These appalling facts should warn us that after sickness, colds, over-be promptly and regularly used because tubercular germs thrive only in a weakened system.

The tested and proven value of Scott's Emulsion is recognized by strengthens the lungs and builds

Scott's Emulsion is used in tuber-

HOW TO BUILD HOTBEDS.

The Sunken Type Best For Raising Early Plants From Seed.

Of the several types of hotbeds in general use the sunken or pit type is, all things considered, the best for the raising of early plants from seed. This style of bed is constructed by excavating a pit six feet wide and two and one-half feet deep and as long as necessary to accommodate the number of 3 by 6 foot sash it is desired to use. The sides of the pit are boarded up with rough lumber nailed to posts which may be placed three feet or more apart. If some degree of permanency is desired good material will need to be used. Chestnut lumber is very serviceable and reasonably cheap; spruce comes next in point of durability and cheapness. The sides of the pit should be raised above the surface of the ground twenty inches at the back and twelve inches in front. This will provide ample pit it to the sash for shedding rain and also be of sufficient angle for good construction of the sun's rays and heat. Good sash should be used.

The location of the hotbed should be chosen where the natural drainage is good and, if possible, where there is a good windbreak at the north side. If a suitable sheltered spot is not available then a tight board fence six feet high and extending several feet beyond each end of the hotbed should be erected to break off the cold north winds. Without such a windbreak it will be almost impossible to raise early plants successfully in the hotbed. The windbreak should be about five feet away from the north side of the frame.

The heating material for the hotbed should be horse manure fresh from the stable, to which should be added, when accessible, one-half its bulk of forest leaves. If these are not available straw or hay may be used. The manure and added material is to be thoroughly mixed and formed into a conical heap to undergo fermentation. In the formation of this heap it should be trodden down in successive layers of a foot in depth until the heap is four feet or more in height. The base of the heap should be of sufficient diameter to insure good fermentation in the severest winter weather. All the material used for heating should be well dampened before putting it in the pile or the fermentation will not be evenly distributed. Care must be taken that no frozen material is put in the heap or fermentation will be slow and may greatly interfere with the operator's plans of an early sowing of seed.—Rural New Yorker.

Celery Storage.

Hotbeds and cold frames are quite satisfactory for storing celery. They may either be dug out deeper or have another set of boards on top to give the required height. The plants are set in the frame close together and then covered with boards lapped to shed rain. In very cold localities such frames are covered with sash, over which are mats covered with boards. Ventilation must be given on warm days by blocking up the sash. Celery is also stored satisfactorily in trenches, with the boards used in blanching nailed in V shape and placed over the top. If warm weather follows the troughs are blocked up to admit air. When frost comes a light furrow is thrown up along the boards and later manure is thrown over them, but this trench plan is usually adopted when the crop is to be sold early in the winter. Tops of celery should always be dry when it is stored, and some soil is lifted with the plants. It must be stored before hard freezing.

"GOING TO LAW."

When a written contract is made, do not allow the other party to carry it away. Have it made in duplicate, so that each party may keep a copy.

A rural carrier is required to travel his route in its entirety each day on which service is to be performed unless it is absolutely impossible for him to do so because of extraordinary weather or road conditions. Complaints of irregularities in the rural mail service when submitted to the postoffice bureau with all the facts in the case will receive careful consideration.

STORING VEGETABLES.

Store onions in a loft rather than in a cellar. In the latter they will sprout, to their injury. A few parsnips for winter use may be lifted and stored in sand in the cellar, but as freezing sweetens them it is best to leave many of them outdoors for later use. Store potatoes in bins one foot or eighteen inches deep, raised somewhat from the floor. Do not bruise or they will be likely to rot. Roots in the nature of salsify and horseradish freezing does not hurt, so the main lot may stay out where grown, but some should be dug and put in earth in the cellar for winter use. A few heads of cabbage may be kept, heads down, in a barrel in the cellar.

PROPAGATING SHRUBS.

Garden Work Is Never Over—it is a Continuous Performance.

When the late flowers have been cut down by the frosts it might be presumed that the time for garden activities is over. But as a fact, garden work is never over. It is one continuous performance that anticipates seasons by months, and to this early preparation is due the success of our summer gardens. When the tulips are put into the ground the winter is marching along fast, but there is work to be done just at this time which will bear fruit the next summer.

Just before the ground freezes hard cover up a piece with leaves or litter, or anything that will keep out the frost, for it is in this ground that any of the shrubs for which you may have a fancy are to be propagated.

Do you want hydrangeas or weigela or privet or dogwood or forsythia? If you care for these now is your chance to get a great many for almost nothing. With a sharp knife make as many cuttings as you want plants and throw in 20 per cent for good measure. Bury these cuttings all but two inches and by spring they will be young plants ready to plant out. This is what is called "sweating," or making little sticks into large bushes under the snow.

The question of getting stock is simple. No one would refuse you permission to take a few sticks off their hydrangeas or other shrubs in the middle of the winter. Stock is possible if one has a sharp knife. The handiest and most satisfactory way to proceed is as follows: Make a trench about fourteen inches deep, and long enough to accommodate all the cuttings you make. Make the cuttings a little longer than the trench is deep and put them in the trench either singly or in bundles, and pack the earth hard about them. Cover well with enough leaves to keep out the frost.

When the frost has gone out of the ground throw back the blanket from your cuttings and take them out. On the ends of fully 80 per cent of all you put in the ground will be found swollen rings, and from these will start the roots that are to make plants of the sticks. Now separate the cuttings and plant them in their proper locations, and it will not be long before you have the pleasure of seeing leaves sprout. This is profitable winter work, making possible a stock of choice things for which there is always use about a house.—Country Gentleman.

A HOMEMADE STERILIZER.

One For Canning Purposes Can Be Easily Made at Home.

In all methods of canning some form of sterilizer will be found very convenient. To be able to do with the things she already has on hand is an important item to the housewife. Almost every housewife has a tin clothes boiler, and this can be easily converted into a convenient sterilizing vat. The only things necessary are a tight fitting cover and a false bottom.

The false bottom is absolutely necessary in order to prevent the jars from coming in contact with the bottom of the sterilizing vat, causing them to break during the boiling. For this purpose an ordinary No. 16 wire netting of half inch mesh, which is cut to fit the bottom of the boiler, can be used. If the netting is not available thin pieces of wood or almost anything of this kind will answer the purpose. A patent open door steam cooker is even more convenient than a clothes boiler. If neither of these is available a deep saucepan or bucket tightly covered will answer the purpose.

Oat Straw For Feeding.

Good, bright oat straw is a very good substitute for hay for winter feeding. If there is not too much dust about it, horses will do well on it for the roughage part of their ration. Those who failed to stack their oat straw well this year will have reason to be sorry for it before spring.—Homestead.

SUBURBAN PLANNING.

The Suburban Planning association asks:

Has your community a definite civic program upon which the citizens, churches, clubs, associations and other organizations will tender their efforts during the coming seasons? Have you asked these questions?

First.—What is most needed to make your home community more healthful, purer and more beautiful to live in?

Second.—How can this need be most speedily met?

Third.—What are the agencies that can best undertake the task?

Fourth.—What should be my share in this civic task, and why?

STREET CANS SUCCESSFUL.

Philadelphia Housing Commission's Experiment Bears Good Results.

One of the most important activities of the Philadelphia housing commission, as shown by its recently published annual report, has been a study of the efficiency of the bureau of street cleaning in the congested areas.

Here it was found that the tenants were largely to blame for dirty streets. They would wrap up their garbage in paper and throw it into the street gutters, or they would sweep the dirt from their stores and yards upon the pavement, or they would throw waste paper and rubbish into the street, so that within an hour after the street cleaners had gone through the street would be practically as filthy as before.

The commission felt that little could be accomplished in such areas by urging the street cleaners to more efficient service unless there was close cooperation on the part of the tenants. Assistant Chief Neall took a personal interest in the proposition placed before him and aided in securing a sum of money to purchase rubbish cans.

A trial area of eight blocks in one of the dirtiest sections of the city was plotted and sixty cans placed. Special circulars in English and Yiddish were distributed. Visitors speaking various languages were sent to every family to explain the purpose of the cans and to urge them to co-operate. The principals and teachers of the public schools in the neighborhood and the settlement workers were asked to instruct their scholars about the cans and the importance of keeping the streets clean. This campaign was duplicated several times, so that the adults as well as the children in the district became fully informed. The campaign was sufficiently effective to warrant councils to authorize the purchase of 1,492 more cans to continue the experiment on a larger scale.

THE COMMERCIAL CLUB.

An Asset to Any Town Provided It Is Well Organized.

A commercial club is the greatest asset of any town, providing it is a commercial club, says a contributor to the University Missourian. But there has been an unwarranted misuse of the term in the last few years. Many so called commercial clubs are merely unorganized groups of business men of a city who meet whenever any one comes along with some pet scheme. They act only when acted upon. But a real commercial club is something more than that.

A real commercial club is one that meets regularly. At each meeting some of the members give talks on things they think will make the town better. The needs of a town are discussed and ways and means of getting these needs satisfied are brought out. In that way they are ready to adopt any new plan that is for the best interests of their city. There is just as much difference between an organization of this sort and one that is loosely organized as between a well trained army and an army of new recruits.

There are so many things that a good commercial club can do that it seems hardly possible to conceive of a town not having one. Yet there are many towns throughout this state which do not have one. They can look after the sanitation of the city, paving, street cleaning, fire protection, safety of public buildings, nuisances and other things. They can watch out for new enterprises and send representatives to interview prospective promoters and show them why they should come to the city.

You can notice that the town which prospers most has the liveliest commercial club.

TOWN PLANNING CONGRESSES

A Number of These Have Been Recently Held.

Mankind is every day becoming more cosmopolitan, and perhaps a significant indication of this is to be seen in the number of congresses, both national and international, that have recently been held. In connection with town planning and its allied subjects there have been held this year an international town planning congress at Ghent, an international road congress, an international housing congress and an international congress of architects and in addition important congresses on housing and town planning both in London and several provincial towns, held under the auspices of the national housing reform council, an important congress on town planning held under the auspices of the engineers at Norwich and also a sanitary congress. This national and international handshaking is certainly a value.

ANOTHER STEP TOWARD PEACE

The Netherlands Sixth Nation to Accept Arbitration Proposal.

NO WAR PENDING INQUIRIES

Treaties Provide That Where Diplomacy Fails Disputes Between Countries Go Before Permanent International Commission, Which Shall Have Year to Formulate Report.

When Secretary of State Bryan and Chevallier W. L. F. C. Van Rappard, minister to the United States for the Netherlands, affixed their signatures to a general peace and arbitration treaty on Dec. 18 there was recorded the sixth successful step of President Wilson and Secretary Bryan in their attempt to link the civilized world together for universal peace.

The six treaties negotiated, signed and sent to the United States senate for ratification are: The Netherlands, signed Dec. 18; Nicaragua, Dec. 17; Honduras, Nov. 3; Panama and Guatemala, Sept. 20; Salvador, Aug. 7. All of the treaties, with the exception of the one with the Netherlands, are the same.

The treaty with the Netherlands, which is the first of the kind to be signed by a European power, provides in substance:

The high contracting parties agree that all disputes between them, of every nature whatsoever, to the settlement of which previous arbitration treaties or agreements do not apply in their terms or are not applied in fact, shall, when diplomatic methods of adjustment have failed, be referred for investigation and report to a permanent international commission, and they agree not to declare war or begin hostilities during such investigation and before the report is submitted.

The international commission shall be composed of five members, to be appointed as follows: One member shall be chosen from each country by the government thereof; one member shall be chosen by each government from some third country; the fifth member shall be chosen by common agreement between the two governments, it being understood that he shall not be a citizen of either country. * * * The international commission shall be appointed within six months after the exchange of the ratifications of this treaty.

In Force For Five Years.
In case the high contracting parties shall have failed to adjust a dispute by diplomatic methods they shall at once refer it to the international commission for investigation and report. The international commission may, however, spontaneously offer its services to that effect and in that case shall notify both governments and request their co-operation in the investigation.

The report of the international commission shall be completed within one year after the date on which it shall declare its investigation to have begun unless the high contracting parties shall limit or extend the time by mutual consent. * * *

The high contracting parties reserve the right to act independently on the subject matter of the dispute after the report of the commission shall have been submitted. It is also provided that the treaty shall remain in force for five years and shall thereafter remain in force until twelve months after either the United States or the Netherlands has given notice to the other of an intention to terminate it.

Difference Between Treaties.

One difference between the Netherlands treaty and the others negotiated is: The contracting parties in the Netherlands treaty agree that the fifth member of the international commission shall be chosen from some other country, and the other treaties assert that the fifth member of the commission shall be chosen merely "by common agreement between the two governments." Another difference is: "The international commission shall be appointed within four months." The Netherlands treaty makes it mandatory to appoint the commission in six months.

The last and most important difference is that relating to the military activity of the "high contracting parties." The Netherlands treaty provides that pending the investigation the contracting parties agree not to declare war or begin hostilities during the investigations of the commission. The other treaties assert:

Pending the investigation and report of the international commission the high contracting parties agree not to increase their military or naval program unless danger from a third power should compel such increase. In which case the party feeling itself menaced shall confidentially communicate the fact in writing to the other contracting party, whereupon the latter shall also be released from its obligation to maintain its military and naval status quo.

All of these treaties will be before the senate soon after the holidays for ratification.

Secretary Bryan says he has high hopes of negotiating several more treaties before this session of congress adjourns.

NEW WIRELESS WONDER.

Instrument Invented to Show Whence Waves Come.

The newest development in wireless telegraphy has been demonstrated at the exhibition of the Physical society of London. This invention aims at the detection of the direction from which a message comes.

No one has yet discovered how to send wireless rays, like a searchlight, in any definite direction. They go out everywhere, but even though they cannot be directed it is just possible that a ship will be able to find out whence they come. This is done by a wonderful new instrument.

PREPARING FOR OLD AGE.

If You Reach Sixty-five Years What Will Be Your Condition?

Actuaries say that of each thousand men living at the age of twenty 500 will still be alive at sixty-five. Egonomists declare that of the 500 living at sixty-five 200 will be in want; that eight-ninths of the pauperism in America is among people who have passed this same age of sixty-five.

A man is, of course, sometimes brought to want in old age through accident, through continued illness of himself or his family, through a dozen and one mischances against which even the wisest is helpless adequately to provide. In spite of this, however, there are certain tried and proved recipes by which a young man may guarantee at least the probability that he will not be found among the unfortunate 200 after the age of sixty-five.

Avoidance of wasteful, destructive habits; thrift, economy, the practice of spending habitually less than one earns, the habit of study, which increases one's usefulness and earning power—such are a few of the stable qualities which distinguish the young man approaching an independent old age from the one approaching a condition of want. Stand the actuary's thousand men in a row, divide them into two groups, the one possessing the habits and qualities noted above and the other lacking them, and there would be little difficulty in telling from which group will come the 200 and from which the 300.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

WOOD FROM THE MOON.

Queer Decision of the Most Primitive Race on Earth.

The "north pole natives" alluded to by Captain Amundsen in a recent lecture were discovered by him while he was navigating his little craft, the Gjoa, through the Northwest passage in 1903-7.

He christened them "Nechilli" and considered them to be the most primitive race on earth. No white man had ever before invaded their icy fastnesses. Consequently they were ignorant of the use of iron. Their fishing implements were long spears, fashioned out of reindeer horn. They knew no other method of procuring fire than that of rubbing two pieces of wood together. They were, in short, still in the stage of civilization reached by our ancestors of the stone age.

So cut off were they from others of their kind that they imagined their tribe was the only one in the world and displayed the utmost astonishment when told of populous countries far to the south, where neither ice nor snow was. The Gjoa and her crew they thought to have dropped from the moon, and the first Nechilli to come aboard felt the deck, masts, boats, oars, all the while whispering to one another in amazement, "How much wood there is in the moon—how very much!"—London Standard.

Too Eager.

There is a lady in Richmond who has in her employ a dinky servant of a most curious disposition.

"Did the postman leave any letters, Lily?" the mistress asked on one occasion on returning from a call in the neighborhood.

"There ain't nuthin' but a postal card, ma'am," said Lily.

"Who is it from?" asked the mistress craftily.

"Deed, I don't know, ma'am," said Lily, with an air of entire innocence.

"Well, any one that sends me a message on a postal card is either very stupid or impertinent," suggested the lady of the house.

"Excuse me, ma'am," said Lily, with dignity, "but that ain't no way to talk 'bout yo' own mother!"—Philadelphia Ledger.

Population of Earth.

The population of the entire earth is around 1,600,000,000. Of this number, Asia has over half, 850,000,000; Africa, 127,000,000; North America, 120,000,000; South America, 45,000,000; Australia, 5,000,000; Europe, 280,000,000; polar regions, 300,000. There are no means of estimating the increase in the earth's population, owing to the paucity of statistics and the comparatively recent date at which any sort of statistics were possible. But it is safe to say that from now on, owing to the spread of science the human increase will be greater than ever before. New York American.

Dodges the Germs.

"I understand that your neighbor Jinks has a deadly fear of microbes and takes every possible precaution to avoid infection."

"That's true. He won't even read a book or article if he thinks it contains any germs of thought."—Baltimore American.

An Old Time Sea Serpent.

Good Bishop Poutopidan in his celebrated "Natural History of Norway" tells the story of a boat's crew of eight sailors under a certain Captain De Ferry who encountered a formidable looking sea serpent off the Norwegian coast along the middle of the eighteenth century. The animal, according to all accounts, was some 600 feet long or about the size of a modern battleship. The crew at first endeavored to notice the monster into the boat, but the wily beast responded by lashing the water so furiously with its tail that one of the seamen was carried out of the boat on a wave at least 100 feet high, which the serpent with the incessant beating of its tail kept towering rigidly in the air for nearly ten minutes. Meanwhile the seaman slid safely down the other side and back into the boat. Immediately the crew began an assault upon the monster, which they maintained with such fury that the beast turned tail and fled. According to the captain, he went so fast that he "disappeared on the horizon twenty miles away almost on the moment that he began the retreat."

Waking From Sleep.

That is the test of robust health—the manner in which you rise from your bed in the morning. When a man is in perfect health he awakens naturally if his body has been sufficiently refreshed by its rest. The hours of repose are a matter of habit and temperament. In many cases, mental activity is at its height in those first minutes of waking. Poets and authors have conceived brilliant ideas in those moments of perfect physical repose, the brain alert and the organs and tissues toned up after their rest. Reluctance to leave the bed is not a good sign—a really healthy man is too full of vigor to lie still. Quality, not quantity, is the ruling factor in sleep. The broken nightmare or fitful slumber is not rest, for at such times neither brain nor body is in repose. Four hours of sleep with all feeling or thought in oblivion are worth more than nine hours of restlessness.

Knew Him as Well.

A certain cantankerous old gentleman not long ago advertised for a coachman, who was required, among other qualifications, to possess an intimate acquaintance with the neighborhood. But to his great surprise he received not a single application for the vacant post.

"I cannot understand it at all," he said, as during a chat one day with an old ostler at the local livery stables he had mentioned the fact.

"Let me see," said the latter, as a gleam of intelligence flitted across his face. "Ye advertised, I believe, for one as 'must be well acquainted with the neighborhood,' didn't ye?"

"I did," replied the old gentleman shortly. "I want some one who knows his way about."

"Ah, that explains it," was the answer. "Ye see, they who knows the neighborhood well knows ye too!"—Exchange.

His Pretty Compliment.

When the Dowager Queen Margherita of Italy was the lovely young bride of the crown prince this anecdote of her reception in one of the hill towns was widely told in the press.

The little boy who was to present the usual bouquet was the son of a distinguished literary man, and he had been taught a pretty poem of a few lines in graceful praise of the princess. But when the moment came to recite it he stood mutely gazing at her, too overcome to speak. After a moment, in order to relieve the situation, the princess smiled and held out her hand for the flowers. The little fellow held back for a moment, then, to the delight of the assembly, explained confidentially as he gave the flowers to her: "There were verses, but you are so beautiful I can't remember them."

Schumann, the Composer.

Robert Schumann, the great composer, tried to become a lawyer to please his mother and failed after two years of wearisome study. At Heidelberg university he made the acquaintance of Willibald Alexis, who had already trodden the path Schumann was destined to follow—that through the law to music. And the eminent jurist whose classes he attended, A. F. J. Thibaut, was an amateur musician of high attainments and the author of a work on precisely that aspect of music to which Schumann was peculiarly sensitive—namely, purity in musical art.

Chinese Dread of Milk.

A Chinese has the same dread of milk that an American has of oysters out of season. Several evenings ago a Chinese dignitary, who had just come into the country to study educational institutions, was taking dinner with a widely known educator in an uptown hotel. He ate freely of the American dishes until it came to the last course. Looking at the ice cream dubiously for some time, he finally took a mouthful. It must have given him a pleasurable sensation—this first taste of ice cream—for he smiled pleasantly at his host. Suddenly another Chinese, who was present and who had not taken any of the dessert, spoke quickly to him a single Chinese word. In an instant the dignitary spat out his mouthful on his plate, much to the consternation of every one at the table. "What did you say?" inquired the host of the Chinese who had spoken. "I said 'milk,'" was the stoical reply.—Pittsburgh Dispatch.

How Macaroni is Made.

This is how macaroni is made in Italy: To very glutinous wheat flour is added a plentiful supply of dried eggs. Mixed with water, this becomes a dough, which is so thickly kneaded as to be difficult to impress with the fingers. Then it is carried to a round press perforated with holes, through which the dough is pressed by means of a heavy plate worked by a screw. The result is macaroni without holes in the sticks. Pipe macaroni is made through a similar press, with the difference that a round piece of metal makes the central hole. As it issues in long, snaky ropes from the bottom of the press they are violently fanned to prevent them from sticking together and are afterward taken out into the open and laid on long bamboo poles to dry. Two or three days' exposure in the warm, sunny air of Italy makes the dough pipes hard and brittle and fit to use for food.

A Greatly Desired Lady.

It would appear from bits of the social gossip of her day that Miss Burdett-Coutts' nearest approach to an occupation was refusing offers of marriage. It is stated in "Intimate Memoirs of Napoleon III." that the name of the "prince of adventurers" was connected with hers, that she refused the Duke of Wellington and a score of lesser gentlemen.

For years the great heiress was the most glittering matrimonial prize in England, and when at last she consented to change her condition by marrying an American a London club wit struck a responsive chord by observing: "I don't blame Ashmead Bartlett for proposing to the baroness. I've done it myself. I regard it as a duty every Englishman owes to his family!"

The Air Man's Dream.

A French aviation expert is of opinion that the day will come when communication between the earth and the moon and stars will be possible in aeroplanes. Providing that radium is one day found in larger quantities and that some way of harnessing its energies is discovered by scientists, he calculates that an aeroplane weighing a ton should be able to cover the 238,800 miles which separate the earth and the moon in three hours and five minutes. About 800 pounds of radium would be necessary to provide the fuel for the journey. At the current price about $10,000,000,000 worth would be required.

Ants Walk on Water.

It may not be new to observers of animal life, but I have been much interested in watching the common house ant here in Rio de Janeiro. We have an American fly trap. The sugar was one day covered with ants, so I placed the trap on a finger bowl standing in a plate of water. The ants when they came to the edge of the water ran around the bowl until convinced there was no way across, and then calmly took to the water and ran across it by aid of surface tension without getting their feet wet. Having presumably been home to the nest, they returned for more sugar, crossing in the same way, and this went on regularly, a steady procession crossing the water.—Nature.

Modest John Keble.

If John Keble had had his way it is possible that his famous "Christian Year" might never have been published. He was extremely averse to it and only yielded to the importunities of his friends and the pleadings of his father. Even so he refused to have his name on the title page. In forty-five years it went through 158 editions, and since it went out of copyright they have ceased to be counted.

Consolation.

"When I was your age," the self-made man complained, "I was not spending money that had been earned by somebody else."

Guerillas.

Guerilla, which is a Spanish word meaning "little war," was first applied to armed peasants who worried the French armies in the Peninsular war, 1808 to 1814.

Settled.

"Have you placed your interest in the estate in the hands of a lawyer?" "Yes, and in his pocket too."—Buffalo Express.

COUNTY AGENT AS FARMERS' AID

How Unique Scheme Is Being Carried Out in Indiana.

NEWNESS THE KEYNOTE.

Agricultural Expert in No Case a Native of the Community He Serves. His Work Embraces Instruction in Domestic Science—Special Campaign Is Arranged For Each Month.

New influences have been put to work in Indiana counties. These new "influences" are men who have attained eminence in agriculture, such as L. B. Clore, the American corn king, whom the Russian government tried to engage, or they are graduates of the highest agricultural schools of the country, who have added to that education the practical work of successful farming. They are the newly authorized county officers called county agents.

The last legislature created the new office and endowed it with state aid to the extent of half the officers' salary. The new officer is put into the county as the farmers' expert. He is to promote better agriculture and home life, to keep up the work of the farmers' clubs and boys' and girls' clubs and is also to assist in the direction of the new agricultural vocational education that is to be put into the schools.

In no case is this new "influence" to be a native of the county. He is to be a man with experience, scientific education and personality, and is at least to bring a new light into each county. All agents are appointed by Purdue university and are under the direction of its agricultural department, which is also in touch with the federal government's department of agriculture.

Local Crop Observers.

This connection is extended to the county agents themselves by their appointment as local crop observers at a small salary, but enough to make them full fledged parts of the federal government and therefore entitled to the government franking system. This means free mail service, including the parcel post, added to the new agricultural and educational work.

A dozen counties are already making preparations to get in on the next thirty county list, which will be open Sept. 30, 1914. It will take about three years to institute the state wide service. Even at that it may come in somewhat faster than the agricultural vocational education with which the county agent is closely connected.

"We are trying to get the best man, no matter where he is located, and we are far from averse to bringing the best from other successful agricultural states into Indiana. We are insisting that at least the county agent shall be from another part of the state," says T. A. Coleman, the assistant "state leader."

"Indiana has practically provided for $92,000 a year in three years from now to be added to at least $92,000 which the counties provide. In ten years we will have $100,000 federal money a year for the work. Then, too, the work is tied up with the federal government's agricultural department, so that we get some aid from that, not the least of which is the franking privilege for mail and parcels for each county agent, which places the postal service at our command as part of our equipment."

Help For Farmers' Wives.

The work is not going to be limited to boys' education and men's work. Already Laporte county has started out with a special supervisor or special county agent having to do with county domestic science, which has been introduced into the country school system of work.

A state wide program already is mapped out. Every month there will be a special campaign on one idea through the county agents. For example, in October all of the county agents set dates to meet farmers at certain corn fields in their township for a conference on seed corn. Then just before frost they were impressed with the need of selecting their seed before frost and of knowing what kind of seed to select. It is not a matter of telling a man in a county institute next year that he did wrong, but of telling him now what to do to be right next year. Again, farmers are gathered to inspect growing crops. For example, in a corn crop conference they are asked each to take a row of corn and count a hundred hills and then, coming back, to count and record the number of stalks to the hill.

INVENTS A NAVAL MINE.

Lieutenant Ferguson's Device Aims to Tie Up a Fleet in a Harbor.

Lieutenant John N. Ferguson of the naval torpedo station at Newport, R. I., has invented a mine designed to tie up a ship, squadron or fleet in a harbor.

The mine is operated either by contact or by electric cables operated from ship or shore and dropped by a warship from its stern. It is said to be able automatically to sink two feet below the sea surface at a certain time after being dropped. Details of the invention are kept secret.

Lieutenant Ferguson was formerly attached to the staff of Rear Admiral Austin M. Knight, commander in chief of the Atlantic reserve fleet.

Salt and Fresh Water Lakes.

Fresh water lakes are always only expansions of rivers, due to the particular topographical configuration of a valley. They are all characterized by the fact that the water that they receive runs out either continuously or intermittently and that the chemical constitution of their water remains constantly the same as that of the streams and rivers of the same region. Salt lakes, on the other hand, are always closed basins, without outlet, and their water is removed only by surface evaporation. These facts being well understood, we see at once why the former lakes contain fresh water and the others salt water. Water is nature's great solvent. Hardly a single substance, simple or compound, escapes its dissolving action. Consequently the water that flows over the earth's surface or in its depths contains constantly in solution substances that finally accumulate in the great common reservoir, the ocean, whose mass, removed only by evaporation, becomes more and more charged with saline matter.

An Australian Courtship.

When William of Tree Fern made up to Kate Ryan the moon was bright and the weather was feeling good. He escorted her home over the two mile road, and never a word said he but "It's a bonzer night for possums, Kate."

Next night he met her again and poured the same remark into her shell-like ear. This went on for a week, and Kate bore it patiently, in the belief that when the moon waned and darkness was upon the earth and the sins thereof, William would be more explicit.

So one dark night she encouraged him all she could, but without making her bashful lover loosen his tongue until the journey home was nearly completed. Then he blurted it out. "Kate," he said, "er"—"Yes, William," she murmured. "Er—a bloke wouldn't have a dorg's chance with the possums tonight!" That settled Bill.—Sydney Bulletin.

Generous Boss.

A certain dorky who works a small farm for "halves" occasionally furnishes much amusement to persons who happen to chance in his vicinity by his originality and "gift of gab." The other day an individual engaged him in conversation with the intention of hoarding up a good laugh for reference at his club. "How do you make out, Joe?" was asked as a way of starting. "Fine, boss," replied that person. "Fine." "But you don't keep all you raise, do you?" "No, sah," replied the dorky, and he continued: "You see, boss, it's dis a-way. I's gets half of all I raises, and that's all I wants. De boss is a gentleman. I guess I could get a third if I'd ask, and I knows he'd give me a quarter if I was hard up."

Genoa, N. Y.

C. S. WHITMAN, OF POLITICAL

New York's District Attorney, Attacked by Governor Glynn, Has Made Notable Record in Office.

[Special Correspondence.]
THE people of the entire state are highly interested in the work of District Attorney Charles S. Whitman of New York county, in his fearless crusade against graft and grafters in and affecting public office, and they wonder at the real motive actuating Governor Martin H. Glynn in his outspoken opposition to Mr. Whitman and Mr. Whitman's work.

CHARLES S. WHITMAN.

In refusing to appoint Mr. Whitman as a special assistant attorney general to conduct graft investigations throughout the state, and so defying public opinion, and in issuing his lengthy statement denunciating of Mr. Whitman a few days ago, Governor Glynn has set himself squarely against a state wide graft probe of the effective description that could and would bring results warranting the expense that necessarily falls on the taxpayers. The governor's special investigator, James W. Osborne, has already admitted that he was handicapped as to facilities to conduct the probe thoroughly, but that "if he could get the time" he hoped to perform in a manner satisfactory to the governor the work laid out for him in various cities and counties throughout the state.

On the other hand, the New York district attorney has already developed many important graft "leads" through his vigorous conduct of the "John Doe" inquiry before Judge McAdoo in New York city and understands their devils ramifications. He has a staff of fifty trained legal assistants from which to draw for aid and a large number of skilled detectives and forty process servers.

Hughes Set Precedent.
So far as the legality of his appointment was concerned, the laws of the state of New York plainly empower the governor to appoint special deputy attorney generals. A precedent has, in fact, been established by United States Supreme Court Justice Charles E. Hughes, who when governor of the state appointed Mr. Whitman to that office to conduct investigations in election cases in Clinton county. Three valid indictments were found as a result of that appointment.

Is it possible there is fear in high quarters that Mr. Whitman knows too much about conditions existing and alleged to exist in the department of highways and in other state departments; that he is too relentless in pursuit of crime; that he is too thorough in equipped and cannot be "handled"?

Already his operations in relation to the obtaining of campaign contributions for the Democratic state committee have resulted in five indictments, and more are expected to occur. Already he has shown officially that the following persons and companies among others doing business with the state were "shaken down" for Democratic campaign funds in the sums tabulated:

*Reported in the sworn statement of campaign contributions required by law to be filed with the secretary of state. Not reported.

Those figures and names have been posted for public inspection in District Attorney Whitman's office in New York city.

The list has been hanging there for more than a month, and every few days in that time a clerk has taken it down and added to it. The assistants to Mr. Whitman who pass in and out of the office refer to it as "the sandbagged list."

It is expected that state contractors who built public roads will continue to come to Mr. Whitman's office for months. There are some 400 in all, and it is believed that they have been sandbagged into contributing an immense sum to the politicians.

A Suspicious Increase.
That the moneys spent of late on building and repairing roads and in maintaining the highways department alone has increased by many hundreds of thousands of dollars is a matter of public record.

As an example:
In 1910 the appropriation for the department was $3,536,157.74. In 1913 it was $5,334,081.53. Those official figures show an increase in three years of $1,797,923.79.

Former Governor Sulzer said on July 8, 1913, in relation to the expenditure of money raised by highway bond issues:
"Already we know that ten millions have been criminally mispent. Of one place we know where the graft amounted to $5,000 a mile."

The executive auditor, John A. Hennessy, said regarding money supposedly expended on state roads, "Five millions unaccounted for; three millions wasted."

As minority leader of the assembly, Harold J. Hinman made the following charges on the floor of the lower house Feb. 26, 1913, which still remain unanswered:
There are upward of 250 of maintenance contracts awarded by the present highway commission on the recommendation of the local Democratic organizations without competitive bids.

In every one of these contracts the minimum price for manipulation is 3 1/2 cents per square yard, which is 22 per cent profit, and in many of the contracts the profit runs as high as 120 per cent, as high as 30 cents having been paid where a fair price is 2 1/2 cents, allowing 20 per cent profit to the contractor. All of these contracts are on file. All are available for inspection.

Gave Specific Figures.
Mr. Hinman gave specific figures in twenty-nine maintenance contracts in the counties of Saratoga, Suffolk, Ontario, Cayuga, Onondaga, Broome, Oswego, Erie, Albany, Sullivan, Chenango, Schenectady, Fulton, Montgomery, Herkimer, Rensselaer, Monroe, Columbia, Putnam and Ulster and continued:
The total graft on these twenty-nine contracts I have specifically caused to be examined is $201,774. What the total graft on the 250 odd maintenance contracts may be can only be told by a thorough investigation.

And bear in mind that we have gone into unpleasant existing details regarding ONLY A SINGLE ONE OF THE MANY STATE DEPARTMENTS and merely make passing comment of the fact that a careful estimate shows that the increased cost of running the state during the last three years amounts to more than $20,000,000 and that the state engineer announces that the cost of the large canal will cost $10,000,000 more than the $101,000,000 originally decided on.

Just how much of the vast sums expended by the state goes into the clutching hands of the wily "bagmen" for political purposes is something the people of the state are not only anxious to know, but they are entitled to know. It makes no difference whether Mr. Whitman or any one else conducts the investigation so long as the man who does so has the necessary knowledge of the "leads" that will show actual proof of wrongdoing and has ample resources at his command.

So far as Mr. Whitman is concerned, he is going ahead with the investigation of the sordid details of political sandbagging for partisan purposes in every case in his jurisdiction of which he has information, and any insinuations that he is actuated by political motives in his attitude toward grafters, as Governor Glynn has charged, are, in the words of the district attorney himself, "unworthy of their source."

Mr. Whitman is proceeding with his political graft inquiry just as thoroughly as he did with the trials of the following influential men (among the many) whom he convicted of crimes:

William R. Montgomery, president of the Hamilton bank, convicted of grand larceny.
Joseph G. Robin, president of the Washington Savings bank and chairman of the executive committee of the Northern bank, convicted of grand larceny.
Joseph B. Reichmann, president of the Carnegie Trust company, convicted of making a false sworn statement of the bank's condition.
William J. Cummins, principal stockholder of the Carnegie Trust company and a member of its executive committee, convicted of grand larceny.
Charles A. Belling, vice president of the Bronx National bank, convicted of forgery in the first degree.

War on Crooked Lawyers.
Of lawyers the list is a long one. As has been already stated, Mr. Whitman is absolutely merciless with those members of the bar who have abandoned the high standards of their calling and descended to crime. Among those who have fallen into his net are Percy L. Davis, who was a New York city alderman, convicted of attempted extortion; John N. Anhalt, one time state senator in Michigan, convicted of offering a bribe to a public officer in connection with the efforts to free Harry K. Thaw from Matteawan; Stephen J. Stilwell, convicted of having demanded a bribe to influence his action as a state senator; Edward J. Newell, convicted of conspiring to obstruct justice; Daniel O'Reilly, one time assistant district attorney, convicted of the crime of receiving stolen goods.

The police list is a most significant one, for it was in these cases that Mr. Whitman's extraordinary perseverance in the face of great odds first became generally known. The list includes Becker, now in the death house at Sing Sing; the four gun men who were convicted of killing Herman Rosenthal, also in the death house; Inspectors Sweeney, Hussey, Murtha and Thompson, all convicted of conspiring to obstruct justice; Policeman John J. Hartigan, convicted of perjury, and Thomas F. Robinson, convicted of extortion, and Peter J. Duffy, a sergeant of police, convicted of bribery.

Of the election cases the two most important were those of Louis Lipschitz and Louis Nadel, as they were the first convictions ever obtained of election officers for making false statements of the canvass in New York county.

The Arson Cases.
The arson cases which Mr. Whitman has handled resulted in the breaking up of the band of firebugs which came to be known as the "arson trust." The sentences in these cases run as high as twenty-four years. Some of the convicted men are Henry C. Freeman, George Grutz, Robert J. Rubin and Isidor Stein, alias "Izzie the Painter."

The convictions for violations of the anti-trust law obtained by Mr. Whitman were the first obtained in the state of New York, and with one exception the first in the United States of persons charged with the crime of conspiring to restrain trade and create monopoly in which a jail sentence was imposed. The men convicted were each sentenced to three months in the penitentiary and fined $500. They were Erving V. Dwyer, Arthur G. Dwyer, Charles Westenberg, William W. Smith, Charles R. Jewell, James N. Norris, William E. Norris, Charles T. Hawk, Charles Thatcher, Clenden Bishop, Samuel Werner, Solomon Frankel and Charles Werner.

The Queens county judiciary scandal still lingers in the public mind. Indictments were secured in these cases, but they did not come to trial. In these cases Mr. Whitman was informed that certain alleged passages of money occurred in New York county. The result of the investigation which Mr. Whitman conducted was that all of those connected with the scandal were ignominiously defeated at the polls.

Whitman as a Student.
When Mr. Whitman was a student at Amherst one of his instructors said of him:
"Whitman is made of determination to the very marrow. Once he starts something he will see it to the finish. Depend on that."

This pretty well sums up the Charles S. Whitman of today. It is agreed that the administration of the district attorney's office is almost entirely a matter of the fearlessness and determination of the district attorney himself. That Mr. Whitman has made more of the office than ever was made of it before his time is pretty generally admitted. On the east side of New York city, where thugs and land men and Tammany had "guerillas" or "repeaters" at the polls herd and multiply, the mere mention of the name of Whitman will set the best tremor.

Perhaps no man is more hated by lawbreakers than the present district attorney, yet he has never carried a weapon in his life and goes about the city at all times of the day and night unprotected.

Whether or not Governor Glynn adheres to his statement that he will not run for governor next fall, he has raised one of the chief issues on which the campaign will be fought. The issue of economy, so frequently taken down from the political shelf and dusted and regilded for new use, pales into insignificance before the issue of honesty in conducting the business of the state.

For how can any government be conducted economically when faithless administrators and employees are permitted to remain under cover, dissipating state moneys and exacting tribute for partisan campaign funds without fear of suffering the consequences of their unlawful acts?

PROMISES

The calendar again dissolves
Regrets while forming new resolves.
Dissembling as she turns the page,
Will flib about her birth year while
The maiden, unoffending, knows
Another year will bring new beaus,
But she, dear thing, already good,
Is not expected to knock wood.
The sporty youth with aching head
In narrow paths would now be led,
And even wicked men declare—
Just to themselves—they'll virtue share.
How by such means we better grow
Each blithe new year will plainly show.
No doubt each impulse to do right
Adds to the flame of virtue's light.
Yet, though it pauses hymns to sing,
Youth evermore must have its fling,
And who can steel or buy or beg
A cure for any addled egg?

HORSES THE ONE HOBBY OF RICHEST MAN IN WORLD.

M. Mantaschew Amazes London by Purchases at Newmarket.

There is none of the gloom of Russia about M. Mantaschew, who is not only the richest Russian, but is credited with being the richest man in the world, richer even than John D. Rockefeller. His sensational buying of horses at Newmarket, England, was a recent notable event.

M. Mantaschew is an earnest young man of thirty-three years, who is using his great wealth to improve the breed of horses in Russia.

This multimillionaire is not Russian at all; he is a cosmopolitan. He belongs to the capital of Europe. He is the ruble king. His money is made from vast oil properties in Russia. He does not know how much his income a minute is, nor does he care. He spends as much as he likes on his horses, but he seldom makes a bad bargain. He lives as a man of fashion and wealth lives, with none of the eccentricities and display of some multimillionaires. He has an earnest face and large eyes.

His nose is sharp and curved, and a little thin mustache hides his upper lip. He is dressed in the most perfect clothes that a London tailor could cut—and in excellent taste. There is nothing "horsy" about the appearance of this man, who collects horses as some men collect postage stamps.

"My horses," he said, "are worth 3,000,000 rubles ($1,500,000). I have only one ambition in the world—to have one of the best stables. I am fond of my work, and I am eager to do all I can for horse breeding."

BEATS THE WHISKERS CLUB.

A Society Composed of Former Inmates of Insane Asylums.

There are many unique societies in Germany. They are numerous, particularly in small communities, where amusement is limited. One little town of 1,200 inhabitants near Berlin has twenty-two novel organizations.

There is an organization composed of men with pointed beards, who hope to reintroduce that style. Kindly intentioned persons have also organized a society for the spread of good manners—"a society which," says the Boersen Courier, "has had little success."

The queerest organization of all has now appeared—a society made up of former occupants of insane asylums. It was brought into being as a serious effort to improve conditions in institutions of that kind, assist former patients and force the law to recognize insanity more frequently as an excuse for crime. It insists upon its members having passed at least six months in some asylum.

FEATHER IN HIS APPENDIX.

Surgeon Saves Sailor From Being Tickled to Death.

A man described by the Journal of the American Medical Association as J. R. P., a sailor on the United States battleship California, swallowed a feather and escaped death by a small margin. The navy surgeon describes the case as a treatise on "unusual combinations which produce appendicitis."

Some months ago the sailor ate a piece of chicken that gave him a peculiar sensation as it passed from his mouth to his stomach. At the time it occurred to him that he might have swallowed a feather, because whatever he ate tickled him so that he couldn't resist laughing. The tickling became more marked, and finally it developed into acute pain. The sailor underwent an operation, and inside the appendix was found the feather.

EVERYBODY AT CHURCH.

Whole Town From Mayor to "Bell
Hops" Got Free Lunch.

The first "go to church" day at Aurora, Ill., was a big success and attracted 25,000 to the fifty-seven churches. Special music and free lunches were features. The campaign to get every one to church was an "endless chain" affair. Everybody, from Mayor Sanders to the hotel "bell-hops" went. And many were present who had forgotten how to act, and they watched the regular attendants.

Hundreds of automobiles were scurrying about an hour before church hour getting cripples and invalids, so that no one was overlooked.

OUR MAN OF THE HOUR IN MEXICO

How Admiral Fletcher Climbed the Road to Fame.

WAS AN IOWA COUNTRY BOY

Determined to Be a Sailor When Fifteen and Went Through Annapolis With Flying Colors—His Subsequent Activities and Study of Ordnance Paved Way For Future Honors.

An interesting sketch of Rear Admiral Frank F. Fletcher, the American commanding officer in Mexican waters, appears in the New York Times, excerpts from which are here given. They are particularly timely in view of the fact that Admiral Fletcher has the most important command that has devolved upon any officer of the American navy since the battle of Santiago.

To begin with the boyhood of the man whose pennant flies from the foremast of the battleship Louisiana, the flagship of the third division of the United States Atlantic fleet, he was born near Oskaloosa, Ia., Nov. 23, 1855. Soon after his fifteenth birthday he decided to enter the lists for the Annapolis appointment from the Fourth Iowa congressional district. He won the appointment with flying colors.

In 1875 Fletcher was graduated one of the honor men of a brilliant class. For a single year he served as a midshipman on sea service, and in 1876 he was made an ensign. He made a specialty of ordnance, in which branch of the service he was subsequently to become one of the navy's greatest authorities.

On April 1, 1882, Fletcher became a lieutenant of the junior grade. Seven years pass and he is one of the best known younger ordnance experts in the navy. Ten years more and Fletcher is a full fledged lieutenant of the senior grade and recognized as one of the really great ordnance experts of the navy.

His Work During Spanish War.

A few more years and the Spanish-American war is looming up dark ahead. There is no longer any doubt that the conflict is at hand.

Throughout the few months the struggle with Spain lasted Fletcher was at his desk in the navy department, one of the very busiest and most efficient men in Washington.

During this time Fletcher's active brain was busy thinking out a lot of new things to improve the ordnance arm and in consequence the efficiency of the American fleets.

It was not until the close of the war with Spain that Admiral Fletcher was ordered to sea, there to begin the service that culminated in the supreme command in Mexican waters and brought his name forward as a possible successor of Rear Admiral Badger as commander in chief of the Atlantic fleet.

In March, 1904, Fletcher was promoted to commander after having served as the commanding officer of the gunboats Kanawha and Eagle. Soon after this promotion he was made inspector of ordnance in charge of the torpedo station at Newport, serving in that capacity until March 15, 1905. Then he was again ordered to sea, this time as chief of staff of the Atlantic fleet, which position he relinquished in November of the same year to take his first really important sea command, that of the cruiser Raleigh, Coghlan's old ship.

For two years, or until February, 1907, Fletcher retained the Raleigh command, and then home again he came to assume one of the most important positions in the Naval War college at Newport. From Newport he returned to duty in Washington as a member of the special ordnance board.

In May, 1908, Fletcher was made a captain and given the command of the battleship Vermont, which he retained until February, 1910.

Got Flag Rank in 1911.

Next we hear of Fletcher as an aid on the staff of Secretary of the Navy Meyer, and it was during that service, in October, 1911, that he was promoted to flag rank. On Aug. 1 of last year he was again sent to sea, this time as the rear admiral commanding the fourth division of the Atlantic fleet, and he has been with the fleet ever since.

"What kind of a man is Fletcher?" an officer of the Atlantic fleet staff was asked.

"He is what I would describe as the best product of Annapolis—clean cut, determined, conservative, efficient to the last degree. Just, and with it all lovable and respected by every officer and man with whom he is associated," was the reply. "He never jumps too quickly, but he is always ready to act the moment the time comes to act."

County Pays For Triplets.

The Orange county (Cal.) board of supervisors is on record with a standing offer of $100 reward for each set of triplets born there. The first reward has been given to Mrs. Otto E. Summers, who recently presented her husband with three little Summeres. The supervisors formally voted Mrs. Summers $100 and decided to make a standing reward for all triplets.
