! What shall we do this long rainy afternoon?" pouted Frank as he and his sister left the lunch table and made their way to the nursery. "You have plenty of toys." answered mother. "We've played with them all until we are tired," said sister. "I want something new and exciting."

scissors and cut out all the men and women you see in these pictures." From the top shelf of the closet she got down a lot of old magazines, and the children went to work with a vim. Frank cut out the men and children and Lulu the women, and before they knew it the afternoon was over, and they agreed that it had passed pleasantly.

"Now," said mother, "we will put these cut out pictures aside until the next rainy afternoon, and then we will paste standers on the backs of your paper dolls, and then you'll be ready for real fun."

"Do one now, please, just to show us." urged Frank. So mother cut an inch strip of cardboard an inch longer than the length of the picture. The inch over she bent at the heel to form the right angle, and the top inch she pasted to the top of the doil. This allowed the dolls to 15 stand quite firmly and to be moved 16 around and handled.

19 Fun With Applas-There are many childish supersti- 20 tions alive about apple parings The 21 most popular among young folks is the 22 paring a large apple in one piece and 23 then throwing the entire paring over the left shoulder. When the skin falls to the ground it will form an initial. and that initial will be the beginning 26 of your future lover's name. Some 27 say a good way to discover which one 28 of two sweethearts loves you the best 29 is to name two apple seeds and place 30 one on each eyelid. The one that 31 sticks on the longest is the true and 32 consistent lover. Whether these be true or not, they are lots of fun when young folks are assembled and apples form the refreshment.

About Postage Stamps. The postage stamp first made its appearance in 1839. Its inventor was 39 James Chalmers, a printer of Dundee. 40 who died in 1853. England adopted the adhesive stamp in 1839 and issued the first stamps for the use of the public in 1840. A year later stamps were introduced into the United States and Switzerland and soon afterward made 45 their appearance in France, Belgium 46 and Bavaria,

The City of the Prophet. Above is the name often given to Medina, a city in Arabia, where Mohammed took refuge after his flight from 51 Mecca. This flight is known in history 52 as the Hegira, and is an important 53 epoch in chronology, taking place on 51 Sept. 13, 622 A. D. The tomb of Mo- 55 bammed is at Medina.

King Winter. Oh, I am the friend of the boys and girls! 58 I am the fellow they love When there's plenty of frost on the earth

And plenty of sunshine above, To me they look for the frozen pond, All ready for skate and slide; To me they turn with their sled so swift For a consting hill so wide

I deck the trees with a fringe so bright

And I scatter my snowflakes in the air

That they glisten in son or shade;

TIII they fill each valley and glade And, climbing up the mountain top, Each shrub and tree I crown, And I spread the whitest of covers o'er The ground so barren and brown,

Poplar Ridge Philatheas.

A few members of the Philathea class of the Friends' church of Poplar Ridge and their husbands, brothers and friends enjoyed a lovely sleighride on Friday evening, Jan 2, 1914 The party left Poplar Ridge about 7 o'clock and drove nearly four miles to the home of Mrs. Elmer Hitchcock, one of the former members of the class. The sleighing was fine and ant evening was spent in jolly games and conversation. Many of the claswere unable to go on account of illness or other engagements so there were but twelve in the load. The hostess was disappointed but those who went did their best to make up for the absent ones. The party arrived back in Poplar Ridge about 1:30 with no mishaps save one nar row escape from the ditch, when several were obliged to get out and right up the sleigh a little. All reported a good time

Cayuga County Fair.

The next aroual Cayuga County fair will be held on Aug. 25, 26, 27 and 28, 1914. Those dates were fixed at the annual meeting of the stockholders held last week. There was a good attendance at the meeting, the success of the last fair arousing interest in the enterprise.

The annual report of the treasurer, L. M. Wheat, showed receipts during the year of $13,534.50 and disbursements in the sum of $13,474 76. The election of officers resulted in the choice of the following: President, F. D Perry; vice president, D S. Morse; secretary, C. A. Silke; trea urer, P-M. Rathbun,

"Grate Victory For Sence." Two large orchards, side by side, prought much profit to Farmer Turmut and much trouble, for the orchards were considered fair game by the youth of the village and two orchards are harder to watch than one. One day, looking from one orchard to the other, Turmut saw a small boy shin down a tree and, uttering a word of warning to another imp still up among the apples, ran off. Turmut reached that tree in record

"Got yer this time!" he roared to the boy almost hidden among the leaves. "Come down!"

Getting no answer and not being in hurry, he sat down and waited. Time passed, and still he waited, until a servant brought him a note that had just been dropped through the letter box. He did not wait after he had read it, as follows:

"Some people as apples, some as sence. You bin wotchin a pare of trowsis stuffed with straw, and we bin gettin' your apples from the other orchard. Grate victory for sence!"-London Answers.

Chinese Women at Theaters.

In order to prevent trouble the various Chinese theaters and musical houses are not permitted to sell tickets to Chinese visitors with their women folk. But as there are some foreigners who wish to hear Chinese singing and music and always buy tickets for their wives and female friends and refuse to observe this rule, the owners of the musical houses and theaters petitioned the police about the matter. In reply the chief of the police said that as foreign men and women enjoy equal rights in their own countries and are permitted to make friends with each other without restriction they should not be treated in the same way as Chinese women and girls, so the owners are permitted to allow foreign women theater goers to sit together with their male friends, but Chinese females are still not allowed to enjoy the same privilege .-Peking Gazette.

'Well, sir,' replied eternal justice of God.-Urichsville Poole, 'the fact is that the company was rather mixed.' 'But, - it all, my good fellow,' retorted Montgomery, 'surely you did not expect them all to be tailors?"

TWO GREAT CONVENTIONS the World's Woman's Christian Temperance union held at Brooklyn, N. Y., in October marked the completion of 30 years of achievement, during which marvelous advance along all lines of reform has been made in the 50 countries now federated with the organization. At the first convention (Boston, Mass., 1891) 11 countries sent delegates; at Brooklyn 34 nations had representatives. The dominant note of the gathering was, "Prohibition of the liquor traffic for every nation and for the world." Immediately following the world's meeting came the fortieth annual convention of the National W. C. T. U. at Asbury Park, N. J. The 707 delegates in attendance represented a dues-paying constituency of over 300,-The enthusiasm generated by reports and addresses showing the rapidly rising tide of anti-alcohol sentiment in this country, and the practical plans adopted for bringing this sentiment to bear upon the nationwide abolition of the liquor traffic, made this convention a record-breaking event in the history of the organization. The plans center round the proclamation of the National W. C. T. U. president, Mrs. L. M. N. Stevens, sent out September 10, 1911, and the bill introduced in congress by the Honorable Richmond Pearson Hobson of Alabama prohibiting "the sale, manufacture for sale, importation for sale, exportation or transportation for sale, of beverages or foods containing alcohol.' The proclamation closes with these ringing words: "To America, the birthplace of the local, state, national and World's Woman's Christian Temperance union, we hereby proclaim that within a decade, prohibition shall be placed in the constitution of the United States; and to this end we call to active cooperation all temperance, prohibition. religious and philanthropic bodies; all patriotic, fraternal, civic associations and all Americans who love their country."

LIQUOR VOTER GUILTY.

When a man drinks something that makes it impossible for his brain to control his actions, he is trifling with his own and others' safety. He is therefore guilty of criminal negligence. When a man sells to another anything that produces such effect he also is guilty of contributing to whatever harm results. The man who votes for the sale of such poison must bear his share of responsibility. Drunkenness is no defense when accident or crime results from it, because every man who gets drunk knows the danger. The fellow who gets drunk invites trouble. He drinks its effects. He knows that criminalityand accidents go with intoxication. He doesn't care. His motive is money. care, either. He is as guilty as the other two. He may escape punish-Chronicle.

PRESS GETTING ON RIGHT SIDE. When such influential periodicals as the Saturday Evening Post and Collier's Weekly begin throwing shells into the liquor camp, interesting developments are certain. The press of question, and its influence in creating public sentiment cannot be computed press joined the church and the home in Kansas that it has, after thirty-two whole country are more and more joining hands with the church and the home and will prove a mighty factor in the final elimination of the traffic from the republic.-American Issue.

RUM WAS SOLE CAUSE.

"It has been a study with me to mark boys who started on every grade of life with myself, to see what has become of them. One day, recently, I began to count them over, and it was an instructive exhibit. Some of them became clerks, merchants, manufacturers, lawyers, doctors. It was remarkable that every one of those who off by sickness, every one who proved a wreck, and wrecked his family, did it from rum, and from no other cause." -Chauncey M. Depew.

NO WHISKY SIGNS ALLOWED.

No electric signs with the word 'whisky" can be hung over the sidewalks of Sacramento, Cal. The trustees have so ordered. In due time public sentiment will demand the suppression of the beer signs and others of a like nature, offensive to sentiment and good taste. And in due time all papers which desire to circulate in the homes must keep their columns free from big, glaring, offensive whisky and beer ads .- The Home Alls

He had been curred in Brooklyn, the mother took the family to Germany and remained several years, returning to this country when Mr. Brass was about 12 years old, His early education was obtained in the! public schoo's of Binghamton. After teaching school for a time, he prepared for the ministry at Auburn Theological Seminary, graduating in 1886. He was ordained by the Steuben Presbytery, and supplied at Canaseraga, and for a short time did Home Mission work in Nebraska. Following a four years' pastorate at Hannibal, N. Y., he came to King Ferry, where he remained twelve years. In November, 1904, he accepted a call from the church at Dryden and had thus completed nine years of service at that church.

RADIUM CANCER CURE UNCERTAIN

Warning Against an Exagger ated Idea of New Treatment.

LIMITATIONS POINTED OUT.

Eased on a Conservative View of Achievements, American Society For the Control of Dread Disease Gives the Exact Status of Wonderful Mineral In Combating Cancerous Growths.

Of the treatment of cancer by radium, about which much is being published, the executive committee of the recently organized American Society For the Control of Cancer has issued the following statement:

The American Society For the Contrel of Cancer fears that exaggerated ideas of the power of radium in the treatment of cancer may result from the recent publicity given to this agent in the daily press. It appears highly important at the present time that the limitations of radium in the control of cancer should be emphasiz- JOY OF LIVING SECRETS ed as well as its favorable effects in certain cases. Otherwise the familiar story of new hopes, destined only to disappointment, will again be recorded at the expense of many unfortunate sufferers.

"The curative effects of radium are practically limited today to superficial cancers of the skin, to superficial growths of mucous membrane, which are not true cancers, and to some deeper lying tumors of bone, etc., which are not very malignant. The problem of the constitutional treatment of advanced, inoperable cancer is still untouched by any method yet devised or likely to be devised for administering radium. Even among the so called radium cures it still remains to be determined in many cases whether the favorable result is permanent or is to be followed sooner or later by #### the usual recurrence, The Final Test.

"The most competent surgeons do or dare to pronounce a case cured titil five years have elapsed after an apparently successful operation. The same test must be applied before we can finally determine the real value

"It should be emphasized especially that radium cannot at present exert any permanent benefit on generalized caneer, and since cancer, in a very large proportion of cases, is widely disseminated in the body early in the course of the disease, this entire group of cases can expect no important relief from radium, "Another large group of cancers is comparatively inaccessible to the application of radium, so that the ultimate course of the disease is not affeeted, although certain portions of the tumor may be reduced in size. Again, many forms of cancer, airbough local ized and accessible to radium, grow very rapidly and resist the curative action of this agent, so that no real benefit can be expected from its use.

"The best results of radium therapy can be secured only when comparatively large amounts are available for use, and the present limited world's supply of this metal places it out of reach of the great majority of patients. It is to be feared that much harm may result from undue reliance upon small quantities of low grade radium when other methods of treatment would be more effective.

Popular Misconception.

"Evidence of the possible extent of popular misconception on this subject is found in a pathetic letter recently received at the New York health department from a sufferer in California who had somehow obtained the impression that the United States government was about to purchase large quantities of radium from abroad. Assuming that the 'New York city physician' would have a plentiful supply, the writer asked that some be sent to him C. O. D. without delaying to advise him as to the cost. "Under the term 'cancer' are commonly grouped several diseases which differ widely in nature, causation and courses and in their response to radlum. It requires both skill and experience to determine just what type of cancer one has to deal with as well as the advisability of using radium. Hence it is extremely difficult to for-mulate an accurate statement of the true position of radium therapy, but it is quite clear that the expolation of this remedy as a cure of cancer in general is to be deprecated.

GIVEN BY OLD AGE CLUB.

To Keep Smiling One of the Ways of "Borrowing Time."

The Borrowed Time club of Chicago, which has forty members between seventy-two and eighty-six years of age, held a meeting recently, when the secret of living so that one may remain happy even in old age was stated to all in six paragraphs, which the members joyfully indorsed.

They are as follows:

When you're a boy be one of the "felers." By that we mean normal. When grown to manhood still be a boy. Get married. Eat what you want, drink what you rant, but all in moderation. Be moderate in all things.

Don't get excited or worry. Smile when you retire, smile in your sleep, smile when you awake, smile when things go wrong and keep on smiling. N. T. Hemingway, seventy-six years, is president of the club. "Our meetings are the pleasantest ever held by any organization," said Secretary Emeritus Webb. "The hearts of these men have been softened with the advance of years. Their vision has grown broader through fellowship with one another." The borrowers of "time" are enisted from the ranks of all vocations. Physicians, lawyers and ministers are on the roster. At the recent meeting Father Dennis O'Keefe, aged eighty-three, sang an Irish ballad that he sang on the banks of the river Shannon as a boy. Captain Charles Judd sang a war song and Mr. Memingway also rendered a vocal selection.

TELLS OF DANGER IN PORK.

Department of Agriculture Gives Two Rules For Safe Eating.

A warning against pork is given by the United States department of agriculture, which advises against eating raw and uncooked pork, so as to avoid contracting trichinosis. The risk of contracting the disease is greater at this time of the year, a department bulletin says, in some sections of the country on account of the large consumption of pork products. The danger is most insidious in such foods as raw ham and smoked sausages.

The department lays down two rules under which pork may be safely eaten: Refrain from eating pork in the raw state and thoroughly cook all pork that is eaten.

Pork, according to the department, should be cooked in boiling water for a period of as many times eighteen minutes as there are pounds in the piece of meat cooked.

TEXT For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten son, that whosever believeth on him, should not perish, but have eternal life.—John 3:16

Martin Luther used to call this Gospel," because within itself comprehensive 1 y. the good news of Christ's salvation. What verse is better known, or more ofter quoted than this, and what text has been used to preach more ser-Missionaries tell us that it is the first part of the Bible they translate into heathen tongues or teach to heathen people, and we may believe that it has won raire souls to Jesus Christ than any other collocation of inspired words that can be named. Its theme is human salvation, and it tells us of God's great Christmas gift to the world

1. As a revelation of salvation, It speaks first of the source of it-"God so loved the world." There would have been no salvation without that love. What God saw in us to love, while we were yet sinners and rebels in his sight, passes human under standing; but doubtless, it was what we might become in Christ through his grace, and not what we actually were that moved that love. At all events, we must not give currency to the thought of some that it was the sacrifice of Christ that made God love us. This is to caricature his grace. because the very opposite is true, as we see in the next place. 2. The text shows the ground of our salvation, which is the work of Christ -"For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten son." Gave him, that is, as a sacrifice and a substitute for us. In vain did God love us except as his wisdom and grace should provide some way for the putting away of our guilt consistent with his own character of holiness, justice and truth. This way he found in the offering of his son, who "was wounded for our transgressions," and bruised for our iniquities," and with whose "stripes we are healed" (Isaiah 53:5). God thus can be just at the him who believeth on Jesus" (Romans Christ and your salvation? 4. We see the need of salvationthat whosoever believeth on him should not perish." To "perish" does not mean to become "annihilated" simply, or go out of existence. If that were all, then we had as much punishment for sin before we were born, or before we ever sinned at all, because we were not then in existence Indeed, but in separation from God and all that that implies of conscious loss, and disappointment, and misery, and suffering. Christ gives us a picture of the perishing in the story of the rich man and Lazaraus, Luke 16:19-31, which you are urged to read again in order that you may be moved to lay hold of him ere it is too late

5. We see the blessing of salvation n the words, "but have eternal life." This agrees with the teaching in another place. "The wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord" (Romans 6:23). Here "life" means not merely a continuation of existence, but that existence carried on in the favor of God. in the joy of his presence, in the freedom of his service, and as a sharer in an inheritance which includes all things. The good things of this life are only a shadow of the reality beyond.

PLANNING THE FARMSTEAD.

Suggestions That Will Save Time and Money For the Farmer.

There is perhaps no place and probably no line of work that is more loosely or poorly planned than some of the farmsteads of this country, says H. E. Colby in the Dairy Farmer.

When you realize that the farm is a manufacturing plant, when one takes verse "The Little into consideration that here the raw materials-the soil, the seeds, the crops, it gathered up the animals-all are products that are so to be used either as a means of manuconcisely and yet facturing the highest class quality of human food or as food itself, then one will realize the importance of so arranging the farmstead that the work can be carried on most conveniently and economically, Frequently there are natura! conditions that must be taken into consideration in laying out a place of this kind, but with the present day methods of building and equipping it is possible to overcome almost anything of this kind without serious inconvenience and when once it is arranged remember it must stand for years. It is a mistake to try to economize time that will mean a few dollars or a little work that will occupy a day or two when building is in process and then spend ten orefifteen minutes every day for the next twenty years, simply because this saving was made in the first place.

For example: corn plants. The dairy barn will be in one place, 3. We have, further, the means of the milk house where the cream is to our salvation-"that whosoever be- be handled and the milk is to be seplieveth on him should not perish." To arated may be a considerable distance believe is to exercise faith, but faith from that, and the calf and hog barns, where the skimmilk is to be fed, will be equally distant in another direction,

There is no reason why the farm that the milk can be taken directly from the barn to the milk house and from there to the hog house and call are informed that if belted around barn and henhouse without duplicating

But if proper measures are taken the

ed. This is done in very many of the best farm plants, but it is not to be recommended indiscriminately, for too often the help becomes careless of those little precautions that prevent contamination of the product from outside sources. But if the milk house is properly arranged, so the milk can be taken from the cow barn and the skimmilk delivered directly to the other barns and the cream put away carefully where it will be free from any odors or influences that would cause It to deteriorate, there can be a great economy of work about the barns.

Frequently one finds the farmer in feeding his cattle carrying the feed back and forth over the same path when the feed rooms could be so arranged that one process would answer the purpose better. Just bear a few of these things in mind when you are rearranging your farm. When you are getting the stables and the feed room ready to handle the herd during the winter just see if there isn't some little simple way in which you can change things so as to economize on the work that will be done during the winter. Remember that one or two minutes sayed each day amounts to considerable during the year, not only in time, but in labor and effort. It is these little conveniences, these little attentions to detail, that make farm work easier and refleve it of the drudgery and that put it on a plane above the manual labor to which so many are prone to relecte it. Int remember a few of there bints and adapt them to your peocle. It is not the intention to make any hard and fast rules, because every farmstead lms its chaplains for these institutions.—Bos ton Transcript.

A GOOD WORD FOR THE CROW

This Abused Bird Has Some Good

Qualities to Offset Its Bad Traits. The case of the crow, condemned a decade or more ago as a destructive bird in agricultural fields, has been reopened by the department of agriculture and a more favorable verdict reached. The investigation made by experts of the biological survey of the It is important that the products of department shows the crow to be of

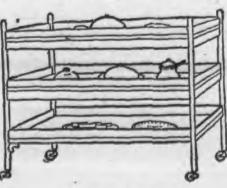

After a careful study of the habits and the examination of a large number of stomachs the department experts have reached the conclusion that the crow consumes enough grasshoppers, cutworms, white grubs and other injurious insects to make him highly valuable to farmers. There is, however, one bad habit which the crow has, and that is the destruction of young birds and birds' eggs, but this trait is outweighed by the good the bird is doing for the farmer in the destruction of worms and insects.

The one danger from the crow, according to department experts, lies in large numbers. If the number can be kept down so that its normal food is sufficient there is every reason why farmers should encourage the bird to remain about their farius. Not long J. A. Spaulding, D.D.S. ago an agent of the department was watching a crow feeding in a cornfield. It seemed that the bird was pulling up young corn and carrying it to a nearby nest to feed its young. After the crow had left the nest the agent elimbed the tree and secured the young birds. An examination and bridgework just like the showed that instead of young corn or the kernel of the corn the older bird

A HANDY DINNER WAGON.

The Vehicle Is Easily Made and Saves Considerable Trouble.

The Utah Agricultural college experiment station has issued a useful circular on "Labor Saving Devices For the Farm Home." Among the suggestions offered is the use of the handy dinner wagon," figured in the accompanying illustration. The circular says: "In homes where it is necessary to have a separate kitchen and dining room it should be considered necessary

This dinner wagon can be made by any one who knows how to handle tools at all and, as you see, is in reality a two or three story table on wheels. This should stand near the kitchen stove. and on it should be placed everything required for the meal. It can be wheeled into the dining room or to the table and then set uside until required to move everything from the dining table back to the kitchen. All Trouser Alterations at Expense of Customer.

Twenty-five years ago C. R. Egbert started his Auburn business. The opening rule was "One Price, Plain Figures and Your Money's Worth or Your Money Back." That rule is still in force It was also decided that there would be no so called "special sales," just two weeks of cut prices before each Semi-Annual Inventory, to reduce stock as much as possible. We are proud of our twenty-five years of good value giving in Auburn and are going to celebrate. You and your friends are invited to participate in the most wonderful bargain event in the history of this city. Everybody knows that during our sales we really cut prices, but we have never gone into every department and cut as we have this time. We're going to celebrate and pay you well to help us. Read this advertisement, bring it with you to our sale. You'll find truth in every word.
