James Parmley Wins.

The very interesting and much discussed case of James Parmley against the Farmer's Mutual Indemnity Association of Cayuga county was tried in Supreme Court at Auburn, N. Y., before Justice William W. Clark and a jury on Tuesday and Wednesday of this week, and result ed in a verdict of a full amount of the plaintiff's claim, in the sum of $668 10 damages The costs were about the sum of $112 in addition. The plaintiff's attorneys were Wright & Parker of this village, and the defendant was represented by County Judge Greenfield of Auburn -- Moravia Rep - Register.

Star Sing News.

A few days ago Lord Decies, while traveling in California with his wife lost his hand bag containing his comb and brush, and had to comb his hair with his wife's comb. This interesting item of news was telegraphed ail over the world by the Associated Press. And now another startling news item has been discovered. Miss Eleanor Wilson, the President's daughter, attended a theater a few nights ago and not having had her supper, she actually ate a bun while viewing the performance. While Town Is Asleep-Specially Trained Men Look After Asphalt. Regular Force of Nearly a Thousand Cleaners.

With almost every city and town in the United States preparing for its spring cleaning, attention has been attracted to the methods of cleaning house adopted by the important cities of Europe.

in no European town perhaps are the methods more interesting than in the thriving German city of Hamburg. where carefully trained children help to keep the city beautiful. Writing from that place, United States Consul Robert P. Skinner says that the mayor of one of the large cities of Ohio who visited Hamburg was much impressed with the important part performed by the children in keeping the city clean. He departed from the city, Mr. Skinner says, convinced that the cleaning of streets and sidewalks in Germany is a much lighter task than in cities of the same size in the United States ginues until 6 p. m., except with the because of the orderly habits of the people themselves.

"Suction street sweeping devices." continues Mr. Skinner, "are practically unknown in Germany. Hamburg itself owns horse drawn sweepers only. although for about nine months two electric motor sweepers have been in the street cleaning department. If use. These, however, do not yet belong to the city and are being employed experimentally. They have not given satisfaction and have been under repair more than three months. These motor driven sweepers fail to work well in this city because the pavements, as a rule, are not very smooth, and the mechanism of the sweepers is deranged by the shaking it receives. Recently the front wheels of these sweepers have been provided with rubber tires, and they have worked more satisfactorily

He has a church (Rev. 2:9); a ministurned out on the serving plate, and try (2 Cor. 11:1315); a membership (1 John 3:10); and gives power to work signs (2 Thess. 2:9). The proof that a man's teaching is divine in its origin is settled by his attitude towards Jesus'Christ (4:2,6). In all things he must hold to the Head (Col. 4:9). Names and sects and parties fall; Jesus Christ is all in all. All professing Christian teaching must be judged by its relation to Jesus Christ. Relief in the incarnation or Virgin birth is a sign that a man's teaching is from God (4:2,3; 5:1). There must be the belief that the historical Jesus is the anointed Savior of the world; this fact of history must be also a fact of faith.' There can be no dodging this question: "Jesus is anathema" or else "Jesus is Lord." We may make all the progress in the doctrines of Christ possible, but we must be careful that our progress is in the truth, and not away from the truth. There is an advance, even in the doctrine of Christ, which is not progress but apostasy (2 John 9).

The next point to be settled with regard to Christ is the acceptance of his Deity (2:18-28; 4:5, 15, 16; 5:5, 20). True Christian doctrine acknowledges Jesus Christ not merely as Divine, but as Deity, and as such he is worshipped. The Babe in Bethlehem's manger was God manifest in the flesh, in him dwelt open an Account all the fullness of the Godhead. That teaching is false which separates the Christ from Jesus. "This is he that came by water and by blood"-these words deny that teaching which states that some form of Deity came on Christ at his baptism and left him at the cross. Jesus Christ cannot be divided; he is "the same, yesterday, today and forever."

It is /ital that a teacher from God be sound with regard to the nature of Hickory Nut Cake-Take a pound the redemptive work of Christ. John is emphatic about this (compare 2:1,2: 3:5, 4:9,10,14; 5:6). Jesus Christ gave brown sugar, ten whole eggs, one his life as a ransom for our sins; we pound each of flour and raisins, one | are reconciled to God by the death of fourth of a pound of citron and a his son; Jesus Christ is the propitiation for our sins; he is the Savior of nutmeg, one-half glass of orange the world. All this means that Jesus Christ took our place and our sins upon bimself, that his death was in our stead. It is not enough to say that Christ's death exerted a moral influence upon mankind, or that it was an example of self-sacrificing love, or even that God needed, by such a tragedy, to give the world an Illustration of his anger against sin. Of course, Christ's death is the supreme manifestation of God's love, and it does show his anger towards sin, but it goes further than that. It has a relation to he sin of man. Christ in his death paid the wages of sin; the atonement settles the question of sin's guilt and redemption: "Who, his own self, bare our sins in his own body on the tree, that we, being dead to sins, should

THE SIMPLE LIFE.

Some of the Rewards That Come to Those Who Follow It.

I am bound to praise the simple life because I have lived it and found it good. * * * I love a small house, plain clothes, simple living. Many persons know the luxury of a skin bath-a plunge in the pool or the wave, unhampered by clothing. That is the simple life-direct and immediate contact with things, life with the false wrappings torn away-the fine house, the fine equipage, the expensive habits all cut off. How free one feels, how good the elements taste, how close one gets to them, how they fit one's body and soul! To see the fire that warms you or, better yet, to cut the wood that feeds the fire that warms you: to see the spring where the water bubbles up that slakes your thirst and to dip your pail into it: to see the beams that are the stay of your four walls and the timbers that uphold the roof that shelters you; to be in direct and personal contact with the sources of your material life; to want no extras, no shields; to find the air and the water exhilarating; to be refreshed by a morning walk or an evening saunter; to find a quest of wild berries more satisfying than a gift of tropic fruit: to be thrilled by the stars at night; to be elated over a bird's nest-these are some rewards of the simple life.-John Burroughs. Quoted in "Our John Burroughs," by Clara Barrus.

Sentiment and Impromptu Humor at a Moving Picture Show.

"Where we went last night." said a frequenter of moving picture shows, "there was a scene in one of the films showing a man and a girl, young lovers, kissing. She was a pretty girl and he was a fine, manly, young fellow, and of course everybody was deeply interested in the picture. But at the precise instant that the lovers' lips met some man in the audience exploded with a gigantic sneeze, whereat the whole house blew up with spontaneous hilarious laughter.

"In this picture scene there was a third figure, that of a man who had seen the lovers meeting and who when he saw them kiss turned away from them to smile. He was, to be sure, smiling over the lovers; but as he looked out on the house at this moment with that smile on his face he seemed like a real man smiling in appreciative understanding of what had just happened in the audience. At the sight of his smiling face the audience again blew up. But, of course, the pictures kept on moving all the time, and in half a minute the audience had once more settled down to look on again at the pictures in the usual quiet."-New York Sun.

DOPED AUTOMOBILES.

Acid Sometimes Used to Put Ginger In Second Hand Cars.

"If you are intending to buy a second hand automobile from a stranger or any one but a reputable dealer, keep an eye open to see that the car is not 'doped,'" said H. Clifford Brokaw, principal of the automobile school of the West Side Young Men's Christian association. "Not long ago a friend told me he had a chance to buy a very good car at a low price. He said ne knew it was a good car because it could climb the highest hills on high gear. It could almost jump over a house, he said.

"An investigation showed that the car was old, but that previous to the trial trip it had been doped with picric acid. Picric acid, mixed with gasoline, will give a motor a greatly increased power. A wornout motor can be made to do wonderful stunts by the use of proper proportions of picric acid. Chloroform will have the same effect. Picric acid, however, will ruin the cylinders of the best motor. It will give the car much greater power when first used, but I would not care to buy

No Wonder the Shade of Sir Isaac Newton Was Disgusted.

Augustine Birrell, author and statesman, at a newspaper men's dinner told a unique ghost story.

"I have been haunted ever since was almost a boy," he said. "by the constant repetition of one and the same dream. It comes to me again and again. It is this: I dream I am walking about somewhere in some plain or desert, and I suddenly encounter the agitated ghost of Sir Isaac Newton. He approaches me, his eyes almost starting out of his head; he tells me who he is and how ignorant he is of all that has happened in the world of science since he left.

"'Now,' he says, 'I want you to tell me in a few words, for I have only a quarter of an hour left, all that has nappened to the race-the progress. How is it? I know what it was when I left it. What is it now?' My heart sinks, and, covered with confusion, I stumble, I stutter, I stammer, I become more and more involved, my ignorance becomes more and more apparent, and at last the unhappy ghost. throwing up his hands, leaves me with dismay.

"That dream constantly comes to me. The only difference is that the moment' the unhappy Sir Isaac Newton sees me now he says. 'Ob. that old ignoramus!' and departs."-Pall Mall Gazette.

"There are a great many persons injured on windy, rainy nights because they hold their umbrellas down in order to protect their faces from the driving rain," explained an ambulance surgeon. "In their desire to protect themselves from the rain they place themselves in grave danger of being struck and run over by surface cars, automobiles and other vehicles.

"If you wish proof of my assertion just stand in a doorway some night where you are protected from the rain and where you are in a position to see an expanse of thoroughfare which all kinds of vehicles use. You will be surprised at the large number of persons you will notice crossing the thoroughfare with their umbrellas held down so far that it is impossible for them to see anything approaching. They seem oblivious of danger, and a spectator would suppose from their actions that there was not the remotest chance of an accident occurring.

"It is a fact that many pedestrians are injured on windy, rainy nights. With their umbrellas pulled down so that it is impossible to see ahead or to the sides, the pedestrians walk in front of vehicles and are knocked down and injured before they realize what has happened."-New York Sun.

Unabashed.

Years ago Isidore de Lara used to sing his own songs at concerts to his own accompaniment. The most popular of them was "The Garden of Sleep." Once-so runs the story-Mr. de Lara was "Garden of Sleeping" at a private house, and he was immensely annoyed by George Moore, who went on insistently talking after the song had begun. Mr. de Lara sang a few bars and then sprang indignantly to his feet.

"Mr. Moore." he said. "I was singing the other day before the Prince of Wales, and he spoke, and I stopped." "Well, my dear chap." replied Mr. Moore calmly, "he survives."

Mr. de Lara had humor enough to join in the general laugh.-London Answers.

Yes, He Was All Right.

George R. Sims' account of forgetting his own address and having to look it up in the telephone directory was capped by a friend of mine, says a writer in the London Sphere, who told a story of a man trying to tell him from what he had been suffering. "I have been very ill," he said, "withwith-with"- and could get no further. And then suddenly it came to him, "with loss of memory. But," he added, "I'm all right now."

Europe In Africa.

The Africa of today is partitioned off among the following nations: Great Britain, France, Germany, Italy, Portugal, Belgium and Spain. Great Britain has the fairer portions, her South African possessions having a fine climate and being in every way perfectly adapted to the white race. The French and Italian possessions along the Mediterranean are also well enough as regards climate, but are lacking along agricultural and other lines. It is exceedingly doubtful if much of German. Belgium and Portuguese Africa will ever become the seats of white civilization.

An Instructive Meeting.

The teachers' meeting held in Genoa school building last Friday was attended by every teacher in the district, of which Gordon B. Springer is the superintendent. It was pronounced by all as one of the most successful meetings ever held and very helpful and instructive.

The talks by Misses Cook and Bowness at the morning session were very good, and Supt. Springer gave, a fine address on "The Efficient Teacher," which was full of points for the teachers and contained much instruction on the personality and qualifications of the successful teacher. The speaker urged the teachers to strive for greater efficiency in their work during the coming year

Miss Mary J Smith of King Ferry sang two pleasing solos, one at the morning ression and one during the afternoon, Mrs. J. F. Brown acted as her accompanist.

At the afternoon session, Miss Ber tha Titsworth of the Home Economics Dept, Cornell university, gave an interesting talk on sewing in the schools, and gave experiments in testing different textiles.

Miss Althera Folts read a paper on teaching poems in the rural schools A class of her pupils from Sherwood school recited in concert two selections, "Star Spangled Banner" and "Sheridan's Ride," in a praiseworthy manner

Miss Mills, also of the Home Economice Dept, Cornell university, gave a lecture on bread making which was very instructive

The sewing and bread exhibits were very large and showed excellent work done by the pupils Miss Titsworth was the judge of the sew. ing and Miss Mills of the bread. There were 62 loaves of bread to be judged, and this was no small or easy task There were mapy loaves of excellent bread, but as Miss Mills is an experienced judge she felt that she had made no mistake in deciding on the best and second best Double blue ribbons were pioned on the loaves made by Edmund Locke of Dist. No 12, town of Scipio, and Willard Stanton of Dist. No 7, of the town of Venice. About one-third of the loaves entered received red rib bone.

Mies Titsworth was very much pleased with the work done in sewing among the schools and the greater number of pieces on exhibition received blue ribbons marked ' In Recognition of Neat and Careful Work done in Sewing."

The idea of encouraging sewing and cooking in the work of the rural schools is not primarily to teach children to become proficient in these subjects, but rather to obtain a closer relation between the home and school, in thus correlating this work with the school work. ## The Story of Waitstill Baxter twenty, who may not have shown his true qualities so early in life. She bore him two sons, and it was a matter of comment at the time that she called them, respectively, Job and Moses, hoping that the endurance and meekness connected with these names might somehow help them in their future relations with their father. Pneumonia, coupled with profound discouragement, carried her off in a few years to make room for the second wife, Waitstill's mother, who was of different fiber and greatly his superior. She was a fine. handsome girl, the orphan daughter of up country gentlefolks who had died when she was eighteen, leaving her alone in the world and penniless.

By KATE DOUGLAS WIGGIN

Baxter, after a few days' acquaintance, drove into the dooryard of the house where she was a visitor and, showing her his two curly headed boys, suddenly asked her to come and be their stepmother. She assented, partly because she had nothing else to do with her existence so far as she could see, and also because she fell in love with the children at first sight and forgot, as girls will, that it was their father whom she was marrying.

She was as plucky and clever and spirited as she was handsome, and she made a brave fight of it with Foxy, long enough to bring a daughter into the world, to name her Waitstill and start her a little way on her life journey-then she, too, gave up the struggle and died. Typhoid fever it was, combined with complete loss of illusions and a kind of despairing rage at having made so complete a failure of her existence.

The next year Mr. Baxter, being unusually busy, offered a man a good young heifer if he would jog about the Some fat robins had been bouncing country a little and pick him up a about in the schoolyard at noon, and "I don't know how I'm going to do everything alone." said the girl, foreing back her tears. "You've always made the brown bread, and mine will never suit father. I suppose I can wash, but I don't know how to iron starched clothes, nor make pickles. and oh! I can never kill a rooster. mother, it's no use to ask me to! I'm not big enough to be the head of the family."

Mrs. Baxter turned her pale. tired face away from Waitstill's appealing eves:

"I know," she said faintly. "I hate to leave you to bear the brunt alone, but ! must! * * * Take good care of Patience and don't let her get into trouble. * * * You won't, will you?"

"I'll be careful," promised Waitstill, sobbing quietly. "I'll do my best."

"You've got more courage than ever I had; don't you s'pose you can stiffen up and defend yourself a little mite? Your father'd ought to be opposed, for his own good, but I've never seen anybody that dared do it." Then, after a pause, she said with a flash of spirit "Anyhow, Waitstill, he's your father after all. He's no blood relation of mine, and I can't stand him another day; that's the reason I'm willing to die."

Ivory Boynton lifted the bars that divided his land from the highroad and waiked slowly toward the house. It was April, but there were still patches of snow here and there, fast melting under a drizzling rain. It was a gray world, a bleak, black and brown world, above and below. The sky was leaden: the road and the footpath were deep in a muddy ooze flecked with white. The tree trunks, black, with bare branches, were outlined against the gray sky: nevertheless, spring had been on the way for a week, and a few sunny days would bring the yearly miracle for which all nearts were longing. Ivory was season wise, and his quick eye had caught many a sign as he walked through the woods from his schoolhouse. A new and different color haunted the tree tops, and one had only with Lawyer Wilson, who wanted him to give testimony in some case or other down in Milltown. The minute Patty saw him going up Saco hill she harnessed the old starved Baxter mare, and the girls started over to the Lower Corner to see some friends. It seems it's Patty's birthday, and they were celebrating. I met them just as they were coming back and helped them lift the rickety wagon out of the mud. They were stuck in it up to the hubs of the wheels. I advised them to walk up the Town House hill if they ever expected to get the horse home."

"Town House hill," said Ivory's mother, dropping her knitting. "That was where we had such wonderful meetings. Truly the Lord was present in our midst. And oh, Ivory, the visions we saw in that place when Jacob Cochrane first unfolded his gospel to us! Was ever such a man!"

"Probably not, mother." remarked Ivory dryly.

You were speaking of the Baxters I remember their home and the little girl who used to stand in the gateway and watch when we came out of meeting. There was a baby too. Isn't there a Baxter baby, Ivory?" "She didn't stay a baby. She is sev enteen years old today, mother." "You surprise me, but chlidren do ginning, but it grew bard and grievous afterward: bard to keep the path, I mean. I never quite knew whether God was angry with me for backsliding at the end, but I could not always accept the revelations that Elder Cochrane and your father had!"

Lois Boynton's hands were now quietly folded over the knitting that lay forgotten in her lap, but her low. thrilling voice had a note in it that did not belong wholly to earth.

There was a long silence: one of many long silences at the Boynton fireside, broken only by the ticking of the clock, the purring of the cat and the clicking of Mrs. Boynton's needles, as, her paroxysm of reminiscence over, she knitted ceaselessly, with her eyes on the window or the door.

"It's about time for Rod to be coming back, isn't it?" asked Ivory.

"He ought to be here soon, but perhaps he is gone for good. It may be that he thinks he has made us a long enough visit. I don't know whether your father will like the boy when he comes home. He never did fancy company in the house."

Ivory looked up in astonishment from his Greek grammar. This was an entirely new turn of his mother's mind. Often when she was more than usually confused he would try to clear the cobwebs from her brain by gently questioning her until she brought herself back to a clearer understanding of her own thought. Thus far her vagaries had never made her unjust to any human creature. She was uniformly sweet and gentle in speech and demeanor.

"Why do you talk of Rod's visiting us when he is one of the family?" Ivory asked quietly.

"Is he one of the family? I didn't know it." replied his mother absently. "Look at me, mother, straight in the eye. That's right. Now listen, dear, to what I say."

Mrs. Boynton's hair, that had been in her youth like an aureole of corn silk, was now a strange yellow white, and her blue eyes looked out from her pale face with a helpless appeal.

"You and 1 were living alone here after father went away," Ivory began. "I was a little boy, you know. You and father had saved something, there was the farm, you worked like a slave, I helped, and we lived somehow, do you remember?"

"I do indeed. It was cold, and the neighbors were cruel. Jacob Cochrane had gone away, and his disciples were not always true to him. When the magnetism of his presence was with-date of his return. they had teased altogether. The rest was silence. Rumors of his presence here or there came from time to time; but, though Parson Lane and Dr. Perry did their best, none of them were ever substantiated.

Where had those years of wandering been passed, and had they all been given even to an imaginary and fantastic service of God? Was his father dead? If he were alive, what could keep him from writing? Nothing but a very strong reason or a very wrong one, so his son thought at times.

Since Ivory had grown to man's estate he understood that in the later days of Cochrane's preaching his "visions." "inspirations" and "revelations" concerning the marriage bond were a trifle startling from the old fashioned, orthodox point of view. His most advanced disciples were to bold themselves in readiness to renounce their former vows and seek "spiritual consorts," sometimes according to his advice, sometimes as their inclinations prompted.

Had Aaron Boynton forsaken willingly the wife of his youth, the mother of his boy? If so he must have realized to what straits he was subjecting them. Ivory had not forgotten those first few years of grinding poverty, anxiety and suspense. His mother's mind had stood the strain bravely. but it gave way at last; not, however. until that fatal winter journey to New Hampshire, when cold, exposure and fatigue did their worst for her weak body. Religious enthusiast, exalted and impressionable, a natural mystic, she had probably always been. far more so In temperament, indeed, than her husband; but, although she left home on that journey a frail and heartsick woman, she returned a different creature altogether, blurred and confused in tional fancies. She must have given up hope just then, Ivory thought, and her love was so deep that when it was uprooted the soil came with it. Now hope had returned because the cruel memory had faded altogether. She sat by the kitchen window in gentle expectation. watching, always watching.

And this is the way many of Ivory Boynton's evenings were spent, while the heart of him, the five-and-twentyyear-old heart of him, was longing to feel the heat of another heart, a girl's heart only a mile or more away. The

"Don't answer me back! You're full of new tricks, and you've got to stop em right where you are or there'll be trouble. You were whistlin' just now up in the barn chamber. That's oneof the things I won't have around my premises-a whistiin' girl."

"Twas a Sabbath school hymn that I was whistling." This with a creditable imitation of defiance.

"That don't make it any better. Sing your bymns if you must make a noise while you're workin'."

"It's the same mouth that makes the whistle and sings the song, so I don't see why one's any wickeder than the other."

"You don't have to see." replied the deacon grimly. "All you have to do is to mind when you're spoken to. Now run 'long 'bout your work."

"Can't I go up to Ellen's, then?" "What's goin' on up there?"

"Just a frolic. There's always a good time at Ellen's. and I would so like the

"I s'pose so or 'twouldn't be a frolie." said Patty, with awful daring, "but there won't be many-only a few of Mark's friends."

"Well, there ain't goin' to be no more argyfyin". I won't have any girl o' mine frolickin' with boys, so that's the end of it. You're kind o' erazy lately, riggin' yourself out with a ribbon here and a flower there and pullin' your hair down over your ears. Why do you want to cover your ears up? What are they for?"

"To hear you with, father," Patty replied, with honey sweet voice and eyes that blazed.

"Well, I hope they'll never hear anything worse," replied her father, flinging a bucket of water over the last of the wagon wheels.

"They couldn't ?" These words were never spoken aloud: but, oh, how Patty longed to shout them with a clarion voice as she walked away in perfect silence, her majestic gait showing, she hoped, how she resented the outcome of the interview.

"I've stood up to father." she exclaimed triumphantly as she entered the kitchen and set down her yellow bowl of eggs on the table. "I stood up to him and answered him back would if she proved energetic, economshe was young, healthy, smart, tidy, capable and a good manager, able to milk the cows, harness the horse and make good butter he would give a dollar and a half a week. The woman was found, and, incredible as it may seem, she said "Yes" when the deacon. whose ardor was kindled at having paid three months' wages, proposed a speedy marriage. The two boys by this time had reached the age of discretion, and one of them evinced the fact by promptly running away to parts unknown, never to be heard from afterward; while the other, a reckless and unhappy lad, was drowned while running on the logs in the river. Old Foxy showed little outward sign of his loss.

His third wife, the one originally secured for a housekeeper, bore him a girl, very much to his disgust, a girl named Patience, and great was Waltstill's delight at this addition to the dull household. The mother was a timid, colorless, docile creature, but Patience nevertheless was a sparkling, bright eyed baby, who speedily became the very center of the universe to the older child. So the months and years wore on drearily enough until when Patience was eight the third Mrs. Baxter succumbed after the manner of her predecessors and slipped away from a life that had grown intolerable. The trouble was diagnosed as "liver complaint," but scarcity of proper food, no new frocks or kind words. hard work and continual bullying may possibly have been contributory causes. Dr. Perry thought so, for he had witnessed three most contented deaths in the Baxter house. The ladies were all members of the church and had presumably made their peace with God. but the good doctor fancied that their pleasure in joining the angels was mild compared with their relief at parting with the deacon.

"I know I hadn't ought to put the care on you. Waitstill, and you only fourteen," poor Mrs. Baxter sighed, as the young girl was watching with her one night when the end seemed drawing near. "I've made out to live till now when Patience is old enough to pense. dress herself and help round, but I'm all beat out and can't try any more." "Do you mean I'm to take your place, be a mother to Patience and keep house and everything?" asked Waitstill quaveringly.

If for it had meant no coasting and skating and sleighing for him, but long walks in deep snow or slush, long evenings, good for study, but short days and greater loneliness for his mother. He could see her now as he neared the house, standing in the open doorway. her hand shading her eyes, watching. always watching, for some one who never came.

"Spring is on the way, mother, but it isn't here yet, so don't stand there in the rain." he called. "Look at the nosegay I gathered for you as I came through the woods. Here are pussy willows and red maple blossoms and mayflowers, would you believe it?" Lois Boynton took the handful of budding things and sniffed their, fragrance.

"You're late tonight, Ivory," she said Rod wanted his supper early so that he could go off to singing school, but I kept something warm for you, and I'll make you a fresh cup of tea."

Something of a Hero.

the stumps now, mother, for spring is coming." he said, as he sat down to his meal.

"I've been looking out more than usual this afternoon," she replied. "There's hardly any snow left, and though the walking is so had I've been rather expecting your father before night. You remember he said when he went away in January that he should be back before the mayflowers bloomed?"

It did not do any good to say: "Yes mother, but the mayflowers have bloomed ten times since father went away." He had tried that, gently and persistently when first her mind began to be confused. from long grief and hurt love, stricken pride and sick sus-

Instead of that Ivory turned the subject cheerily, saying, "Well, we're sure of a good season, I think. There's been a grand spowfall and that, they say, is the poor man's manure. down by the fire, with his book and his pipe. "Waitstill! Waitstill! That is it!

Such a beautiful name!"

"She's a beautiful girl."

"Waitstill! 'They also serve who only stand and wait.' 'Wait, I say, on the Lord and he will give thee the desires of thy heart.' Those were wonderful days, when we were caught up out of the body and mingled freely in the spirit world." Mrs. Boynton was now fully started on the topic that absorbed her mind, and Ivory could no nothing but let her tell the story that she had told him a hundred times.

"I remember when first we heard Jacob Cochrane speak." (This was her usual way of beginning.) "Your father was a preacher, as you know, Ivory. but you will never know what a wonderful preacher he was. My grandfather, being a fine gentleman and a governor, would not give his consent to my marriage, but 1 never regretted it. never! Your father saw Elder Cochrane at a revival meeting of the Free Will Baptists in Scarboro and was much impressed with him. A few days later he went to the funeral of a child in the same neighborhood. No one who was there could ever forget it. The minister had made his long prayer when a man suddenly entered the room, came toward the coffin and placed his hand on the child's forehead. The room in an instant was as still as the death that had called us together. The stranger was tall and of commanding presence; his eyes pierced our very hearts, and his marvelous voice penetrated to depths in our souls that had never been reached before." "Was he a better speaker than my (ather?" asked Ivory, who dreaded his mother's hours of complete silence even more than her periods of reminiscence.

"He spoke as if the Lord of Hosts had given him inspiration; as if the angels were pouring words into his mouth just for him to utter," replied Mrs. Boynton. "Your father was spellbound, and I only less so. When he ceased speaking the child's mother crossed the room and, swaying to and fro, fell at his feet sobbing and wailing and imploring God to forgive her sins. They carried her upstairs, and when we looked about after the confusion and excitement the stranger had vanished. But we found him again! As Elder Cochran said: 'The prophet of the Lord can never be hid; no darkness is thick enough to cover him? There was a six weeks' reviyal meeting in North Saco, where 300 souls ourselves true believers for years, but Jacob Cochrane drawn they could not follow all his revelations, and they forgot how he had awakened their spiritual life at the first of his preaching. Your father was always a stanch believer, but when he started on his mission and went to Parsonsfield to help Elder Cochrane in his meetings the neighbors began to criticise him. They doubted him. You were too young to realize it. but I did. and it almost broke my heart."

"I was nearly twelve years old. Do you think I escaped all the gossip. mother?'

'You never spoke of it to me. Ivory.' "No, there is much that I never spoke of to you, mother, but some time when you grow stronger and your memory is better we will talk together. Do you remember the winter, long after father went away, that Parson Lane sent me to Fairfield academy to get enough Greek and Latin to make me a schoolmaster?"

"Yes," she answered uncertainly.

"Don't you remember I got a free ride downriver one Friday and came home for Sunday, just to surprise you? And when I got here I found you ill in bed. with Mrs. Mason and Dr. Perry taking care of you. You could not speak, you were so ill, but they told me you had been up in New Hampshire to see your sister, that she had died, and that you had brought back her boy. who was only four years old. That was Rod. I took him into bed with me that night, poor, homesick little fellow, and, as you know. mother he's never left us since."

"I didn't remember I had a sister. Is she dead. Ivory?" asked Mrs. Boynton vaguely.

"If she were not dead do you suppose you would have kept Rodman with us when we hadn't bread enough for our own two mouths, mother?" questioned Ivory patiently.

"No, of course not. I can't think how I can be so forgetful. It's worse sometimes than others. It's worse today because I knew the mayflowers were blooming, and that reminded me it was time for your father to come home. You must forgive me, dear. and will you excuse me if I sit in the kitchen awhile? The window by the side door looks out toward the road, and if I put a candle on the sill it shines quite a distance. The lane is such a long one, and your father was always a sad stumbler in the dark! I shouldn't like him to think I wasn't looking for him when he's been gone since January."

Ivory's pipe went out, and his book slipped from his knee unnoticed.

His mother was more confused than usual, but she always was when spring came to remind her of her hus band's promise. Somehow, well used as he was to her mental wanderings, they made him uneasy tonight. His father had left home on a fancled mission, a duty he believed to be a revelation given by thed through Jacob Cochrane. The farm did not miss him much at first. Ivory reflected bitterly, for since his fauntical equaisal of Cochtanism his father's interest in were converted, and your father and I such mundane matters as household were among them. We had fancied expenses had diminished month by month until they had no meaning for him at all. Letters to wife and boy the trailing arbutus was blossoming in the woods; the robins had come-everything was announcing the spring, yet Ivory saw no changing seasons in his future; nothing but winter, eternal winter there!

CHAPTER IV. Patience and Impatience.

ATTY had been searching for eggs in the barn chamber and. coming down the ladder from the haymow, spied her father washing the wagon by the wellside near the shed door. Cephas Cole kept store for him at meal hours and whenever trade was unusually brisk, and the Baxter yard was so happily situated that Old Foxy could watch both house and store.

There never was a good time to ask Deacon Baxter a favor, therefore this moment would serve as well as any other; so, approaching him near enough i be heard through the rubbing and plashing, but no nearer than was necssary, Patty said:

"Father, can I go up to Eilen Wilson's this afternoon and stay for tea? I won't start till I've done a good day's work, and 1'll come home early,"

"What do you want to go gallivantin' to the neighbors fdr? 1 never saw anything like the girls nowadayshighty tighty. flauntin', traipsin', triflin' trollops, ev'ry one of 'em, that's what they are, and Ellen Wilson's one of the triflin'est. You're old enough now to stay to home where you belong and make an effort to earn your board and clothes, which you can't, even if you try."

Spink, real Simon pure spunk, started somewhere in Patty and coursed through her blood like wine.

"If a girl's old enough to stay at. home and work I should think she was we are told by an English commentaold enough to go out and play once in tor, and Horace Walpole says in one Waitstill wiped her floury hands and put them on her sister's shoulders. "Hear what I say, Patty: You must not argue with father, whatever he says. We don't love him and so there isn't the right respect in our hearts, but at least there can be respect in our manuers."

"I don't believe I can go on for years holding in, Waitstill!" Patty whimpered.

"Yes, you can. I have!"

"You're different, Waitstill."

"I wasn't so different at sixteen, but that's five years ago, and I've got control of my tongue and my temper since then. Sometime, perhaps, when I have a grievance too great to be rightly borne, sometime when you are away from here in a home of your own, I shall speak out to father; just empty my heart of all the disappointment and bitterness and rebellion. Somebody ought to tell him the truth and perhaps it will be me!"

Waitstill bent over the girl as she flung herself down beside the table and smoothed her shoulder gently.

"There, there, dear! It isn't like my gay little sister to cry. What is the matter with you today, Patty?"

"I suppose it's the spring." she said, wiping her eyes with her apron and smiling through her tears. "Perhaps need a dose of sulphur and molasses."

"Don't you feel well as common?" "Well? I feel too well! I feel as if was a young colt shut up in an attic. I want to kick up my heels, batter the door down and get out into the pasture. It's no use talking, Walty. can't go on living without a bit of pleasure and I can't go on being patient even for your sake. If it weren't for you I'd run away as Job did, and I never believed Moses slipped on the logs. I'm sure he threw himself into the river, and so should I if I had the courage!"

"Stop. Patty, stop. dear! You will have your bit of pasture at least. 1'll do some of your indoor tasks for you. and you shall put on your sunbonnet and go out and dig the dandellon greens for dinner. Take the broken knife and a milk pan, and don't bring in so much earth with them as you did last time. Dry your eyes and look at the green things growing. Remember how young you are and how many years are ahead of you. Go along, dear."

An Old Idea. Macaulay was not the first man to frame the famous image of the man of a new civilization standing amid the ruins of that which we know today. Long before he wrote of his traveler from New Zealand meditating upon London bridge Mrs. Barbauld had used the same image, with the difference that she applied it to Blackfrinrs bridge. An earlier reviewer had used it in an article published in 1767.

Dirt fattens flies and kills babies! Dirt in "itself, such as rubbish and other waste, does not directly cause disease unless it contains organisms impregnated with contagion. But dirt of any kind is a breeding spot for flies and other vermin which act as direct carriers of contagion from sick to healthful persons. A great majority of the deaths of the young, particularly during the summer, are due to infection by bacteria. In order for these great enemies of mankind to thrive there must be means for their growth, and dirt is the culture field or breeding place.

The germs which enter milk or other food are deposited by flies through the means of circulating dust or otherwise. Sunlight, the removal of garbage and the use of plenty of soap and hot water are the best means of reducing this source of danger. Now, everybody get on the job and clean up this town. Be a life saver and preserve the health of the babies.

COMING, SURE AS FATE."

A Kansas City saloonkeeper, who has been in the business 22 years, recently announced that his place was for sale at a bargain. "My reason," he said, "for quitting the liquor trade is not that I am old or rich, or troubled by my conscience. I simply have decided to get out while the getting is good, for I believe that I can read the handwriting on the wall. I believe that the finish of the booze business in this country is in sight, and I prefer to step from under before the roof falls in.

"I would not undertake to say when nationwide prohibition is going to arrive, but it is coming, as sure as fate. and it is not many years away. It is coming, not so much as a result of feverish and hysterical agitation, but as a result of a majority of the voters of the country making up their minds that boozing is a criminal waste of time and money, and booze a nuisance and a dangerous drug."

He goes on to say that "drunkards there are and will be so long as there is booze to be had, and they are panicstricken at the suggestion that country-wide prohibition may prevail. But the self-respecting and social drinkers, the real dependence of the liquor traffic, are preparing to banish booze. And I don't know but everyone will be glad of it, in the long run. I've never been proud of being a saloonkeeper, and I don't believe any other self-respecting man can be. We jolly ourselves along with the argument that it is legitimate, recognized by the national government, the state, the county and the city, but we know in our hearts that it is a rotten business. "Anyhow, good or bad, I am going to get out of it before the fireworks begin, and I'd advise every other man with money invested in it to do the John Barleycorn has had his same. day.'

Be careful of conflagrations in the enthusiasm of the cleanup period. In many towns last year ash piles were dug into the ground and covered with clean earth, cans and rubbish were piled in the alleys, while old leaves, pa-pers and brush were burned on the vacant lots. On many occasions these cleanup fires assumed large proportions and threatened adjoining property, requiring the calling out of the fire department.

dark, damp shelters," waiting for a good fat chance to lay the eggs for the first summer bug crop. It is of the utmost importance to catch the destroyer of summer bliss and happiness before the breeding season begins. All the feminine provokers of cuss words which, according to all scientific report, bear out the theory recently advanced by Kipling concerning the female of the species can be put out of the deadly class just about this time of the year if destroyed in their hiding places. Fumigation is the best method known to science to kill the hibernating pests. Fumigation should therefore be a part of the regular work of cleanup week. Neglected flowerpots, buckets, barrels, broken china, chicken pans, water troughs, a gutter and a water spout are a few of the places in which insects breed and should be removed.

men and the sale of drink are at hope less war: that the liquor traffic has always been the sworn enemy of the honest ballot; that to furnish the voter with whisky would be like arming a madman. If the saloon be the innocent and harmless thing its advocates claim, why not unchain it on election day?

But in spite of these and every other precaution, the saloon is today the gravest menace to an honest vote. Not content with taking its place in society as a business simply, it is ambitious to become a ruler.

Who ever heard of a drug store ticket at an election? Who ever heard of the family groceries, or the shoe trade claiming the right to elect their officers?

And yet one hardly need inquire for any man that ever lived in a saloon-ridden county or city that has not heard of or voted for or against the "saloon ticket?"

It is always there. And from constable to governor those lords of vice demand that society shall bow to them. Many have wondered at the cause and asked why a simple business should not be satisfied to be a business simply. But the answer is not far or hard to find.

The saloon seeks the election of candidates who are willing or pledged to do its bidding. It is needless for another business, for it follows the law. It is necessary for the saloon, for it defies the law.

Go to Church! No Man Too Busy to Give an Hour Each Week to God

O TO CHURCH!

Is there a man in any community who is too busy to spend one hour each week in church?

There are one hundred and sixty-eight hours in every week. No man is too busy to eat during the week. No man is too busy to snatch a few hours of recreation in every week. No man is too busy to sleep during the week. Yet there are men who will declare that they are so busy they can't afford to give one hour in every one hundred and sixty-eight to worship in God's house. In church you will find spiritual food and rest.

.Of all excuses for lack of attendance at church the "too busy" one is the flimsiest. Why isn't a man honest and admit that he doesn't want to go to church? Isn't it a fact that a man has a better feeling within himself and the world in general after he has spent an hour in the house of God?

That Will Be Only One of Many Handi caps-Reconstruction of Republic a Harder Problem Than That Following Our Own Civil War-Constitutionalists' Split Increases Difficulty.

That the elimination of Victoriano Liderta, whether it come as the result of mediation, of Constitutionalist victories or the unswerving opposition of the United States, will prove far from a settlement of the Mexican problem is the conviction of the diplomatic body in Washington and military experts of the United States.

Indeed, few doubt, adds the New York Tribune's Washington correspondent, that the Mexican "situation" will continue for months or even years. Army and navy men are convinced that if actual armed intervention is staved off now it will be only a matter of time before that step will have to be taken. When Huerta goes some provisional government probably will be arranged pending an election. Such is the desire of the United States and the definite plan of the mediators. The fall of Huerta may be taken as a Constitutionalist victory-it certainly will be by the Constitutionalists-and it is under stood in Washington that the provisional president probably will be a man of rebel tendencies. The election which would follow would go to the Constituilonalists.

Task For a Superman.

There have already been evidences. of a split in the Constitutionalist ranks. If there exists any factionalism when those who are now rebels become the government the chances of success will be still further diminished. If Carranza becomes president he will be confronted with a task which, in the opinion of close observers, will call for superman. If Carranza is hampered by the defection of Villa-or any other of his leaders it is believed his task will be hopeless, and with their entire co-operation it will be stupendous. When Carranza gets to Mexico City be will find an empty treasury. He will find that the Mexican government owes hundreds of thousands of dollars interest on foreign debts. He will be called upon to pay hundreds of millions of dollars in foreign claims. The figure is likely to run far over the $1.000,000,000 mark.

BUSINESS AND FINANCIAL DISTRICTS OF NEW YORK CITY. THERE MIGHT BE FOUND SOME OF THE GREATEST MEN IN THE COUNTRY. IT IS A HOPEFUL SIGN OF THE TIMES. NONE OF THESE REALLY BIG MEN WAS TOO BUSY TO GIVE SEVERAL MINUTES DAILY TO THE WORSHIP OF GOD. INCIDENTALLY, THESE BIG MEN BY THEIR EXAMPLE PREACHED POWERFUL SERMONS.

Don't hide behind the "too busy" pretext. It is too thin. If you have an important business or social engagement you will find time for it. God asks you to meet him for at least an hour every Sunday. Can't you arrange your engagements so that you can meet him? The visit will not be a disagreeable one. Surely you are not ashamed to be seen in church? You no doubt have been seen in worse places.

Furthermore, he will not have the funds to meet his own political and other obligations.

It is pointed out in Washington that Mexico has got to face a reconstruction period far more difficult than that which followed the civil war in this country, and in the estimation of keen observers that unfortunate country has no statesman competent to guide her through its perils. These observers are convinced that Carranza will find the matter of accomplishing reforms slow work, probably too slow to suit the pleasure of his people, and that soon he will be confronted with new "Carranzas" and new "Villas" and kindred gentry.

Zapata to Be Reckoned With. Aside from his financial difficulties, Carranza, er whoever else becomes head of the government, will face a gigantic task in restoring peace and order. All Mexico is infested with bandits. The north is particularly at Saturday in June their mercy. There is no reason to assume that they will cease their marauding because the government in Mexico City has changed.

The Zapatistas of Morelos and other nearby states, who pose as revolutionists but are looked upfon as bandits. are not expected to support Carranza. Few realize that in twelve products: They will follow Zapata, who is credited with ambitions of his own.

There is also a strong likelihood that Huerta's army will disintegrate, and this will mean the addition of many forest products, New York state stands thousand armed men running wild over the country, loyal to no government, responsible to no man. They will all have to be eradicated by Huer-

> Effects of Strife In Mexico. Says F. J. Splitstone in Leslie's: Not antil the wiping out of all organ ized rebellion could the government at Mexico City undertake the extinction of brigands. If the civil war could be ended at once it would take ten years to put Mexico back into that condition of peace and good order which existed up to the commencement of the Madero revolution. Is it any wonder that the property owners, the people with something to lose, were crying for peace? Ten years to repair the destruction of three!

A Mexican to whom I suggested this laughed at me. "It will take," said he, fifty years to put Mexico back where she was three years ago. The country might be pacified in ten, but the ruined farms, the shattered industries, the wrecked railroads, the burned towns cannot be replaced in a generation. So far our government has shown you the
