Teall-Gootch.

J. Robert Teall, manager of the Cayuga County Farm Bureau, and Miss Jean L. Gootch of Los Angeles, Calif., were married Tuesday morning, in the Episcopal church at Ithaca, by Rev. E. J. Bailey. The couple were attended by Miss Ocia Ramsey of Fulton and F. Leland Teall of Lyander, a brother of the groom.

The couple are making a tour of the lakes by automobile for a few days, after which they will reside in Auburn.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. L. Gootch, who are extensive orange and walnut growers in California. She is a graduate of the University of California and a member of the Delta Gamma sorority. Since her graduation she has been teaching Latin and English in the Pasadena High school.

The couple met six years ago when Mr. Teall was visiting on the Pacific coast. Miss Gootch came from her home a few weeks ago and has been visiting relatives of Mr. Teall.

Doctor—It's nothing serious, Carney, I'll have you back on the job in a week.

Patient—Whist! Can't ye make it two weeks, docther, bein' as yer bill is goin' to be paid by th' company?
—Puck.

HOW CHILDREN GROW

Children grow by nourishment—not overloaded stomachs or rich foods but qualities that are readily converted into life-sustaining blood; too often their digestive powers cannot procure these qualities from ordinary foods which result in weakness, dullness and sickness. If your children are under-size, underweight, catch cold easily, are languid, backward, pale or frail, give them Scott's Emulsion which is pure medicinal nourishment. It sharpens the appetite, builds healthy flesh, firms muscles and active brains. Scott's is growing-food for children. Refuse alcoholic substitutes.

Venice.

July 9—Mrs. Elias Beach passed away at her late home in this place early Friday morning last, after an illness of several years, although she was able to be up until the Sunday before her death. The funeral was held Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the house and at 2:30 at the church. Rev. Warner conducted the services and burial was in the Venice cemetery. The church was filled with friends and there were many beautiful floral tributes. Mrs. Beach was always willing to help those in need when she was able, and she will be missed in her home and neighborhood. She leaves her husband, two sons, Elmer of this place and Dewitt of Auburn and one daughter, Mrs. Ada Decker of Elmira Heights, two granddaughters and one grandson to mourn her loss.

Mr. and Mrs. Warren Decker who have been helping care for Mrs. Beach have returned to their home in Elmira.

Mrs. Robt. Armstrong and daughter of Sempronius are spending a few days in town.

Several from this place attended the dance at Dresserville last Friday evening.

Miss Ruth Smith of Moravia is spending some time with her uncle, Richard Thorpe and family.

Carrie and Harold Misner returned home Saturday after staying a week with their grandparents in Ledyard.

Thomas Lavin was in Auburn part of last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Chaffee and Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Hollister and Andrew Chaffee were in town to attend the funeral of Mrs. Beach Sunday.

Wm. Manchester, wife and daughter Martha are spending their summer vacation at their farm in this place. They expect to return to Waterport in the fall where Mr. Manchester will teach for another year.

The lumber for the new hall at Venice Center is expected soon and the carpenters want to start the building by next Monday is possible.

The Ladies' Aid society of Venice Baptist church will meet with Mrs. Warner at the parsonage on Friday, July 24. The ladies will furnish refreshments. All are invited.

Ledyard.

July 9—A very severe electrical storm passed over here Saturday evening, more severe than any thing that we had witnessed before, but not as much rain fell.

Mrs. Walter Minard had the misfortune to fall last Thursday while going down the stairs and broke her wrist. Her many friends express much sympathy for her.

Miss Anna Lisk attended the wedding of a cousin in Groton last Friday. She made the trip with Mr. Streeter in his auto.

Miss Marilla Starkweather spent the 4th in Auburn.

Willard Aikin, who has been in the eastern part of the state for several weeks, returned to his home here on the 4th.

Mrs. Lida Brown and daughter Mildred of New York are visiting at Walter Corey's.

Mr. and Mrs. Dagle of North Rose were in town a couple of days last week.

The picnic that the Reading Club held on the lawn at Mrs. Aikin's home on the 4th proved a success. More than 150 partook of a bounteous dinner and a social pleasant afternoon was spent.

Many who went to Sherwood on Saturday evening to see the fireworks were disappointed. On account of the storm they were postponed until Monday evening. All who heard Miss Mills felt repaid for going.

The young people of the Venice Baptist church will hold an ice cream and watermelon social in the church parlors, Saturday evening, July 25. Ladies furnish cake. A cordial invitation is extended to all.

Do not talk about yourself in company. It can be done so much more satisfactorily after you have left.—Lippincott's Magazine.

North Lansing.

July 14—The funeral of Wesley DeCamp was held here in the M. E. church on Saturday, July 11, Rev. F. J. Allington officiating. Burial in the Willcox cemetery. Mr. DeCamp lived here during his early life and it was very fitting that the funeral be held here. His two wives, who were sisters, are buried here. He leaves one child, Mrs. Helen Teeter, who is a widow and now alone. She has cared for her father for some years. One by one we pass over.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bower were over-Sunday guests at Charles Divine's in Venice.

Mrs. Small attended the funeral of her cousin, Mrs. John G. Whitten, near Genoa, on Sunday.

A delightful birthday party was given by Mrs. Cora Metzgar last Friday, July 10, for her daughter, Mercy Metzgar, on her 10th birthday. There were 34 children present and some were so small that the mothers came also. She had some beautiful presents, among them from her school-mates were six silver teaspoons with her name.

Mrs. Hattie K. Buck is entertaining her father.

Mrs. Sara Pearce is slowly improving.

The extra school meeting resulted in uniting the Brown district with the North Lansing district. Their children have attended school here for several years.

Scipioville.

July 6—Lewis Wells of Willard, after an absence of eighteen years is spending a few days in Auburn. Last week accompanied by his wife, Mrs. Hattie Wells, and daughter, Mrs. Youngs, and her little son, he spent the day at the home of Thomas Phelps and all enjoyed the pleasant visit there.

Mr. and Mrs. Clare Hanford and two sons of New York City are guests of his parents here.

Miss Margaret Ross has been spending some time at Elmira. The daughters of David Ross accompanied her to her home here on a visit.

Rev. Thos. Husk leaves to-day for Cincinnati, Ohio. He expects to return Saturday with his bride.

Mr. and Mrs. Williams of Indiana are visiting their daughter, Mrs. Walter, at the parsonage.

Herbert Foster of Worcester, Mass., who has been spending some time with his mother and aunts here has returned home.

Miss Mary A. Simkin was most agreeably surprised Saturday afternoon in honor of her 80th birthday. She was invited for a ride with Mr. and Mrs. Sherman in their auto, which was a part of the scheme. On her return she found a large number of relatives and friends waiting to express their good wishes. Tables were set on the lawn and a bountiful supper with cake and ice cream was served to about 80 guests. Among those present were Rev. and Mrs. Robert H. Simkin who recently returned from China, where they are engaged in missionary work, Mrs. Henry Slocum and son Alfred of Pasadena, Cal., Mrs. H. T. Mosher and Miss Carrie Simkin of Fleming, who are nieces and nephew of Miss Simkin. All join in wishing Miss Simkin many more happy birthdays.

Mr. and Mrs. Francis Guindon of Vermont, who have been visiting friends in this vicinity, left for home Monday. Miss Mary Hoag went with them for a few weeks' visit.

Miss Elizabeth Mosher is camping with friends at Farleys.

Rev. Robert L. Simkin occupied the pulpit Sunday morning and evening, giving a very interesting talk on their work in China as missionaries.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh That Contain Mercury

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

Sold by druggists. Price 75c, per bottle.

Family Reunions.

The eighth annual reunion of the Kresga family will be held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Dana Singer, North Lansing, N. Y., Wednesday, July 29, 1914. Relatives of the family are very cordially invited to be present.

The annual reunion of the descendants of Benjamin Shaw will be held Friday, August 7, with Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Fenner of Lake Ridge. All relatives are cordially invited to be present.

St. Swithin's Day.

This day falls on July 15.

St. Swithin's day—if thou dost rain, For forty days it will remain; St. Swithin's day—if thou be fair, For forty days 'twill rain aec mair.

So runs the old legend. We hardly know what to expect the next forty days, however, as a few sprinkles fell, it was cloudy part of the day, and bright and fair the rest of the day. We don't believe St. Swithin has anything to do with it, anyway.

WANTED—Good homes wanted for boys and girls under 14 years of age, where they will be received as members of the family; apply to Children's Department, State Charities Aid Association, 389 Fourth Ave., New York City.

Prayer meeting on Thursday evening at 7:30. Do let us try to make these meetings spiritual and helpful to all—will each one try to do his or her part? Choir rehearsal immediately after prayer meeting.

Monarchs vs. Genoa.

Last Saturday's game didn't represent the kind of ball that the Genoa team usually plays, and it was the unexpected that happened in every instance. The Genoa boys thought they had a cinch when they sized up Manager Gault's Monarchs, and ordinarily that would have been the case but the boys' playing changed from the "sublime to the ridiculous," as shown by the following score:

PREVENTION OF TYPHOID FEVER

It has been said that "FOR EVERY DEATH FROM TYPHOID FEVER SOME ONE SHOULD BE HANGED." It has been more wisely said that "for every death from typhoid fever some one should be educated."

It is certain that typhoid is one of the most easily preventable diseases. There were 656 deaths from typhoid fever among the 5,000,000 people of New York state outside of New York city in 1913 against 362 deaths among the 5,000,000 people in New York city itself simply because of IGNORANCE or CARELESSNESS in regard to simple sanitary laws.

Every case of typhoid fever comes from swallowing the germs of the disease, and disease germs come from just one source—from the bodies of human beings. The people who sow these dangerous seeds may be sick with typhoid fever themselves, or they may be coming down with it, or they may be getting over it. Sometimes we find human "CARRIERS," as they are called, who have had typhoid years before or, so far as can be discovered, have never had the disease at all, and yet are still CULTIVATING TYPHOID GERMS IN THEIR BODIES AND DISTRIBUTING THEM TO INFECT OTHERS.

The disease germs are accustomed to the warm, rich fluids of the body and do not live long away from it. The great danger lies in a rather DIRECT TRANSFER OF INFECTED MATERIAL FROM ONE PERSON TO ANOTHER. There are three principal agents by which this transfer is brought about and by which such diseases as typhoid are commonly spread.

They are called the three F's of sanitation:

FOOD. FINGERS. FLIES.

Since every case of typhoid fever is caused by the transfer of infection from one person to another, THE DISEASE CAN BE PREVENTED BY CARE IN THE DISPOSAL OF HUMAN WASTES and at the other end of the chain by PROTECTING THE PURITY OF ALL THAT GOES INTO THE MOUTH.

On the one hand, the waste of all human beings must be disposed of so that wells and food supplies may not become polluted and so that flies may not have access to them.

On the other hand, the food and utensils that go into the mouth must be carefully guarded so that typhoid germs from unknown sources may be kept out.

Foods are best protected by cookery. Ordinary cooking destroys typhoid germs, and it is usually raw foods, like water and milk and oysters, which spread this disease. Do not drink water unless you know that it is pure and never drink uncooked milk. BOIL ALL WATER OF DOUBTFUL QUALITY AND PASTEURIZE (or scald) ALL MILK.

Fingers should always be thoroughly cleaned with the nail brush before sitting down to table and before preparing food for others.

Flies should be starved by carrying manure away and by cleaning up rubbish. They should be trapped and killed, and the few that remain should be kept out of the dining room and kitchen by careful screening.

If these things were done the typhoid death rate for New York state could be made as low as that of the city, and THREE HUNDRED LIVES A YEAR WOULD BE SAVED.

THE PERFECT SPELLER.

Test Him by Having Him Write This Jumble From Dictation.

One occasionally comes across a superior person who tells you he can easily spell any word every printed in a dictionary. If ever you meet this type of man just ask somebody to dictate the following jumble to him and see how many mistakes he will make:

"Antinous, a disappointed, desiccated physicist, was peeling potatoes in an embarrassing and harassing way. His idiosyncrasy and privilege was to eat mayonnaise and mussels while staring at the Pleiades and seizing people's tricycles and velocipedes. He was an erring teetotaler and had been on a pinyune jamboree. He rode a palfrey stallion and carried a salable papier mache bouquet of asters, phlox, mullein, chrysanthemums, rhododendrons, fuchsias and nasturtiums.

"He wore a sibly's resplendent turquoise paraphernalia, an ornolu yashmak and astrakhan chaparejos. He drank crystallizable and disagreeable curacao juleps through a sieve. He stole some moneys and hid them under a peddler's mahogany bedstead and mattress.

"Like a fiend in an ecstasy of gayety I rushed after him into the maelstrom, or meele, and held him as in a vise. I could not feaze him, however, and he addressed me, with autocracy, in the following imbecile words, which sounded like a solloquy or a sapersending paean on an oboe: 'You are a ratable lunamoth, a salsaming vizer, an equinoctial coryphee and an isocoeles daggerreotype.'"—New York Mail.

CUPID'S QUEER PRANK.

A Wedding Blunder That Furnished a Curious Climax.

The other evening we were talking to Mr. Brunsby Williams, the delightful impersonator of Dickens' characters, and he told us this story:

The scene was a London parish, and the period recent. The vicar was sitting in his study one morning when in burst the verger in a great state of excitement.

"Mr. —" (mentioning the curate's name) "wants you at once, sir," he exclaimed. "He has married two couples and married the two men to the wrong women, and he does not know what to do!"

"Have they signed the register?" inquired the clergyman.

"No," was the verger's response.

"Then they can be married again," said the vicar. "Tell Mr. — I will be at the church in a minute or two to perform the ceremony."

In due course the incumbent made his way to the church and found the parties gathered at the entrance.

Before he could say anything one of the bridegrooms approached and said: "We have been talking it over, sir, and we have made up our minds to remain as we are."

And they did so.—Pearson's Weekly.

Greatest Monosyllabic Sentence.

As to the magic of the monosyllabic, a correspondent writes: "Is there a finer sentence in the English language than verse 3 of Genesis 1, 'And God said, let there be light, and there was light?' Think of the simplicity and yet the grandeur of this monosyllabic statement—effort so stupendous flashing out from the mere word of God."—London Chronicle.

Friday Morning, July 17, 1914

Dared by another boy, seven-year-old Bernard Eron of Passaic, N. J., ate a green apple. It killed him.

Christie Helt of Paterson, N. J., who escaped injury for twenty years as a railroad brakeman, had ankle fractured by bicycle rider.

Louis C. Broemer, aged sixty-three, of West Haverstraw, N. Y., died at Marbledale, Conn., as the result of pulling a tooth with a pair of pincers.

Inmates of insane asylum in Cincinnati are to see a league baseball game on July 4. They are expected to give a lesson in behavior to the regular fans.

A son born to Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Lichtenstein of Bloomfield, N. J., has living two grandfathers and two grandmothers, two great-grandfathers and two great-grandmothers and a great-great-grandmother.

IRELAND'S OMINOUS QUIET; THE CALM BEFORE A STORM.

Preparations For Civil War Go on Steadily—Volunteers 150,000 Strong.

It is an ominous quiet that prevails in Ireland now, says a Belfast dispatch to the New York Post. Probably to other countries it seems that the trouble in and concerning Ulster has subsided. There could be no greater mistake. To us who are watching events at first hand from day to day this quiet, more marked apparently than has prevailed in Ireland in twenty years, is only the calm before the storm.

Unostentatiously, but none the less surely, both parties in the home rule controversy are making the deadliest preparations for an expected conflict.

At the Unionist headquarters the agents are working night and day preparing the details of a provisional government. The machinery is almost in working order, the final details having been arranged when Carson was last in Belfast.

The putting into force of that machinery is expected to be the signal for the outbreak. It seems incredible that the British government will stand the taking over of public departments and offices by the Ulster government. The government must assert itself or leave the province to anarchy. If it asserts its authority bloodshed is almost a certainty.

Carson put the issue plainly and clearly. In event of complete and permanent exclusion of Ulster from the provisions of the home rule bill not being granted, he would not hesitate to order his men—110,000 well armed cavalry, artillery and infantry—to take action, which means that they will take the province under their control and hold it by force of arms. At the moment the province is garrisoned by 5,000 British soldiers, seven-eighths of whom are in complete sympathy with the Ulster volunteers. If the government attempts to move more troops into the province there will be revolt, with an outcome which can only be conjectured.

On the other side the Irish volunteers are increasing by leaps and bounds. They now muster close on 150,000 men. True, they are unarmed to any great extent, and they are officerless, but they constitute a most formidable body, and England will have to reckon with them in the very near future. The controversy as to who shall control that big army is still raging.

There has never been a satisfactory definition of insanity, the best, that of Sir William Hamilton, that it is "the paralysis of the regulating or legislative faculties of the mind," leaving us far from being satisfied. Like sleep, like dreams, like life itself, insanity is a mystery that no man understands. Its causes lie in the "De profundis" that no science has as yet explored.—New York American.

The Candid Friend.
Alleged Composer (at piano)—Listen to this. He does brutal things to the instrument. How do you like it? Too little air and too many variations perhaps? The Helpless Friend—Yes; give me more air. (He opens the window.)—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Not Very Likely.

Points of View

You may sit way down in the grand stand Behind a fifty cent fat, black cigar Or way up on the sun kissed bleachers, Where the raucous voiced masses are; Perhaps you are out in center field Pushing, eager, against the ropes And watching with quickened breath the bunch That carries your world series hopes, But you don't feel the same old elation That you felt once when home Kelly slid With the winning run and you saw it all Through a hole in the fence when a kid. Perhaps you're on the roof with the "press gang," An outsider whose nerve's with him still; You may have access to the dugout With the right to call Carrigan "Bill;" The sergeant may even salute you, And the "cops" for your "front" may fall— Yes, oh, apex of fame, at the "opener" Perhaps you threw out the first ball, But you don't get the same old enjoyment That once on a time you did, When you watched the game through a knothole In the fence when you were a kid. —Boston Globe.

OFFICER OF THE NAVY A CARRIER OF GERMS.

Is In Perfect Health, but Infects Entire Station With Typhoid.

Navy department officials are puzzled over the proper disposition of an officer said to be a typhoid germ "carrier." He is apparently in the best of health, but seems laden with typhoid germs and when he has been assigned to a ship or shore station a typhoid epidemic has invariably followed.

Because of the officer's strange case navy officials refuse to make public his name. He is now under treatment in New York by specialists. Although he is an excellent officer and otherwise fit for duty, if the typhoid germs cannot be eradicated from his system navy authorities hold that he must be retired for "physical disability" as a safeguard.

The "carrier," one of the important discoveries of bacteriologists, has attracted the attention of the medical profession for several years. By some strange freak of nature certain individuals carry about the germs of deadly diseases without themselves being affected.

New York has had several cases of this kind. One was a dairyman in a county from which much milk comes to the city, and another was the famous "Typhoid Mary" who, apparently in perfect health, was responsible for an outbreak of the disease wherever she went. She was kept in a hospital until the germs disappeared.

"Carriers" have been found among the enlisted men of the army and navy. No particular class appears exempt, for they are found amid luxurious surroundings as well as in poorer quarters.

CONSTRUCTS A FAIRY GARDEN

Remarkable Back Yard Transformation by a Chicago Man.

The city back yard can be made a place of beauty and attractiveness, according to A. F. Meissner of Chicago. He transformed a 50 by 125 foot lot into a veritable fairy garden, where varieties of flowers bloom around a real pond in which real fishes swim in water flowing from a miniature waterfall on the face of a rugged cliff.

The garden is the result of five years' work, which began with the creating of a pond in the back yard. Leaving a crescent shaped island, on which stands a summer house in the center, Mr. Meissner excavated around it to a depth of about two feet, lining the hole thus made with a water retaining coating of stones and cement. The earth removed was used in building on the lawn a half dozen hillocks, to be artistically covered with flowers. Young willows planted around the water add a natural touch, and rustic bridges lead to the summer house.

When he had finished the pond Mr. Meissner decided that he would have to revise some of the existing scenery.

"Down with the back fence," said he, and he started in to haul more rocks and cement. The new idea resulted in a cliff twelve feet in height, from the brow of which rushes a waterfall. The fall is ingeniously constructed of a length of skylight glass, which gives an appearance of depth and swiftness to the shallow film of water sliding down its surface from a concealed pipe on top of the cliff.

VACATION PRECAUTIONS.

Every nine out of ten people are planning to take a vacation trip some time, somewhere, this summer, but where to go is the question. Be this understood, says a North Carolina state board of health bulletin: The most picturesque and otherwise attractive resorts are not always the safest. Your first consideration should be, "Where can I find rest and recreation without jeopardizing my health?" On making your choice look well to these facts: First, that the supply of drinking water comes not from shallow wells or from other sources likely to be polluted; second, that flies and mosquitoes are well screened against; third, that there are sanitary arrangements for the disposal of sewage. Know these things, and your chances for having typhoid, malaria and many other diseases will be greatly diminished.

Mrs. John G. Whitten.

Sarah Jane Young, wife of John G. Whitten, died at her home, two miles north of Genoa, Wednesday evening, July 8, 1914.

The deceased was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Young of East Genoa, and her early life was spent there on the farm. In 1870 she was married to John G. Whitten of Venice, and after some months they built the house where they commenced housekeeping, and where they have lived through the years since. She was a home-maker, a devoted, helpful wife; one of the kindest of mothers, a good neighbor, ever ready to do a kindness and very hospitable. Her friends always felt her welcome, and she will be greatly missed. She answered the description of the wife we read of in Proverbs, "The heart of her husband doth safely trust in her; she will do him good and not evil, all the days of her life. She worketh willingly with her own hands; she looketh well to the ways of her household, and eateth not the bread of idleness. Her children arise up and call her blessed, her husband also, and he praiseth her." No one could answer this description better than Mrs. Whitten.

For many years she suffered from asthma and hay fever, and during the last few years went from home but very little, and her loss is greatly felt by the family. Her death was a great surprise. While not well she had been doing her work as usual. Wednesday she did not feel as well as usual and in the evening the doctor was called, whose medicine brought relief, and she went to sleep. Her husband was alone with her. About 11 o'clock he noticed a change and going to her, found that she had quietly passed away. He went at once for a neighbor, and the children were sent for, and it soon was realized that mother had gone—not in its fullest sense, that comes after, when we feel our need, and the awful indescribable loneliness that comes, down through the years.

The funeral was at the home on Sunday and was very largely attended. Rev. F. J. Allington officiated, using for his text, "And whither I go, ye know, and the way ye know."

There were flowers in abundance, speaking of love and appreciation. Charles Foster, Mrs. Robert Mastin and Miss Ida Mastin sang three selections beautifully, and then she was borne to East Venice cemetery, there to await the resurrection.

—It is stated that the cement plant at Portland Point which has been closed down for three weeks, will be started up again on July 20. It is said that the new tariff affects the cement industry in this country adversely, as it allows cement to be brought in from foreign countries free of duty, while the new workmen's compensation law will make an expense of about $7,000 a year for insurance to the Portland plant, while they must compete with the neighboring State of Pennsylvania which does not have such a law at present.

—The Spiritualists camp meeting at Freeville will run through five full weeks and six Sundays this year, beginning July 25.

—Mrs. Ralph Hewes of Richfield Springs, also Master Myron Berry of Clayville, were guests at Myron Hewes', Weeks Corner, last week.

—Mrs. L. T. Coddington, who is spending some time at Venice Center, was a guest of her cousin, Mrs. D. W. Smith, the first of the week.

—About 48 members of the Ithaca Y. M. C. A. are in camp for two weeks at Lake Ridge, in charge of Secretary Wilson and Physical Director W. C. Hickok.

A Pleasant Affair.

The reception given to Rev. and Mrs. L. W. Scott in the Presbyterian church on Tuesday evening was attended by fully 150 people. Doubtless others would have been present had the weather been clear.

The auditorium had been transformed into a reception room for the occasion, by the changing about of the pews. Palms, roses, lilies and other flowers were used for the decorations, which were arranged by the Philathea and Baracca classes. A piano also added to the attractiveness of the scene.

Messrs. Hagin, Underwood, Wilson and Knapp, trustees of the church, with their wives, acted as a committee to escort people to the receiving party, standing at the farther end of the room. In the receiving line were Mr. and Mrs. Chas. N. Tupper, Rev. and Mrs. Scott, Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Sharp, and Mr. A. L. Swift.

Fine music was furnished throughout the evening by Mrs. E. F. Keefe. Mrs. Alice Crawford Coddington of Syracuse also gave several piano and vocal solos, much to the delight of the company.

At an opportune time, Mr. A. L. Swift, who came from Auburn especially to attend the reception, took the floor and in a lively little speech, in behalf of the people of this community, presented to Mr. and Mrs. Scott a small box containing four ten-dollar gold pieces.

Mr. Scott, although greatly surprised, expressed the appreciation of himself and wife for the gift, and also thanked the society for giving the reception, thus affording them an opportunity to meet the people in a social way. He said that they esteem it a privilege to come here to work for this people, and they desire the co-operation of all. He hopes for a charitable spirit on the part of the people for any mistakes which may be made.

Following these remarks, light refreshments were served. Fruit punch and wafers were dispensed from small tables at one corner of the room. The three punch bowls were presided over by Mrs. F. Ray Van Brocklin, Miss Mabel Cannon and Miss Emma Waldo. Mrs. Wm. Loomis and Mrs. B. F. Samson assisted about the serving.

Shortly before 11 o'clock, the company dispersed, having enjoyed a very pleasant evening.

Genoa Presbyterian Church.

The pastor and wife wish to thus publicly express to the church and congregation of the church their most hearty appreciation of the reception tendered them at the church last Tuesday evening, and to extend their thanks for the very generous gift of money from the people of the community. We were very glad for the opportunity to meet the people in this informal way, and to feel the warm and substantial appreciation of their friendship.

Much interest has been evidenced in all departments of the work of the church. We trust that this interest may be conserved and made to increase. Remember that the church belongs to the community, and is a place where everyone should feel free to come and worship.

Next Sabbath morning the quarterly Communion service will be held. A number of people have already signified their intention of bringing little ones to be baptized at that time. If there are any others desiring to bring little ones to be baptized, please see the pastor before Sunday. There will probably also be some to unite with the church at that time. If you know of any so inclined, bring them to that service. Sabbath school held at the close of the morning service. New song books are being ordered and fresh efforts put forth to make this a splendid service. Come and do your

New Cars in Use Soon.

According to General Manager H. A. Clarke of the Short Line, the new schedule on which the two gasoline cars, recently purchased by the company, will be operated, will go into effect as soon as the improvements at the bridge near Renwick Park are completed, which it is expected will be in a few days. It is understood that the present schedule will be maintained, however, and that the gasoline cars will be run between the time of the steam trains.

Passes 80th Birthday.

Mrs. Ruth Avery of Genoa was 80 years old on Tuesday, July 14. Her many friends unite in congratulating her upon her good health and ability to still enjoy life. A friend handed us the following lines as appropriate for the occasion:

Eighty years
Have passed away,
But I am here
It seems, to-day.
Eighty years
Is a long time,
But strength and health
Have both been mine.
Eighty years
Of life will show
The road that each one
Ought to go.
Eighty years
Of good square deal,
And always ready
To take a meal.
Eighty years
Of Christian life
Have made it easy
To keep clear of strife.
Eighty years
But if it's God own way,
I am ready to go
Most any day.

The Story of Waitstill Baxter

By KATE DOUGLAS WIGGIN

Copyright, 1913, by Kate Douglas Wiggin

Of Cochrane's initial appearance as a preacher Ivory had told Waitstill in their talk in the churchyard early in the summer. It was at a child's funeral that the new prophet created his first sensation, and there, too, that Aaron and Lois Boynton first came under his spell. The whole countryside had been just then wrought up to a state of religious excitement by revival meetings, and Cochrane gained the benefit of this definite preparation for his work. He claimed that all his sayings were from divine inspiration and that those who embraced his doctrine received direct communication from the Almighty. He disdained formal creeds and all manner of church organizations, declaring that sectarian names were marks of the beast and all church members to be in Babylon. He introduced rebaptism as a symbolic cleansing from sectarian stains, and after some months advanced a proposition that his flock hold all things in common. He put a sudden end to the solemn "deaconing out" and droning of psalm tunes and grafted on to his form of worship lively singing and marching, accompanied by clapping of hands and whirling in circles, during the progress of which the most hysterical converts or the most fully "Cochranized" would swoon upon the floor, or, in obeying their leader's instructions to "become as little children," would sometimes go through the most extraordinary and unmeaning antics.

It was not until he had converted hundreds to the new faith that he added more startling revelations to his gospel. He was in turn bold, mystical, eloquent, audacious, persuasive, styled "communications from the Almighty" converted all that his hearers had formerly held to be right, he still magnetized or hypnotized them into an unwilling assent to his beliefs. There was finally a proclamation to the effect that marriage vows were to be annulled when advisable and that complete spiritual liberty was to follow: aliberty in which a new affinity might be sought and a spiritual union begun upon earth, a union as nearly approximate to God's standards as faulty human beings could manage to attain.

Some of the faithful fell away at this time, being unable to accept the full doctrine, but retained their faith in Cochrane's original power to convert sinners and save them from the wrath of God. Storm clouds began to gather in the sky, however, as the delusion spread, month by month, and local ministers everywhere sought to minimize the influence of the dangerous orator, who rose superior to every attack and carried himself like some magnificent martyr at will among the crowds that now criticised him here or there in private and in public.

"What a picture of splendid audacity he must have been," wrote Ivory, "when he entered the orthodox meeting house at a huge gathering where he knew that the speakers were to denounce his teachings. Old Parson Buzzell gave out his text from the high pulpit, Mark xiii, 37. 'And what I say unto you I say unto all, watch.' Just here Cochrane stepped in at the open door of the church and heard the warning, meant, he knew, for himself, and seizing the moment of silence following the reading of the text, he cried in his splendid sonorous voice, without so much as stirring from his place within the door frame: 'Behold, I stand at the door and knock. If any man hear my voice I will come in to him and will sup with him. I come to preach the everlasting gospel to every one that heareth, and all that I want here is my bigness on the floor.'"

"I cannot find," continued Ivory on another page, "that my father or mother ever engaged in any of the foolish and childish practices which disgraced the meetings of some of Cochrane's most fanatical followers and converts. By my mother's conversations (some of which I have repeated to you, but which may be full of errors, because of her confusion of mind) I believe she must have had a difference of opinion with my father on some of these views, but I have no means of knowing this to a certainty, nor do I know that the question of 'choosing spiritual spouses' ever came between or divided them. This part of the delusion always fills me with such unspeakable disgust that I have never liked to seek additional light from any of the older men and women who might reveal in giving it. That my mother did not sympathize with my father's going out to preach Cochrane's gospel through the country, this I know, and she was so truly religious, so burning with zeal, that had she fully believed in my father's mission she would have spurred him on instead of endeavoring to detain him."

"You know the retribution that overtook Cochrane at last," wrote Ivory again, when he had shown the man's early victories and his enormous influence. "There began to be indignant protests against his doctrines by lawyers and doctors, as well as by ministers: not from all sides, however, for remember, in extenuation of my father's and my mother's espousal of this strange belief, that many of the strongest and wisest men, as well as the purest and finest women in York county, came under this man's spell for a time and believed in him implicitly, some of them even unto the end."

"Finally there was Cochrane's arrest and examination, the order for him to appear at the supreme court, his failure to do so, his recapture and trial and his sentence of four years' imprisonment on several counts, in all of which he was proved guilty. Cochrane had all along said that the Anointed of the Lord would never be allowed to remain in jail, but he was mistaken, for he stayed in the state's prison at Charlestown, Mass., for the full duration of his sentence. Here (I am again trying to plead the cause of my father and mother), here he received much sympathy and some few visitors, one of whom walked all the way from Edgewood to Boston, 115 miles, with a petition for pardon, a petition which was delivered and refused at the Boston statehouse. Cochrane issued from prison a broken and humiliated man, but, if report says true, is still living, far out of sight and knowledge, somewhere in New Hampshire. He once sent my father an epitaph of his own selection, asking him to have it carved upon his gravestone should he die suddenly when away from his friends. My mother often repeats it, not realizing how far from the point it sounds to us who never knew him in his glory, but only in his downfall:

"He spread his arms full wide abroad, His works are ever before his God. His name on earth shall long remain, Though ev'ny sinners tread in vain. 'We are certain,' concluded Ivory, "that my father preached with Cochrane in Limington, Limerick and Parsonfield. He also wrote from England and Effingham in New Hampshire. After that all is silence. Various reports place him in Boston, in New York, even as far west as Ohio, whether as Cochrane's evangelist or what not, alas! we can never know. I despair of ever tracing his steps. I only hope that he died before he wandered too widely, either from his belief in God or his fidelity to my mother's long suffering love."

Waitstill read the letter twice through and replaced it in her dress to read again at night. It seemed the only tangible evidence of Ivory's love that she had ever received and she warmed her heart with what she felt that he had put between the lines. "Would that I were free to tell you how I value your friendship!" "My mother's heart feeds on the sight of you!" "I want you to know something of the circumstances that have made me a prisoner in life instead of a free man." "Yours is the most undaunted heart in all the world!" These sentences Waitstill rehearsed again and again and they rang in her ears like music, converting all the tasks of her long day into a deep and silent joy.

CHAPTER XVII.

At the Brick Store.

There were two grand places for gossip in the community, the old tavern on the Edgewood side of the bridge and the brick store in Riverboro. The company at the Edgewood tavern would be a trifle different in character, more picturesque, imposing and eclectic because of the transient guests that gave it change and variety. Here might be found a judge or a lawyer on his way to court, a sheriff with a handcuffed prisoner, a farmer or two stopping on the road to market with a cartful of produce and an occasional teamster, peddler and stage driver. On winter nights champion story tellers like Jed Morrill and Rish Bixby would drop in there and hang their woolen neck comforters on the pegs along the wall side, where there were already hats, topcoats and fur mufflers, as well as stacks of whips, canes and oxclogs standing in the corners. They would then enter the room, rubbing their hands genially and, nodding to Companion Pike, Cephas Cole, Phil Perry and others, ensconce themselves snugly in the group by the great open fireplace. The landlord was always glad to see them enter, for their stories, though old to him, were new to many of the assembled company and had a remarkable effect on the consumption of liquid refreshment.

On summer evenings gossip was languid in the village, and if any occurred at all it would be on the loungers' bench at one or the other side of the bridge. When cooler weather came the group of local wits gathered in Riverboro, either at Uncle Bart's joiner's shop or at the brick store, according to fancy. The latter place was perhaps the favorite for Riverboro talkers. It was a large, two-story, square brick building, with a big mouthed chimney and an open fire. When every house in the two villages had six feet of snow around it roads would always be broken to the brick store, and a crowd of ten or fifteen men would be gathered there talking, listening, betting, smoking, chewing, bragging, playing checkers, singing and "swapping stories."

Some of the men had been through the war of 1812 and could display wounds received on the field of valor, others were still prouder of scars won in encounters with the Indians and there was one old codger, a revolutionary veteran, Bill Dunham, by name, who would add bloody tales of his encounters with the "Husshons."

"This awful sin to have on your soul—the extenuation of a race o' men, even if they wa'n't nothin' more'n so many ignorant cockroaches. Them was the great days for fightin'! The Husshons was the biggest men I ever seen on the field, most o' 'em standin' six feet eight in their stockin's—but Lord! how we walloped 'em! Once we had a cannon mounted an' loaded for 'em that was so large we had to draw the ball into it with a yoke o' oxen!"

Bill paused for force of habit, just as he had paused for the last twenty years. There had been times when roars of incredulous laughter had greeted this boast, but most of this particular group had heard the yarn more than once and let it pass with a smile and a wink, remembering the night that Abel Day had asked old Bill how they got the oxen out of the cannon on that most memorable occasion.

"Oh," said Bill, "that was easy enough. We jest unyoked 'em an' turned 'em out o' the primin' hole!" It was only early October, but there had been a killing frost, and Ezra Simms, who kept the brick store, flung some shavings and small wood on the hearth and lighted a blaze, just to induce a little trade and start conversation on what threatened to be a dull evening. Peter Morrill, Jed's eldest brother, had lately returned from a long trip through the state and into New Hampshire and his adventures by field and flood were always worth listening to. He went about the country mending clocks and so many an old timepiece still bears his name, with the date of repairing written in pencil on the inside of the door.

There was never any lack of subjects at the brick store, the idiosyncrasies of the neighbors being the most prolific source of anecdote and comment. Whenever all else failed there was always the latest story of Deacon Baxter's parsimony, in which the village traced the influence of heredity.

"He can't hardly help it, inheritin' it on both sides," was Abel Day's opinion on "The Baxters was allers snug from time 'memorial, and Foxy's the suggest of 'em. When I look at his ugly mug an' hear his snarl'n' voice I think to myself, he's goin' the same way his father did. When old Levi Baxter was left a widdler man in that house o' his'n up river he grew wuss an' wuss, if you remember, till he wa'n't hardly human at the last, and I don't believe Foxy even went up to his own father's funeral."

"'Twould 'a' served old Levi right if nobody else had gone," said Rish Bixby. "When his wife died he refused to come into the house till the last minute. He stayed to work in the barn till all the folks had assembled and even the men were all settin' down on benches in the kitchen. The parson sent me out for him, and I'm blest if the old skunk didn't come in through the crowd with his sleeves rolled up—went to the sink and washed, and then set down in the room where the coffin was, as cool as a cucumber."

"I remember that funeral well," corroborated Abel Day. "An' Mis' Day heard Levi say to his daughter, as soon as they'd put poor old Mrs. Baxter in't the grave, 'Come on, Marthy, there's no use cryin' over spilt milk; we'd better go home an' hush out the rest o' that corn.' Old Foxy could have inherited plenty o' meanness from his father, that's certain, an' he's added to his inheritance right along, like the thrifty man he is. I hate to think o' them two fine girls wearin' their fingers to the bone for his benefit."

"Oh, well, 'twon't last forever," said Rish Bixby. "They're the han'somest couple o' girls on the river, an' they'll get husbands afore many years. Patience'll have one pretty soon, by the looks. She never budges an' inch but Mark Wilson or Phil Perry are follerin' behind, with Cephas Cole watchin' his chance right along too. Waitstill's still seen to have no bein'; what with flyin' around to keep up with the deacon an' bein' a mother to Patience, her hands is full, I guess."

"If things was a little mite different all round I could prognosticate who Waitstill could keep house for," was Peter Morrill's opinion.

"You mean Ivory Boynton? Well, if the deacon was asked he'd never give his consent, that's certain, an' Ivory ain't in no position to keep a wife anyway. What was it you heard about Aaron Boynton up to New Hampshire, Peter?" asked Abel Day.

"Considerable one way an' another, an' none of it would 'a' been any comfort to Ivory. I don't see Aaron o' Jake Cochrane was both of 'em more interested in savin' the sisters' souls than the brothers'. Aaron was a fine appearin' man, and so was Jake for that matter, 'n' they both had the gift o' gab. There's nothin' like a limber tongue if you want to please the women folks. If report says true, Aaron died of a fever out in Ohio somewhere, Cortland's the place, I b'lieve. Seems 'a' if he hid his trail all the way from New Hampshire somehow, for as a usual thing a man o' book learnin' like him would be remembered wherever he went. Wouldn't you call Aaron Boynton a turrible 'arned man, Timothy?"

Timothy Grant, the parish clerk, had just entered the store on an errand; but, being directly addressed and judging that the subject under discussion was a discreet one and that it was too early in the evening for drinking to begin, he joined the group by the fire-side. He had preached in Vermont for several years as an itinerant Methodist minister before settling down to farming in Edgewood, only giving up his profession because his quiver was so full of little Grants that a wandering life was difficult and undesirable. When Uncle Bart Cole had remarked that Mis' Grant had a little of everything in the way of baby stock now—black, red an' yaller haired, dark and light complected, fat an' lean, tall an' short, twins an' singles—Jed Morrill had observed dryly, "Yes, Mis' Grant kind o' reminds me of charity."

"How's that?" inquired Uncle Bart. "She beareth all things," chuckled Jed.

"Aaron Boynton was indeed a man of most adhesive learnin'," agreed Timothy, who had the reputation of the largest and most unusual vocabulary in Edgewood. "Next to Jacob Cochrane I should say Aaron had more grandeloquence as an orator than any man we've ever had in these parts. It don't seem 'a' if Ivory was goin' to take after his father that way. The little fellow, now, is smart 'a' whip an' could talk the tail off a brass monkey."

"Yes, but Rodman ain't no kin to the Boyntons," Abel reminded him. "He inherits from the other side o' the house."

"That's so. Well, Ivory does for certain, an' takes after his mother, right enough, for she hain't spoken a dozen words in as many years. I guess Ivory's got a sight o' book knowledge, though, an' they do say he could talk Greek an' Latin both, if we had any of 'em in the community to converse with. I've never paid no intention to the dead languages, bein' so ockerpied with other studies."

"Why do they call 'em the dead languages, Tim?" asked Rish Bixby.

"Because all them that ever spoke 'em has perished off the face o' the land," Timothy answered oracularly. "Dead an' gone they be, lock, stock and barrel; just there was a time when Latin an' Crustaceans an' Hebrews an' Proshians an' Australians an' Simmesians was chatterin' away in their own tongues, an' so powerful that they was wallopin' the whole earth, you might say."

"I bet yer never tried to wallop these here United States," interpolated Bill Dunham from the dark corner by the molasses hogshead.

"Is Ivory in here?" The door opened and Rodman Boynton appeared on the threshold.

"No, sonny, Ivory ain't been in this evening," replied Ezra Simms. "I hope there ain't nothin' the matter over to your house?"

"No, nothing particular," the boy answered, "only Aunt Boynton don't seem so well as common, and I can't find Ivory anywhere."

"Come along with me, I'll help you look for him, an' then I'll go as far as the lane with yer if we don't find him." And kindly Rish Bixby took the boy's hand and left the store.

"Mis' Boynton's had a spell, I guess!" suggested the storekeeper, peering through the door into the darkness. "Tain't like Ivory to be out nights and leave her to Rod."

"She don't have no spells," said Abel Day. "Uncle Bart sees considerable of Ivory, an' he says his mother is as quiet as a lamb. Couldn't you git no kind of a certificate of Aaron's death out o' that Enfield feller, Peter? Seems 'a' if that poor woman oughter be stopped watchin' for a dead man; tucker in herself all out an' keepin' Ivory an' the boy all nerved up."

"I've told Ivory everything I could gather up in the way of information and give him the names of the folks in Ohio that had writ back to New Hampshire. I didn't dilate on Aaron's goin' on in Edgingham and Portsmouth, 'cause I dassay 'twas nothin' but scandal. Them as hates the Cochranites'll never allow there's any good in 'em, whereas I've met some as is servin' the Lord good an' constant an' indulgent in no kind of foolishness an' deviltry whatsoever."

"Speakin' o' Husshons," said Bill Dunham from his corner, "I remember—"

"We wa'n't alludin' to no Husshons," retorted Timothy Grant. "We was delin't with the misfortunes of Aaron Boynton, who never bit valourously on the field o' battle, but perished out in Ohio of scarlet fever, if what they say in Enfield is true."

"'Tis an easy death," remarked Bill argumentatively. "Scarlet fever don't seem like nothin' to me! Many's the time I've been close enough to fire at the eyeball of a Husshon an' run the rest o' 'em blown to smithereens—calm and cool I allers was too! Scarlet fever is an easy death from a warrior's point o' view."

"Speakin' of easy death," continued Timothy, "you know I'm a great one for words, bein' something of a scholar in my small way. Mebbe you noticed that Elder Boone used a strange word in his sermon last Sunday? Words air curious things sometimes, as I know, hev'n' had considerable leisure time to read when I was joggin' 'bout the country an' bein' brought into contact with men o' learnin'." The way I worked it out, not wishin' to ask Parson any more questions, bein' something of a scholar myself, is this: The youth in Ashy is a peculiar kind o' youth, 'n' their religion disposes 'em to lay no kind o' stress on humming life. When anything goes wrong with 'em an' they get a set back in war or business, or affairs with women folks, they want to die right off, so they take a sword an' stan' it straight up wherever they happen to be, in the shed or the barn or the henhouse, an' they p'nt the sharp end right on their waist line, where the bowels an' other vital organisms is located, an' then they fall on to it. It runs 'em right through to the back an' kills 'em like a shot, and that's the way I callate the youth in Ashy dies, if my entomology is correct, as it gen'ally is."

"Don't seem an easy death to me," argued Ezra, "but I ain't no scholar. What college did you attend to, Tim?"

"I don't hold no diploma," responded Timothy, "though I attended the Wareham academy quite a spell, the same time as your sister was goin' to Wareham seminary where eddication is still bein' disseminated though of an awful poor kind compared to the old times."

"It's live an' larn," said the storekeeper respectfully. "I never thought of a seminary bein' a place of dissemination before, but you can see the two words is near kin."

"You can't allers tell by the sound," said Timothy instructively. "Sometimes two words'll start from the same root an' branch out different, like 'critter' an' 'hypocritter'. A 'hypocritter' must natcherally start by bein' a 'critter', but a critter ain't obliged to be a 'hypocritter' 'bout he wants to."

"I should hope not," interpolated Abel Day piously. "Entomology must be an awful interestin' study, though I never thought of observin' words myself, 'cept to avoid vulgar language an' profanity."

"Husshons' a curious word for a man," interjected Bill Dunham with a last despairing effort. "I remember seen' a Husshon once that"—

"Perhaps you ain't one to observe closely, Abel," said Timothy, not taking note of any interruption, simply using the time to direct a stream of tobacco juice to an incredible distance, but landing it neatly in the exact spot he had intended. "It's a trade in itself, you might say, observin' is, an' there's another singular corruption! The Whigs in foreign parts, so they say, build stone towers to observe the evil machinations of the Tories, an' so the word 'observatory' come into general use! All entomology; nothin' but entomology."

"I don't see where in thunder you picked up so much larnin', Timothy!" It was Abel Day's exclamation, but every one agreed with him.

CHAPTER XVIII.

The Rod That Blossomed.

IVORY BOYNTON had taken the horse and gone to the village on an errand, a rare thing for him to do after dark, so Rod was thinking as he sat in the living room learning his Sunday school lesson on the same evening that the men were gossiping at the brick store. His aunt had required him from the time when he was proficient enough to do so to read at least a part of a chapter in the Bible every night. Beginning with Genesis, he had reached Leviticus and had made up his mind that the Bible was a much more difficult book than "Scottish Chiefs" notwithstanding the fact that Ivory helped him over most of the hard places. At the present juncture he was vastly interested in the subject of "rods" as unfolded in the book of Exodus, which was being studied by his Sunday school class. What added to the excitement was the fact that his uncle's Christian name, Aaron, kept appearing in the chronicle as frequently as that of the great law-giver Moses himself, and there were many verses about the wonder working rods of Moses and Aaron that had a strange effect upon the boy's ear when he read them aloud, as he loved to do whenever he was left alone for a time. When his aunt was in the room his instinct kept him from doing this, for the mere mention of the name of Aaron, he feared, might sadden his aunt and provoke in her that dangerous vein of reminiscence that made Ivory so anxious.

"It kind o' makes me nervous to be named Rod, Aunt Boynton," said the boy, looking up from the Bible. "All the rods in these Exodus chapters do such dreadful things! They become serpents, and one of them swallows up all the others, and Moses smites the waters with a rod, and they become blood, and the people can't drink the water and the fish die! Then they stretch a rod across the streams and ponds and bring a plague of frogs over the land, with swarms of flies and horrible insects."

"That was to show God's power to obedience and reverence," explained Mrs. Boynton, who had known the Bible from cover to cover in her youth and could still give chapter and verse for hundreds of her favorite passages.

"It took an awful lot of mokin', Pharaoh's heart!" exclaimed the boy. "Pharaoh must have been worse than Deacon Baxter! I wonder if they ever tried to make him good by being kind to him! I've read and read, but I can't find they used anything on him but plagues and famines and boils and pestilences and thunder and hail and fire! I've got a middle name, Aunt Boynton, for I don't like Rod very much?"

"I never heard that you had a middle name; you must ask Ivory," said his aunt abstractedly.
