CHARLES S. WHITMAN-THE MAN; A STUDY AT CLOSE RANGE

party's choice for governor this year, guilt or innocence of Becker Mr. Reports from throughout the state in Whitman believed Becker guilty. The dicate that the vote in the Republican evidence of guilt that he had uncovprimary on Sept. 28 will show that the predominating sentiment is that Whit- cipally by him personally, pointed man is the strongest man to carry the party's banner to success this fall.

Mr. Whitman's campaign for primary designation has been dignified in every way-thoroughly in keeping with the personality of the man. He has confined himself in his public speeches to the direct issues of the campaign and has refrained from indulging in per sonalities about other candidates for the governorship. He has told the voters of his party that, if elected governer, his administration would be free from subserviency to any boss-that he would administer the affairs of the state honorably and effectively He has told the voters that he has entered into no deal or arrangement with any one as to his nomination and that he would not make any such arrangement or deal with any one. ___

Independent and Fearless.

Those who know Mr. Whitman best know that he speaks the truth. His independence, his fearlessness in hewing closely to the line of duty, his integrity and his high ideals characterize Mr. Whitman's public life. For tweive years he has lived up to those ideals in thought and deeds. The administrator of the greatest criminal law department in the world. Mr. Whitman has had the opportunity to demonstrate his effectiveness as a public servant Last fall the voting public in New York county paid tribute to his effectiveness by re-electing Mr. Whitman as district attorney by a unanimous vote. Every party indorsed him as its candidate-Republicans, Democrats, Progressives. Independence Leaguers, Prohibitionists-all combined in nominating Charles S. Whitman to succeed himself. It was compliment never be fore paid a bigh public official in New York.

It is no easy task that confronts a district attorney for the county of New York, a task in which for a weakling there are many pitfalls, a task which requires untiring devotion to duty and an ability to cope success fully with the shrewdest legal minds in the community. For nearly five years Mr. Whitman has performed that task and performed it well.

Not a Word of Criticism.

Not a word of public criticism has ever been directed against a public act of Mr. Whitman. He is trusted implicitly by the legal profession of the city of New York and by the public at large. He is trusted by the juries be fore whom he appears in the prosecution of criminal cases.

This trust was clearly shown in the prosecution of the notorious Becker case. At the second trial of Police Lieutenant Charles Becker, accused of murdering the gambler, Hermen Ro senthal, Mr. Whitman, as district at sorney, asked the jury to trust him To this jury he said:

I want to say in those of you who have not served before that I want you to trust me. It is your duty to trust me. I am the man whom the county has chosen to discharge the duties of this office. I am the man to whom the voters in New York have committed this trust. I am the man in whom the county has reposed the conddenos by a unanimous vote that I will use these funds and discharge these du | well for twelve ears in positions of ties bonestly and faithfully and rightenusby and I am here to say that I have and in his integrity. Mr. Whitman's candidacy is strengthened by the fact that he has demon strated administrative ability. The conduct of the district attorney's office of the county of New York is not confined to the trying of cases. Nearly 200 men are employed in that office A fourth of these are lawyers. They look to the guiding mind of the administrator to steer them straight along the path of criminal law and its proper enforcement. It is the district attorney himself who directs this small army of men. For any error of judgment of his staff the district attorney himself is responsible. No important move in the prosecution or investigation of a case is made without consulting Mr. Whitman. A review of Mr. Whitman's achievements during twelve years of public service and a study of the man at close range lear e no doubt that he is worthy of advancement to the highest state office within the gift of New York's voters. His record is not only clean; it is a record of constructive achievement, in which the motto, "Duty first in all things," is written

Knows Public Needs.

Mr. Whitman's knowledge of public needs is broad. His experience as New York city's legal adviser in matters of state legislation during the administration of Mayor Seth Low gave Mr. Whitman a practical working knowledge of legislative affairs-a knowledge which has ripened by constant study His experience on the bench and as administrator of the office of district attorney has given him a knowledge of men and of their capabilities. The success or failure of the governor of New York state is gauged by the character of the men with whom he assoclates himself-the men whom he appoints to administer the various important bureaus of the state govern ment. If these appointments are wise ly made the administration of the governor must necessarily be good; if they are unwisely made the administration is soon wrecked upon the shoals of inofficiency. In the district attorney's office Mr. Whitman has gathered about him men of sterling worth and integ rity. As governor there is every reason to believe his appointments would be based solely upon merit.

His message to the voters of the state is simple and direct. He says: "if elected governor I shall ecdeavor to the best of my ability to administer that office honestly and etficiently,"

A man is best judged by his acts Mr. Whitman has served the public high trust. There is every reason to believe that as governor he would car-

WHITMAN STATES

In his recent address before the Kings County Republican club in Brooklyn District Attorney Whitman of New York said the following:

"First.-I indorse the Republican platform adopted at the Saratoga convention on Aug. 49.

"Second.-If elected governor I propose to follow the trails of graft and corruption exposed during the last four years of Tammany rule, no matter where such trails may lead or what the consequences may be.

"Third.-If elected governor I will face the further and more important duty-the prevention of extravagance and corruption in the future.

"Fourth.-Under the law as it now stands there is no adequate punishment for conspiracy to defraud the state. A conspiracy against the state is only a misdemeanor. If elected governor I will recommend to the legislature a law making such a conspiracy a felony

"Fifth.-I have never been a political boss nor controlled a machine. I have never taken orders from a boss. I have never been in the slightest degree subservient to a boss, as my record has made perfectly clear. If elected governor I will maintain this rec-

"Sixth.-In the last four years scores have been created in this state. Hundreds of dishonest and incompetent men have been appointed to office. The civil service laws have been violated. If elected governor I shall advocate the abolition of every unnecessary office and weed out every disbonest and incompetent public servant.

"Seventh .- The present primary law is clumsy, inefficient and expensive. 1 will advocate such changes in it as will accomplish the purpose for which it was created."

CLAIMS SET FORTH.

Governorship Views of New York Evening Globe, an Independent Republican Paper.

Engrossment with the war has led the newspapers and the public to neglect, almost to the point of forgetting. the fall election and the approaching primaries. It is high time for intelligent citizens to bestir themselves to end this condition of indifference. There is grave danger that sinister political elements will take advantage of it to refasten their loosened hold and so intrench themselves as to set back for another ten years the realization of good government. The old struggle is still on-the struggle over whether there is to be public or private ownership of the government. The contract hunters and graft seekers that infest the organizations of all parties are rallying their scattered forces and hope, while the public's attention is in other directions. to recapture what they have lost. The good citizenship of the state must shake off its torpor.

Fortunately what should be done is plain, and most fortunately a candidacy for the governorship is presented about which good citizenship can center. This candidacy is that of Charles S. Whitman, whose achievements in the cause of good government are household knowledge through the length and the breadth of the land. Mr. Whitman has made such a record in the district attorney's office as to warrant the statement that he has done more to break the connection between crime and politics than any other man of his generation. He is no experiment. If called to a field of larger influence no one has a right to doubt many others that might be named, but he has the precious gift of efficiency. He gets there. He strikes, and be strikes hard. Mr. Whitman is entirfed to the sapport of every Republican who wants to see his party restored to its old standard and to the sympathetic aid of every genuine Progressive and every independent Democrat who wants to see destruction of the Murphy sys-

It is the bounden duty of every enrolled voter who is worthy of the name "citizen" to vote in the primary on Monday, Sept. 28.

This year the primary law is sperative for the first time in New York state. The party's chaise as candidate for governer will be the man who reosives the largest number of votes in the party's primary.

If you believe that the interests of the Republican party and of the state at large can best be conserved by Charles & Whitman it is your duty to yourself as an enrolled Republicen and to Mr. Whitman to mast your vote for him in the primary on Sept. 28.

HIS PLATFORM Dealing With Those Who Say "Not Now"

By REV. HOWARD W. POPE Superintendent of Men

TEXT-For he saith, behold, now is the accepted time; behold, now is the day of salvation. II Cor. 6:2.

Let us consider first the cause and then the cure. Perhaps there is some habit which must be abandoned, or some companion who must be dropped, or some unpleasant duly which must be done. It may be only the natural inertia of the soul which from grappling with a subject so serious, but more some secret sin there is which the man is unwilling to abandon. The real cause is that the man is not willing to surrender his will of unnecessary offices and commissions to God. He wants his own way, and though he flatters himself that he will yield to Gcd by and by, he is not willing to do it now.

Whatever the cause, the cure is always the same-God's Word. Ask the man by whom he expects to be saved, if he is ever saved. He will answer, "God alone can save me." Emphasize that thought by having him read aloud John 6:44, "No man can come to me, except the Father which sent me, draw him." Call his attention to God's Command.

Acts 17:30, God "now commandeth all men everywhere to repent." After he has read the verse ask him if God has a right to make such a command. Ask him if he, who is dependent on God for salvation, has the audacity to refuse to obey this plain command. Show him the consequences of such a refusal. Proverbs 1:24, 25, 26, 28, "Because I have called, and ye refused, I have stretched out my hand, and no man regarded; I also will laugh at your calamity; I will mock when your fear cometh; then shall they call upon me, but I will not answer; they shall seek me early, but they shall not find

II Cor. 6:2, "Behold, now is the acepted time; behold, now is the day of salvation." Show him that God's time is the best time, and the only sure time. There is no certainty that te will be accepted tomorrow, but there is a positive promise for today Make him realize that the habit of putting off duty will grow constantly stronger, and that ten years from now he will be less disposed to repent than he is today. Show him that there must be some moment of definite surrender to God, and that no lapse of time will make that surrender any easier. Indeed, it will grow harder as the years pass by, and if he puts it off, the chances are that he will never do it. Proverbs 27:1, "Boast not thyself of tomorrow, for thou knowest not what a day may bring forth." Show him that in putting off repentance he is reckening upon the continuance of life which is entirely uncertain. Remember that Satan is persuading him in his subtle way to wait a little longer. The old serpent does not dare suggest that he never repent, or even that he put it off a long time, but he canningly says, "Not now." Occasionally a soul may be won by taking the devil's side of the argument, and pleading his cause so boldly that the absurdity of his reasoning is apparent. A friend of mine at a Northfield conference was asked to speak to a young man with whom many had labored in vain. Meeting him alone one day, he said to him, "These people in the hotel are bothering you a good deal on the subject of religion, are they not?" The man blushed and admitted that he had been somewhat antoyed. Then followed a conversation something like this:

"You don't need to give any thought to this matter for a long time yet. tem. No other cardidate of his party You had better put it off for at least a couple of years, don't you think so?" "No, I don't suppose it is entirely safe, for I might die in one year." "Sure enough, you might. Well, put it off six months. Are you willing to do that?" . The young man hesitated. "Call it three months. Will you promise not to think of it for promise that." "Why not?" "Because I might die in three months," "Will week? That is safe enough, isn't it?" URGES PLANTING OF TREES

Baltimore Newspaper Points Out How Much They Add to Appearance of City.

Baltimore can well approve of the movement for more city tree planting, launched by the Women's Civic league. There is no doubt other cities have paid more attention than has this to the subject, but it is one in which all who are working for a more attractive as well as for a larger and more prosperous city can well consider. While good care is taken of the trees in city parks and squares, those along the street curbs are sadly neglected, allowed to die and then rarely replaced. Yet it is no great task to make a tree grow along the sidewalk. A little careful trimming, a loosening of the earth at the roots now and then, a watch for bugs and berers, that's about all if the tree be strong and healthy when it is put in the ground. Of course, now and then an accident will happen and the tree be unrooted or broken by a runaway horse or a careless driver, but even then it can be easily replaced and when young a box placed around it, so as to shield it from harm.

Let us hope that this movement will succeed. A thoroughfare with handsome, healthy trees on either side is a city beauty spot and a valuable city asset. Land is too valuable in a metropolis to allow the creation and maintenance of large lawns, except in suburban districts, but there is plenty of room for trees, even in streets on which traffic is very heavy.

Arbor day, established to encourage tree-planting, has amounted to little in Baltimore, outside of the schoolhouse program, but now it can be put to practical use for civic betterment and civic beauty. Plant a few now and you will be surprised at the result.-Baltimore American.

CHILDREN AID GOOD WORK

Even the Smallest Show Enthusiasm In the Effort to Keep National Capital Attractive.

To turn the waste places of the city, the vacant lots and unsightly lawns, into beautiful gardens filled with blooming flowers and clinging vines is the object of the People's Gardens of Washington, and in the report for the past year, which has just been prepared, what has been accomplished along these lines is set forth. The building up of recreation gardens for the people of a neighborhood, the beautification of parkings and back yards of the city and general stimulation of interest in landscape gardening have been gone into with enthusiasm by the workers of the association and their labors have shown surprising re-

One of the noticeable facts concerning the work is that a major portion was done during the past year by little children. And it is in building up the gardening inclinations of the little one that the elders are becoming much interested and lending a hand themselves. The children, having acquired a taste for gardening, are the ones who are to make the capital beautiful in the years to come. It will fall upon them to enlarge the park spaces, preserve the trees and encourage the planting of dooryard flowers and flowering shrubs. The children have taken up the gardening idea as they would take up a new game. They have shown unusual thoroughness and the utmost joy in their work, and even better results are expected from their efforts during the spring and summer

Good Plan for Small Town. Villages and small towns in all parts of the United States would do well to follow the example of Williamstown, Mass. There the town council has adopted a scheme proposed by President Garfield of Williams college, and providing that there shall be planted annually along the roadside of the town a number of trees that shall be valuable for commercial as well as ornamental purposes. President Garfield, it seems, derived his idea from years." "That is true. Well, put it off France, where the plan has been carried out successfully and has been found to be decidedly worth while.

Conditions vary in different towns and villages of course, and in some a scheme of this sort might be undesirable or impracticable. These, however, are the exceptions, and for a majority of our smaller communities three months?" "I wouldn't like to adoption of Dr. Garfield's plan would be an excellent thing. One must wait a long time, it is true, before the you promise not to think of it for a trees thus planted become valuable commercially, and it may be that the public fund would never be swelled very largely by income derived from them. Yet if in France that income is found to be sufficiently large to take care of the town's most beautiful or naments, its trees, and in addition of rich milk, salt and pepper to taste your heart to the Lord now?" And he leave something over for other pur and serve in a tureen poured over poses, there seems to be no good ressom why the same thing should not be true in this country.

WHAT TO DO WITH OLD JELLY,

As few people care to take over to another year the old jelly, and as spring and summer days bring fresh fruit so much more acceptable, it may be wise to record a few ways of disposing of the old jelly.

For a drink one may always find a use for felly, as a few teaspoonfuls of jelly, dissolved in a pitcher of water, sweetened, and a bit of lemon juice added, makes a most refreshing beverage. Ice and mineral water, of course, enhance the palatability of the drink.

A most delightful dessert may be made from a glass of jelly and the white of an egg beaten together until firm. Served in sherbet cups with a custard or with whipped cream. Although this is a simple dessert, it always seems very rich.

The old jellies, because somewhat dry and dark, will make ideal filling for fritters or doughnuts, rolled griddle cakes and such delicacies. Of course the finer the jelly the finer the dish, prepared with its accompaniment. For pudding sauces jelly lends itself well, usually the addition of a bit of flavor, like lemon peel or orange peel, improves the flavor. For Sunday night lunch jelly and cream whipped together and served on buttered toast makes a nice supper

Jelly and Cream Pie.-Bake a rich shell for a pie and fill it with a layer of jelly with sweetened whipped cream spread over the top. Then it wanted very nice a meringue may be put on top and slightly browned in a quick oven.

The old-fashioned tarts that grandmother used to make are still the delight of the child's heart. They are simply rich pastry cut in circles and matched with one which has the center removed like a doughnut. When these are baked and a bit of bright colored jelly is placed on one, covered with the one with the hole in the center, the jelly stands up like a ruby jewel and tastes as good as it looks.

Hot popovers cut open, buttered and a teaspoonful of jelly put into the center, make a pleasant little cake for children.

Creamed Lamb With Peas.-Cut out rounds of bread, toast them and dip the edges in boiling salted water, then spread with butter. Melt two tablespoonfuls of butter, cook this in two of flour; add a fourth of a teaspoonful each of salt and paprika, then gradually stir in a cup of rich milk and stir until the sauce thickens. When ready to serve, add a cup and a quarter of cooked lamb cut in bits. Dispose this on the rounds of bread and serve hot. Lamb Souffic-Melt three teaspoonfuls of butter, cook in it a slice of onion and half of a green pepper until the vegetables are yellow, add two tablespoonfuls of flour, half a teaspoonful each of salt and paprika, and cook until foamy, then stir in gradually a half cup of rich milk or cream and a half cup of lamb broth, stir until the sauce is smooth, then add a half cupful of fine bread crumbs. Beat the yolks of three eggs and add, remove from the fire and stir in a pint of finely chopped cooked lamb, lastly fold in the whites of three eggs beaten stiff. Turn into a buttered dish and bake in a moderate oven until firm. This will serve six to eight people.

A SOLAR ECLIPSE.

When Totality Occurs Nature Takes on an Awesome Aspect. A total eclipse of the sun is a wonderful sight. Where the eclipse is but partial the disk of the moon will creep across the face of the sun little by little, but will never completely obscure the orb. But where "totality" occurs the sun at a given moment will be entirely obliterated and the inhabitants of the regions across which the black band will stretch will perceive the most wonderful phenomenon known to astronomers-the display of the "coruna" of the sun. Great waves of incandescent gas hundreds of thousands of miles long reaching out from the sun into the ether, will be perceived. The countryside will take on a sinister, night gray color, and tints of nature will pale and deaden as at twilight, the temperature will diminish sensibly, the birds, believing night has come, will cease their song and seek their nests. A person who has never seen this strange manifestation of nature cannot form any idea of its awesome aspect.

This eclipse is a recurring phonomenon. At the end of every period of eighteen years and eleven days the moon comes between the earth and the sun at just such an angle that the sun's light is completely shut off from a portion of the world and partially shut off from a much larger part --New York World.

A BILLION DOLLARS.

The Time It Would Take an Expert to

I wonder if we realize when we talk of a billion dollars what an enormous sum of money it means? We all know how rapidly an expert counter of coins will manipulate them. You can searcely follow the motion of his fingers as he shifts the coins from one pile to another and counts them. The treasury experts will court 4.000 silver dollars in an hour and keep it up all day long, but that is their limit. Working eight hours a day, then, an expert counter of coins will count 32 .-000 silver dollars in a day, but how long will it take him at that rate to count $1,000,000? Thirty-one days, But that is only the beginning of the measurements of great figures, for if this same man were to go on counting silver dollars at the same rate of speed for ten years he would find that he had only counted 100,000,000 of them and that to count $1,000,000,000 would require 102 years of steady work at the rate of eight hours a day during every working day of every one of the 102 years.-O. P. Austin, Former Chief of Bureau of Statistics.

Wind and the Sun.

Wind does not always go down with the sun, but may blow from high to low after sunset. If wind starts to fill up a low pressure area before sunset it is liable to keep pouring in until it is filled and equilibrium restored. If wind stops exactly at instant of sunset one may rest assured that the area of barometrical depression is filled, If wind blows from sea to land by day it may stop at sunset and reverse direction. If it does the cause is that at sunrise the sun's radiant energy heats the land more than it does the water. The land warms the air, increases its rarity, and it rises, producing a lower pressure area, and cooler air from over the ocean rushes in to fill it. After sunset land cools in less time than the water, and the direction of flow is reversed. But this may not always occur. Local causes, as fog. saturation of air, electrical conditions and others may prevent.—New York Journal.

Father of the Dreadnought.

To the late Admiral Cuniberti, member of the Italian naval engineering staff, is due the credit of having suggested the modern Dreadnought. It was he, also, who suggested the modtype of scout, and he was one of the first to study the question of the application of liquid fuel to marine bollers. It was his influence which led to the adoption of this fuel in the Italan torpedo boat service.

UNSOLVED MYSTERIES.

Such as Radium, the Human Brain and the Electric Fluid.

Alexander Graham Bell was once asked if he understood precisely how a telephone conveyed the sound of a human voice. His answer was: "No. I only know what is done. I do not know how it is accomplished."

One is reminded of Lord Kelvin's remark to some of his professional colleagues near the close of his brilliant career. It will be recalled that Bell gave to Kelvin the instruments used in the first demonstration of telephony at the Philadelphia Centennial in 1876. It was many years later that Kelvin said that he knew no more as to the nature of electricity than he knew when he first began to work with it.

From Franklin to Edison master minds among us have done wonderful things with cells and dynamos, generators and transformers, directing the interplay of dreadful elemental forces as inscrutable as they are majestic. And still we do not know what electricity is.

A woman finds that tons and tons of a certain ore produce a fraction of a gram of radium, and we go to work with it and behold the portentous results it achieves, but we do not know what it is.

A congregation of sapient alienists at a trial gives expert testimony, but no man among them knows what his own brain is nor how it gives instantaneous directions to the foot and the hand. Mystery is at the very root of life and rules it to the end. Whatever way we turn we find the abyss unplumbed, the unfathomed darkness. How ridiculous is our presumption of knowledge before so vast an ignorance!-Philadelphia Ledger.

SHOES SPOIL OUR FEET.

That Is Why So Few Persons Have

Perfect Pedal Extremities. A person with normal feet is very difficult to find. In fact, the doctors inform us that foot trouble is endemic in the United States, as well as in every enlightened country on the globe. The cause of this condition and the vast suffering which it entails is the unhygienic shoe.

A thousand Porto Ricans whose feet had never been shod were examined. Not a single diseased or deformed foot was found among them. A San Francisco surgeon, in commenting on this fact, declares that among a thousand shoe wearing Americans there is hardly one with normal feet.

The trouble is that the vast majority of our shoes are improperly constructed. The fashionable shoe seems built to force the foot into shapes which, however slightly, are nevertheless abnormal. That worn by the masses is equally inimical to foot health, for the reason that it is constructed with very little reference to the lines of the foot and without effort to adjust it to the normal movements of that member.

The medical man presents the moccasin as the most wholesome foot covering yet devised, but very few are sanguine enough to hope that fashion will permit its general use. Next to the moccasin, so we are told, is the shoe that not only permits the foot to perform its normal functions unimpeded, but strengthens it when in use. This is the shoe that, instead of pinch ing the foot or forcing it into abnormal shapes or positions, actually fits it-Boston Herald.

How Canada Got Its Name.

The origin of the name Canada is strange enough. The Spaniards visited that country previous to the French and made particular search for gold and silver, and, finding none, they of ten said among themselves, "Aca nada." meaning "There is nothing here." The Indians, who watched closely, learned on the French arrived, and the Indians, who wanted none of their company and supposed they had come on the same errand as the Spanish, were desirous to inform them in the Spanish sen tence "Aca nada." The French, who knew as little of the Spanish language recurring sound was the name of the country and ultimately christened it Canada, which it has borne ever since.

During a trial in Tipperary Curran made a scathing attack on a land agent. Two days later an enraged gentleman burst into his bedroom in Dublin before the counsellor was out of bed and, flourishing a horse whip savagely, said:

"Sir, I am the gentleman you insulted in the courthouse in Clonmel in the presence of the whole county and I'm here to thrash you soundly."

And he turned over on his other side this sentence and its meaning. Later The agent laughed and the counsellor laughed, and he who came to whip stayed to dine and the pair parted the best of friends.

The members of the Philathea class are planning a Harvest service at the church, on Sunday, Oct. 11 During the intervening time the young ladies will wait upon you to see what you will be willing to donate to them for this purpose. Such things as pumpkins, corn in shock, buck wheat, apples, potatoes, winter vegetables, or fall crops of any sort will be acceptable It is the plan to take all these things to the church where they are to be used in decorating on Sunday, and then the early part of the following week are to be sold at auction. An especial service is to be held at the church on this Sunday. Please be thinking how much you will donate to the young ladies and so help them in their laudable endeavor to raise some money.

KITCHEN SINKS.

They Are Low Yet Because They Had to Be Low Originally.

In a recent issue of the Survey the question why kitchen sinks have been made so low was discussed. No one seemed able to explain. Finally a certain maker discovered that the original sinks were made when the washing of dishes and other sink work was done in wooden tubs with high sides. Such a tub when used in a high sink came up too far, so the sink was made ow. Furthermore, as running water and fixed faucets had not long been made, the tub had to be lifted out of the sink and the lower the sink the lighter the lift.

Through improvements in faucets, dishpans and other accessories of kitchen sinks have been made no one has seemed to realize that the sink could be improved by raising. So women were-und arr-compelled to endure discomfort when doing their ordinary household work.

"There may be a certain percentage of luconvenience to be reached before the human mind greeps the fact that something must be altered," remarks the Journal of the American Medical Murderous New Weapons of Battle Now In Use.

DEATH DEALING "GRENADES"

One Modernized Type Fired From a Howitzer Throws Two Pound Missile 300 Yards-Explode on Contact, Scattering 215 Bullets Over a Hundred Square Yards.

At the siege of Port Arthur the Japanese made such effective use of improvised hand grenades that the attention of military experts was attracted. with the result that this ancient weapon has also been modernized. One type of modern hand grenade, the Aasen, weighs one kilogram and contains 190 bullets. As these fly in all directions, says the New York Even ing World, it can only be used from under cover. Another form of the grenade can be fired from a howitzer weighing about twenty-four pounds. which can be carried in a case like a rifle. It throws a murderous missile weighing about two pounds to a distance of 300 yards. It explodes on contact, scattering 215 bullets over an area of about 100 square yards. Still another type of this so called grenade can be fired, with the aid of a stick thrust into a rifle barrel, to a distance of 400 yards.

Most deadly of all is the mine grenade, weighing eight pounds and containing 400 large bullets. This is buried a few inches under ground When an enemy is over the mine the touch of an electric button causes it to spring out of the ground until it is checked by a chain at a height of a yard above the surface, when it explodes, mowing down every man in Heavy Shells and Their Targets. The Belgian resistance at Liege has drawn public attention to modern for tresses and their defense. Heavy shells fired from long ranges will penetrate as much as twenty feet of sand, which offers more resistance than other soils. Moreover, a shell which explodes after It has penetrated soil will cause more damage than if it explodes in the air on account of the confinement of the earth it has penetrated. Walls exposed to fire are therefore made of from five to ten feet of concrete, sometimes reenforced with steel. Over these there are a few inches of dirt as a bed for grass so that the fortification may be concealed.

In practically every European country either turrets or iron and steel revolving eupolas containing guns such as those used at Liege are in use.

The value of night attacks was emphasized in the Russian-Japanese war, with the result that troops have been specially drilled in this form of operation and numerous devices for offense and defense have been invented. One of these is the new portable searchlight, with which all European armies are provided to some extent at least. These consist of a generator driven by a gasoline engine mounted on an automobile. These are especially relied upon for protection in case of attack by a dirigible and also in attacks on the ground.

Parachute Lights.

In the absence of a searchlight a force may be equipped with parachute lights, a sort of grenade weighing fourteen ounces, which, with the aid of a firing stick, can be shot from a rifle to a distance of 50 to 100 yards, where it will float in the air and burn brilliantly for a half to three-quarters of a minute. A larger form of parachute light, fired from a field gun with a small charge of powder, floats in the air, giving a dazzling light for several minutes.

A phase of war of interest to the military expert is the fact that an American invention, the gun silencer, devised by Hiram Percy Maxim of Hartford, will be given a thorough trial. Faulkner's Insomnia

Quickly Cured When Love Became the Physician

By ELIZABETH NEWPORT HEPBURN Copyright by Frank A. Munsey Co.

Faulkner was walking doggedly up town. The doctor had said four miles a day-possibly on the theory that a. man thoroughly tired in body is less apt to work his brain in the small hours of the night, when all wise men prepare themselves for the coming day by the blessed business of sleep.

For several months Faulkner had been behaving in this absurd fashion. working all day and staying awake all

As he swung now into Broadway the question which for months had stung and tortured him stung and tortured him anew.

When a man has once made a failure of his life, Faulkner asked himself, how is he to know that he will not repeat the performance? Faulkner knew himself to be in love with Mary Hart-he wanted to marry Mary Hart But how in high heaven was he to know whether Mary loved him?

Obviously he might ask her to marry him, and she might accept. But how was he to be sure that she cared, as he cared, as he had believed that Helen cared long ago? After all, was he not the most gullible man on earth where women were concerned?

Moreover, he was successful, eminently eligible and too deeply committed to middle age to be marrying a charming young woman-except for this very eligibility.

There was no use conjuring up Mary Hart's honest smile, her clear, kind eyes, her reputation for sincerity. Long ago he had been made a fool of by one woman, a woman who had married him and lived with him, and finally died under his roof without ever having loved him. He had been cheated once, and he had no faith in his own acumen, his own rusted instincts.

At this stage of his reminiscence he found suddenly that he had been caught in the tide of young girls just emerging from the theaters, where they had been reveling in various matinee performances. He was brought back to the immediate present by a pressure upon his arm and a laughing. breathless voice which proclaimed dis-

ly little air which nonplused the stupid officer, whom Faulkner's obvious pleasure, and his still more obvious respectability, had convicted of a particularly beinous blunder. The policeman swung back into the crowd, and Faulkner felt himself transferred from a world of self distrust, of black doubt, to a firm, solid earth, all radiance and sunshine and youth. Dorothy Lannard clung to his arm, talking excitedly. She plunged into the depths t her own problem with the frank imben of petted girlhood and e un' fout confidence in her corner de la la transferstand and dreary spinsters that make you want to cry for their lost youth!"

Faulkner laughed and guided her into a cross street where her eagerness would be less conspicuous.

"What an absurd infant you are, Dorothy! As if you did not act as you see fit, whatever your mother or your poor bullyragged guardian may suggest." She shook her head petulantly.

"Fancy mother 'suggesting'! She al ways acts as if society and propriety and financial solidity were omnipotent gods and she their high priestess: My religion is knowing how to love and how to be happy! And I'm going to marry Jack, permission or no permission, money or no money, the very day I come of age! Then we'll have my thousand a year, anyhow-we can't starve-and Mary Hart will give us supper Sunday nights, and we'll do without a maid, or even a general nouseworker!"

Faulkner gave a fatherly gruntquite conscious that, unobserved by the girl, he was flushing hotly at the name of the lady of his dreams.

"What would Miss Hart say to such rebellious sentiments and such a mad plan of campaign?" he asked, trying to make his tone severe and meeting with indifferent success.

"Oh, Mary would scold, of courseat the things I say, but she will approve of the things I do. She believes there is nothing in the world so awful as doing what mamma would likemarrying for things! She's had plenty of chances herself, but she would rather stay an old maid forever and ever!"

"I thought," said Faulkner, "that un married women nowadays were not 'old maids,' but 'bachelor girls.' "

"Mary says a bachelor girl has a caeer or a fortune and that she, having neither, is just plain old maid. But I think that playing big sister to Jack and making a splendid college bred man of him so that he is now a real lawyer in your office is career enough for any woman! She's only eight years older than Jack, too-and I've told her that he is just to go on loving her more and more, even after he has me!"

Faulkner chuckled at the youngster's air of matronly comprehension and generosity; he patted the little hand lying on his arm.

"I'll do what I can for your Jack. my dear. And I have been consider ing the advisability of taking some young blood into the law firm-possibly a little arrangement like that might help resign your mother to the inevitable."

him, and they swam suddenly in tears Despite the childish face, she suddenly seemed a woman, passionate, competent, exquisitely full of promise. "Gnardy, you are a plumb archangel! And you will make Mary almost as happy as you make us. But I can't wait-I must get on the sub and rush home.' Faulkner retained her arm for a moment. He looked absurdly shy, but he asked his question as boldly as he could: "Child-you're young, to be so confident! How do you know you have found the real thing? How can you be so sure, not only of yourself, but of Jack?"

She turned an astonished face to his. then her young vision seemed to pierce the cause of his middle aged perplexity; she had beard the tragedy of his marriage to a woman selfish, hard, untrustworthy-a woman at the time of her marriage in love with another man.

"I see what you mean, guardy, When lawyers are always being asked to untie matrimonial tangles-when people are wanting every day to get unmarried--I don't believe I was sure of Jack, anyway, until one day more than two years ago. You know, guardy, how men hate to make spectacles of themselves. I guess all people as reserved as Jack and Mary loathe being made conspicuous. It was at the football game; Jack got hurt; I saw them carrying him off on a stretcher. and I was horribly frightened. We were just engaged-and I made an idlot of myself. I ran down through the crowd and insisted upon being allowed to go to him; of course, all the boys understood. When he came to there I was, crying like mad, and here were a lot of the men and the doctor. The instant he had his eyes open, of course, he saw what a holy show I had made of myself-and he not a bit dead! But he just laughed up at me, kind of snapped his fingers at the whole gang, and ignored the doctor. He said out loud: "'I'm all right, darling'-just as if 'darling' were my Christian name." Faulkner did not smile. Somehow be saw, as the girl had recognized at the time, how very much this little speech had meant, coming from that big, unsentimental, virile youth, Jack For an instant the girl snuggled a bare hand against Faulkner's, and words seemed to hover on her lips, but were not spoken.

Then she left him with one quick glance and "Goodby, guardy-good luck to you," as she sprinted boyishly for the nearest subway station. Faulkner understood that she meant to telephone her tidings to Jack at the earliest possible moment.

Half an hour later Faulkner passed the great bronze figures of the St. Gaudens group in the park with only a cursory glance, though he loved it as he loved all things which seemed to him at once virile and beautiful.

What he wanted was an Insight into the heart of a woman-an insight beyoud question-and, even us be thought of Mary Hart with thrilled pulses and a new sense of hope, born f Dorothy's young optimism, he sudlenty saw Mary berself, a little abend treet. Faulkner plunged into a melee of traffic just as the policeman blew his whistle. His knowledge of danger came only with the persistent tooting of a strident horn; then, as he drew back to escape the plunging of a frightened horse, a great touring car bore down upon him with the relent less brutality of fate. He was dragged upon the ground. the tearing, rending sensations as of some horrible rack should have brought him merciful oblivion. But consciousness persisted, and above the clamor of men's voices he heard a woman's sharp scream. He felt himself torn from the clutch of the juggernaut and half dragged, half carried to the sidewalk. Presently he was lying upon the asphalt and a woman kneeling beside him, a woman with a deathly face and great burning eyes.

It was certainly Mary Hart-but she might be merely frightened-the look m her eyes pity! Then ill, wounded. suffering though he was, joy burned through him. For this Mary was no gentle, kind, impersonal. was a woman torn with terror, which only comes to those who face danger to the well beloved. Faulkner knew the dizzving surprise of her kiss on his lips, and then at last he fainted. Mary Hart heard a newsboy's shrill explanation to the tali policeman who towered above the two prone figures. "He's her man, orf'cer. I seed him chasin' her acrost the street just as the other cop blew his whistle. And she turned and saw him and ran back after him and 'most got hit by the devii wagon herself."

Half an hour later a big, competent young surgeon was looking curiously at Mary Hart. She was certainly handsome, although in no obvious or conspicuous fashion, but what interested him much more than her beauty was the fact that she had entirely forgotten herself. She would be quite capable of going home through the streets with that smear of dust and blood across her face.

"Is he going to die?" The young doctor's voice was full of cheerful scorn. "Well, Miss Hart, if I couldn't pull a patient through a few trifles like a dislocated shoulder and a cut forehead 1 would resign my job! On the contrary. instead of dying he is quite conscious. and he sends you a message.'

Miss Hart blushed divinely-she remembered that impetuous kiss, but she did not repent.

"The message, doctor?" she demanded coolly, and the interne waited for the explosion of his bomb with an imp ish, small boy delight.

"He wants to know just when you will marry him?"

This time Mary did not flush at all. The doctor, nonplused, wondered whether she often received proposals of marriage by proxy. But he decided that his patient had most discriminating taste.

Mary Hart deliberately wiped off her cheek with a bandkerchief and looked at the doctor with a flicker of laughter in her eyes.

"Kindly tell him, doctor, that I shall marry him the day after he leaves the hospital! And please say to him that I detest waiting!"

And when the house surgeon conveyed this message to Faulkner that battered and bandaged gentleman smiled, turned his head on his pillow and straightway went to sleep and slept the whole night through for the first time in three months.

SMALLPOX AND VACCINATION

PUBLIC HEALTH HINTS

Prepared Each Week For the Readers of This Newspaper by the New York State Department of Health.

THE opening of the school term involves the necessary enforcement of the state law requiring all public SCHOOL CHILDREN to be vaccinated.

In a recent three column statement of the Anti-Vaccination League of America appearing in many papers the bulletins of the State Department of Health (copies of which may be obtained by writing to the department at Albany) are attacked for teaching that cleanliness and general sanitation will not check smallpox and that vaccination is the only safe and effective method of preventing this disease. Since the germs of smallpox pass directly from person to person and not indirectly by means of sewage or water or food, and since practically all unvaccinated persons contract the disease when exposed to it, it is unforunately true that general sanitation has NO EFFECT upon its spread. Absolute isolation or the shutting up of cases of smallpox so that they cannot infect others is only possible when all attendants are protected by vaccination, and it is never wholly effective because a smallpox case is likely to infect other people before it is detected and isolated.

The chief arguments of the anti-vaccinationists are to the effect that smallpox is not a very serious disease and that, indeed, as they state, vaccination is more to be feared than smallpox. The most recent statement of the anti-vaccinationists, for example, quotes with triumph the fact that the last report of the registrar general for England reports nine deaths from smallpox and ten from vaccination.

The answer to this is that by no means all deaths which HAPPEN TO FOLLOW vaccination are CAUSED BY vaccination. It is true that in very rare cases sickness and even death may result from scratching of a vaccination or other carelessness by which dirt and accompanying germs are rubbed into the vaccinated surface. There is a similar danger from any scratch on the skin. In many cases the deaths reported as due to vaccination have not even this indirect connection with it. There are perhaps a million people a year vaccinated in England, and illness of some sort is sure to occur in many persons soon afterward.

The anti-vaccination circular quotes four of the English deaths recorded under "Vaccinia" and says "that means a direct infection from the virus." Yet the report of the registrar general itself specifically states that two of these four deaths were really due to PNEUMONIA. Again, the anti-vaccination circular cites three people by name as having died from the effects of vaccination at Niagara Falls. The reports of the attending physicians on file at Albany show that of these people Bernard Moran died of heart disease, Kate W. Hull died of Bright's disease and John George Chambers died of inflammation of the lungs following septic sore throat, NOT ONE OF THE DEATHS BEING REMOTELY CONNECTED with vaccination.

The anti-vaccination circular states that in the Niagara Falls epi-Including New Home, Singer, Domestic, White, New demic last year there were 400 cases of smallpox with one death and 19,000 vaccinations with three deaths. As pointed out above, neither of the three deaths mentioned had anything to do with vaccination. If the 19,000 persons protected by vaccination had had smallpox instead and the ratio of one death to 400 cases had been maintained (and this is a very low death rate for smallpox, many outbreaks showing 25 per cent of fatal results) there would have been not three deaths, but forty-

The facts are that in accordance with a federal law vaccine virus must be prepared with most careful PRECAUTIONS under the supervision of the United States Public Health Service, and there is NO DANGER whatever to a normal person from vaccination if the vaccinated place receives proper care; that general vaccination and re-vaccination is a SAFE AND EFFECTIVE protection-against a serious disease and the only reliable preventive at our disposal; that wherever vaccination is neglected smallpox breaks out, as it did at Niagara Falls last year, and that the state law requiring the vaccination of all public school children deserves the active support of all right minded

Communicable Diseases of School Children

PUBLIC HEALTH HINTS

Prepared Each Week For the Readers of This Newspaper by the New York State Department of Health.

AS the children go back to school and mix with each other in the classroom and on the playground the chance of spreading certain diseases is greatly increased, and each year diphtheria, measles and scarlet fever show a SHARP RISE in October.

These diseases are all serious ones, even measles. The chance of getting well is, of course, much better for a child who has measles than for a child who has typhoid fever, but so many more children have measles than typhoid that the actual NUMBER OF DEATHS is greater for the disease which many people think a harmless one. Last year there were 837 deaths in this state from scarlet fever, 1,018 from typhoid fever and 1,071 from measles. Very often, even when a child seems to get well from these diseases, they leave defects of sight or hearing which cripple it in after life.

One difficulty about these diseases is that they often begin very mildly, so that no one knows that anything serious is wrong. Measles starts like a simple COLD IN THE HEAD; scarlet fever or dipheral scarlet fev theria sometimes like a simple SORE THROAT, so that the child goes to school and in the afternoon plays with other children just as if it were well. Yet it is precisely at this early stage that these diseases are MOST CONTAGIOUS. Dr. Anderson, the head of the Hygienic Laboratory in Washington, has shown that the germ of measles is more likely to spread in the early stage, when there are no symptoms except a running nose, than later, when fever has developed and the rash broken out.

The only way to stop the spread of these diseases is to watch carefully every COLD or SORE THROAT in a child. If a child is unwell in any way it should not be allowed to go to school without the special consent of the family physician or the school physician or the

Above all, the child who seems to be "coming down" with any disease, however mild, should be kept away from infants and young children. There is no more TERRIBLE MISTAKE than the theory that "the children must have these diseases some time and the sooner the better." The danger of a fatal result from measles or scarlet fever is TEN OR TWENTY TIMES as great with children less than two years old as it is with children OVER FIVE. Every year for which the infection can be put off is so much gained, for it means that the attack will be so much less serious.

Keep children with "colds" and "sore throats" out of school. Keep them away from their young brothers and sisters. Teach them not to COUGH or SNEEZE except in a HANDKERCHIEF, not to put things into their mouths that other people may handle, not to infect food by touching it or coughing over it, and there will soon be no one so mistaken as to say "every child must have them."

The house was one of the most attractive and cozy little bungalows that I was ever in, but was very typical of the West. The interior was finished in redwood, with built-in furniture of all kinds. When it was chilly we built a fire in the fireplace. The floor was covered with beautiful skins of coyotes, killed in the mountains, and a mammoth | dense fog filled the place when I was bear skin. The view from the front windows over the bay of San Francisco was magnificent. We were just opposte the Golden Gate and about three miles from the bay, although it did not look to be more than a ten minutes' walk. On one side the peninsula on which San Francisco is located jutted out into the bay on the right, some mountains, of which Mt. Tamalpais is the highest, seemed to rise abruptly from the bay. There are a number of mountain islands in the bay, on which naval stations are located. The sunsets on the water and on the mountains were grand; and the evening scene, with the myraids of lights in the cities surrounding the bay glittering like so many diamonds, often claimed my attention after dinner until Prof. Mulford issued a call for 500, and then we would all have a few games. During the two weeks that we stayed in this house I was tied up with the children most of the time, while Mr. and Mrs. Mulford were house hunting, furniture buying, servant hunting, house cleaning, etc. I was with them for a week at their own house on College Ave., and then I took a room by myself the first of August, at which time my office duties commenced. It was extremely hard to settle down to office work again. My mind was determined to wander through a dream of scenery and flowers, and I have just begun to get settled down and interested in work again after a three weeks' trial of it.

Mrs Nellie Mack Ramsey, who knew my father as a young man, heard that I was coming West and wrote to me to come there, as she thought that I was coming alone. I wrote and teld her the circumstances of the case, and after I arrived she sent her 17 year-old daughter over to Berkeley after me on Saturday afternoon and I stayed with them in Oakland until Sunday afternoon, when we went to San Francisco to visit some of their friends there. We did not have a chance to go around the city much, but the daughter, Ethelyn, and I went to the big park. Here I asked the names of so many trees and flowers that were new to me that I guess she began to think that nothing grew in the East, They have a nice home with an acre of ground, which is about all flowers, comprising in the neighborhood of 500 rose bushes. However, I would rather have it like this than the intense heat of the East. It is always good walking weather here, while there it is often so hot in the summer that one dreads to get out of doors.

An Early Underground Road. London's underground railway staof it, as he had to pay the chaffeur ac- tions are decidedly different from what they were when first built. A writer in London Society of May, 1863, describes Farringdon street station as resembling "a family vault on a large scale, with a series of hip baths introduced diagonally into it for light and ventilation. The bip baths are fined with glazed tiles, and to keep the resemblance to their prototype we find the leakage drained off at the end into a vessel something like a soap dish. A there, and, as the people waiting for the trains were seen wandering up and down the platform, one might have im agined them ghosts of the great unwashed condemned to linger in sight of those lavatories they neglected in their mortal life."

CURE FOR RESTLESS HENS.

Tip For Poultry Raisers on How to Keep Stock Contented.

A hungry hen is not a contented hen. I have seen flocks that one would think at first sight were a healthy, energetic bunch, but close observation soon showed they were rather a hungry bunch, a writer in Farm and Fireside states-not just a little hungry, but very hungry.

A flock that is fed at any old time is not a contented flock. If the hens are fed at a certain time every day they soon learn when it is, and they will never expect to be fed between times. During the time between feeds they will go about their business with contentment, scratching, dusting, laying, sunning themselves, but never standing around as near the direction the feed comes from as they can get, and clamoring for something to eat, probably eating but little when they get it. They will get the "piecing habit" just the same as the children if you teach it for contentment.

An injudicious method of turning the flock out to graze is unother very common cause of discontent. If you let them out all day one day and keep them shut up the next you will have a pretty serious case of restlessnes the second day. In fact, it will take them a week to get over their unrest and become satisfied with their lot. If you select a certain hour in the evening and let them out regularly at that hour you will have no trouble.

SUPPLEMENTARY PASTURES

Fall Grass Is Often Short, and It Is Well to Be Prepared.

What shall be done if drouth comes and the pastures fall down? It does not always happen that supplementary forage crops are necessary to help out. but so frequently is fall grass short that it is always well to be ready for any emergency. Even if the season is normal pastures often are thin, sometimes get quite dry and withered, when feed on the side can be profitably fed to the profit of the grower and to the better condition of the stock. Grow supplementary crops, and even though they are not called into use they always will prove acceptable and often as profitable as the crops in the main

One of the old standbys is millet. Even though sown very late and on rather poor land, it usually makes good growth and helps out immensely when fed green or as hay. As a farm crop millet has its place. If can be dropped in anywhere in the rotation and afterward the rotation picked up again with the regular crops in due order.

Cowpeas ought not to be neglected as a farm crop either. They ought to be grown even if not called on for summer forage. They, too, can be planted late in the summer. They grow very fast in warm weather and by the August dry spells are ready to be pastured or fed green, or if not called upon for these purposes a little later may be made into hay.

Rape is another excellent emergency crop for several seasons. Planted early, rape may be used as a spring pasture or later planted as a summer pasture or if planted in the summer as a fall pasture. It is excellent for poultry, cattle, sheep and swine.

On farms where clover and alfalfa flourish you always have an emer gency crop in either. Alfalfa can becut daily and fed green, or, taking its regular route, it may be cut for hay. In wheat regions where wheat is followed by timothy and clover there is usually a considerable pasture for a short time after the wheat is removed from the field.

All in all, two of the best emergency crops for des August pastures are corn and segs fore

And, if a dry time does not come, then, by being prepared with one or more of the crops suggested, no loss follows, because these can be turned right off in another direction, and they will be just sa profitable as though they had been required for the original purpose of a eding.-American Agriculturist.
