Farmer's Institutes.

The farmers of Cayuga county will be interested to know that the Bureau of Farmers' Institutes of the State Department of Agriculture will hold three institutes in the county as follows: Sherwood, Jan. 26, in Association hall; Locke, Jan. 28, in Grange hall, and Dresserville, Jan. 29, in Grange hall. He has also been very successful in poultry raising, having bred many prize winning fowls. Mr. Bonsteel has done a great deal of work for the U. S. Department of Agriculture in their soil surveys in New York and Pennsylvania. This experience coupled with experiments on his own farm enables him to give valuable and practical information. Mrs. Jones is a very competent and interesting lecturer and is thoroughly conversant with all problems pertaining to the home.

A certain time will be allotted to answering questions from the question leaflets that have been sent to farmers in the vicinity. Questions on other branches of farming may also be brought up for discussion. This is a splendid opportunity to learn new and practical methods in agriculture and those who possibly can should endeavor to attend at least one of the institutes. They are supported by state appropriation and are free to all.

Helping Himself.

Charley Van Loan, living in the midst of the cafeteria belt in Los Angeles, had an early fishing trip in prospect. He went to a cafeteria to get his breakfast.

The plot in a cafeteria is to garner a plate and collect what food you want, take the collection to a chair or table, eat it and pass as you pass out. Van Loan did not know much about it. There was nobody in the place but one heavy eyed waiter when he entered. Van Loan sat down at a table and waited twenty minutes. The waiter nodded in his seat and paid no attention to him.

"Say," said Van Loan finally, "can't I get breakfast?"

"Sure," the waiter replied, "if you go after it."

He explained how the thing was done, and Van Loan picked up a few little trifles and ate them.

"How much?" he asked when he had finished.

"Thirty cents."

Van Loan paid his 30 cents and then took out a quarter, laid it down on the counter, picked it up again and put it back in his pocket.

"What's the idea?" asked the waiter. "Oh," said Van Loan, "I'm tipping myself."—Saturday Evening Post.

Thy Work.

Let me but do my work from day to day in field or forest, at the desk or loom. In routine marks place or tranquil room let me but find it in my heart to say: When vagrant wishes beckon me astray: "This is my work, my blessing, not my doom." Of all who live I am the one by whom this work can best be done, in the right way.—Henry van Dyke.

A Brand New Title.

There lives on Long Island, near the sound, a widow who does a little banking business on her own account, cashing bills for men in temporary distress. Last summer she made her appearance at Asbury Park at the height of the season.

"She must be a lady of quality," commented the sister.

"A marchioness perhaps," suggested another.

"You're all wrong," said the little woman at the end of the veranda, looking up from her book. "I happen to know that lady very well. She's not even a countess."

"Well, what then?" came the chorus of voices.

And Such is Fame.

These two writers, it appears, were motoring the other day and stopped at a Westchester inn for luncheon. The luncheon was excellent, and after it was over Mr. Davis went out to look over the car, leaving Mr. Morris alone.

Mr. Morris, in good spirits from his fine meal, said genially to the landlord:

The landlord tried his best to look impressed and interested.

"You don't say?" he remarked. "And what business might he be in?"

A few minutes later Mr. Morris took his seat in the car, and Mr. Davis remained behind to settle the bill. As he counted his change Mr. Davis in his turn said to the landlord:

"Landlord, my friend there is Gouverneur Morris."

Again the landlord looked impressed and puzzled.

"Morris? Morris?" he said. "The name sounds familiar. Meat fine, ain't it, sir?"

Delicate Suggestion.

A member of congress had been paying attention to a young lady for a long while, and had taken her to attend the house until she was well posted in the rules. On the last day of the session, as they came out, he bought her a bouquet of flowers and said to her: "May I offer you my handful of flowers?" She replied promptly: "I move to amend by omitting all after the word 'hand'." He seconded the amendment and they adopted it unanimously.

Hit the Nail on the Head.

West Point history records this true story. A cadet was asked by a brother cadet to pay the debts of one friend to another by dancing with a "fem," whom the second had "dragged." Now the first cadet and the second were over and Cadet Two bid him away, pledged to return in time for the fifth dance.

He found his partner for the fifth dance. But at once, her name had slipped his memory. In the ballroom this is not an unforgivable offense, and he confessed his fault easily, gracefully, humbly, expecting to be absolved at small expense. But the lady was not pleased, nay, she was annoyed, and she told him so. Her name was a nice one. It was Elizabeth Randolph.

MISSED THE MULE.

But Willie Landed Hard and the Blow Almost Killed Father.

"Jonas Whipple?" repeated the village grocer. "Why, yes, I reckon I can tell you where to find him, but if I was you, young man, I wouldn't put in much time lookin' for him just at present."

The young fellow in front of the counter looked puzzled. Mr. Green finished wrapping up some butter and then obligingly explained:

"You see, it's like this. Jonas bought a mule the other day and had it fetched over to his place and turned loose in the barn lot. When feedin' time came that evening he and that fool boy Willie of his went out to put the mule in the barn. Somehow or other, though, the mule took a notion that he wouldn't go. He'd run up to the door, stick his head inside as if he meant to go in; then he'd seem to change his mind and go charging back to the other end of the lot. He did that about ten times, and finally Jonas lost his temper and made up his mind to teach the mule a lesson. He called Willie to him and handed him a piece of fence rail that he'd picked up. Then he told him to go into the barn, climb up over the door and sit there till the mule stuck his head inside and then crack him a good one.

"Jonas started out after the mule again, but the beast seemed to have scented trouble, for he wouldn't go near the barn. Jonas chased him round till he was about worn out and as mad as a hornet, and then he gave up and started to go in the barn to tell Willie to climb down. He stuck his head inside the door, and—well, he doesn't know what happened after that (ill the next morning when he woke up in bed. And from what the doctor says it's a wonder he's able to know anything. What did you want to see him about?"

The young man gave a feeble grin.

"I'm selling a book on the treatment of unruly animals," he replied. "A gentleman outside directed me to Mr. Whipple's, but I'm very glad I forgot his directions. Thank you, sir, and good evening."—Youth's Companion.

Idleness.

Too much idleness, I have observed, fills up a man's time much more completely and leaves him less his own master than any sort of employment whatsoever.—Burke.

Maybe It Was.

Louis E. Van Norman, associate editor of the Review of Reviews, recently returned from a vacation in the Glacier National park. While there he discovered an old timer who was particularly bitter toward the Piegan Indians.

"I like the Sioux, and the Apaches, and the Crows," said this old fellow, beating violently on the table. "Them Indians are gentlemen. When they went on the warpath they always took their blankets off, and all you had to do was to run and hide. But the Piegans! Mister, there ain't nothing as mean as a Piegan."

Next day Mr. Van Norman asked Bill Burns, a veteran Glacier park guide, why the old man hated Piegans so.

"Well," said Mr. Burns reflectively, "the old cuss married a Piegan squaw. Mebbe it's race prejudice."

Her Only Concern.

Sir David Baird, the first baronet, was a famous Anglo-Indian soldier who early in his career had the unpleasant experience of being thrown into the black hole of Calcutta during the mutiny.

Like a number of other eminent soldiers, he was not blessed with too sweet a temper, and when his old mother was told that the prisoners in the black hole were tied together her only comment was:

"Heaven help the poor souls that's tied to our Davie!"

Something Good on Goodwin.

On one occasion in his career Nat Goodwin was bumping over the gasoline circuit as the star in a play which was so bad that the only good thing in it was the last curtain. Naturally the public evinced no desire to patronize it.

Finally, however, the brave actors and actresses played in a town which, for some mysterious reason, turned out a good crowd to see the dismal performance.

It was too good to be true. After the first act Goodwin sought out the stage manager and said:

"On the level, are those real people out there?"

"Certainly, a whole lot of them," replied the manager.

"Well, that's one on me," replied Goodwin. "I thought that crowd was a painted drop curtain."—Popular Magazine.

Making the Little Farm Pay

By C. C. BOWSFIELD

MANY city women have shown in recent years that they are capable of running a farm. In the numerous little farm enterprises which are observed around every large city women are conspicuous as owners and managers. It is evident that they are determined to grasp the new problems which surround agricultural life.

A number of Chicago women have given practical demonstration of the success which may be attained by their sex in the lighter class of farming and country home management. The tendency which is now so apparent toward rural life is likely to reverse the flow of population. This has a sociological as well as a commercial aspect, and the results will be largely credited to woman. Her work is of ever increasing importance in farm life. It is her province so to shape social conditions in the country that young people will be attracted to agricultural pursuits rather than repelled therefrom.

Women are showing that there are large profits to be made from honey, poultry, onions, cucumbers, sweet corn, flowers and many other commodities which they are capable of handling in a manner demanded by the best trade. The certainty that prices will remain high for such products comes from the rapid growth of towns and cities. The market for flowers and general produce seems to be unlimited, and satisfactory returns are assured where proper attention is given to cultivation.

Choice asters are selling in the wholesale market at $4 per 100, and as this has become the favorite product of many of Chicago's women floriculturists it is worth while to consider what one can earn on an acre of land.

An aster is distinctly an out of door plant. It is hardy and the most free from insects of any garden product. It is exceedingly prolific. With land fairly well fertilized an acre will produce at a moderate estimate $1,200 worth of asters. A yield of $1,400 would not be at all phenomenal. Garden produce may seem more practicable as a family enterprise.

On a tract of twelve acres which she is handling with the hope of enabling her husband to give up city employment a woman makes this showing:

Five acres of onions, net.....	$700
Eggs from 300 hens.....	430
Seventy-five bushels of cherries.....	175
One acre of cucumbers, net.....	127
	$1,432

The five acres of onions brought in market upward of $1,000, but there was a large item of expense, chiefly hired help.

Still another example is given in the following table:

Six hundred pounds of honey.....	$50
Butter from eight cows.....	50
Cheerles from forty trees.....	50
Strawberries.....	70
Eggs and poultry.....	200
Twenty hogs.....	350
Horse and young stock.....	150
	$1,470

In this case $300 was paid out for wages, and the increased value of stock almost equaled this sum.

GREW SPUDS IN BARREL.

Wonderful Example of Intensive Potato Cultivation Reported by Farmer.

A few years ago an ingenious gardener near one of our eastern cities was inspired to test the possibility of growing potatoes in a barrel. The barrel had formerly contained lime, but not much of this remained.

The experimenter placed in the bottom of the barrel, from which the head had been taken out, five or six inches of rich soil and embedded in this a single whole potato. As the vines grew fresh earth was added from time to time and the plants were watered whenever the soil appeared dry.

No insects or blight troubled them, and early in the fall, when the vines seemed to be dry, the contents of the barrel were turned out and 125 large, fine tubers were found, all attached to the dead stems, besides a half peck of small potatoes not of marketable quality.

The experiment was claimed to be a great success, and it was said that 5,000 barrels were immediately ordered for the production of the next year's crop.

For this very little seed comparatively would be required, very little labor in preparing the bed, no weeding or cultivating except the occasional addition of a few inches of fresh soil, no Paris greening for potato bugs or Bordeaux mixture for blight and the harvesting done by merely picking up the tubers from the overturned barrel.—Farm Progress.

SAFETY NOW EVEN IN TRAIN WRECKS

A Seemingly Impossible Escape From Disaster.

TRUTH THAT RIVALS FICTION

Derailed by Automatic Switch in Nick of Time Runaway Freight Leaps Into the Air—Locomotive Turns Turtle and Engineer and Fireman, Like Specters, Emerge Unscathed.

Marvelous escape from disaster marked a wreck a mile outside of Joliet, Ill., when a runaway freight train was derailed to save other trains along the road. By less than a minute a Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific passenger train, bound for Chicago, missed the meeting that would have meant death and disaster. The engineer and fireman were buried in the wreckage of the derailed engine, which overturned. Although it took ten minutes to cut the way to the men with picks and axes, they were found to be without a scratch.

The freight cars, heavily loaded with coal, were thumping down the tracks at considerable speed. John T. Sutherland of Rockdale, Ill., was at the throttle. His fireman was Henry Bausell of Blue Island, Ill. At a signal point Sutherland threw on his brakes. They refused to work.

Freight Train Becomes Runaway. Down the tracks went the freighter—a runaway.

Meanwhile the passenger train due at Joliet at 6:30, and ten minutes late, tore along the track. The signals were up to give her the right of way. The heavy freight runaway recognized no signals.

Less than two minutes before the freighter pulled up the San Francisco flyer hummed by the scene of the wreck. Sutherland jerked and pulled at the levers in an effort to stop the mad progress.

The tracks are guarded by an automatic switch that provides for such an emergency. A train disregards the second signal, and the automatic switch derails it. The derail is supposed to be just enough to ease the engine from the track.

Cars Leap Into the Air. The freight train, however, was flying along at high speed. When it struck the derail it fairly leaped into the air. It twisted over, and its wheels pointed to the sky. The coal cars telescoped. The first to arrive got no sight of the engineer and fireman.

"Get to work with the axes and picks!" commanded a section boss who happened to be near with a crew. "Get their bodies out!"

"Easy there!" he called. "Don't get careless with the tools. We're all right."

Ten minutes later they were dragged from their perilous refuge. The steel in turning had formed a roof over them.

TANGO MAY KILL THE AGED.

It seems unnecessary to call attention to the fact that the tango, the various waltzes, the maxixe, etc., are being ardently cultivated by callow youth and collapsed old age. The problems created by these dances differ according to the age of the participants. For the young the question of morality is paramount; for the old the possibility of too great a strain on a dilated heart or an arteriosclerotic vessel is apparent. The physician will do well to caution the stiff jointed, aged patient who derives too great a pleasure from those—to him—potentially harmful amusements.

MANHOOD SUFFRAGE.

It's here at last! What? Why, a henpecked husbands' club. New York has blazed the way. Among the charter members are men well known in west side society. Says A. S. Smythe, president and founder of the organization:

"It is no slap at our wives, whom we appreciate greatly and love dearly. It is merely to regulate custom in a manner most conducive to mutual happiness."

Here are some of the resolutions on which the club is founded:

That women shall be compelled to have the hooks on their dresses arranged alternately.

That women shall not have the right to drag their husbands out of cozy homes more than three evenings a week if husbands object.

That if a husband chooses to go out on any of the evenings set aside as his he is entitled to do so.

That husbands shall not be required to feed the parrot, canary bird, cat, dog or monkey.

That wives must get up and dress for breakfast.

That no wife shall have the right to interfere with her husband playing golf, tennis or any other game all day Sunday and shall not complain if he is late to dinner.

SLANG OUTWITS MEXICO CENSOR

The Mexican Herald Circumvents Ban on Publicity.

TELLS NEWS IN HUMOR FORM

Editor Hudson Devises an Interesting Scheme of Keeping His Readers Informed as to the Revolution Without Giving Huerta an Excuse to Suppress His Newspaper.

O. Henry in one of his stories of Latin America told of a young man who wished to cable an account of the revolution and in order to pass the censor put his message in good old American slang. It is almost in the same way, says the Kansas City Star, that Paul Hudson, editor of the Mexican Herald, published in English in the City of Mexico, is telling the truth about conditions without giving Huerta an excuse to suppress his paper. It would seem that there are a very few Americans left in the capital and that those few are far from feeling secure. As he expresses it in his daily humorous column:

Getting to be a small but very select party, no?

At least, Ashby, allow those of us who can't afford to Vera Cruz to pretend we are not afraid.

If your pumpkins are of the variety that frost will hurt better garner them now.

Some of us still feel occasional effects of the altitude, but those who suffered from frapped pedal extremities have gone.

Yes, the situation is tense. We have had lots of the same in the past tense, and the future tense is always with us. Plenty of folks will be pleased if the present tense can be kept right on the job until it can be passed to the historical infinitive.

Not yet, Muriel, but anyhow keep off the toboggan slide.

What's the matter with Mexico? Well, there are too many places where life is just one blamed thing after another—with a gun.

You are right, Ashby. The number of Americans was about 10,000, but they had no artillery until after the battle of Contreras.

No, major, it seems to us more probable that when the crop of mid-November rumors start they will have more to do with blockades.

Anent the Activities of Mr. Lind.

When former Governor Lind first landed, the Herald united with most of the other Mexican papers in belittling him. Later there was a different tone:

The Vera Cruz attitude agrees with the governor and his whole record—because it is on the level.

Governor Lind is still in Vera Cruz, but that is not news, for he's that way wherever he is.

But make no mistake; "fellows who have no tongue are often all eyes and ears."

When Mr. Lind learns enough Spanish to remain silent in that language as well as English and Swedish the quiet at Vera Cruz will become oppressive.

He is glad for a little protection, too, as:

Check. Here's our O. K. for keeping Admiral Fletcher, who is thoroughly familiar with the situation, on the job as long as the boats remain at Vera Cruz.

Taken altogether, the paragraphs put a deal of light in some of the dark corners and intermixed is a deal of comment on men and events in the north—the home land.

Significant Paragraphs.

Our idea of crude work is to hold up a train and not have sufficient transportation facilities at hand to carry off the loot.

Possibly it's the cat in Zaentecan that gives it so many lives.

Anyhow the fall of Juarez will not be so severe a blow as if this were her first offense.

Bombita seems to have two good reasons for retiring from the bullfight game. One is $500,000 in the bank, and the other is a girl.

It is an unfortunate fact that the pastor who will draw the largest congregation today holds his open air meeting at 3 p. m. in a circular building.

Hard lines. Owing to the bad times and the limitations in the seating capacity in the largest bull ring in the world only some twenty odd thousand were able to see the fight yesterday.

Eight American and a few other battle-ships at Vera Cruz on a visit of courtesy do remind one somewhat of the mother-in-law jokes.

We rather like the examination paper definition to the effect that "a fratricide is a man who kills a college student."

It is difficult to tell with all those whiskers whether Mr. Carranza keeps a straight face when he says all those things.

Raising the embargo on arms would raise a lot of that short and ugly definition of war.

A traveler who has just returned from the coast region of Jalisco reports the discovery of natives over there who never heard of the revolution and who had no idea that Porfirio Diaz was not president.

The prompt solicitude of Washington for Mexican officials or any one named Madero is trouble is touching.

The Sonora rebel government evidently believes in reciprocity and has voted an export tax on cattle that just balances the import tax removed by the new American tariff law.

Possibly they shouldn't have anything to say in matters of international policy, but if the foreign "material interests" were removed from some countries the medium of progress and prosperity would suffer an appreciable diminution.

Invention an Epidemic at Montclair.

Montclair, N. J., has again put forward its claim of being the most ingenious community in the United States. The annual index of the United States patent office, just issued, notes seventy-six patents to residents of Montclair. This is one patent to every 270 inhabitants for the year.

By states, according to the official statistics, the best showing was in Connecticut, which received one patent to every 1,150 inhabitants. New Jersey received one to every 1,508.

CHRISTMAS CAKES.

The cakes and puddings which contain fruits and spices are best made some time before needed as the flavor is much better if they are allowed to season, well wrapped to keep from drying. The following one, however, is best made to be used within a day or two:

Queen Cake.—Cream two-thirds of a cup of butter, add one and three-fourths cupfuls of flour, one-fourth of a teaspoonful of soda, a half teaspoonful of cream of tartar, then add one and one-half teaspoonfuls of lemon juice. Beat the whites of six eggs, add one and a fourth cupfuls of powdered sugar and combine the mixtures. Bake in a shallow pan 50 minutes. Cover with caramel icing.

The President's Cake.—Most people will feel that this is too expensive a cake for ordinary occasions; but for the holiday time or the event of a wedding will warrant a little extravagance. The ingredients are a pound each of butter, sugar browned flour sifted, 12 eggs, five pounds of seeded raisins, one and a half pounds of citron shredded, one glass of grape jelly, two teaspoonfuls of melted chocolate, one pound of candied cherries, one pound of candied pineapple, one pound of blanched almonds cut fine, one pound of pecans cut fine, one tablespoonful of cinnamon, one of nutmeg, half a tablespoonful of allspice, a teaspoonful of cloves, one glass of grape juice and two teaspoonfuls of rosewater.

Soak the almonds over night in the rosewater and the fruit in the grape juice for the same length of time. Cream the butter, add the sugar, then the well-beaten yolks of the eggs, then the spices, jelly and chocolate. Next add the beaten whites and part of the flour. Roll the fruit in the rest of the flour, adding it in small quantities and mixing it well. Add the nuts last. Bake or steam for four to six hours in small or large molds. If steamed dry off in the oven slowly for an hour.

CHRISTMAS PUDDINGS AND A CAKE.

The following is a famous English pudding which it will be worth while to keep in the family:

Christmas Pudding.—One and a fourth pounds of suet, one and a half pounds of currants, one and a half pounds of raisins, one half pound of lemon and orange peel mixed, three-fourths of a pound of breadcrumbs, one-fourth of a pound of flour, one half pound of sugar, four eggs, a quarter of a cup of orange or grape juice, a cup of chopped almonds and a chopped apple. Stir well, put into a well greased basin or mold, tie a cloth tightly over and boil 12 hours. The pudding may be partly cooked and finish cooking another day. Serve with a creamed butter with whipped cream added, flavor with vanilla. This pudding may be re-steamed as long as it lasts.

Christmas Pound Cake.—Cream a half pound of butter and add gradually a half pound of fine granulated sugar, then add the yolks of five eggs beaten until thick, the grated rind of one-half a lemon, two teaspoonfuls of lemon juice, a half pound of flour, mixed and sifted with one-fourth of a teaspoon of soda. Beat three minutes and add a half pound of raisins cut fine with the scissors and dredged with one and a half tablespoonfuls of flour, add a half cup of walnut meats, broken in pieces. Add the beaten white. Turn into a buttered and floured angel cake pan and bake 55 minutes. Remove from the pan, cover with boiled frosting and place on a plate on a tray garnished with holly berries and leaves.

Christmas Frozen Pudding.—Beat the yolks of six eggs slightly. Add a half cup of sugar, a fourth of a teaspoonful of salt, and pour on gradually two cupfuls of milk, stirring constantly, cook in a double boiler until the mixture thickens. Put a half cup of sugar in a saucepan and stir constantly until the sugar is melted, when brown but not burned, add to the custard and let stand until all dissolved.

The Secret of Baldness.

The actual condition of the scalp and of the hair has very much less to do with the health of the latter than is popularly supposed. The bulbs of the roots of the hair go down completely through the skin and into the fatty layer which lies between it and the skull, and the thing that to the expert eye is really significant of the prospect as to progress or cure in a particular case of baldness is not the condition or color or cleanliness of the scalp, but the thickness or thinness of this fatty layer, which underlies it. So long as this is present and the scalp is freely movable over the skull there is hope of restoring a reasonable growth of hair, but when this fat has been absorbed and the shiny scalp sticks as closely to the skull as the cover on a baseball the outlook is practically hopeless. This, of course, shows at once the futility of most of the local applications to and manipulations of the scalp, from which it suffers untold torments in those who are or imagine themselves to be becoming bald.

A Preparatory Course.

There is a judge in Salem, Mass., who, behind a benignant exterior, hides an occasional surprise for persistent evildoers. Not long ago there came up before him for sentence two youths who had been guilty of a long sequence of misdeeds. Both were under age, each having just passed his nineteenth birthday. Having been caught with the goods on them, they had pleaded guilty in the hope of getting off with a light punishment.

"Now, then, boys," he said softly, "I'm going to send you two to the state reformatory for two years apiece"—his voice suddenly changed—"and while you're there you can both be studying for the state penitentiary."

—Saturday Evening Post.

Colors of the Rainbow.

Violet, indigo, blue, green, yellow, orange and red are the colors of the rainbow. Most are sure of that. It is true, however, of only a very few rainbows. The colors of rainbows vary with their width, and their width varies with the size of the raindrops, big drops producing narrow bows with bright, clearly defined colors, small drops producing wide bows with pale colors. Here are the colors as generally seen: First, when the raindrops average one millimeter in diameter, violet, light blue, bluish green, green, yellow, orange, light red, dark red; second, when the drops average three-tenths of a millimeter in diameter, violet, light blue, bluish green, green, yellow, orange, and, third, when the drops average one-tenth of a millimeter, very pale violet, violet, whitish blue, whitish green.

In an Egyptian Hotel.

Soft rugs—real oriental rugs—comfort one's feet; vistas and glimpses of things half seen through arches and doorways soothe the eyes. Oh, those half concealed nooks behind screens of tall palms, where one finds a luxurious couch and inlaid taboret and sips his tiny cup of Turkish coffee! A dragonian comes into the lobby with a bunch of luscious La France roses in his bronzed hand. The porter, in gorgeous livery of green and gold, motions him to an Arab servant in starch white, with broad red girdle and tarboosh, and golden hoops in his ears. On the second floor, as you go to your room, every servant on guard along the corridor rises and salutes as you pass, and you feel you really are somebody worth while—you get a little better opinion of yourself.—Suburban Life.

Measles and Morals.

Miss Rosamond Napier, in "Tess Harcourt," has this little gem of a story:

"Another little boy to see you, miss," said old Rolson, the butler, to Tess.

This was a very fiery red but clean little boy, holding tightly a book covered in black cloth.

"Well, Tommy?"

"Please, miss, I've brought back the library book as you give Sunday, as we've got measles."

Tess beamed all over her face. At last her words were bearing fruit.

"Good boy, Tommy!" she encouraged. "Who has got them in your house?"

"Me, miss, please. I broked out Tuesday."

Oratorios in English.

Speaking of the wonderful enunciation of Sims Reeves, Sir Frederic Cowen relates an anecdote illustrative of the opposite effect. "One could always understand what he was singing about, not like a certain other artist of the time (it is true she was German, who invariably turned the words of Mendelssohn's 'Oh, for the wings of a dove' into 'Oh, forty winks, forty winks!'"

How dear to our heart is the steady subscriber
Who pays in advance at the birth of each year,
Who lays down the money and does it quite gladly,
And casts 'round the office a halo of cheer.
He never says "Stop it; I cannot afford it;
I'm getting more papers now than I read."
But always says, "Send it, our people all like it—
In fact, we all think it a help and a need."
How welcome his check when it reaches our sanctum,
How it makes our pulse throb, how it makes our heart dance!
We outwardly thank him, we inwardly bless him—

Sociability Avenue.

From his personal experience, Jack London gives in his recent wonderful story, "John Barleycorn," some hard knocks to the theory that the man who becomes the victim of alcohol is necessarily of a weak physical and mental stock. Such there may be, but there are others who, like Jack London, find themselves in the toils of John Barleycorn through social custom or appeal which become so thoroughly interwoven with life that even when fully aware of its danger, the victim decides that while he will no more let drink have its old sway over his life [if he can control it] he can not sever the social ties of association with drink.

The man whose experience was related by Samuel Bly the found in the sudden transition to the non-drinking life the severance of old ties the hardest part of the re-adjustment, though he thought it worth while because "even though you miss the fun of the evening, you have your drinking friends lashed to the mast in the morning."

Dr. Lambert discovered that more than half the alcoholics questioned at Bellevue Hospital came into the habit through Sociability Avenue.

The comments, especially those in the British press, on Secretary Bryan's courteous establishment of a non-alcoholic regime in hospitality show that the world has a good bit of way to travel yet in understanding that there is a well-defined reason for abandoning the social use of drink, and that to abandon it is not a mere personal caprice.

Meanwhile the words of Consul-General Wilder at Shanghai may well be a living inspiration in intelligently changing the old harmful ideas of hospitality. "It is a fine thing to help the individual man or woman, but it is divine statecraft to build up a good custom, or to break down a bad one which may control the actions of men long after individuals are forgotten."

The words of another prominent woman reformer along this line are also of significance: "It is not necessary to hospitality to serve wine or liquor, and is no breach of etiquette to refuse it."

Blindness From Wood Alcohol.

One of the most popular features of the Exposition on Safety and Sanitation held in Grand Central Palace in New York City in December was the section on the Prevention of Blindness, conducted by the New York Committee for the Prevention of Blindness, which has just begun some new moves in its state-wide campaign for the preservation of eyesight. The committee's exhibit took the form of charts, cuts lantern slides and moving pictures, illustrating the manifold menaces to the eyesight of the public. There were explained by a series of lectures by experts in the various phases of the subject.

The phases of the subject new and astonishing to most visitors at the Exposition was a demonstration of the general danger of blindness from the use of wood alcohol, which, it was shown, is becoming an article of common use in the average home, through the growing prevalence of the illegal employment of this poison as an adulterant in many articles of commerce.

"Total blindness has been caused by unwittingly drinking as small a quantity of wood alcohol as a teaspoonful. The mere inhaling of the fumes of various commonly used commercial fluids containing wood alcohol may and often does cause blindness and even death," declared Dr. Gerald Grout who lectured on this phase of the exhibit. This the speaker said had been demonstrated only recently by the study of a number of cases brought to the attention of the New York Committee for the Prevention of Blindness under whose auspices last evening's session was held. Dr. Grout added that this poison was becoming an insidious menace to every member of society through its constantly increasing illegal use in such substances as Jamaica ginger, paregoric, anisette, white brandy, bay rum, spirits of lavender and varnish.

Ithaca Street Railway.

The property of the Ithaca Street Railway Company, including all track, power stations, rolling stock, rights of way and franchises, was Tuesday, Jan. 13, sold at foreclosure for $100,000 to H. W. Fitz, chairman of the bondholders' committee. No other bid was made.

The sale was made subject to mortgages aggregating $275,000 and receivers' certificates amounting to $38,040.85. In addition to these liabilities the purchasers must pay all court costs incident to the foreclosure and receivership, approximately $15,000. Considering these items which represent obligations assumed by the purchasers, the real price brought by the sale is about $425,000.

The next step will be the confirmation of the sale by the Supreme Court which will probably take place within a month. Following this the new company will be formed. In this connection it is to be assumed that the directors will be made up for the most part of the members of the existing bondholders' committee with a few others.

The sale of the Ithaca-Auburn Short Line at foreclosure is about to be advertised for March 6 by Referee E. N. Jackson. Unlike the Street Railway property, there is no opposition to the sale of the Ithaca Auburn road, and it will undoubtedly be bid in by a representative of the bondholders' committee for $175,000 or $200,000.

The road will be sold subject to a mortgage for $1,000,000, of which $975,000 is outstanding. The only lien against the property is the receivers' certificates, amounting to $145,000 and court costs amounting to approximately $15,000. The bid must either cover the amount of receivers' certificates and court costs or the purchasers must guarantee to meet those obligations. Practically all of the bonds of the Ithaca Auburn road are held by members of the bondholders' committee, a scattered few being held by other individuals. —Ithaca Journal.

An Old Soldier.

(Contributed.)

John Wesley Hubert, whose sudden death occurred on Jan. 5, 1914, was born Oct. 22, 1842, in the town of Genoa, where he had lived the greater part of his life. He was the oldest son of the late Stephen Hubert. He learned the miller's trade when a young man with his father. He married Miss Emma A. Ashby, whose death occurred very suddenly on Feb. 8, 1911. No children were born to them.

John Hubert enlisted in the civil war in Co. H, Third Regt., New York Vols., Aug. 30, 1864 and was discharged June 24, 1865, at Richmond, Va.

He associated himself in partnership with his father in the Genoa steam mill in 1873, and they sold the same to Daniel Rose, for whom he worked in the mill for quite a number of years and finally re-purchased the mill with F. Sullivan as partner, whose interest he finally purchased becoming sole owner, for a time. On account of ill health he was compelled to sell out, and moved to the farm he purchased, where he regained his health to a large degree. During the last year his health began to fail, but his condition was not considered dangerous. The news of his sudden death came as a shock to his friends.

The deceased is survived by two sisters, Mrs. Ella Eddy, whose home has been with him for several years, and Mrs. Nellie Chatterton of Cortland, also one brother, Earl S. Hubert, of Locke.

The funeral was held on Thursday, Jan. 8, Rev. Allington of North Lansing officiating. Beautiful floral emblems from relatives and friends were placed on the ca-ke-t. Burial in Genoa cemetery.

Attains 94th Year.

Henry B. Lord, Ithaca's venerable banker, celebrated his 93rd birthday on Sunday, Jan. 18. Mr. Lord remains very active, and attended the annual meeting of the First National Bank last week on one of the most bitter cold days in recent years. Early in December he attended the sessions of supreme court in the county courthouse during the trial of a case involving the estate of the late Charles T. Chittenden of which he is one of the executors.

Until snow came making the sidewalks slippery, Mr. Lord walked to the bank every Tuesday to attend the regular meetings of the directors of the bank.

Mr. Lord began his career as a business man in the town of Lansing. He kept a store in Ludlowville and was postmaster there for a long time. He also was supervisor of the town for several years. May Weddings.

In ancient Rome there was held in May a festival called the Lemuria, or feast of the Lemures, which was a ceremony in honor of the spirits or departed souls. It became with the Romans what we should call "bad form" to have matrimonial feasts at the season of a solemn ritual, being no doubt thought to be an insult to the dead to marry at such a time. From this a number of stories grew of the revenge made by the outraged ghosts upon those who dared to disregard them, and if anything unfortunate happened to a couple who had been married in May it would, of course, have been put down to retribution. So the repugnance to May weddings arose, and its influence has lasted ever since, even to our time.—Exchange.

The Unattainable.

Old Mr. Dinsmore had a great habit of lecturing to young men of his acquaintance. One evening Wilbur Moore, a young man from the city, was calling at the Dinsmore home. "Have an ideal, young man," said the old gentleman enthusiastically. "Always have an ideal, I say, and hug it to your bosom at all times and places." "I believe that, too, sir," agreed the young man, "but she won't let me." —New York Times.

Discoverer of Iodine.

To very few people does the name of Bernard Courtois signify anything. Yet it is to Bernard Courtois that the world owes the discovery of iodine. A chemist of Dijon, he presented 100 years ago the notice of his discovery to the academy.—London Telegraph.

The world generally gives its admiration not to the man who does what nobody else ever attempts to do, but to the man who does best what multitudes do well.—Macaulay.

Farmers' Week, Feb. 9 to 14.

Farmers' week at Cornell has come to be a meeting place of the farming interests of the state of New York. For the last three years the Farmers' Weeks have been great country-life conferences, covering practically the whole range of agriculture and country life as applied to this State. In one form or another most of the main agricultural, social, economic, and educational questions have been discussed. Many associations make Farmers' Week the time and place for meetings. Religious and educational institutions and groups have met the practical farmer for discussion of their common problems. All the discussions have been within the range of good practice, and yet the enthusiasm of the conventions has run high. Great results for New York are following these annual gatherings. Farmers' Week of this year promises, if the weather is favorable, to call together an unusually large assemblage. Last year the attendance exceeded three thousand.

With the aid of the faculty and special speakers a program of three hundred lectures is offered.

Open meetings of many agricultural organizations are scheduled; also conferences on important problems. Demonstrations, exhibits, illustrated lectures, and laboratory exercises will be used to make the teaching more effective.

Railroad rates are reduced by the principal lines in New York State to a cent and a half per mile from all points in the state except within fifty miles of New York city. Inquire of your railroad agent.

Complete programs will be sent on request as soon as available. Address the Extension Department, College of Agriculture, Ithaca, N. Y.

TROUBLE WITH THE FAT MAN

Conductor and Motorman Were Advised How to Put Him Off the Street Car.

A large man, weighing about 200 pounds, who had imbibed freely enough to be somewhat unsteady on his legs, boarded a Brooklyn car the other evening. The sudden starting of the car caused him to fall against the iron railing, and in so doing he ripped his coat. This unfortunate circumstance, combined with the laughter of the passengers, angered him, and he sullenly seated himself somewhere about the center of the car.

Upon being asked by the conductor for "Fare, please," he refused to pay. "If you don't pay I will put you off," said the conductor.

"Go ahead!" said the man. The conductor attempted to make good his threat, but as he was a small man, found it impossible to budge the two-hundred-odd pounds before him. Then he called on the motorman for assistance.

The motorman took hold on one side, the conductor on the other. They half dragged, half lifted, the man toward the door. All this time he did not utter a word. Suddenly, however, he convulsed the other passengers with the remark: "Be careful, now. No more force than absolutely necessary."

ALK happiness. The world is sad enough. Without your woes. No path is wholly rough. Look for the places that are smooth and clear. And speak of those to rest the weary ear. Of earth, so hurt by one continuous strain. Of human discontent and grief and pain. —E. W. Wilcox.

DAINTY DISHES FOR CHRISTMAS.

Chestnuts may be used in different ways to grace the Christmas table. As stuffing for the fowl or as a sweetmeat, or dessert.

Chestnut Custard Pie.—Line a pie plate with a good rich crust. Boil a sufficient quantity of chestnuts to make a cupful of pulp when mashed. Add a pint of milk, the yolks of two eggs, a half cupful of sugar and a teaspoonful of vanilla. Turn this into the lined plate and spread a meringue over the top after it has baked 20 minutes. Make the meringue by beating the two whites, adding two tablespoonfuls of powdered sugar. Brown the meringue in a moderate oven.

Steamed Cider Pudding.—Cream a tablespoonful and a half of butter, add three tablespoonfuls of sugar and one egg. Beat all together until very light. Now pour in half a cupful each of raisins and currants mixed with a quarter of a cup of flour. Add half a teaspoonful of cinnamon, a quarter of a teaspoonful of grated nutmeg, a pinch of cloves and a cupful of flour. Sift this all together into the batter, adding a quarter of a teaspoonful of soda. Pour into a well greased mold and steam one and a half hours. Turn out carefully, as the texture is delicate. Serve hot with a sauce flavored with the juice of an orange.

Chestnut Cup.—Have ready vanilla ice cream and chestnuts cooked in lemon or orange sirup and then cut in slices. Dispose the chestnuts with a little sirup in the bottom of the sherbet cups, add a spoonful of vanilla and then pour over a little of the sirup, and top it with a spoonful of sweetened and flavored whipped cream.

Christmas Fruit Cookies.—Beat half a cup of butter to a cream, add half a cup of sugar, half a cup of raisins chopped fine, three tablespoonfuls of milk. Sift together two cupfuls of flour, one-fourth teaspoon of soda, cloves and nutmeg and a half teaspoonful of cinnamon. Roll and cut. Bake one, and if it spreads add more flour.

Nellie Maxwell.

THE KITCHEN CABINET

IT IS more of good manners to show courtesy to servants or to any in humble station of life. A polite request is always better than a stern command. Whoever shows disregard of the feelings of a servant or one in humble station gives unmistakable proof of ill-breeding.

TEMPTING CHRISTMAS CONFECTIONS.

One nice thing about bon bons the foundation may be made and kept for weeks, without hurting it in the least and one may then make the French candy a day or two before it is wanted and so have it deliciously fresh.

Fondant for chocolate creams should be just as soft as possible to handle and those who know say that if it is frozen and small bits used quickly and covered with chocolate we have the very creamy texture which is so desirable for the filling of the chocolate creams. All one needs to do is to set the fondant out in the cold over night to freeze.

Fondant.—To insure a smooth velvety candy ungrained the addition of a small amount of glucose added to the sugar and water will save the need of careful watching. To four cups of sugar add a cup of water and two tablespoonfuls of glucose. The glucose may be bought at any confectionery shop and is perfectly wholesome used in small quantities for this purpose. Cook the candy until a little is dropped in cold water it may be gathered in the fingers into a soft waxy ball. The softer the candy can be worked the more delicate the candy. It should be kept covered with a buttered paper in a close dish or jar. When the candy is cool enough to bear dipping in a finger, begin to stir and stir until a white waxy mass as smooth as velvet is the result. Use what is needed for the time and put the remainder away for the future.

For chocolate creams have the fondant very cold and handle quickly so that it does not melt and spoil the shape. Mold into balls and set out again to chill. When thoroughly cold dip them into melted chocolate. Put a piece of chocolate into a small sauce pan and set it into hot water. A hot pin or a wire with a small loop in the end is good to use for dipping the bon bons. Drain on waxed paper and put at once in a cold place.

SWALLOWING A PILL.

By Being Too Conscious of the Act We Make It Difficult.

Reduced to plain words, the scientific reason why so many people find it exceedingly difficult to swallow a pill is because they try to.

While this sounds paradoxical, it is, nevertheless, true, according to the best of authorities. The explanation is that in eating our food we swallow it almost automatically and give no thought to the act of swallowing, but with a pill we put it in the mouth and say to ourselves, "This is a very small object and will be difficult to swallow; I must make an effort to do this."

And right there is where the difficulty comes with most people. The muscular effort made to swallow the pill, accompanied by the thinking about the act, really hinders the proper working of the throat muscles that would otherwise act properly in carrying the pill down the throat.

A similar condition is that of a musician playing well when alone and faltering in the presence of listeners. It has been advanced that fear inconveniences the nervous system, causing the musician to fumble and the pill swallower to procrastinate.—New York World.

Majority and Plurality.

In politics the plurality is the greatest of more than two numbers and is also the excess of the highest number of votes cast for any one candidate over the next highest number. When a candidate receives out of 10,000 votes cast 4,000 and two other candidates receive respectively 3,500 and 2,500, the first is elected by a plurality, though he has received less than a majority of the whole vote, and he is said to have a plurality of 500 votes. If the numbers are 6,000, 3,000 and 1,000, the majority is 2,000 and the plurality is 3,000. A majority, therefore, must be more than half the entire vote cast, and a candidate's majority is, then, the difference between the number of votes he received and the combined number of votes cast for all other candidates; his plurality is the difference between his own number and the number received by the candidate nearest to him.

No Room for Jesus

By REV. PARLEY E. ZARTMANN, D. D., Secretary of Extension Department, Moody Bible Institute, Chicago

TEXT—Because there was no room for them in the inn.—Luke 2:7.

Another Christmas will be here soon, and in many lands devout Christians will sing the Christmas songs and tell the Christmas story; churches will be filled with splendor, hearts with love, and life with gladness. But let us consider the first Christmas, the tragedy of it, and the reception given to him who came to be Israel's Messiah and the world's Savior.

No room in the inn. Is there a more pathetic sentence anywhere in the Scriptures? The humble peasants who had come from Galilee and who sought shelter in one of the village caravanserais were denied this privilege; so they both took shelter in a stable; and there Jesus was born. No room for the King! The pathos of it is almost too deep for words.

But that was always the answer while Jesus was alive; he himself described it when he said: Foxes have holes and birds of the air have nests, but the Son of Man hath not where to lay his head. Misunderstood at home, neglected by his friends, deserted by his disciples, betrayed by one of them, and crucified by the rulers—Nazareth, Capernaum, Jerusalem—no room for Jesus.

Through the centuries it has been the same; that first night on earth was a prophesy, for in spite of apostles, martyrs, saints and reformers Jesus had not found room in religious, political, social or individual spheres of life in the case of the millions who have gone on their way either unheeding or indifferent. O the tragedy of the centuries—no room for Jesus. The Lord of all despised by the many. The region of outer darkness is filled with those who said, We will not have this one rule over us; depart; no room for the King!

"Room for pleasure, room for business. But for Christ the crucified, Not a place that he can enter. In your heart for which he died?"

No room for Jesus. It is true today. Christ is not wanted, and the Bethlehem story repeats itself. In the city life proof is found in the legalized saloon and all that goes with it, in corrupt and vicious government, in loose laws and looser enforcement, in dishonest business, in social laxity and impurity. In many homes evidence is seen in the character of the books in the library, the pictures upon the walls, careless, ill-tempered and profane language and conversation, and the ungodly habits of parents and the irreverence and disobedience of children. He who came to make home life heaven has been denied his place.

And just as our knowledge about this Jesus is greater than in that time, so is our responsibility heavier, our shame deeper, our sin greater. "We know him in all the light which his word and which all subsequent history cast upon him. We know him too—and this is our weightiest responsibility—in the claims which are set up eternally by the Cross of Calvary." What will we say to him in the end?

What is wrong? Why do we keep Christ out? Why are our hearts closed against him? Is it opposition? No, not usually. Let us look at Bethlehem, for there is a slight parallel. Any Jewish mother however humble would have rejoiced at the great honor which came to Mary, and any home however lowly would have been made ready for Jesus. Any ruler, rabbi, or priest then in Bethlehem would have taken any step necessary to welcome Jesus, if he had known. But it was a time when every available space was taken by pilgrims, these peasants did not look like promising guests, people were pre-occupied with what they considered weightier matters, and so literally Christ was crowded out; even in the public place, there was no room in the inn—the inn was full.

Bethlehem will rise up and condemn us. If it had known the day of its visitation, room would have been made for Jesus, he would have had a royal reception. But you know about him; he has sent word to you; he has been waiting for a place in your heart; you know who he is and what he will do for you; you have heard the story of his love and grace and power, and still—no room for Jesus.

"Behold, I stand at the door and knock." Will you not let him in? I said this text was the most pathetic verse in the Bible; but it is not so pathetic as the tragedy of the men and women of today who are pre-occupied with the world, the flesh and the devil, and who in wilful and culpable rejection crowd Christ out of their lives, who give themselves over to the things of time and sense, and send Christ to the stable. Come, now, and let us reason together.

HOW WIRE DEAL CAME TO BE MADE

Sidelights on Absorption of the Western Union.

ITS STOCK WAS AT LOW EBB

But Under Control of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company It Gained Rapidly in Value—Attack by the Postal Was the First Blow Combination Received.

In 1909 just after the American Telephone and Telegraph company absorbed the Western Union Telegraph company, from which alliance it now offers to divorce itself, President Vail of the latter company said:

"There is much to gain by the joint construction and maintenance of plant and by its common use to the greatest possible extent. But the greatest advantage would follow the placing of millions of telephone subscribers in close and reliable connection with the receiving and dispatching of the telegraph offices."

The vigorous fight of the Postal Telegraph company on this very connection of the telephone and the telegraph service of the American company and the Western Union was the first big blow at the combination of the two. The telephone company instructed its operators, it was alleged, to switch all subscribers wishing to send a telegram on to the wires and offices of the Western Union.

Then the Postal alleged discrimination against the telephone company and brought complaints in several states.

Its complaint in New York was sustained by the public service commission, and the telephone company discontinued the use of the code word and instructed its operators to make subscribers state their preference of telegraph companies.

History of the American Company.

The American company dates from 1885, incorporated in New York, and until 1900 owning and operating only the long distance lines of the American Bell Telephone company. In that year the local lines owned by local companies of the American Bell, which were scattered throughout the United States and Canada, but did not comprise all the local companies, were taken over by the American Telephone and Telegraph.

One of the points of attack by the Postal company was overcapitalization, by which higher rates for service were necessitated.

The system of telephone companies thus comprised grew by the organization of new companies and the absorption of others until the central company now owns, either in whole or in part, local and state companies in every state of the Union and some in Canada. The central company performs central administration for all the companies and furnishes telephones, for which it receives from the subsidiaries 4 1/2 per cent of their gross yearly receipts.

The territory of the United States is divided into eight parts—the New England, eastern, southern, central, northwestern, southwestern, mountain and Pacific. The total wire exchange and toll service is 14,610,813 miles. The number of exchange stations is 5,200,000 and the stations of independents connected with the system 2,620,000. The number of independents connected with the system is 25,000.

The company, besides its telephone and telegraph subsidiaries, owns the Western Electric company, which is practically the manufacturing plant for the system.

The control of the Western Union was gained in the purchase of about $20,000,000 to $25,000,000 par value of the $99,787,000 stock of the Western Union. In 1911 the American Telephone's ownership of Western Union stock amounted to $29,657,200. This was acquired, it is understood, at about $85 a share.

The property had been run down sadly, and its earnings in the seven years preceding its purchase had steadily declined until they approached a deficit at the time the company was taken into the telephone system. Scrip instead of cash was being paid in dividends in 1908.

Western Union Earnings Increased.

The purchase by the American Telephone company was a distinct advantage to it and its earnings have steadily increased from a gross of $30,000,000 in 1908 to $41,000,000 in 1912, with large surpluses yearly, though dividends have been reduced from 5 to 3 per cent.

The attitude of the department of justice toward the telephone company was first actually revealed in the filing of a suit last July at Portland, Ore., aimed at the company operating in Oregon, Washington, Montana and Idaho. It was an anti-trust suit and alleged that the subsidiary companies had been illegally acquired.

All financial experts who have examined the American properties say that the 54,000 stockholders, of whom a majority are women, have nothing to fear financially in the voluntary dissolution.

The movement of the stock since it became so much a focus of government attention, both for prospective dissolution and for government ownership, has been nervous. The highest the stock has been in recent years was 180 in 1902.
