Home Newspapers.

The growing value of the home newspaper is now very generally conceded. Some merchants think, however, that they have done all that is needed when they have stenciled their names and locations on fences or bill boards, but these things are of the past, and no longer attract attention. There is only one way for the retail merchant to push his business and that is by telling his story through space in the home newspaper. The first thing is to have comething to sell and then let the people know it in such a fashion that they will come and buy. Use the local paper that the people you want to reach read, and nearly everybody reads the paper which is published in his home city or village -Seneca Falls Reveille

Family and Morals.

All theories of the origin and development of morals agree on one point, that the family is the root out of which sympathy and the social virtues have grown, however religion and social laws may have varied. What is right in married life is like that which is right in the larger life of society. What the strong find useful becomes a duty to the weak. Although some morals have had a Teligious beginning, the morals that have sprung from life and its needs are the ones which have endured. Religious codes of morals have only remained important when they have adapted themselves to social life in its changing forms.—Ellen Key.

Two Unusual Professions.

One of the most unusual professions fin existence is that of the man with a knowledge of many languages who spends a great part of his time in lookfing through reference books in order no discover errors, the publishers payling him for every inaccuracy disschoold. But this is by no means the speciment trade in existence. Even more out of the way is the calling, whose existence has just made itself known in the courts, of supplying fing's teeth to the Pacific islanders. The latter use them as eneroncy.

THE SHETLE ASIATIC.

blic illustration of the Saying That "Clathes Make the Man."

Some hundreds of years ago there lived in Agshelin, a little town in Asia Minor, an imam, or village parson, the Khoja Masr-ed-Din Effendi. Concerning him Mr. H. C. Lukach tells some stories in his book, "The Fringe of the

One day a camel passed along the street in which the khoja lived, and one of the khoja's neighbors who had never seen a camel before ran to ask him what this strange beast might be.

"Don't you know what that is?" said the khoja, who also had never seen a camel, but would not betray his ignorance. "That is a hare a thousand

A great man once gave a feast to which, with much condescension, he caused the khoja to be bidden. Accordingly on the appointed day the khoia repaired to the great man's house and found himself in the midst of a fashionable and richly clad company, which took no notice of the poor imam in his threadbare black gown. No one greeted him or spoke to him and eventually he was shown by a servant to the lowest seat. After a fittle while the khoja slipped away unobserved and went into the hall where some of the mighty ones had left their outer garments. Selecting a magnificent gown richly lined with fur, he out it on and returned to the room. Nobody recognized this resplendent personage, whose arrival excited universal attention. The company rose to salute him, and the host, who had previously ignored him, approached, bowing, and inquired after his honorable health.

The khoja stroked the sleeve of his borrowed garment. "Answer, fur!"

STUCK TO HIS FAITH.

Anyhow it Paid the Young Prussian

Not to Change It. A king of Prussia who reigned about the beginning of last century was noted for his geniality, and often in the course of his walks through the streets would enter into conversation with his subjects.

One day he met a young man and asked him what his faith was. The youth, who was somewhat of a wag. answered, smiling. "I believe what my tailor believes." The king entered pleasantly into the joke and then asked again, "And what does your tailor believe in?" "Your majesty." replied the young man, "he believes that he will never get the 30 marks which I owe him, and I believe it also." The king laughed heartly at the outspoken and unrestrained way in which he had answered him, and then gave him 30 marks. "Now, then, you can pay your tailor and so change his faith." The young man fancied, however, that he could use the money for a better purpose, and the tailor naturally went unpaid. Not long afterward the king met the same youth, who, as he saw his majesty approaching, tried to escape down a side street. The king had, however, espied him and called after him. The youth, somewhat crestfallen and abashed, approached his majesty, who at once asked him if he had paid his tailor. A smile passed over the young man's face as he replied, "Your majesty, I could not change my faith for 80 marks."

Disraeli and Primrese

Disraeli's alleged fondness for the primrose rests upon rather flimsy evidence. Lady Dorothy Nevill. who knew him intimately, has recorded that she "never heard him express any particular admiration for the primrose. which it is always said was his favorite flower, though a great admirer of his used to send him big bunches of them from Torquay every spring." Grant Duff, when discussing the primrose cult with Lord Pembroke, was told, "There are two stories about it, but certainly be once told Cory. 'I like to be in the country when the primroses are out," A consensus of opinion seems to favor the idea that in Queen Victoria's inscription, "His favorite flower," the pronoun referred. not to Disraell, but the prince consort -London Mail.

Colonel Relates More of His Adventures With Jungle Denizens.

[From Colonel Roosevelt's fourth article tescribing his journey in the Brazilian wilderness, in Scribner's Magazine for July, 1814. Copyright, 1914, by Charles Scribner's Sons.]

HE most important part of our trip turns out to be that down the Unknown river. In view of the discussion that has taken place about this river it is perhaps best to make this short statement in reference thereto. The full account-and the only account-of our trip down the river will be given in the October and November numbers of Scribner's Mag-

We put upon the map an unknown river, in length and volume roughly corresponding to the Elbe, the Rhine and the Rhone and Saone. The upper course of this river, where we went down it, had never hitherto been traversed nor the adjoining country visited by any civilized man. The lower course had for years been known to the rubber men, but the cartographers not only of Europe and the United States but of Brazil were so totally ignorant of it that not a hint of its existence is to be found on the map. For example, the map of South America furnished 18 by the American Museum of Natural History, an excellent publication by a fellow of the Royal Geographical society, and as good as any other map, contains not only no hint of the course of the river, but not even a name for the dotted outline which I suppose probably was meant to indicate the mouth of the river where it entered the Madeira. On a Brazilian map I saw this dotted outline given the name by which it is known by the rubber men, Arlponan, but it was still left in as a creek, the mapmaker having no idea whatever of its size or importance.

Colonel Kills a Tapir.

Telling of an exciting tapir bunt. Colonel Roosevelt says:

The tapir was coming downstream at a great rate, only its queer head above water, while the dugouts were closing rapidly on it, the paddlers uttering loud cries. As the tapir turned slightly to one side or the other the long, slightly upturned snout and the strongly pronounced arch of the crest along the head and upper neck gave it a marked and unusual aspect.

I could not shoot, for it was directly in line with one of the pursuing dugouts. Suddenly it dived, the snout being slightly curved downward as it did so. There was no trace of it; we gazed eagerly in all directions: the dugout in front came alongside our cance, and the paddlers rested, their paddles ready.

Then we made out the tapir clambering up the bank. It had dived at right angles to the course it was following and swum under water to the very edge of the shore, rising under the overhanging tree branches at a point where a drinking trail for game led down a break in the bank. The branches partially hid it, and it was in deep shadow, so that it did not offer a very good shot.

My bullet went too far back, and the tapir disappeared in the forest at a gallop as if unburt, although the bullet really secured it by making it unwilling to trust to its speed and leave the neighborhood of the water.

An Exciting Chase.

Three or four of the hounds were by this time swimming the river, leaving

President's Daughter Says "It's Awful," but She Has Her Way.

How Miss Margaret Woodrow Wilson used the steam roller to put through a resolution for which she was working is told with glee by those who knew of the incident in the conference on social centers at Madison, Wis. Miss Wilson offered the resolution, put the question when the chairman of the conference hesitated and declared the resolution carried before the presiding officer caught his breath.

"I know it is awful," she whispered as she took her seat, "but it had been discussed, and we knew no one opposed it, anyhow, so what's the harm?"

The resolution recommended an amendment to the Wisconsin social center law providing for the naming of secretaries for social center work. State School Superintendent Cary, presiding, did not act promptly enough to suit the president's daughter.

"Is everybody in favor of the resolution?" she asked. There was a chorus of yeas, and she declared the motion

In a couple of minutes we saw the tapir take to the waters far upstream. and after it we went as fast as the paddle could urge us through the water. We were not in time to head it, but fortunately some of the dogs had come down to the river's edge at the very point where the tapir was about to land. Two or three of the dogs were swimming. We were more than half the breadth of the river away from the tapir and somewhat down stream when it dived. It made an astonishingly long swim beneath the water this time, almost as if it had been a hippopotamus, for it passed completely under our cance and rose between us and the hither bank. I shot it, the bullet going into its brain, while it was thirty or forty yards from shore. It sank at once.

Dangerous Peccaries.

The small peccaries go singly or in small parties and when chased take refuge in holes or hollow logs, where they show valiant fight, but the big over 1912, when 127 occurred. peccaries go in berds of considerable size and are so truculent that they are the rule in Philadelphia the coming reluctant to run and prefer either to move slowly off, chattering their tusks and grunting, or else actually to charge.

Where much persecuted the survivors gradually grow more willing to run, but their instinct is not to run, but to trust to their truculence and their mass action for safety. They inflict a fearful bite and frequently kill dogs. They often charge the hunters, and I have beard of men being badly wounded by them, while almost every man who hunts them often is occasionally forced to scramble up a tree to avoid a charge. But I have never heard of a man being killed by them. They sometimes surround the tree in which the man has taken refuge and keep him up it.

Cherrie on one occasion in Costa Rica was thus kept up a tree for several hours by a great herd of 300 or 400 of these peccaries, and this although he killed several of them. Ordinarily, however, after making their charge they do not turn, but pass on out of

Ugly Looking Objects.

Soon we heard the ominous groaning of the herd in front of us and almost on each side. Then Benedetto joined us, and the dog appeared in the rear. We moved slowly forward toward the sound of the fierce moaning grunts. which were varied at times by a castanet chattering of the tusks. Then we dimly made out the dark forms of the peccaries moving slowly to the left.

My companions each chose a tree to climb at need and pointed out one for me. I fired at the half seen form of a hog through the vines, leaves and branches. Colonel Rondon fired. I fired three more shots at other hogs, and the Indian also fired. The peccaries did not charge. Walking and trotting. with bristles erect, groaning and clacking their tusks, they disappeared into the jungle. We could not see one of them clearly, and not one was left dead. But a few paces on we came across one of my wounded ones standing at bay by a palm trunk, and I killed it forthwith.

Philadelphia Guards Against Casualties, Which In 1913 Numbered 340. Chicago to Avoid Danger of a Big Central Celebration - Patriotism Without Pyrotechnics New Ideal.

The campaign to keep Americans, young and old, from killing themselves or other people in celebrating the dawn of American independence on July 4 is being waged with renewed energy this year because last year showed an increase of serious accidents over the year before. The movement is nation wide, and the aim is to make every community adopt the "safe and sane" slogan for Independence day.

A compilation of statistics indicates that in the last eleven years fireworks burned on the Fourth have cost the United States 1,792 deaths and 39,488

Philadelphia last year was the only large city in the United States having more than 100 injuries due to misguided patriotism, and official action looking to the prevention of a repetition of such a casualty record has been taken. Last year Philadelphia reported 340 casualties, a marked increase

Safe and sane celebrations are to be holiday.

Moving pictures will be used generally as a substitute for fireworks, which are officially banned, and there will be the free distribution of ice cream, dancing on the streets, balloon ascensions and baby shows to keep the children out of mischief.

Warns of Tetanus.

"If we are unsuccessful," says the Pennsylvania Society For the Protection of Research, "in applying the logic of common sense to individuals who persist in their folly of using dangerery effort to save them from the horrors of lockjaw. In every case of blank cartridge, cannon cracker or any other character of wound where infection is threatened we advise the prompt injection of tetanus antitoxin.

"Lockjaw or tetanus is a bacterial disease chiefly of horses and man. The bacillus, identical in both, develops in a wound into which it has entered with dirt and produces an intense poison. The death rate from these Fourth of July wounds continues to be appalling despite the efforts for a safe and same observance of the day. The poison engendered by the tetanus bacillus passes into the blood and attacks certain cells of the nervous system, through which the convulsions and contracted muscles characteristic of the disease are pro-

Fourth In New York and Chicago. The use of fireworks in any form is to be opposed in New York city this year by Mayor Mitchel's rational Fourth of July committee. Each year the committee has been gradually crowding out the fireworks, and last year displays were allowed only in scattered districts. There will be a patriotic rally, with Governor Glynn, Speaker Champ Clark and others as speakers; separate celebrations in the different boroughs, local celebrations in which school children will take a prominent part and aviation features. Plans for community celebrations in various sections of Chicago have been announced. It is the aim to avoid a big central celebration with its crowds and attending perils.

Chicago's "sane Fourth" campaign was started in 1900. The result has been a diminution of the annual toll of deaths and disasters to the point where the figures show Chicago's Fourth to be practically stripped of its terrors. In 1907 Chicago suffered sixteen killed and 151 injured. The Fourth of July of 1913 cost only one killed and twelve injured.

Boat Service on Cayuga.

The long felt want of a daily boat service the full length of Cayuga lake was realized on Tuesday morning when Captain C. E. Sykes of Ithaca placed the Steamer Horton in service for trips to Cayuga and return, and, if business warrants, will later add a second boat to run a reverse schedule starting at Cayuga.

The Horton schedule on week days will call for the start from the Buffalo street landing at Ithaca at 8:30 o'clock in the morning. The steamer will stop at Renwick pier to pick up pas sengers at 9 o'cleck. On its trips to and from Cayuga the steamer will stop at all of the landings thus affording accommodations for persons wishing to visit the many popular lake

The arriving time at Cayuga will be about 12 o'clock and the return trip will be made at 3 o'clock, giving time for sight seeing and other di versions at the north end of the lake.

The arriving time at Ithaca will be 7 o'clock On Sundays the leaving time at Ithaca will be one hour later than on week days, but the return time will be the same.

Captain Sykes has made arrange ments with all of the proprietors of lake resorts by which all of the docks will be repaired and maintained in safe conditions. The service is for both passengers and freight.

Wilbur-Slocum.

On Wednesday afternoon, July 15 about eighty relatives and friends assembled at the beautiful home of Mrs Cornelia Slocum in King Ferry to witness the marriage of her daughter, Emily, to Mr. Carleton Wilbur,

At 4 o'clock, while Mrs. Frank King, sister of the bride, played the wedding march, the bridal party en tered the parlor, passing through an aisle formed of large ferns at either end of which was a tall pillar of white lilies, and took their places beneath an arch of evergreens, from which a horseshoe was suspended

The Misses Helen Slocum and Hen rietta Ely acted as bridesmaids with Jesse Wilbur and George Slocum as groom's attendants Rev. W. H. Perry performed the ceremony, using the impressive ring service

The bride was very prettily attired in cream white crepe de chene, with pearl trimmings, and carried a bou quet of bride roses.

Following congravulations, a fine wedding collation was served, with the bride's former classmates acting as waiters, after which the bridal amid showers of confetti, followed by the best wishes of their friends for a happy and prosperous life.

The wedding gifts were both nu merous and useful, including quite a sum of money.

9 to 0 in Fayor of Genoa.

A large crowd witnessed the Frontenac-Genoa game last Saturday on the local grounds, and every one got the worth of their money in just one inning-if enthusiasm counts for anything. The conflict as recorded in the minds of the fans, who were unable to tell it much above a whisper as a result of the over-taxed demands on the vocal organs on this occasion, reads something like this:

From the time the game was called it was plainly seen that the Frontenace were determined to get away with the game in one way or another.

The Genoa boys have given every visiting team a square deal and the long end of every close decision this year, but notwithstanding this fact, the Frontenace brought along their own umpire, and it didn't take much urging to get them to use him on the bases. Well, it turned out that if one of the Genoa boys took a look at another base, he was called out But we stood for it, for we knew that we could hand them something before the game was over that they hadn't seen over by the lake. The Frontenacs succeeded in getting two runs to their credit in the first inning which were the only scores made by either side until the eighth inning, when the visitors made two more runs in the first half In the last half of the eighth the big show opened with Morgan at bat, who got a base on an error; then came Zip who got a base in the same manner, then came Stickle who made a hit and filled the bases, and no one out. With the bases full and no one out it looked pretty soft for our ever reliable "pinch hitter" to do his stunt, and so the "Anti" was called to bat and immediately lambasted educated. the first ball over the plate for a pret ty hit to left garden which started Christian Endeavor meeting is to be pair left by automobile for a trip, the Genoa boys scoring and the visitore frantically throwing the ball over led by Miss Emily Atwater. the heads of their team mates, and when the clouds of dust rolled away

The Story of Waitstill Baxter

By KATE DOUGLAS WIGGIN

Copyright, 1913, by Kate Douglas Wiggir

"Did my father hame me Rod, or my mother 7'

"I don't really know. Perhaps it was your mother, but don't ask questions.

"I forgot, Aunt Boynton! Yes. think perhaps my mother named me. Mothers 'most always name their babies, don't they? My mother wasn't like you, she looked just like the picture of Pocahontas in my history. She never knew about these Bible rods. I guess."

"When you go a little further you will find pleasanter things about rods." said his aunt, knitting, knitting intensely, as was her habit, and talking as if her mind were 1,000 miles away. "You know they were just little branches of trees, and it was only God's power that made them wonderful in any way."

"Oh! I thought they were like the singing teacher's stick he keeps time with."

"No; if you look at your concordance you'll find it gives you a chapter in Numbers where there's something beautiful about rods. I have forgotten the place. It has been many years since I looked at it. Find it and read it aloud to me." The boy searched his concordance and readily found the reference in the 17th chapter of Numbers.

"Stand near me and read," said Mrs. Boyuton. "I like to hear the Bible read aloud!" Rodman took his Bible and read.

me to read out loud, Aunt Boynton," he stammered. "Can I study it by mymelf and read it to Ivory first?" "Go on, go on, you read very sweetly. I cannot remember what comes and I wish to hear it." The boy continued, but without raising his eyes from the Bible: "3. And thou shalt write Aaron's name upon the rod of Levi: for one rod shall be for the head of the house of their fathers.

"4. And thou shalt lay them up in the tabernacle of the congregation be- milk; then the camphor by her side, an fore the testimony, where I will meet with you.

Rodman had read on, absorbed in the story and the picture it presented 'sim.' in his imagination. He liked the idea of all the princes having a rod secondlag to the house of their fathers. He allied to think of the little branches waing laid on the altar in the labermole, and above all he thought of the beging of each of the princes to have own rod chosen for the blossom-sees gave him a rod apiece, for each of Aaron was among their rods."

Oh! how the boy hoped that Aaron's branch would be the one chosen to blossom! He felt that his aunt would be pleased, too, but he read on steadily. with eyes that glowed and breath that came and went in a very paintation of interest:

"7. And Moses laid up the rods before the Lord in the tabernacle of witness.

"8. And it came to pass, that on the morrow Moses went into the tabernacle of witness; and, behold, the rod of Aaron was budded and brought forth buds, and bloomed blossoms, and vielded simonds."

It was Aaron's rod, then, and was an almond branch! How beautiful, for the blossoms would have been pink; and how the people must have marvelled to see the lovely blooming thing on the dark altar, first budding, then blossoming, then bearing nuts! And what was the rod chosen for? He hurried on to the next verse:

"9. And Moses brought out all the rods from before the Lord unto all the children of Israel: and they looked, and took every man his rod.

"10. And the Lord said unto Moses, Bring Aaron's rod again before the testimony to be kept for a token against the rebels; and thou shalt quite take away their murmurings from me, that they die not."

"Oh, Aunt Boynton," cried the boy. 'I love my name after I've heard about the almond rod! Aren't you proud that it's uncle's name that was written on the one that blossomed?"

He turned swiftly to find that his sunt's knitting had slipped on the floor; her nerveless hands drooped by her side as if there were no life in them, and ber head bad fallen against the back of her chair. The boy was paralyzed with fear at the sight of her closed eyes and the deathly pallor of her face. He had never seen her like this before, and Ivory was away. He flew for a bottle of spirit, always kept in the kitchen cupboard for emergencles, and throwing wood on the fire in passing, he swung the crane so that the tea kettle was over the flame. He knew only the humble remedies that slowly and haltingly, but with clear be had seen used here or there in illness and tried them timidly, praying every moment that he might hear Ivory's step. He warmed a soapstone in the embers and, taking off Mrs. her nostrils, and to his joy she stirred Through the boy's mind there darted in her chair; before many minutes her

"Are you better, aunt dear?" Rod phan that he was, with no knowledge asked in a very wavering and tearful voice.

She did not answer; she only opened caught sight of the name of Aaron in her eyes and looked at him. At length the verse that he was about to read she whispered faintly, "I want Ivory;

"He's out, aunt dear. Shall I help you to bed the way Ivory does? If you'll let me, then I'll run to the bridge cross lots like lightning and bring him back.

She assented and, leaning heavily on his slender shoulder, walked feebly into her bedroom off the living room. Rod was as gentle as a mother, and he was familiar with all the little offices that could be of any comfort-the soapstone warmed again for her feet. the bringing of her nightgown from the closet and when she was in bed another spoonful of brandy in hot extra homespun blanket over her and the door left open so that she could see the open fire that he made into a cheerful huddle, contrived so that it would not snap and throw out dangerous sparks in his absence.

All the while he was doing this Mrs. Boynton lay quietly in the bed talking to herself fitfully in the faint murmuring tone that was habitual to her. He could distinguish scarcely anything, only enough to guess that her mind was still on the Bible story that he was reading to her when she fainted. "The rod of Aaron was among the other rods," he heard her say, and a moment later, "Bring Aaron's rod again before the testimony." Was it his uncle's name that had so affected her? wondered the boy, almost sick with remorse, although he had tried his best to evade her command to read the chapter aloud. What would Ivory, his hero, his pattern and example, say? It had always been Rod's pride to carry his little share of every burden that fell to Ivory, to be faithful and helpful in every task given to him. He could walk through fire without flinching, he thought, if Ivory told him to, and he only prayed that he might not be held responsible

Rod sped down the lane and over the fields to the brick store where Ivory usually bought his groceries. His cousin was not there, but one of the men came out and offered to take his horse and drive over the bridge to see if he were at one of the neighbors' on that side of the river. Not a word did Hod breathe of his aunt's illness; And Moses spoke unto the chil- be simply said that she was ionesourof Israel, and every one of their for Ivery, and so he came to find him In five minutes they saw the Boyuton | Ivory asked Dr. Perry's advice about

"Of course you couldn't! Now you jump out and hitch the horse while I run in and see that nothing has happened while she's been left alone. Perhaps you'll have to go for Dr. Per-

Ivory went in with fear and trembling, for there was no sound save the ticking of the tall clock. The fire burned low upon the hearth, and the door was open into his mother's room. He fifted a candle that Rod had left ready on the table and stole softly to her bedside. She was sleeping like a child, but exhaustion showed itself in every line of her face. He felt her hands and feet and found the soapstone in the bed, saw the brandy bottle and the remains of a cup of milk on the light stand, noted the handkerchief. still strong of camphor, on the counterpane and the blanket spread carefully over her knees, and then turned approvingly to meet Rod stealing into the room on tiptoe, his eyes big with fear.

"We won't wake her, Rod. I'll watch awhile, then sleep on the sitting room ounge." "Let me watch, Ivory! I'd feel better if you'd let me, honest I would!" The boy's face was drawn with anxlety. Ivory's attention was attracted by the wistful eyes and the beauty of the forehead under the dark hair. He seemed something more than the child of yesterday-a care and responsibility and expense for all his loving obedience; he seemed all at once different tonight-older, more dependable, more trustworthy—in fact, a positive comfort and help in time of trouble.

"I did the best I knew how. Was anything wrong?" asked the boy, as lvory stood regarding him with a riendly smile. "Nothing wrong, Rod! Dr. Perry couldn't have done any better with what you had on hand. I don't know how I should get along without you, boy!" Here Ivory patted Rod's shoulder. "You're not a child any longer. Rod; you're a man and a brother, that's what you are, and to prove it I'll take the first watch and call you up at 1 o'clock to take the second so that I can be ready for my school work tomorrow. How does that suit you?"

"Tiptop!" said the boy, flushing with pride. "I'll lie down with my clothes on; it's only 9 o'clock and I'll get four hours' sleep: that's a lot more than Napoleon used to have."

He carried the Bible upstairs and just before he blew out his candle he looked again at the chapter in Numbers, thinking he would show it to Ivory privately next day. Again the story enchanted him, and again, like a child, he puts his own name and his living self among the rods in the tabernacle.

"Ivory would be the prince of our house," he thought. "Oh, how I'd like to be Ivory's rod and have it be the one that was chosen to blossom and keep the rebels from murmuring!"

CHAPTER XIX.

Lois Buries Her Dead. HE replies that Ivory had received from his letters of inquiry concerning his father's movements since leaving Maine and his possible death in the west left no reasonable room for doubt. Traces of Aaron Boynton in New Hampshire, in Massachusetts, in New York and finally in Ohio all pointed in one direction, and, although there were gaps and discrepancies in the account of his doings, the fact of his death seemed to be established by two apparently reliable witnesses.

That he was not unaccompanied in his earliest migrations seemed clear. but the woman mentioned as his wife disappeared suddenly from the reports. and the story of his last days was the story of a broken down, meiancholy, unfriended man, dependent for the last offices on strangers. He left no messages and no papers, said Ivory's correspondent and never made mention of any family connections whatsoever. He had no property and no means of defraying the expenses of his illness after he was stricken with the fever. No letters were found among his poor effects and no article that could prove his identity, unless it were a small gold locket, which bore no initials or marks of any kind, but which contained two locks of fair and brown hair. intertwined. The tiny trinket was enclosed in the letter, as of no value, unless some one recognized it as a keep-

Ivory read the correspondence with a heavy heart, inasmuch as it corroborated all his worst fears. He had sometimes secretly hoped that his father might return and explain the reason of his silence or in lieu of that that there might come to light the story of a pilgrimage, fanatical perhapa, but innocent of evil intention, one that could be related to his wife and his former friends and then buried forever with the death that had ended it.

Neither of these hopes could now ever be realized nor his father's memory made other than a cause for endless regret, sorrow and shame. His father, who had begun life so handsomely, with rare gifts of mind and personality, a wife of unusual beauty and intelligence and, while still young in years, a considerable success in his chosen profession. Finally, after days of pleading, he took her hands in his and said: "I do everything a mortal man can do to be a good son to you, mother. Won't you do this to please me and trust that I know what is best?" Whereupon she gave a trembling assent, as if she were agreeing to something indescriba former friend seemed to frighten her

After Dr. Perry had talked with her for a half hour and examined her sufficiently to make at least a reasonable guess as to her mental and physical condition, he advised Ivory to break the news of her husband's death to

"If you can get her to comprehend it," he said, " it is bound to be a relief from this terrible suspense."

"Will there be any danger of making her worse? Mightn't the shock cause too violent emotion?" asked Ivory anxlously.

"I don't think she is any longer capable of violent emotion," the doctor answered. "Her mind is certainly clearer than it was three years ago, but her body is nearly burned away by the mental conflict. There is scarcely any part of her but is wearyweary unto death, poor soul! One cannot look at her patient, lovely face without longing to lift some part of her burden. Make a trial, Ivory. It's a justifiable experiment, and I think it will succeed. I must not come any oftener myself than is absolutely necessary. She seemed afraid of me."

The experiment did succeed. Lois Boynton listened breathlessly with parted lips and with apparent comprehension to the story Ivory told her. Over and over again he told her gen-

"I gave it to my husband when you were born, my son!" she sobbed. "After all, it seems no surprise to me that your father is dead. He said he would come back when the mayflowers bloomed, and when I saw the autumn leaves I knew that six months must have gone and he would never stay away from us for six months without writing. That is the reason I have seldom watched for him these last weeks. I must have known that it was no use." She rose from her rocking chair and moved feebly toward her bedroom. "Can you spare me the rest of the day, Ivory?" she faltered as she leaned on her son and made her slow progress from the kitchen. "I must bury the body of my grief and I want to be alone at first. If only I could see Waitstill! We have both thought this was coming; she has a woman's instinct: she is younger and stronger than I am and she said it was braver not to watch and pine and fret as I have done, but to have faith in God that be would send me a sign when he was ready. She said if I could manage to be braver you would be happier too," Here she sank on to her bed exhausted, but still kept up her murmuring faintly and feebly between long intervals of silence.

"Do you think Waitstill could come tomorrow?" she asked. "I am so much braver when she is here with me. After supper I will put away your father's cup and plate once and for all, Ivory, and your eyes need never fill with tears again as they have sometimes when you have seen me watching. You needn't worry about me; I am remembering better these days, and the bells that ring in my ears are not so loud. If only the pain in my side were less and I were not so pressed for breath, I should be quite strong and could see everything clearly at last. There is something else that remains to be remembered. have almost caught it once and it must come to me again before long. Put the locket under my pillow. Ivory: close the door, please, and leave me to myself. I can't make it quite clear, my feeling about it, but it seems just as If I were going to bury your father, and I want to be alone."

day in all its accustomed splendor, and the feast and riot of color, the almost unimaginable glory, was the common property of the whole countryside, rich and poor, to be shared alike if perchance all eyes were equally alive to the wonder and the beauty. Waitstill Baxter went as often as she could to the Boynton farm, though never when Ivory was at home, and the affection between the younger and ably painful, and, indeed, this sight of the older woman grew closer and closer, so that it almost broke Waitstill's heart to leave the fragile creature when her presence seemed to bring such complete peace and joy.

"No one ever clung to me so before." she often thought as she was burrying across the fields after one of her half hour visits. "But the end must come before long. Ivory does not realize it yet, nor Rodman, but it seems as if she could never survive the long winter. Thanksgiving dinner, you dear, comforting little boy!"

Rodman ran toward home, and Waitstill hurried along, scarcely noticing the beauties of the woods and fields and waysides, all glowing masses of goldenrod and purple frost flowers.

Patty was standing under a little rock maple, her brown linsey-woolsey in tone with the landscape and the hood of her brown cape pulled over her bright head. She looked flushed and excited as she ran up to her sister and said: "Waity, darling, you've been crying! Has father been scolding you?

"No. dear, but my heart is aching today so that I can scarcely bear it. A wave of discouragement came over me as I was walking through the woods. and I gave up to it a bit. I remembered how soon it will be Thanksgiving day, and I'd so like to make it happier for you and a few others that I love."

Patty could have given a shrewd guess as to the chief cause of the heartache, but she forebore to ask any questions. "Cheer up, Waity!" she cried. "You can never tell. We may have a thankful Thanksgiving. after

RS. ABEL DAY had come to spend the afternoon with Aunt Abby Cole, and they were seated at the two sitting room windows, sweeping the landscape with eagle eyes in the intervals of making patchwork.

"The foliage has been a little mite too rich this season," remarked Aunt Abby. "I b'lieve I'm glad to see it thinnin' out some, so 't we can have some kind of an idee of what's goin' on in the village."

"There's plenty goin' on." Mrs. Day answered unctuously, "some of it above board an' some underneath it." "An' that's jest where it's aggravatin' to have the leaves so thick and the trees so high between you and other folks' bouses. Trees are good for shade, it's true, but there's a limit to all things. There was a time when I could see 'bout everything that went on up to Baxters' and down to Bart's shop and, by goin' up attic, consid'able many things that happened on the bridge. Bart vows he never planted that plum tree at the back door of his shop-says the children must have hove out plum stones when they was settin' on the steps and the tree come up of its own accord."

"Men are an awful trial," admitted Mrs. Day. "Abel never sympathizes with my headaches. I told him a-Sunday I didn't believe he'd mind if I died the next day, an' all he said was, 'Why don't you try it an' see, Lyddy?' He thinks that's humorous."

"I know. That's the way Bartholomew talks. I guess they all do. You can see the bridge better'n I can, Lyddy. Has Mark Wilson drove over sence you've been settin' there? He is going up to Albany and take his seat in the executive chamber, not only as the governor of the state, but also as the chief prosecutor of the state. He is going to do in the state what he has done in New York city. From investigations already begun and from information already on hand, the district attorney of New York county is led to believe that an astounding condition of corruption has existed and still exists in certain departments of the state. If he becomes governor he is going through these departments from one end to the other and bring the corruption to light, and just so soon as the trails lead to the evildoers the criminal courts will be put in operation and the evildoers punished. Nor will it matter in the least where the

"State Must Be Clean." There will be but one aim in viewthe state must by clean.

And Whitman, if elected governor, will swing the state wide open. FOR BARNES, MURPHY AND ROOSEVELT WHITMAN DOESN'T GIVE A TINKER'S UTILITY.

Now one would probably gain little or nothing by saying what Tammany men, if there be any; what up state be any; what Republican party organization men, if there be any, or even what Progressives, if there be any, are implicated in unlawful conspiracies to loot the state strong box. One may think such thoughts, but one. if wise, does not think aloud. But sometimes adroitly planned political moves speak louder than oral assevera

Here, then, is Mr. Whitman's politcal status in regard to the gubernatorial nomination:

William Barnes, Jr., does not want

Charles F. Morphy does not want him. Why?

Theodore Roosevelt does not want him. Why?

For all of these collectively and for each of them individually Charles Seymour Whitman does not give a tinker's dam, and, this expression is used not in the sense of profanity, but in the full meaning of an ancient English provincialism which signifies a piece of putty or a bit of stale bread dough, utilized to stop a leak in a utensil of the kitchen.

As for Barnes, it is said by those who have closely watched the course of recent political currents that Whitman is developing such strength that the up state statesman will be forced into accepting him as the Republican call it the "system" or what you will.

As for Murphy, no explanation is necessary. If explanation were necessary it could be easily reached by infact to theory.

As for Roosevelt-there all reasoning of any description ceases.

His Friends Confident.

But despite any boss-and all bosses look alike to Whitman, whether Republican, Democratic or Progressive-Whitman and Whitman's friends are confident that he will get the Repub-Ecan nomination for governor and perhaps the Progressive nomination, if he can capture the Progressive primaries. If Roosevelt himself should become the Progressive nominee for governor or if the Progressive party should name another candidate other than Whitman, with three men in the running race, to say nothing of Sulzer, some hold that it would not be such clear sailing for Whitman as it otherwise would be. But this is not the view of Whitman and his friends. Even with four in the field they still insist Whitman will be elected. Therefore the tinker's homely utility is uti-

WHAT WHITMAN WILL ASK IF PUT ON THE REPUBLICAN SLATE. Well, now, let's give Whitman and Whitman's friends their way. Let's admit, anyway, for the sake of argument, that Whitman will get the Republican nomination for governor. First of all, Whitman will ask that be have placed on the ticket with him as running mates, as a candidate for attorney general and as a candidate for state engineer, men upon whom he can absolutely rely. He will ask that they, be men whom he personally knows and whom he can personally trust. For he attorney general he wants one of the best and shrewdest The Perfected

To bring sons to glory is God's great purpose in Jesus Christ. The words sons" should be emphasized, for God first must call men to be sons, and after that bring them to glory even as the epistle to the Romans says: "If sons, then heirs." By nature men are in the hole. This soon melts, and the not God's sons in this sense, but become so by the regeneration of the big propositions which Mr. Whitman Holy Spirit through faith in Jesus would begin to investigate at the very receive the spirit of adoption whereby they can cry, "Abba, Father." When the text speaks of Jesus Christ as the captain of our salvation, a comparison is drawn between him and Joshua, who was the captain of the hosts of Israel in their entrance into Canaan. He was to lead them into their inheritance under the Abrahamic into our inheritance under the gospel. In the former case only they perished in the wilderness who either out of "I have put it up to the police to love unto the flesh pots of Egypt, or force them to act. It is the duty of through terror at the hardships of the way refused to go up under their leader's command. And so in the case of those who through faith have become sons of God, there is no doubt of ultimate victory in the following of Jesus

Christ's Dedication. Our captain was dedicated to his work through sufferings, for that is the meaning of "perfect" in the text. It was often used among the heathen to signify the initiation of a man into he mysteries of their religion in order to become a leader of others in the same religion. Sometimes these rites were accompanied by much pain, and the inspired writer employs the figure to illustrate the sufferings of our Lord. These sufferings were of two kinds. His life sufferings and his death sufferings. In life he suffered for righteousness' sake, that is through sympathy with man, but great as this was, it was very different from his death sufferings. These were the hiding of his Father's face and the awful darkness of Calvary when he bore our guilt upon the accursed tree. To some extent we may sympathize with him in his life sufferings, but who can know anything of his death sufferings? As one says, "man can paint the cursed tree, but who can paint the curse of the Lord that made it so? felt the force of opposition-you may Man may describe the soldier's spear, but not the cup of wrath he drained to the last drop.'

And how the mystery deepens as we read that it became God to do this. It was not only right and proper, but it behooved him to employ this method in bringing many sons into glory. He could not do differently and accomplish it, because of the desert of sin and the unchangeableness of his justice. He might have suffered all men to perish in their sins, but once having, in love, determined to redeem them, there was no other way in which it could be righteously carried out. Truth failed, and as Isaiah says: 'The Lord saw it, and is displeased him that there was no judgment. And he saw that there was no man. and wondered that there was no intercessor; therefore his arm brought salvation unto him; and his righteousness, it sustained him." Isaiah 59:

What Inference Follows.

If it became God to adopt this plan to save us, who are we to question its wisdom or necessity? Who are we to hesitate in bringing our convictions and conduct into harmony with his great purpose? And if the object God had was to bring sons to glory should we not earnestly inquire if we are sons? It is said of Jesus Christ in John's gospel (1:12) that, "as many as received him to them gave he authority to become the sons of God." Have we received him? Does he by his blessed Spirit dwell within and rule us? Let us not take this for may be that it will be part of my granted; let us be assured of it by the testimony of the Word of God and the answer of our experience.

WHAT TO EAT AND DRINK IN SUMMER

LIOT weather and digestive upsets go together. We call such upsets "summer complaint" with good reason.

Hot weather favors the growth of germs and the decay of milk and other foods. It also lowers the power of the body to digest food which it could thrive on in winter.

THE MOST IMPORTANT RULE FOR KEEPING WELL IN SUMMER IS NOT TO OVERTAX THE DIGESTION.

Special care should be taken not to eat foods which have UNDER-GONE DECOMPOSITION. Such food is one of the sommonest causes

DO NOT OVEREAT IN SUMMER. If you take more food than the body needs the excess ferments in the intestine and the products are absorbed and poison the body.

Do not eat or eat very lightly when OVERTIRED or VERY WARM. EAT SPARINGLY OF MEAT IN SUMMER. Meat foods are particularly harmful when they ferment in the intestine. Meat should not be eaten more than once a day and may well be omitted entirely by all but those who are doing hard physical work. Fish, too, should not be taken more than once a day. IN WARM CLIMATES MEN LIVE LARGELY ON FRUITS AND VEGETABLES, and in this case nature's way is the best way.

Simple and light meals should be the rule in July and August.

DRINK FREELY OF WATER BETWEEN MEALS. Water drinking favors free perspiration and keeps the bowels in good condition. The temperature of the water should be COOL, BUT NOT TOO COLD. Do not take cold drinks while you are very warm or in the midst of violent exercise. Thirst is often best quenched by something hot, such as hot tea. Bicycle riders know very well that ice water drunk on the road leaves the mouth dry and parched. A little sweetening or a pleasant acid flavor in the drink is good. Laborers in the field have long had the practice of putting ginger and molasses in their field jug. Oatmeal water is an excellent drink for man and beast in summer.

ALCOHOLIC LIQUORS SHOULD NOT BE USED IN HOT WEATHER. The temporary sense of coolness which they cause is quickly followed by a hot flush which makes the drinker much more uncomfortable than before.

THE ALCOHOLIC IS THE FIRST PERSON TO SUCCUMB TO HOT WEATHER.

KEEP THE BOWELS CLEAR IN HOT WEATHER. The fermentation of food in the intestine is likely to cause serious disease when the system is weakened by hot weather. It is most important to clear the bowels every day. Free water drinking helps in this. In cases of constipation a dessertspoonful of Russian oil, taken at first three times a day and after a few days twice and then once, will lubricate the bowels and put them in good shape.

EAT LIGHTLY AND NOT MUCH MEAT.

DRINK FREELY, BUT NOT ICE WATER OR ALCOHOL. KEEP THE BOWELS OPEN.

If you do these things you can bid defiance to the germs of summer

Fought With Little Musket Which Men of His Regiment Fashioned For Him - His Memorable Encounter With a Confederate Colonel After Chickamauga-Youngest Sergeant.

As long as the records of the United States army are kept Colonel John L. Clem, senior colonel of the quartermaster corps, will be registered as the officer who for more than a year was the only survivor of the great civil war in the army. When he goes on the retired list next year, says the New York Times, the very last link that binds the army of today to that in its administration. of the sixtles will have been forever removed.

Colonel Clem is a Union veteran, also the son-in-law of a Confederate soldier. He was born at Newark, O., Aug. 13, 1851. He was, therefore, not Lincoln called for volunteers.

The Third Ohio infantry was recruited from the neighborhood in which Johnny Clem lived. He was an orphan then. One May morning in 1861 the boy appeared before Captain McDougal and told him that he wanted to go to the front. But McDougal turned Clem down. However, when the Third Ohio started for Cincinnati Johnny Clem, though not of the regiment, went with it.

He was so persevering that it was decided to take him along as a sort of emergency drummer. The soldiers provided him with a drum and a musket, the barrel of which had been cut off so as to make it possible for the child to carry it.

At Shiloh, where Grant's fame as a soldier began, Clem received his baphim "Johnny Shiloh," a nickname that stuck to him until a greater fame was to come to him in the battle of Chicka-As at Shiloh, Clem was in the thick of the fray. He threw aside his drum and went to the front with the little short barreled musket that the men of the Twenty-second Michigan had rigged up for him. He had been enlisted as a "marker" and had the right to carry a gun.

Youngest Sergeant Army Has Had. After the battle General Rosecrans made Clem a sergeant-the youngest of that rank who ever served in the United States army.

Following the battle of Chickamauga, when the Union army was retiring toward Chattanooga, the brigade to which Clem was attached had been ordered to hold its position. The position became untenable, and the brigade fell back and, in doing so. lost Instead, the boy fired point blank, The colonel fell from his horse badly wounded, and Johnny darted into the time said, "Tell us about it! We bushes. Late that night he turned up at Chattanooga.

Kenosha, Wis., Will Set Clocks One Hour Ahead For Sport's Sake.

The example of Cleveland in setting the clock ahead one hour to conform to eastern time in order to have one hour more of daylight for workers is to be copied at Kenosha, Wis., because of the interest in golf, which occupies the attention of the leading factory own-

They have proposed a plan to adopt eastern time to start their factories an hour earlier in the day and close an hour earlier in the afternoon. This would enable the employees and employers to go home at 4 o'clock, and a further shortening of the noon hour to thirty minutes, which is also suggested, would advance the closing time another half hour.

New Name For Culebra Cut. A propesal to rename Culebra cut Gaillard cut, in honor of Colonel David Du B. Gaillard, the army engineer who chained the foot of the mountain there and by his devotion to duty contracted a malady which caused his death, has been laid before President Wilson by Representative Finley of South Careins. Mr. Finley said the president instantly approved of the plan-

Membership in a Farm Bureau Local interest and responsibility are essential in any kind of public effort for the improvement of conditions. Assistance from without is of little value unless supplemented by local effort. This effort should be managed at home. This is the primary reason for the Farm Bureau Association.

All over the State the question is being raised. "Why should I pay money to support an organization for which all the people are taxed through national, state and county appropriations?" The question is a fair one; but the answer is plain. There are two good reasons why individuals should personally support a Farm Bureau Association with their memberships and money.

First, while a Farm Bureau is a public institution and free to every one, nevertheless it is true that a man always gets the greatest benefit from what he contributes toward and what he is definitely interested in. Persons who take memberships in and pay their money to a Farm Bureau Association have a proprietary interest in it not possessed by non-members. Moreover, the Farm Bureau is a public enterprise and ita members show their public spirit when they join and take an active part Secondly, the Farm Bureau Association gives a direct benefit to its members, which non-members are not entitled to. The justification in expending public funds in Farm Bureau effort lies in the quite ten years of age when President | fact that it benefits everyone. Leadership, initiative, organization, economic and social studies, experiments, demonstrations and even the kind of personal help which furnishes a good example to the neighborhood, are all legitimate benefits from public funds. But there is a kind of assistance that is purely personal for which public funds should not be expended and for which persons should pay. All such work as furnishing special quotations and rates on lime, fertilizers, seeds, feeds, live stock and The Twenty-second Michigan was at other supplies, and advertising these materials and other products for sale, is more of a personal than of a public benefit, and should be paid for by the individual receiving it in the form of a membership in the Farm Bureau Association. The Federal Government recognized this when it ruled that correspondence and eircular matter on these subjects are not frankable. State and block. $1.25 value County funds should be subject to the same restrictions.

Here, then, are two good and sufficient reasons for membership in the Farm Bureau Association. (I) a member helps himself (the most effective kind of help) when he takes an active part in the Farm Bureau work, and in addition shows his public spirit by helping with his vote and influence to direct this work along right lines, and (2) he gets a direct and personal benefit to which a non-member is not entitled.

The central office urges that the membership and work of the Farm Bureau R. & G. Front lacing Corsets Associations be developed along these lines. It believes that these principals are sound and that they should lead to the solution of what is to some a vexing problem. The office would be glad indeed to hear criticisms of these statements, and to discuss them further.

-- And again the joke is on us. 'The whole vicinity is stirred up!" said a farmer who lives a short distance out. Snatching a pencil and piece of paper we started to jot down the facts and at the same want the news!" What stirred it up?" "Plowing," replied the far-

-When you hear a man sneer at the local paper because it is not as cheap and newsy as the city papers, you can bet that he does not squander any of his wealth in assisting to make it better, and that generally the paper has done more for him than he has for it. The man who cannot see the bene fits arising from a local newspaper is about as much value to a town as a delinquent tax list.-Sheldon

-A report by Superintendent of Schools H D. Hervey describing the work in the public schools of Auburn during the past year shows a large percentage of overaged pupils in the grades and pupils who failed in High school. Out of 670 failures the causes were found to be as follows: Lack of effort, 182; lack of ability, 176; lack of preparation, 112; irregular attendance, 70; poor health, 30 and unknown, 106.

Light Under Water.

The depth to which the sun's rays penetrate water has been discovered by photography. Five hundred and thirty feet below the sustace darkness was much the same as that on the earth on a clear but moonless night.
