THE ARMY MULE.

One of the most interesting features of the late army maneuvers in Connecticut was the experimental employment, on an extensive scale, of the motor-truck. More than 2,000 tons of freight were handled through the bases of supply during the eight days of mimic war, says the Philadelphia Press. Some of the trucks were geared to run as fast as 30 miles an hour, and it was in the work of conveying expeditiously the baggage from the bases of supplies to the secondary bases that these trucks, according to expert opinion, conclusively demonstrated that they had displaced the mule-train in this field. The chief quartermaster, Colonel Bellinger, is reported by the Motor Age as saying: "I am firmly convinced that the army truck has come to stay." He added, however, these significant words: "Where the roads are suitable it cannot be superseded." There's the rub. Who may say when the roads shall be "suitable" in actual warfare? It sounds well to speak of the capacity of the mule-wagon as only 3,000 pounds with a haul of by 20 miles a day, as against 80 miles for the truck; and, after reference to the supreme importance of speed in ambulance service, to declare that the mule is likely to be placed henceforth in the list of obsolete army accessories. But we note this saving clause: "Only in the very limited condition of impassable roads is it impractical to use the truck along the actual battle-front."

Will the apple ever again become an article of common consumption? Or will it remain in the luxury list, somewhere, say, between truffles and bacon? There have been no eating apples within the range of any but the fattest pocketbook for many seasons, while the character of the pie apple is such as to require uncommon aptitude for the composition of the crust to make a pie fit to eat; or else the cost of the filling has required that the pie must be nearly all crust.

LITTLE KNOWN OF NEGRITOS

Scientist, However, Believes They Are the Original Natives of the Philippines.

Dr. Philip Newton, lecturer and investigator of the National Museum in Washington, D. C., who has just returned from the Philippines, believes that the diminutive negroes called the Negritos, who are found in the mountains of all the larger islands of the Philippine group, are the original natives of the Philippines. "They have been gradually driven into the mountains by superior forces," said Doctor Newton, "and today I presume there are not more than 25,000 of them in the islands. They are the perfect type of savage. They have no houses, wear no clothing and live by hunting. Occasionally—very occasionally—they grow a little rice. They use poisoned arrows and are very similar in stature and habits to the African dwarfs. The men are usually four feet six inches or seven inches in height and the women about four feet five inches. Among themselves they think nothing of murder. In the northeastern part of Luzon there are large bodies of them in a district never yet penetrated by white men."

KNOW SOMETHING ABOUT IT

Hubby's Confession Did Him Honor, but Really Was Not Much of a Surprise to Wife.

"Marie," said Mr. Valesburg to his wife. "Yes, John." "I have something on my mind that I must tell you before I can ever be happy." "I shall be glad to hear anything you have to say, John." "It is hard to tell you, but I can't hide the truth any longer. Marie, I married you under false pretenses." "You did!" "Do you remember what it was that brought us together?" "Can I ever forget it, John? We were at the bathing beach, I was drowning, and you saved me after I had given myself up for lost." "And afterward, in gratitude, you married me." "Yes, I felt that I owed my life to you." "Marie, I deluded you about that rescue business. Where you believed yourself drowning the water was only waist deep. You were never in danger." "I knew it, John," she answered. "I had one foot on the bottom all the time."

CURIOSITY THAT MET REBUKE

Inquisitive Grocer More Than Met his Match When He Questioned the Small Girl.

The proposal to strengthen the secrecy of the ballot by voting by mail reminded Senator Williams of an election day story. "Voting by mail," he said, "is a radical proposition that I'd hesitate to advocate without further study; but I do most heartily favor inviolable secrecy as regards the ballot." "Even a harmless curiosity about the ballot is contemptible. A Sallina grocer said to a little girl one election day: "Who is your father going to vote for this morning, my dear?" "I don't know," the little girl answered. "Will he vote the Republican ticket?" "I don't know." "I wonder if he'll vote Democratic?" "I don't know." "He wouldn't vote Prohibition, surely?" "I don't know." "The grocer, as he tied up the little girl's package, sneered: "Well, you don't know much, and that's a fact." "You know less," the little girl answered, "or you wouldn't be asking so many questions!"

MARVEL IN GATHERING NEWS

Ordinary Man Cannot Appreciate What the Production of a Great Journal Involves.

The ordinary reader, as he opens his daily journal, is content with a vague feeling that it somehow edits and composes itself; he seldom reflects upon the immense amount of organization, upon the care in the selection of news, and even upon the mechanical skill in adjustment so that every column may be exactly filled, which are required for even the most normal issue. He seldom reflects upon the speed with which it all has to be done. That a great paper should appear morning after morning generally correct in its news, readable and sound in its literary matter, accurate in its printing, that it should be distributed all over the country and the world at the right moment, is none the less a marvel because it has happened so often that people have ceased to look upon it with surprise.

NAPOLEON III. IN AMERICA

Real Louis Was Not as Dilapidated as He Has Been Pictured by Mark Twain.

Probably no written portrait of the third Napoleon is better known to Americans than that embodied in the rhetorical apostrophe of Mark Twain in "The Innocents Abroad," where he contrasts the emperor of the French and the sultan of Turkey at their meeting in Paris in 1867. It was thought very fine and stirring at the time, but it is a picture to provoke curiosity and amusement today. Mark Twain described how the future emperor carried his dreams with him into exile, how he associated with the common herd in America, and ran foot races for a wager, how he walked his weary beat, a common policeman of London. That he carried his dreams into exile, that his belief in his star never wavered, is unquestionably true. But it is not quite so romantic a figure, not such a dilapidated a Louis Napoleon, that we see in the accounts of more careful historians than Mark Twain. For example, there is "Intimate Memoirs of Napoleon III," by the late Baron d'Ambes. D'Ambes was not with Louis Napoleon in America, but it was from the prince's own lips that he claimed he received the impressions of that visit. Louis Napoleon came to Norfolk, Va., from Rio de Janeiro on the frigate Andromede. The commander, Henri de Villeneuve, was very kind to the exile, and the prince thanked him with the words "You are obliging a man who will one day be emperor of the French, unfortunate as he may appear at present. I shall not forget you." The Andromede arrived at Norfolk March 30, 1837. The prince proceeded straight to New York and dined at Gen. Watson Webb's, where he found General Scott, his two brothers-in-law, the Stewarts, and a number of senators and statesmen.

MERELY A VARIETY OF GUM

Nothing Wonderful About the Production of Frankincense to Those Who Deal in It.

Frankincense is a variety of gum that frequently forms a component of incense, but the term is not met with in commerce, to which incense means a gum that exudes from a tree flourishing in considerable quantities in British Somaliland and elsewhere. There is an inferior gum of this kind that grows in India and other countries of the east.

The incense tree seldom attains a height exceeding 15 feet. It presents

AD. TIPS FROM PHILIPPINES

"Reading Notice" of a Co-operative Publicity Company Full of Enthusiasm and Poor English.

A copy of a Philippine newspaper carries a "reading notice" ad of a co-operative publicity company at Manila. The enthusiasm, at least, of the ad is genuine, but a reading of it leads one to ask if a new grammar of English usage is being evolved in our island possessions. Some of the more stirring passages follow:

"Keeping your eye on the 'inquiry record file,' in order to determine results obtained, and simultaneously ascertain the value of your 'ad carrying publication,' is conflicting and inaccurate.

"In how many languages and dialects published (the more naturally the merrier.)

"Carefully compare the above with the trend of public opinion, whether economic, industrial, independent, or extremely politic, then, without the aid of a 'White's academic arithmetic,' the fact of whether or not, such publications as you might be interested in are of interest to the masses is accurately ascertained.

"Any publication whose policy is directly in line with public opinion and which is published in the familiar languages of the people are capable of results.

"In the Philippine Islands, customs and traditions are different, doings are done quite distinct, and as has been repeatedly demonstrated in former articles on this subject, methods that have proved resultful in other countries, are wholly impracticable here. It has been discovered that periodicals whose entire editions failed to elicit a single inquiry, were directly responsible for increased business. Not one-fourth of those, whom some advertisement have attracted make inquiries, but, most generally make a note of the article advertised and the distributor, for immediate or future reference; when ever he or some townsman are presented with the opportunity of visiting some city or the Metropolis, the article desired is purchased and sent far as the

PUBLICITY PAYS.

A man there was in our town
Who kept himself in view,
No matter what he did, forsooth,
The public always knew.

His name was in the papers once
Or maybe twice a day,
In all assemblies he was one
Who had the most to say.

He hurried here and hurried there,
As busy as could be,
At banquets and in long parades
He showed his dignity.

'Twas thus he lived for many years,
And when he came to die
The city all in mourning stood,
A tear in every eye.

A marble shaft proclaimed his worth,
And people called him great,
A man who started low in life,
But rose to high estate.

And yet he simply played a game—
A simple game 'twas, too,
No matter what he did, forsooth,
The public always knew.

ADVERTISING A LUBRICANT

Makes Success in Any Business More
Sure and Easy, Declares Philadelphia Merchant.

At the eighth annual convention of the National Association of Stationers and Manufacturers held in Omaha, Neb., Charles H. Marshall of Philadelphia, though unable to attend, had a paper on "Advertising a Retail Business," prepared by him, presented by one of the delegates, in which emphasis is given to the fact that the newspaper is the great advertising medium for good results, both to start with and to be followed up. He takes ground that successful advertising represents a combination of "brains, nerve and patience." He asserted that the advertising must be thoroughly practical and that the advertiser must have the goods to back up his advertising. The square deal is the chief power of advertising, according to Mr. Marshall.

"Use newspaper for quick introduction," advocates the Philadelphia merchant, "and the other mediums for a more thorough exploitation. While some theorists assert that the best goods will sell themselves, it is nevertheless true that advertising is a lubricant and makes success the more easy.

"A regular plan of campaign should be formulated before a merchant starts to advertise," says Mr. Marshall. "For hap-hazard advertising is likely to do more harm than good. The newspaper is the great medium for a start, but should be followed up. It is inadvisable to use but one newspaper in a city, if there be more than one for the newspaper's advertising carrier of the sleeping sickness, which is said to have depopulated considerable districts in the heart of Africa. It is a biting fly. Recent students of the stable fly, which is under suspicion in this country, have said that it more nearly resembles the tsetse fly than any other American representative of the fly family. The specimens which Mr. Hale has brought into the country will enable comparisons to put this opinion to the test.

Recent investigations into the hours of work by officials of the French department of navigation have brought to light a record in government employment in the shape of an official whose daily "hours of duty" amount to exactly two minutes. This man dwells at a place on the Belgian frontier, and his arduous labors consist in fetching from one office a list of the number of barges that have entered French territory the previous twenty-four hours and handing the said list in at another office. If the position be a sinecure, the pay is not high, the remuneration amounting a $1.40 a month.

A Long Island amateur hunter has been sued for damages by the man whom he shot, mistaking his victim for a bird. This is one of the few instances of the sporting worm turning, but a little more of the dose will probably have the effect of vastly improving the average hunter's eyesight and knowledge of comparative anatomy.

"My professional brother was entirely sincere, and I was very glad to give him, in exchange for his card, my own with an order for a seat at my lecture. I particularly observed that he was present at my lecture, and that he listened to me intently from beginning to end of what I had to say. He paid me that great courtesy. I, however, went away from Boston without making use of his card. I fear that I have been discourteous to the gentleman. It worries me. If I should go back to Boston before my return to England I shall certainly make it a point to be as polite to him as he was to me. I shall be a visitor at his entertainment."

The effects of alcohol on the intellectual faculties and higher brain are best shown in the words of Dr. Clouston, the celebrated neurologist and mental specialist of London, England: "From the medical and scientific point of view we have this great physiological fact before us—that the first thing that alcohol does in 99 cases out of 100 is to effect the mental working of the brain of the man who imbibes."

The lunacy statistics of England and Wales as shown in the sixty-third report of the commissioners contains among other interesting and important facts the following statement: "Taking a survey of the last fifty years it is seen that lunacy has increased from 36,762 cases in 1859 to 128,787 cases on January 1, 1909, an increase of 92.025. This is not merely an actual increase keeping pace with the increase of population. It is a vast proportionate increase, for whilst population has increased by 81.5 per cent., lunacy has increased 250 per cent." Dr. Clouston in the report of Morningside Asylum as early as 1903 says: "Alcoholic insanity steadily goes up and now it has doubled." All neurologists in this country and in Europe agree that all nervous diseases and insanity are at the present time largely on the increase and the use of alcohol to increase and the

Nearly everybody believes that Benjamin Franklin was the inventor and constructor of the first lightning rod. DISCOURAGED AT THE START Youthful Hero Unfortunately Had Run Across One Who Did Not Like His Kind.

"And who are you, my lad?" inquired the kindly old gentleman in spectacles of the honest-eyed, ruddy-cheeked lad who stood manfully before him on the library step.

"Me?" interrogated the honest-eyed, etc., youth, smoothing down his ragged but clean shirt front. "Why, I am the boy with a widowed mother who has a mortgage on the farm, and I'm about to save the life of the only daughter of the village banker, and then I'm going out into the cold world and make a fortune and come back and astonish everybody by marrying the only daughter, etc., and then I'll—"

Whereupon the old gentleman said: "You are one of those Oliver Optic kids," and the kindly old, etc., kicked the honest-eyed, etc., remorselessly off the library steps.

Causes of Tempests.
Science attributes tempests to a general internal movement of detached masses of aerial projection, which traverse the general mass of the atmosphere like the discharge from a mitrailleuse. Even in time of calm the movements of the air may be complex. During periods of excessive heat puffs of air hot as from a furnace strike the exposed portions of the human body. The air mass at a normal temperature holds heat as the organism holds the cell. Such phenomena as the projectiles of heat are frequently produced several times within the period of a few minutes. The elastic condition of the air is not at all like the surrounding atmospheric strata. The heated air is sent out in projectilelike pulsations. The pulsations are produced not in high regions alone.

Wildcat Attacks Young Preacher.
Attacked by a wildcat El. Lamont Geissinger, a young preacher and student at Dickinson college, was driven down a steep side of North mountain, and as a result of his experience was nearly prostrated when he reached Doubling Gap.
Geissinger saw watching him through the bushes a pantherlike animal about five feet long. He started to run, but the beast leaped after him, made repeated attacks upon him, and although Geissinger dealt it several blows on the head with a club he could not beat the animal off.
The young preacher made as fast time as he could for more than a mile down the mountainside, with the wildcat following. It was not until he was inside the hotel that the animal abandoned its pursuit and sneaked back into the timber.—Carlisle Correspondence Philadelphia Press.

Supreme Sorrow.
All the bodily pangs and labors which motherhood and mother-care have cost age after age, is the least of their living. All the patient toiling which millions of mothers have imposed upon themselves when they alone have reared and fed their children, all the watchful nights, all the tired steps—all that mothers have denied themselves for the sake of their children, is not the greatest of their sufferings. That is their greatest sorrow, which a man has expressed in the poem wherein the mother throws her heart at her son's feet, who, as he angrily stumbles over it, hears the heart whisper, "Did you hurt yourself, my child?"—Ellen Key in the Atlantic.

Bees Stick to One Flower.
It is usually supposed, especially by the poets, that bees sip sweets indiscriminately from many a flower. All bees, including the honey bee, show a strong tendency in collecting both nectar and pollen to be constant to one species of flower. This is manifestly for the advantage of both insects and flowers. In the case of a number of bees flying for only a small part of the season this habit has become so specialized that they visit only one of a few allied species of flowers, which offer an abundance of nectar and pollen.

Many persons are of the opinion that the wireless system of communication is particularly subject to tapping, but, according to the Scientific American, no telegraph system is absolutely secret. Any one familiar with the Morse code can read ordinary messages entering any telegraph office. At Foidba, on a telephone connected to a long horizontal wire, the messages passing on a government telegraph line a quarter of a mile away can be distinctly read. It has been shown that it is possible to pick up at a distance, on another circuit, conversation which may be passing through a telephone or telegraph wire. On one occasion an investigator was able to interfere, at a distance, with the working of the ordinary telephones in Liverpool.

The New York Spectator prints the statement that the death rate from homicides in 30 American cities was 4.9 per hundred thousand in the decade 1892-1901 and 7.2 per hundred thousand in the decade 1902-1911. It explains that a homicide according to Blackstone, is "the killing of any human creature." There are too many accidental killings in American cities. The pace has grown appallingly swift in the past ten years.

At Coventry it is the custom to eat "God-cakes" on New Year's eve, and on December 30 and 21 the bakers of that city are busy turning out the delicacies by the hundredweight. A "God-cake" is triangular in shape, about half an inch thick, and filled with a kind of mince-meat; in fact, it is a glorified mince-pie.

There are scores of superstitions associated with the beginning of a New Year which the average person knows nothing about.

It is considered unlucky for the male inhabitants of the little island in the North Sea to be visited by a member of the fair sex on New Year's day, while fires must not be put out on that day in the south of England, or the luck of the year will be exceptionally bad.

On the continent, especially in out-of-the-way villages, it is customary for food and drink to be put on a table outside the houses on New Year's eve. This is not to feed the hungry, but to keep goblins from forcing their way within. But why goblins should be afraid of food cannot be explained.

Fairmont Sandwiches.—Cut sandwich bread into one-fourth-inch slices, butter sparingly on both sides and put between slices some finely cut red and green peppers. Remove the moisture by wringing the peppers in a cheese cloth, moisten with mayonnaise dressing. There should be two layers of green and one of red or, if preferred, just the reverse. Fold in cheese cloth and press under a weight. Cut in thin slices for serving.

Roast Duck With Peanut Stuffing.—Wild ducks should be cooked about half as long as the tame variety. Place thin slices of salt pork over the breast to baste and bake a half hour, basting every five minutes with fat from the pan. For stuffing, add a half cup of chopped peanuts, one-fourth of a cup of crumbs, one-half cup of heavy cream and two table-spoonfuls of melted butter; season with salt, pepper, cayenne and a few drops of onion juice.

Conserve.—A delicious preserve similar to marmalade is prepared in this way: Cook in a steamer three pounds of carrots until tender; add the juice and rind of six lemons, four pounds of sugar and a quarter of a pound of shelled almonds. Cook together for an hour.

APPEAL TO ALL INVENTORS

Story of One Woman's Suffering That Surely Should Stir Them to Immediate Action.

Inventors are requested by suffering telephone patrons to exercise their ingenuity on a telephone booth sliding door that will really slide. Heading the petition is the name of a woman who had a curious experience in a drug store booth.

"There are two booths in that store side by side," she said. "They are about as big as match boxes and are open at the top, so when there is a lull in street noises the conversation in each can be heard in the other. One day, when listening to a long and interesting communication from the friend I had called up, I heard a man in the adjoining box ask for the number of our own telephone uptown.

"Presently he said, 'Can't you get them, central?'"

"Of course central couldn't get us, for I learned afterward that not even the maid was home, so he rang off and left the booth.

"I was most anxious to detain him and learn his message. I insulted my friend for life by saying, 'I can't listen to any more now,' but I might just as well have let her finish, for I couldn't get out of that booth, I pulled and tugged at the door, but it wouldn't budge. Finally a drug clerk let me out, but the man had got away by that time, and I don't know to this day who he was or what he wanted to tell us. Imagine having to go through life with a mystery like that unsolved. The telephone company cannot equip their booths with movable doors any too soon, I think."

SHOWED SCENES OF CRIMES

Parisian Burglar Took Magistrate on Tour and Pointed Out Residences of His Victims.

A man named Rene Foerschler, aged twenty-nine, who is in the Sante prison (Paris), awaiting trial on a charge of burglary, recently wrote to M. Poncet, the magistrate in charge of his case, confessing to 205 other burglaries. The magistrate at first refused to believe him, whereupon this prisoner offered to take him on a personally conducted tour of the scene of his exploits. The other morning, therefore, M. Poncet, the prisoner and two policemen set out in a cab for a drive round the streets of Paris. In the course of the day Foerschler pointed out thirty-two houses at which he had committed burglaries. The following day the experiment was repeated, and the scenes of forty-two other robberies were pointed out. The two next days, also, the magistrate resumed his task. Foerschler has a wonderful memory. He pointed out the different houses without hesitation and even remembered little details.

as, for example, that such and such a house formerly had no carpet. He affirms that in the course of his career he has stolen 900 watches, 1,432 earrings, 192 silver rings, 32,000 fittings, 361 tie pins and 93 gold brooches.

Men and Women in World.

The total population of the world is now estimated at 1,700,000,000. This is based upon the most recent census, which all civilized countries now take, with a careful estimate of the number of inhabitants of uncivilized lands. The proportion of the sexes is known for 1,038,000,000 of these, the ratio being 1,000 males to 990 females. The ratio varies considerably in different places. In Europe there are 1,000 men to 1,027 women; in Africa, 1,000 men to 1,045 women; in America, 1,000 men to 964 women; in Asia, 1,000 men to 961 women; in Australia, 1,000 men to 927 women.

The highest proportion of women is found in Uganda, where there are 1,467 to every 1,000 men. The lowest proportion is in Alaska and the Malay states, where there are, in the former, 391, and in the latter 389 women to every 1,000 men.

Moslem Women in Future Life.

"Are women admitted to paradise?" is a question that is often answered in the negative. We find, however, more than one passage in the Koran that distinctly speaks of a future life in paradise for women. The most often quoted is the one promising the faithful that he will meet in paradise besides his own earthly wives seventy-two hours—not an attractive prospect for the poor women, who have suffered enough in this life from the humiliations of polygamy! But in the fourth Sura we find the following more definite statement: "But whose doeth good works, whether he be male or female, and is a true believer, they shall be admitted into paradise, and shall not in the least be unjustly dealt with."—Life in the Moslem East, by Pierre Bonafide.

Turkish Soldiers Without Fezes.

For the first time, we read, the Turkish soldier is going to war without the fez. Mahmud II., when he changed the uniform of his army, tried to introduce the shako, but the opposition of the soldiers was too strong for him. The fez is certainly a poor covering for men on active service; for even the change of its color to khaki did not get over its feebleness as a protection against sun or bad weather. Hence the headshawl devised some time ago to be worn twisted around the fez. The Turk's devotion to the fez is clearly explained by Duckett Ferriman: "The prejudice against the hat rests on a religious basis. If the ramaz (form of prayer) is rightly performed the forehead must touch the ground. The brim of a hat or the peak of a cap would prevent this."
