Persons wearing eyeglasses find it annoying during the winter months, when the glass steams, blurs or becomes frosted. To prevent this make any good glycerine soap, rub a little on each side of the glass, using no water; then polish with tissue paper or a soft cloth. It also removes grease and grime and stays polished much longer than with the ordinary cleaning.

RHEUMATISM IS

SLOW POISONING

because the entire system becomes permeated with injuriously acids.

To relieve rheumatism Scott's Emulsion is a double help; it is rich in blood-food; it imparts strength to the functions and supplies the very oil-food that rheumatic conditions always need.

Scott's Emulsion has helped countless thousands when other remedies failed.

Prayer-meeting on Thursday evening at 7 o'clock; theme, "Thy Kingdom Come" in the Lord's Prayer series.

Our next entertainment on Friday evening, Dec. 4, given by the male quartette, "Ye Olde Towne Quartette." These four singers come most highly recommended for their ability to sing songs that please.
Their voices are properly placed and trained so that their solos are far above those of most concert companies that travel in lyceum work. The impersonations, the company costume work, and the original humorous character sketches, furnish a variety at once extremely funny and yet highly elevating, so we are assured. The lyceum management commends this company to us without any reservations. We are expecting much from this "Ye Olde Towne Quartette." We feel sure this will be a third excellent entertainment for our course this year.
Everyone come.

On next Sunday, Nov. 29, special revival meetings begin in the Friends church of Poplar Ridge and continue every evening through the following weeks except on Saturday evenings.
Our church expects to close the evening service on Sunday, Dec. 6, in order that we may join with Poplar Ridge meeting. It is much hoped that we shall find ourselves able to attend often these evening meetings through the coming weeks at Poplar Ridge. Look at the posters in King Ferry.

The fair of the Ladies' Aid held in McCormick's hall last Wednesday evening was a success in its supper, booth sales, attendance, and sociability. Some articles are left unsold and can be found in the homes about in case you wish to look for Christmas presents. The Japanese articles may be found at the parsonage. The ladies have worked very hard to prepare for this fair and we are sure that we appreciate the value of the articles they have made and given.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer
One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimo-

The New Governor's Wife.

When the woman suffrage amendment is submitted to the voters of New York state next November, the lady who will then be presiding over the Executive Mansion at Albany will be watching with the suffragists and sharing their hopes of victory.

Mrs. Chas. S. Whitman is an ardent, uncompromising suffragist, who has given more than her good wishes to the cause by doing all she can to assist in its educational propaganda.
In all the long list of ladies who have presided at the Executive Mansion, there has been no woman more representative of New York, than young Mrs. Whitman, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Oliver H. Hitchcock, born, brought up and educated in New York City.

"Equal Suffrage," says Mrs.
Whitman, "is a matter of education.
Steady persistent appeals to the voters, love of justice and fair play are bound, eventually, to reach the goal."

Mrs. Whitman is a most optimistic type of suffragist. "One has only to look at our Western states," says Mrs. Whitman, "to see the benefit of the reform. Often, however, it seems to me that one need look no further than home. Working for suffrage has done much for women. It has made them think.
Once a woman becomes a thinking woman her scope of usefulness is materially increased; she makes a better wife and mother and is more apt to get a fairer view of life than her unthinking sister who is so prone to magnify the petty things while neglecting the things that really matter."

Civil Service Position.

The position of superintendent of the Tompkins County Tuberculosis hospital, paying $1,200 a year and maintenance, is open. The competition is open only to men physicians.
A civil service examination for the office will be held on Dec. 12.

In announcing the examination,
the State Civil Service Commission made the suggestion that only unmarried physicians try for the place.
It was stated that the hospital has no accommodations for the family of the superintendent. Blanks are obtainable at Albany on or before Dec. 8.

A Fathers' Club.

"What sort of a father are you?"
This question is found on every program of what is claimed to be the first fathers' club in the United States, organized at Council Bluffs, Iowa, a little over a year ago. Ten clubs, with an average membership of fifty have been formed during the year for the purpose "of bringing the fathers into closer touch with the children, the teachers, and board of education, in an endeavor to bring about the very best results for the betterment of the children."

Bob Burdette Dead.

Rev. Robert J. Burdette, preacher, humorist and author, died at his home in Pasadena, Calif., Nov. 19.
He had been ill nearly two years and for two weeks had been in a state of coma. At 60, ten years ago, Mr.
Burdette was called to the permanent pastorate of the Temple Baptist church of Los Angeles, Cal. Although Burdette's original home was in Greensboro, Pa., where he was born in 1844, the latter part of his life was spent in California. At Clifton-on-the-Sea, Pasadena, he had a spacious house with broad verandas.

The Scrap Book

A Gentle Reminder.

They were speaking of witty clergymen the other night, and an incident relative to the late Rev. P. S. Henson was recalled.

Mr. Henson, who was distinguished for his ready wit, was a resident of Philadelphia at the time he was called to a charge in Chicago. The details of the call, salary, etc., were arranged by wire, and Mr. Henson waited patiently for the check that was to pay his moving expenses to the western city. The check failing to arrive the minister sat tight in Philadelphia.

"Why don't you come to Chicago?" was the telegram he eventually received.

"Read Acts xx, 24," was Mr. Henson's telegraphic response.

Naturally there was something of a hustle for the Bible in Chicago. One of the committee turned to Acts, while another feverishly waited.

"What does the verse say, brother?" impatiently asked the waiting one.

"It says," answered the other, impressively reading, "None of these things move me."—Philadelphia Telegraph.

Be Strong.

We are not here to play, to dream, to drift. We have hard work to do and loads to lift. Shun not the struggle; face it; 'tis God's gift.

Be strong.

Say not the days are evil—who's to blame?—And fold the hands and acquiesce—oh, shame! Stand up, speak out, and bravely, in God's name.

Be strong.

It matters not how deep entrenched the wrong. How hard the battle goes, the day how long. Fight on; fight on. Tomorrow comes the song.

—Maithe D. Babcock.

Canny Andy.

As Herbert Corey tells it, he went to a dinner once where Andrew Carnegie was a guest.

"After the eating was over and the speechmaking had started," said Corey, "Mr. Carnegie reached in his pocket for something and pulled out a handful of small change. A dime got away from him and fell on the floor, and at the first chance Mr. Carnegie got down under the table and looked for it."

"Did he find it?" asked one of the audience to whom Corey was narrating the incident.

"Did he find it?" echoed Corey. "He found 15 cents!"—Saturday Evening Post.

Where Ignorance Is Bliss.

George W. Cable, the southern writer, while in England one time made a devout pilgrimage to Stratford on Avon and spent several days wandering about the neighborhood, intensely interested in it all. One day he met a countryman and, pausing, said:

"My friend, I envy you your life here amid the fields that knew the great poet's youth. What sublime thoughts must come to you as you tread the paths his feet trod!"

The countryman stared, and Mr. Cable

he was speaking, whereupon a prompt negative was the reply.

"Why, of Shakespeare, man. You must know him," declared Mr. Cable, with undisguised horror.

Finally the man recollected that he had heard of Shakespeare and believed that he had wrote for "summat."

"And have you any idea for what he wrote—was it the Times?" demanded the American.

"Oh, it warn't the Lannon paper," the man said. "I know it was summat solemn like. I think it was the Bible, helike."

The Proper Place For Them.

A merchants' carnival was being held in a country village, and little girls represented the various shops. One, dressed in a white muslin frock gayly strung with garlands of bonbons, advertised the local candy store.

When the festival began she fairly glistened with attractive confectionery, but as time wore on her decorations grew less. Finally, at the end of the last act, not a bonbon was to be seen.

"Why, Dora," cried the stage manager, "where in the world are all the decorations? Have you lost them?"

"Oh, no," replied Dora. "They're perfectly safe. I'm wearing them on the inside."

In the Same Boat.

Owen Davis, the playwright, stepped into the washroom of a Broadway restaurant to find two English actors there. Both the actors were slightly under the influence of something they had imbibed, and both were engaged in the favorite national pastime of a certain type of English actor—they were knocking American and the Americans.

"Frightfully ignorant race, old chap. These Yankees," one of them was saying as Davis entered. "Pon my word, I never saw so much ignorance. I've been over here five months now, and every time I meet an American I ask him if he knows what mica schist is. And, do you know, I've never found one yet who knew what mica schist was, not one."

"Most extraordinary!" murmured his companion. "To think of people so ignorant as all that! By the way, old dear, what is mica schist?"—Saturday Evening Post.

No Differences.

Personally, we never attached to wedding and engagement news the importance in which it is held by society reporters. And we incline to believe both to be purely private matters in which the wishes of the persons involved should be paramount. But a girl might as well print the news of her engagement as to tell it to her best friend.—Topeka Capital.

Scared the Beast.

The extraordinary skill with which Sir Edwin Landseer painted animals was due not merely to his mastery of the brush, but also to his intimate knowledge of the animal world. One of his many talents was the power of imitating to perfection the cry of any creature with which he was familiar. One day when the artist happened to be the guest of Lord Rivers he was requested to go and see a very savage dog that was tied up in the yard. As Landseer approached the growling beast he dropped quietly upon his hands and knees and then, crawling forward, snarled so alarmingly that the dog, overcome with terror, suddenly snapped his chain, jumped over the wall and was never seen afterward.

DIDN'T TAKE THE HOLE.

But That Was Probably Because the Court Said They Shouldn't.

An amusing instance of legal sharp practice is set forth in the annals of Westerly, R. I. It occurred a hundred years ago, when, it seems, lawyers were quite as adroit at quibbling as certain of their successors are today.

A farmer of broken fortunes hired for cultivation a piece of land, agreeing to pay for the use thereof with a certain proportion of the crop. He planted potatoes and had an unusual degree of success. Being without a storeroom, he obtained the consent of a neighboring landholder and deposited his share of the potatoes in what farmers call a potato hole—that is, an excavation in the earth in which the potatoes are placed and covered with earth and straw in the form of a pyramid.

Shortly afterward he had occasion to go to Connecticut, and one of his creditors seized the opportunity to attach the potato hole.

Upon this another creditor bestirred himself and consulted a lawyer as to what could be done to secure his claim. The attorney was equal to the occasion. He secured the issuing of a second writ, by which an attachment was levied upon the potatoes in the potato hole, the documents specifically setting forth that the potato hole should be left upon the land where it was found.

The warrant was promptly served, and when the first creditor appeared upon the scene he found the potato hole, but not the potatoes.—Case and Comment.

DEMORALIZED THE ENEMY.

An Unexpected Charge That Resulted in Rout and Annihilation.

There have been many curious bits of strategy in warfare, but none more effective than the coup of the Terceiros when threatened by the Spaniards.

Early in the morning of the 25th day of July, 1581, the inhabitants of the village of St. Sebastian, Isle of Terceira, one of the Azores or western group, were alarmed at the sight of a squadron, consisting of seven large Spanish war galleons, anchored off the little bay at Saige, the operations for landing a hostile force being actually in progress.

Hastily summoning some companies of militia and collecting behind a neighboring knoll a large herd of semi-wild cattle from the neighboring pastures, the islanders quietly awaited the massing of the Spaniards on the beach.

When this had been accomplished, the Terceiros advanced close up to the foe, as if to the attack, when, suddenly opening up into two long columns and leaving a wide, open space between, the numerous cattle were sent thundering down the center, goaded on by picadors on horseback. So unusual and unexpected a charge threw the Spaniards into complete disorder, and, being at once set upon by the islanders, scarcely a man escaped to the ships, several guns which had been landed falling as spoil to the conquerors.—Exchange.

The Test of Art.

Where the weakness of the artistic life really lies is that it is often not taken up out of mere communitarianness and happy excitement as a child tells a breathless tale, but as a device for attracting the notice and earning the applause of the world, and then it is on a par with all other self-regarding activities. But if it is taken up with a desire to give rather than to receive as an irrepressible sharing of delight it becomes not a solemn and dignified affair, but just one of the most beautiful and uncalculating impulses in the world.—A. C. Benson in Century Magazine.

Strong Hack Saw Blades.

The layman watching a tiny hack saw blade working its way through a tough piece of steel is filled with wonder, for it seems like putting a tiny boy to do the task of a giant. The latest idea is that of making a saw which has a soft, flexible back with hard tempered teeth. At a test of the strength of this blade it was found that it would support two men, representing a total weight of 283 pounds, without breaking.

Histrionic Requirements.

"There is no reason for mentioning your name," said the eminent player "You are a press agent; not an actor." "Believe me," replied Mr. Boostington, "a press agent has to be some actor to convince a star that he believes all the things he hummers on in the typewriter."—Washington Star.

Between Friends.

Kitty—Even if I do use a little peroxide my hair isn't false like yours. Kathryn—Even if my puffs are false the color is more constant than yours.—Boston Globe.

Relationship.

"Wasn't that insistent visitor you had a first cousin or something?" "Yes, until pa kicked him out, and then he was a cousin once removed."—Baltimore American.

SAVED BY A WAGER.

Doomed by the Surgeons, May Bet He Would Live, and He Did.

When Colonel Hay, notorious for his love of gambling and betting, was severely wounded in the Peninsular war two brother officers came across his apparently lifeless body.

"Poor Hay! He's gone at last," said one named Winsor.

A faint voice came from the ground, "I'll lay you a hundred he's not." His death seemed only a question of minutes, but he continued, "Enter the bet, and you, Marston"—addressing the other officer—"be witness."

He then fainted. When he was taken to the hospital the surgeon told him the bullet could only be removed by sawing through two ribs and introducing a child's hand to extract it, as forceps could not touch it. "The chances are," he added, "that you will die under the operation."

"If Winsor will make his bet double or quits I'll consent," said the colonel. Winsor agreed.

"Now saw away," said Hay. "I won't die." And he did not. "But for that bet," he said afterward, "I should be a dead man. It was my determination to win it that kept me alive."—Peapson's Weekly.

Guarding a Modern Fort.

The modern fort is armed with a garrison of 200 or more men who work the guns in watches much as if they were on a battleship. While the direct fire guns are surrounded by pits of ten foot concrete and are protected by fire and dropping back after each discharge, these places are by no means safe. A. von Schwartz, a Russian artillery officer, in describing the defense of Port Arthur, in which he took part, told of the havoc of the Japanese guns and of the rain of shells that made it impossible for food to be brought from protected communication lines for a half day at a time. Because of the certainty of death which awaits any body of men attacking the trenches of either during broad daylight, surprise night attacks are favored by both besieged and besiegers, but particularly by the latter. Hence searchlights, mines and circles of electric wires are used by both sides and add not a little to the horrors of war.—Walter S. Hiatt in Leslie's.

FOOD VALUES AND COSTS

PUBLIC HEALTH HINTS
Prepared Each Week For the Readers of This Newspaper by the New York State Department of Health.

THE effects of the war in Europe are felt in every household in the state, and the family purchaser will do well to consider the food value which various articles offer for a given cost. The same amount of nourishment can be obtained in one form for ONE-TENTH what is costs in another.

Foods serve two purposes. They supply the ENERGY for the activities of the body just as the fuel put into an engine supplies the energy for turning its wheels. They also supply BUILDING MATERIALS for making good the waste of body tissues which go on all through life. Most of the food taken in is used for the first of these purposes.

Relative Energy Value Obtained For Ten Cents When Spent For Different Common Food Materials at Prices Given

Wheat Flour at 5c. per lb.	100
Oatmeal at 6c. per lb.	100
Wheat Bread at 5c. per lb.	100
Dried Beans at 7c. per lb.	100
Macaroni at 10c. per lb.	100
Rice at 10c. per lb.	100
Potatoes at 2c. per lb.	100
Prunes at 12c. per lb.	100
Butter at 35c. per lb.	100
Corned Beef at 12c. per lb.	100
Milk at 8c. per qt.	100
Cheese at 24c. per lb.	100
Steak at 24c. per lb.	100
Eggs at 35c. per doz.	100

The value of foods as energy producers is measured in Calories. A Calorie is the amount of heat energy necessary to raise the temperature of one pound of water about four degrees. For example, one large egg, an ordinary portion of butter, one large banana, one medium slice of white bread—each of these contains 100 Calories of food energy.

The diagram above from "Safety," the magazine published by the American Museum of Safety, New York, gives the relative energy value of the different foods which can be obtained for 10 cents when purchased at the prices named.

The housewife who studies the diagram will see at a glance WHICH FOODS ARE MOST ECONOMICAL as sources of life energy.

Women Can Do Great Work by Helping Along the Go to Church Movement

IT is up to the women to make the men GO TO CHURCH. It is unnecessary to say that women have a wonderful influence with men. It is not enough that a woman go to church. She should insist on her father, brother, husband or sweetheart attending divine service. And there is no denying that if the women will take an interest in the GO TO CHURCH movement it will be a wonderful help.

DOES ANY ONE DOUBT THAT THE YOUNG GIRL WHO HAS A SWEETHEART CAN INDUCE HER YOUNG MAN TO ATTEND CHURCH? IF SHE CAN'T PREVAIL ON HIM TO GO TO THE HOUSE OF GOD SHE SHOULD DROP HIM. HE WILL NOT MAKE A GOOD HUSBAND. IF THERE IS A GIRL WHO HAS A BROTHER WHO DOES NOT ATTEND CHURCH LET HER BEGIN RIGHT NOW TO START HIM ON THE RIGHT PATH. LET THE LOVING WIFE PLEAD WITH HER HUSBAND TO GO TO CHURCH WITH THE SAME FERVOR THAT SHE ASKS FOR AN EASTER BONNET. SHE GENERALLY GETS THE EASTER BONNET. IT WILL BE JUST AS EASY—PROBABLY A GREAT DEAL EASIER—TO GET HER HUSBAND TO GO TO CHURCH.

Men will not deny women anything. If some of the women of the country would put one-half the energy into the GO TO CHURCH movement that they do into other uplift work the churches wouldn't hold the crowds. The wife should tell her husband that when he was married he went to church; that when their child was born he went to church. Women can and must make the men GO TO CHURCH. The churches are the very life of the nation. If the attendance has fallen off it is due to carelessness. Men need but to be reminded and they will do their part. Make the men GO TO CHURCH next Sunday! Then make them go the following Sunday!

Breathing.
To learn to breathe properly inflate the lungs and walk for five paces, keeping the mouth shut and breathing through the nose, increasing the five paces to ten and then to fifteen or more. Follow this up by taking several long breaths after getting up in the morning and again before retiring.

Dryden and His Wife.
Dryden married Lady Elizabeth Howard, a shrew of marked ability. She complained that he showed her no attention and wished herself a book that she might enjoy more of his society. "Wish yourself an almanac, my dear. Then I could change you every year."

A Negotiable Draft.
"Well," replied the physician when his patient wife asked him for money. "I hope to cash a draft soon and then—"
"Cash a draft? What draft?"
"The one I saw Mr. Oldtown sitting in this morning."

Discouraged.
"Are you working for the uplift?"
"Well, I'd like to. But everybody I try to uplift tells me to mind my own business."—Seattle Post-Intelligencer.

Information.
It was a very fashionable concert and the artists very well known ones, but the two young things were too busy with picking out their peculiarities to hear the music.
In the midst of a beautiful selection the pianist suddenly lifted his hands from the keys and one of the young things was heard to say clearly:
"I wonder if that hair is his own?"
The old man who sat beside her was slightly deaf, but he turned with a benevolent smile.
"No, miss. He imparted pleasantly; 'that is Schubert's.'—Philadelphia Press.

Old Forts of Antwerp.
As long ago as 1641 an English traveler to Antwerp was impressed by the extensive character of its fortifications. "The galls, ramparts and platforms are stupendous," writes John Evelyn in his diary. " * * * But there was nothing about this city which more ravished me than those delicious shades and walks of stately trees, which render the fortified works of the town one of the sweetest places in Europe; nor did I ever observe a more quiet, clean, elegantly built and civil place than this magnificent and famous city of Antwerp."

Ferocious Looking Sikhs.
Did you ever see a Sikh in uniform? No? What-ever of fierceness your childhood fancy painted upon the face of a soldier, the Sikh has it. Other soldiers may be as brave or may fight more tenaciously or die more willingly, but for simple fierceness of personal appearance all medals go to the Sikh.
A Sikh—and I've seen many regiments of them on their native heath—is a tall man with black hair and a long black beard. The beard is what makes him look so fierce, because he plait it into two thick braids and draws these back of his ears, where they are tied.
If you think that doesn't make a soldier look fierce, you make a sad error, which one glance at him would correct.
The Sikhs are Hindus, and so strict are their religious beliefs that all the food they eat must be especially prepared according to their own rites.—Girard in Philadelphia Ledger

Baracas Win From Groton.

The Baraca basket ball five defeated the fast Groton High school five on the local floor last Friday evening, the score being 22 to 9. The game was fast from start to finish, the Groton boys making two scores at the beginning which made the Baraca boys think they were going to "get it," but after that all the Groton boys got they worked hard for. The pass work and quickness of Forwards Dean and Hand gave much credit to the winning side. While at times the ball played close to Groton's basket the guard work of Fulmer and Reeves kept the ball in motion outside. Centers Howell and Conklin fought for their side in fine style, Conklin using more spring in his toes, out-jumping Howell; but Howell most always had the ball as soon as it hit the floor.

The Baracas are playing the best and fastest teams that they can get and give a good clean game.

The line-up:

GENOA BARACAS	GROTON HIGH SCHOOL
Dean	Left Forward
Hand	Right Forward
Howell	Center
Fulmer	Right Guard
Reeves	Left Guard
	Erway
	Walpole

Goals from field—Dean 4, Hand 2, Howell 1, Reeves 2, Corcoran 1, Conklin 3.

Goals from free throws—Dean 3, Hand 1, Hastings 1.

Referee—Willoughby.

Timekeeper—Ferris.

The game with Venice Center on Saturday evening, Nov. 14, was won by the Baracas, score 16 to 8.

It's some credit when you smile.

As we've often done befo',
Thankful dat we's livin'
If we ain' foh nothin' mo'.

LET CIVIC WORK GO ON.

Cities which sold their bonds for important improvements before the outbreak of the European war are in a particularly fortunate position to proceed with construction work. We do not feel, however, that in cities not so fortunate the necessity of paying temporarily a higher interest rate should be considered a conclusive reason for the curtailing of municipal work. We do not advocate, of course, the spending of money foolishly, but the only cause which ever justifies the expenditure of municipal funds is the promoting of the welfare of the citizens. Can it be doubted that such welfare would be more effectively advanced by the continuance of needed public work, even at a slightly higher rate of interest for loans, than by the curtailment of such work, with the consequent additions to the army of the unemployed? Let the armies of construction go forward. —American City.

A JUNIOR CIVIC CLUB.

Public School Organization Devoted to Town Improvement.

The plans adopted last spring by the civic improvement committee of the Kewanee Civic club for the cleaning up and beautifying of homes, and the results accomplished, were of such a comprehensive nature and have been so successful that a description is deemed advisable, writes C. G. Kellein, secretary of the Kewanee (Ill.) Civic club. In the Town Development Magazine, with the co-operation of the superintendent of schools a junior civic club consisting of about 650 members was organized in the seven school districts of the city. Each scholar desiring to become a member of the Junior Civic club was requested to sign a membership card, and was presented with a button bearing the words, "I will help Kewanee." The colors were black and orange, which are the Kewanee school colors. A photograph was taken of the child's home, showing as nearly as possible the conditions which he desired to improve.

A letter was addressed to the parents of the members of the club stating that the Kewanee Civic club would offer cash prizes to the children who would make the most progress in cleaning up yards at home, planting flowers, making gardens, etc. The prizes offered for the best showing in each school district were $5 in gold for the first prize and $2.50 in gold for the second prize. All the children who had made an honest effort to clean up and beautify their yards were to be given diplomas of award signed by the committee and the superintendent of schools. The taking of the pictures was the most expensive item in connection with this plan, but the expenses were materially kept down by the fact that the Camera club of the high school contributed largely of their time. A committee of five was appointed to do the judging in each school district. The committees started their work about July 1, and upon completion of the work made their formal report to the civic improvement committee.

Attempts have been made for a number of years to get the children interested in beautifying their yards, but for one reason or another they had not been successful. This year's contest has created wonderful enthusiasm and a friendly competition or rivalry among the children and has worked wonderful results as is evidenced by a trip through the city.

A Garage Safeguard.

An interesting bit of "safety first" work has been put in practice by the proprietor of a garage in Louisville, Ky., whose example might well be followed in other places.

Motor vehicles leaving this garage are obliged to cross the sidewalk of a busy street along which pedestrians are passing all hours of the day and night, and as a warning a lamp has been installed in front of the exit in a large globe, on each side of which the words "Danger" is painted in large letters.

This lamp is lighted from sunset to sunrise and in itself forms an effective cautionary signal. It is, however, supplemented by a loud ringing gong, which is automatically operated whenever a vehicle approaches the exit door, a steel plate being so placed that it automatically closes the contact with a copper spring and rings the bell whenever the wheels pass over it.

It is interesting to note how pedestrians passing along the sidewalk intuitively "stop, look and listen" at the instant the bell begins to ring and wait until the automobile has crossed the sidewalk into the street. It has been suggested that local authorities would do well to enforce the installation of such a device at the entrance to every garage located on busy thoroughfares.

A City's Slogan.

"New Orleans, the City Sanitary," was the slogan during and after the recent New Orleans (La.) cleanup of the threatening bubonic plague. The example of New Orleans in meeting this danger promptly and fearlessly has set a new standard before American cities. Time was when a city carefully suppressed any such rumor as the whisper of a plague epidemic. New Orleans, however, has faced this danger bravely and much credit redounds to its authorities for their sound and sensible action.

Thanksgiving's Boys

COUNTRY boy with cheek of tan
(So the old time poem ran),
You're the one to catch our turk;
Hope you find it easy work!
Hold him tight as you are able,
Lest he never reach our table!

CITY kids who hold the bird
Never of his birthplace heard,
But they know how good he tastes.
How he makes expand their waists!
Fowl that joins us folks, of all ranks,
For your toothsome we give thanks.

A THANKSGIVING DAY "SERMON"

My friends, Thanksgiving day comes, by statute, once a year. To the honest man it comes as frequently as the heart of gratitude will allow, which may mean every day, or once in seven days, at least.

Now, I propose, my friends, to state a few of the things for us to be thankful for—when we are in the mood, of course, for when we are not inclined who can make us give thanks for anything? We should be thankful that we know more than anybody else, for we are not capable of talking and giving lectures upon every subject ever talked of?

We should be thankful that we are all good looking. Ain't we? Just look around this audience and see if you can "spot" the person who is, in his own estimation, not good looking. It would be a curious study, to be sure, to find in what particular some people are good looking, but it's none of our personal business if a man has carryover hair, eyes like a new moon, nose like a split pear, mouth like a pair of waffle bars, chin like a Dutch churn, neck like a gander's and a body like a crowbar. Comparatively he is good looking—that is, there are homelier men and animals than he—so everybody is good looking and has a right to put on airs.

We should be thankful that we are more plous than any one else. That we are plous is evident from the manner in which we treat poor creatures who have most unfortunately been driven to sin from the fact that we pay our preachers occasionally and always enable them to be street-corner

...in all respects; from the fact that we don't work on Sunday and eat the big dinners which it has made the women folks almost tired to death to prepare. Who is the person in this room who is not plous? I do not care to know him for the present.

We should be thankful that this world was especially created for our own comfort, convenience and use; that we have a perfect right to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness, no matter if these do conflict with some other person's wishes and happiness and rights.

I hope you will thank me for this recognition of your good qualities, your rights, your glory and trust, I shall be permitted to say of myself when I retire:

"Here lies an honest young man."
Author Unknown.

Thanksgiving Among the Greeks.
The Greeks held the grandest feast of all the year in honor of Demeter, the goddess of the harvest, and the Romans, who borrowed most of their customs from the Greeks, also held a grand celebration in honor of the same goddess, whose name they changed to Ceres. They went in long processions to the fields, where they engaged in rustic sports and crowned all of their household gods with flowers. Most of these feasts were held in September.

THANKSGIVING.
Come forth, come forth, to the festal board
As our sires were wont in the days of old;
The reapers are home with their harvest heard,
The herds have hied to their wintry fold,
And the cullers of fruit our vaults have stored
With the wealth of the orchard's freight of gold.
—Mannah E. G. Aray.

Seven Ages of the Thanksgiving Turkey

The King of Festivals.
The king and high priest of all festivals was the autumn thanksgiving. When the apples were all gathered and the cider was all made and the yellow pumpkins were rolled in from many a hill in billows of gold and the corn was husked and the labors of the season were done and the warm late days of Indian summer came in dreamy and calm and still, with just enough frost to crisp the ground of a morning, but with warm traces of benignant, sunny hours at noon, there came over the community a sort of genial repose of spirit, a sense of something accomplished and of a new golden mark made in advance, and the season began to say to the minister of a Sunday, "I suppose it's about time for the Thanksgiving proclamation."
—From Harriet Beecher Stowe's "Old Time Folks."

Our First National Thanksgiving.
The immediate occasion of the first thanksgiving was the surrender of General Burgoyne to General Gates in the fall of 1777. Thursday, the 18th of December, was designated, and in compliance with the order of congress the army at Valley Forge duly observed the day—the army that had tracked its way in blood. It was ordered by the Continental congress.

GEORGE WAS RATTLED.

And Maybe He Didn't Know a Thing About Bound Brook Either.

Artemus Ward sat in a hotel smoking room one night when it occurred to him to play one of his practical jokes. So, looking up from his papers toward the dozen strangers in the room, he called:

"George, George!"

Three men named George started and gazed at Ward with puzzled smiles. He said calmly, without indicating whom he was addressing:

"Why did you leave Bound Brook, George?"

"If you mean me," said a tall, thin man with iron gray hair, "I was never in Bound Brook in my life, and I never saw you before either."

Without batting an eyelash and with the suggestion of a genial smile fitting across his lips Ward went on:

"I was under the impression that you liked Bound Brook."

"Confound you," said the tall, thin man, "I don't know anything about Bound Brook."

Ward said more smoothly and calmly than ever:

"You were doing well in Bound Brook, George. Why did you leave the place?"

"Darn you," roared the thin man. "I tell you I never saw Bound Brook!"

And he rose in a rage and stamped out of the room slamming the door behind him.

Ward lifted his eyebrows and smiled faintly at the silent and impressed audience of smokers.

"His conscience troubles him," he said, "but I wish he'd told me why he left Bound Brook."

Thereafter poor "George" was a marked man at that hotel.

Try, Then Do Your Best.
Don't be a coward and say "I can't!" when there is work to be done. Join the fighters and say "I'll try," and do your best to live up to it.

Full of Antidote.
He was a very convivial sort of a man and he went to town one night and imbibed very freely at the various bars. He was weaving an uncertain way homeward along the road when he almost ran into a large rattlesnake that was coiled in the road and rattling ominously. He looked at the snake for a moment and then drew himself up as well as he could. "If you are going to strike, strike, drat ye," he said. "You will never find me better prepared."

A Dainty Dish.
She was a young missionary to China, not yet quite proficient in the language of the country, and was giving a little dinner to some friends. During the course of the meal she asked the servant to bring in some fruit, at least she thought she did.

He objected; she insisted; he refused; she grew angry. At last he left the room.

Presently he returned. The hostess screamed and the guests roared as they saw the servant carrying a large platter, which he placed before his mistress with an air of supreme contempt. On it, carefully arranged, were her husband's everyday trousers!

One Way to Settle.
Jack McAuliffe, once lightweight champion, wasn't bathing in prosperity during the latter years of the late "Big Tim" Sullivan.

"Every time I ran short of a two dollar bill," said McAuliffe, "I touched Tim. One day he called me."

"I don't expect you to pay me back," said he, "but I'm going to keep books on you. I want to know just how much the pleasure of your society is costing me."

"He made me go with him, and we bought a little memorandum book. After that he put down every touch I made. One day he shook his head at me."

"Jack," said he, "I'm not the man to go back on a friend, but don't you think you're going a bit strong? This book's full!"

"I am, Tim," says I. "I'm ashamed of myself. And is the book clean full?"

"It is," says he, "from cover to cover."

"Give me five hours, Tim," says I, "and I'll fix it."

"So Tim says 'All right.' And five hours later I came back to his office."

"Now, Tim," says I, pulling a bundle out of my pocket, "look at this, and see if it's right."

"And Tim opened it. And it was a new book."—Chicago News.

LOSSES IN BATTLE.

Men Called "Missing" Are Not Always Dead or Wounded.

In accounts of battles one almost invariably reads of the dead, wounded and "missing." That the latter are not always among the dead or wounded, nor even among the prisoners taken by the enemy, is shown in this extract from General Horace Porter's "Campaigning With Grant."

"We learned something at Shiloh about the way in which reports of losses are sometimes exaggerated in battle. At the close of the first day's fight Sherman met a colonel of one of his regiments with only about a hundred of his soldiers in ranks and said to him, 'Why, where are your men?'"

"The colonel cast his eyes sadly along the line, wiped a tear from his cheek and replied in a whimpering voice, 'We went in 800 strong and that's all that's left of us.'"

"You don't tell me!" exclaimed Sherman, beginning to be deeply affected by the fearful carnage.

"Yes," said the colonel, "the rebels appeared to have a special spite against us."

"Sherman passed along some hours afterward when the commissary was issuing rations and found the colonel's men returning on the run from under the bank of the river, where they had taken shelter from the firing, and in a few minutes nearly all of the lost 700 had rejoined and were boiling coffee and eating a hearty meal with an appetite that showed they were still very much alive."

MANY NEW LAWS AS RESULT OF LENGTHY SESSION

Banking Act Most Important Piece of Work Accomplished by Congress.

Trust Law, War Imposition and Railroad Arbitration Measures Passed.

LONG in the list of important bills enacted, the session of the Sixty-third congress, which closed virtually with the passage of the war tax bill, about equaled in length the longest session in the previous history of the country that can properly be termed a single session. That was the first session of the Fifty-ninth congress, which, from Dec. 5, 1887, to Oct. 20, 1888, lasted precisely 321 days. Nominally, the second session of the Fortieth congress, in which President Johnson was impeached, lasted 345 days, from Dec. 2, 1867, to Nov. 10, 1868, but as a matter of fact no business was transacted after July 27, and subsequent to that date both houses were in almost continuous recess, once for almost a month at a time, making the real length of that session only 238 days.

Without counting the winter term yet to come this congress has been in session longer than any other in the country's history, except the Fortieth, which, allowing for the 107 days of recess in its second session, was sitting 599 days. But this congress, when it finally dissolves at the close of the coming winter session on March 3, 1915, will have been in session longer than any other congress since the foundation of the government.

Even the congresses of the great war periods of the past did not approach in length of sittings the sessions of the present congress.

Many Thousands of Bills.

Practically all of the work that congress does is initiated by the introduction of bills and resolutions. Therefore, an idea of the vastness of the transactions of the senate and house is furnished through the fact that more than 27,000 measures have been offered in the two bodies since the Sixty-third congress convened in its first session on April 7, 1913. Few of these bills received any consideration in the special session, which was called to enact legislation of a specified character, the new tariff law, and most of them were left for the present session.

The house, having the larger membership, received the larger number of bills and resolutions, the total reaching more than 20,300. In the senate there were introduced more than 7,300 bills and resolutions.

Of these more than 200 have become "public laws" by virtue of congressional enactment and the president's signature. There have been in the same time and through the same process 146 "private laws" written into the statute books and fifty-one public resolutions have been enacted.

The comparatively small number of enactments, as shown by the figures, is not to be taken as a criterion of the work accomplished, for many of the bills and resolutions have been compiled by committees into which were sometimes called "omnibus bills," and other legislation has been provided for by proposing the subject matters of other measures as amendments to the general and appropriation bills.

It is estimated that nearly two-thirds of the measures presented in the two houses were of the character of private bills, mostly for pensions and claims.

The session has seen the enactment of an extraordinarily long list of measures generally important to the whole country. But, long as that list is, it falls short in many striking particulars of the almost unheard of legislative program mapped out by President Wilson in his annual address to the two houses of congress on Dec. 2, the day after the convening of the session.

Fight Over Banking Act.

The most important enactment of the session came first and marked the conclusion of the long struggle over the banking and currency act. This item on the legislative program, which the president intended to have been passed in the extraordinary session immediately following the passage of the tariff law, took up the first three weeks of the present session. That measure, which is not yet in practical operation, divided the country into twelve regional reserve districts, with the establishment of as many regional reserve banks, co-ordinated through a general reserve board in Washington.

These banks will issue what is expected to prove cheaper money by rediscounting commercial paper. They will perform some of the functions of clearing houses for their districts and under the guidance of the federal reserve board they are expected to furnish a smooth running machinery for mobilizing the reserves of the country to any section where money is needed. A provision in the act that may prove important to the United States during the European war in developing its export trade, particularly with South America, permits national banks of large capitalization to establish branches in foreign countries.

President Wilson and the Democratic leaders of congress regard the currency law as perhaps the biggest thing in the way of really constructive legislative that has been accomplished by the congress. It commanded many Republican votes on its final passage, and only a few days ago Representative Seno E. Payne of New York, ranking Republican of the committee on ways and means of the house, praised the measure, merely taunting the Democrats good naturedly for having drawn heavily on the work of the national monetary commission, which was dominated by Republicans.

Two of the three measures on the anti-trust legislative program were enacted in this session. They were the federal trade commission bill and the so-called Clayton bill, supplementing the Sherman anti-trust act. The third measure, known as the Rayburn stock and bond bill, passed the house, but was subjected to criticism in the senate and all over the country. The majority of the committee in charge was divided into as many factions as it had members, and the bill was silently put to death without any consideration on the floor of the senate.

Trade Commission Bill.

The federal trade commission law abolished the bureau of corporations and turned over its functions and gave many new duties to a new commission to be named by the president. The commission will be named in December and will take up its work with the new year. Joseph E. Davies of Wisconsin, the present chief of the bureau of corporations, in all probability will be chairman of the trade commission. This was indicated recently when Mr. Davies resigned his place as national committeeman from Wisconsin and also the secretaryship of the Democratic national committee.

The trade commission will receive reports from all corporations other than common carriers capitalized at $5,000,000 or more. On direction from the president the attorney general or either house of congress the commission will investigate corporate activities. It will make public reports and aid the courts in formulating and carrying out the decrees of dissolution.

The Clayton bill supplements the Sherman act by specifying particular deeds as constituting restraint of trade. Price discrimination and tying contracts are made unlawful where they substantially lessen competition. Labor unions are declared lawful and human labor "not a commodity or article of commerce." The law forbids injunctions restraining persons from quitting work. It forbids holding companies where they restrain commerce or tend to establish monopoly. Interlocking directorates among banks where any one bank has deposits, capital, surplus and undivided profits of more than $5,000,000 are forbidden. The law strikes at some railroad managements by making the embezzlement of funds belonging to a common carrier a federal penalty, and the principle of personal guilt is established.

Averted Railroad Strike.

An employees' arbitration act for mediation, conciliation and arbitration in controversies between employer and employees has been enacted. According to Majority Leader Underwood of the house, it has already succeeded in averting the greatest railroad strike in the history of the country, involving every railroad west of the Mississippi and north of the Potomac river.

While many of the president's recommendations at the beginning of the session have not been put on the statute books, the outbreak of the war in Europe has caused him to make other suggestions to congress which have resulted in important remedial legislation. Money has been appropriated for the relief of American tourists abroad. An act has been passed to permit the registration of foreign built ships and another creating a bureau of war risk insurance in the treasury department as an adjunct to existing commercial bureaus.

Before the European war diverted all eyes from Mexico that country had occupied a large part of the time of congress. Money had to be appropriated for the relief of Americans in Mexico and for the support of Mexican soldiers interned on American soil. More important still, congress in the present session was called upon to justify the seizure of Vera Cruz without formal warfare. At that time an act was passed to provide for the raising of volunteer troops in the time of actual or threatened war.

One of the greatest struggles of the session hinged around the repeal of the clause of the Panama canal act exempting American coastwise ships from tolls. Many Democrats in the house, under the leadership of Speaker Clark and Mr. Underwood, opposed the president's view of this country's treaty obligations.

The last duty of this session was incidental to the war in Europe. It required the imposition of so-called war taxes to make up for the deficit already resulting from the curtailment of imports from the belligerent countries. A bill substantially repeating the provisions of the Spanish-American war measure passed the house imposing taxes that were estimated as payable of producing $105,000,000 of revenue. Senate amendments materially reduced that amount.

The Thankful Heart

For all that God in mercy sends,
for health and children, home and friends;
for comforts in the time of need,
for every kindly word or deed,
for happy thoughts and holy talk,
for guidance in our daily walk,
In everything, give thanks.

For beauty in this world of ours,
for verdant grass and lovely flowers,
for songs of birds, and hum of bees,
for the refreshing summer breeze,
for hill and plain, for stream and wood,
for the great ocean's mighty flood—
In everything give thanks.

For the sweet sleep which comes with night,
for the returning morning light,
for the bright sun which shines on high,
for the stars glittering in the sky—
for these, and everything we see,
O, Lord, we lift our hearts to thee:
In everything, give thanks!

THANKSGIVING AT THE WHITE HOUSE

"Hail to the chief!" That particular line of the patriotic hymn certainly applies at this season to the national bird—the turkey, and not the eagle. From the sun kissed sands of the gulf to the snow clad mountain crests of Alaska, from the burning deserts of Arizona to the bleak, storm washed rocks of Maine, the turkey is king. Millions of Americans will pay him tribute. On the plain dinner table of the farmhouse, on the silver laden board of the city banker, in the cabin, in the mines and cars whirling along their tracks of steel, beneath the glow of electric lights and the sounds of music floating from behind palms or with the gleam of the tallow dip, the sovereign is the same, proudly resting in his bed of brown gravy, his portly sides crackling with deliciousness.

Thanksgiving is a great day at the White House. The turkey intended for the president each year is a magnificent one, weighing about twenty-eight pounds. It reaches the White House a few days before the great dinner by express, already killed. When roasted it is truly a sight to make Lucullus' mouth water with envy.

The turkey is cooked in a kitchen which is a model for cleanliness and comfort. On one side of the room is an immense range, at least twelve feet in length, and above hangs a large iron hood, which carries off any odor. The tables are two in number and covered with zinc. Above them is a hanging rod full of hooks, from which depend rows of shining saucepans of all sizes. The floor is covered with a mat in a pretty design, and the whole place is lighted by electricity. There are three cooks, but the number of "help" at the White House is fifteen, which includes the maids, dressers and waiters.

The dishes are washed in a patent machine. By means of a dumb waiter the dishes are taken right up to the buttery pantry, which adjoins the dining room, and contains the presses full of clean white cloths, and of every variety of beautiful design. There are historic acts which have come down from the earliest days, for nearly every president's wife has added to the tradition. Of china used by Lincoln there are about 100 pieces left, the best and coloring being grafted and the rest restored by a ripping design inside of which is a broad band of color.

There are about the same number of pieces left of a set which was bought and used by the Grants. Roosevelt paid the sum of $22,000 for a set of white and gold china, which numbered 3,000 pieces. One of the prettiest sets is that purchased by Mrs. Benjamin Harrison. The edge is a wide band of blue, and in the white center of the plate appears an exquisitely dainty picture of the American eagle resting on a shield.

The fish sets are all decorated with painted pictures of all kinds of specimens of the funny tribe, and the china used for game has pretty pictures of wild fowl in the air or standing among the reeds. There is even a plate which once belonged in the Confederate White House and one given to Washington by the Society of the Cincinnati. All of the silver at the White House is marked "The President's House."

Other than having a monster turkey to grace his table, the president's dinner will be about the same as that of any other well to do American.—Washington Star.

When the Ancient Jews Gave Thanks.

Three thousand years ago witnessed the Jewish feast of tabernacles, with its magnificent rituals, melodious choirs and picturesque festivities. For eight days the people ceased their work to "eat, drink and be merry." During the time great throngs gathered in and around Jerusalem for several days, living in booths formed of the branches of the olive, pine, myrtle and palm and decorated with fruits and flowers. Grand public pageants were held, and, in addition to these, every household had its worship, its sacrifices and its banquet.

POLLY'S THANKSGIVING

How a Little Girl Got a Holiday All For Her Very Own.

SUCH a funny little roly poly Polly as she was, with her big china blue eyes, that were forever seeing something to wonder about, and her round, red cheeks, that always grew redder when anybody spoke to her, and her crinkly, flaxen hair, that never would stay in place. Such a queer dumping of a Polly!

All the same, she liked nice things to eat as well as any one could, and when once upon a time somebody gave her the measles just in season for Thanksgiving day she felt dreadful about it and cried as hard as she knew how because she couldn't have any turkey nor pudding nor mince pie for dinner nothing at all but oatmeal gruel!

But crying didn't help the measles a mite, as, of course, Polly knew it wouldn't. But she couldn't have helped crying if she wanted to, and she didn't want to.

"Most anybody 'd cried, I wouldn't wonder," she said a day or two after, when the measles had begun to go away again, "not to have a mite of any Thanksgiving for dinner—not any pie, not any cranberry sauce, not any—oh dear!"

"Well, well," said Polly's mother, laughing, "I guess we'll have to have another Thanksgiving day right off."

"Oh, can we?" cried Polly, brightening up.

"Not unless the governor says so," answered her father, with a twinkle. "The governor makes Thanksgiving days, Polyanthus."

"Where does he live?" asked Polly, with an earnestness that was funny. Everybody laughed.

"At the capital," said Polly's Uncle Ben Davis. "Do you know where that is?"

"I guess I do," said Polly, and she asked no more questions.

But what do you guess this funny Polly did? By and by, when she felt quite like herself again, she borrowed pencil and paper and shut herself up in her own little room and wrote a letter that looked a little queer, 'tis true, but still made her wishes known.

DeRe MISTeR GUVNER will you PLEASE Make ANotHeR THANKSGIVING DAY be Caws I had THE MEESLES the Last One. Polly Pinkham.

Then she folded the letter and put it in an envelope and sealed it and took 2 cents out of her bank for the postage and ran away as fast as she could run.

Mr. Willey kept the postoffice, and if he himself had been behind the glass boxes that day I don't believe Polly's letter would ever have gone out of Tinkerville. But Mr. Willey's niece was there. She read the address on the envelope Polly handed in, and her eyes danced, it looked so funny.

Mister GUVNER, at the CAPITOL. One or two questions brought out the whole story.

"The governor shall have your letter, Polly," roguish Miss Molly said as she stamped it and postmarked it.

And so he did, for not quite a week later, a letter came in the mail for Polly—a great white letter with a picture in one corner that made Polly's father open his eyes.

"Why, it's the state's arms!" said he. "What under the sun?"

But I think he suspected. Oh, how red Polly cheeks were and how her small fingers trembled when she tore open her letter! It was printed so that she could read it herself, all but the long words:

Dear Miss Polly—Your letter received. I am very sorry you were so ill as not to be able to eat any Thanksgiving dinner. It was quite too bad. I hereby appoint a special Thanksgiving day for you—next Thursday, Dec. 9—which I trust may be kept with due form. Your friend and well-wisher, ANDREW COLBURN.

"Oh, oh, oh!" said Polly, hopping on one foot. "Will you, mother? Oh mother, will you? I wrote to him myself. Oh, I'm so glad!"

"Did you ever?" cried Polly's mother. "Why, Polly Pinkham!" But Polly's father slapped his knee and laughed.

"Good for Governor Colburn! I'll vote for him as long as he wants a vote. And Polly shall have a special Thanksgiving worth telling of, so she shall!"

And so she did have, the very best she ever remembered.—A. C. Stoddard in Youth's Companion.

Fasting and Feasting.
A fast and a feast kept close company in Puritan calendars. A fast frequently preceded Thanksgiving day and was sometimes appointed for the day succeeding the feast, a clever plan which had its good hygienic points.

Though in the mind of the Puritan Christmas smelled to heaven of idolatry, when his own festival, Thanksgiving, became annual, it assumed many of the features of the old English Christmas. It was simply a day of family reunion in November instead of December, on which Puritans ate turkey and Indian pudding and pumpkin pie instead of "superstitious meats," such as a baron of beef, bear's head and plum pudding.

Many funny stories are told of the early Thanksgiving days, such as the town of Colchester calmly ignoring the governor's appointed day and observing its own festival a week later in order to allow time for the arrival, by ship from New York, of a hoghead of molasses for pie.—From "Customs and Fashions in Old New England," by Mrs. Morse Barre.
