A man who on a rainy day in a country hotel had been retailing to a lonely traveler the accumulated gossip of his life in the village replied to the question of the helpless victim, whether there were any good people in the town, by saying, "Of course; but they speak for themselves." On the whole he was right, except for his abnormal appetite for scandal. The good people do speak louder for themselves in their silence than any one can speak in regard to the wicked .- Christian Reg-

CHAPTER XIN. Brothers of Angels. NDEED, doctor," said Mrs. Schofield, with agitation and profound conviction, just after 8 o'clock that evening, "I shall always believe in mustard plasters-mustard plasters and hot water bags. If it hadn't been for them I don't believe not." "Margaret," called Mr. Schofield from the pen door of a bedroom, "Margaret, where did you put that aromatic ammania? Where's Margaret?"

But he had to find the aromatic spirits of animonia himself, for Margaret was not in the house. She stood in the shadow beneath a maple tree near the street corner, a guitar case in her hand, and she scanned with anxiety a briskly approaching figure. The arc light, swinging above, revealed this figure as that of him she awaited. He was passing toward the gate without seeing her, when she arrested him with a fateful whisper.

"Bob!"

Mr. Robert Williams swung about hastily. "Why, Margaret."

"Here, take your guitar," she whispered hurriedly. "I was afraid if father happened to find it he'd break it all to pieces!"

"What for?" asked the startled Robert.

"Because I'm sure he knows it's yours."

"But what"-

"Oh, Bob," she mouned, "I was walting here to tell you. I was so afraid you'd try to come in"-

"Try!" exclaimed the unfortunate young man, quite dumfounded. "Try to come"--

"Yes, before I warned you. I've been

And Penrod thought he was going to die, and he said you gave it to him, and, oh, it was just pitiful to hear the poor child, Bob, because be thought he was dying, you see, and he blamed you for the whole thing. He said if you'd only let him alone and not given it to him he'd have grown up to be a good man, and now he combin't'. I never heard anything so heartrending. He was so weak he could hardly whisper, but he kept tryquettes at lunch-and papa said. 'Who there. He said it was the acutest case of indigestion he had ever treated in the whole course of his professional practice."

"Of course I didn't know what he'd do with the dollar," said Robert. She did not reply.

He began plaintively, "Margaret, you don't"he'd have lived fill you got here-I do

"I've never seen papa and mamma so upset about anything," she said rather primly.

"You mean they're upset about me?" "We are all very much upset," returned Margaret, more starch in her tone as she remembered not only Penrod's sufferings, but a duty she had vowed herself to perform.

"Margaret! You don't"-

"Robert," she said firmly and, also, with a rhetorical complexity which breeds a suspicion of rehearsal; "Robert, for the present I can only look at it in one way-when you gave that money to Penrod you put into the hands of an unthinking little child a weapon which might be, and, indeed, was, the means of his undoing. Boys are not respon"-

"But you saw me give him the dollar, and you didn't"-

"Robert!" she checked him with inreasing severity. "I am only a woman and not accustomed to thinking everything out on the spur of the moment. But I cannot change my mind -not now, at least."

"And you think I'd better not come in tonight?"

"Not for "Tonight!" she gasped. weeks! Papa would"-

"But Margaret," he urged plaintively. "how can you blame me for"-"I have not used the word 'blame," she interrupted. "But I must insist that for your carelessness to-to wreak such havoc-cannot fail to-to lessen my confidence in your powers of judgment. I cannot change my convictions in this matter-not tonight-and I cannot remain here another instant. The poor child may need me. Robert, good night."

"Well, what of it?" "Mitchy-Mitch swallowed it!" "What!"

"And papa says if he ever just lays eyes on you once in this neighborhood"-

But Penrod had started for home. In his embittered heart there was increasing a critical disapproval of the Creator's methods. When he made pretty girls, thought Penrod, why couldn't he have left out their little brothers!

CHAPTER XIV. Rupe Collins.

12 several days after this Penrod thought of growing up to be a monk and engaged in good works so far as to carry some kittens (that otherwise would have been drowned) and a pair of Margaret's putworn dancing slippers to a poor. augrateful old man sojourning in a shed up the alley. And although Mr. Robert Williams after a very short interval began to leave his guitar on the front porch again, exactly as if he thought nothing had happened, Penrod, with his younger vision of a father's mood, remained coldly distant from the Jones neighborhood. With his own family his manner was gentle, proud and sad, but not for long enough to frighten them. The change came with mystifying abruptness at the end of the week.

Duke could chase a much bigger dog out of the Schofields' yard and far down the street. This might be thought to indicate unusual valor on the part of Duke and cowardice on that of the bigger dogs whom he undoubtedly put to rout. On the contrary, all such flights were founded in mere superstition, for dogs are even more superstitious than boys and colored people, and the most firmly established of all dog superstitions is that any dog, be he the smallest and feeblest in the world, can whip any trespasser whatsoever.

A rat terrier believes that on his home grounds he can whip an elephant. It follows, of course, that a big dog, away from his own home, will run from a little dog in the little dog's neighborhood. Otherwise the big dog. must face a charge of inconsistency. and dogs are as consistent as they are superstitious. A dog believes in war, but he is convinced that there are times when it is moral to run, and the thoughtful physiognomist, seeing a big dog fleeing out of a little dog's yard, must observe that the expression of the big dog's face is more conscientious than alarmed. It is the expression of a person performing a duty to himself. Penrod understood these matters perfectly. He knew that the gaunt brown hound Duke chased up the alley had fied only out of deference to a custom, yet Penrod could not refrain from bragging of Duke to the hound's owner. a fat faced stranger of twelve or thirteen, who had wandered into the neighborhood. "You better keep that ole yellow dog o' yours back," said Penrod ominously as he climbed the fence. "You better catch him and hold him till I get mine inside the yard again. Duke's chewed up some pretty bad bulldogs around here." The fat faced boy gave Penrod a fishy stare. "You'd oughta learn him not to do that," he said. "It'll make him sick." "What will?" The stranger hughed raspingly and gazed up the alley, where the bound, having come to a halt, now coolly sat down, and, with an expression of roguish benevolence, patronizingly watched the tempered fury of Duke. whose assaults and barkings were becoming perfunctory.

mighty careful how they try to run over Rupe Collins." "Who's Rupe Collins?"

"Who is he?" echoed the fat faced boy incredulously. "Say, ain't you got any sense?"

"What?"

"Say, wouldn't you be just as happy if you had some sense?" "Ye-es." Penrod's answer, like the look he lifted to the impressive stranger, was meek and placative. "Rupe Collins is the principal at your school. I guess."

The other yelled with jeering laughter and mocked l'enrod's manner and voice. "'Rupe Collins is the principal at your school, I guess!" " He laughed harshly again, then suddenly showed truculence. "Say, 'be, whyn't you learn enough to go in the house when it rains? What's the matter of you, any-- how ?" "Well," urged Penrod timidly, "nobody ever told me who Rupe Collins is. I got a right to think he's the principal, haven't I?"

The fat faced boy shook his head disgustedly. "Honest, you make me sich !"

Penrod's expression became one of despair. "Well, who is he?" he cried. "'Who is he?" mocked the other, with a scorn that withered "'Who is he?' Me!"

"Oh!" Penrod was humiliated but relieved. He felt that he had proved himself criminally ignorant, yet a peril seemed to have passed. "Rupe Collins is your name, then, I guess. I kind of thought it was all the time."

The fat faced boy still appeared embittered, burlesquing this speech in a hateful falsetto. ""Rupe Collins is your name, then, I guess!" Oh, you 'kind of thought it was all the time.' did you?" Suddenly concentrating his brow into a histrionic scowl he thrust his face within an inch of Penrod's. Yes. sonny, Rupe Collins is my name.

Mr. Collins evinced satisfaction by means of his horse laugh. "You'd last jest about one day up at the Third." he said. "You'd come runnin' home, yelltn' 'Mom-muh. mom-muh.' before recess was over."

"No, I wouldn't," Penrod protested rather weakly, dusting his knees. "You would. too."

"No. I w"-

"Looky here," said the fat faced boy. darkly, "what you mean, counterdick ing me?"

He advanced a step and Penrod hast ily qualified his contradiction.

"I mean. I don't think I would. I"-"You better lock out!" Rupe moved closer, and unexpectedly grasped the back of Penrod's neck again. "Say, 'I would run home yellin' "Mommuh!"''

"Ow! I would run home yellin' 'Mommuh.' "

"There!" said Rape, giving the help-iess nape a nnal squeeze. "That's the way we do up at the Third."

Penrod rubbed his neck and asked meekly:

"Can you do that to any boy up at the Third?"

"See here now," said Rupe in the tone of one goaded beyond all endurance, "you say if I can. You better say it quick or"-"I knew you could," Penrod interposed hastily, with the pathetic semblance of a laugh. "I only said that in fun."

"In 'fun!"" repeated Rupe stormily. You better look out how you"-

"Well, I said I wasn't in earnest." Penrod retreated a few steps. 44I knew you could all the time. I expect I could do it to some of the boys up at the Third myself. Couldn't I?"

"No; you.couldn't." "Well, there must be some boy up there that I could"-

"No; they aint. You better"-"I expect not, then." said Penrod quickly. "You better 'expect not.' Didn't I tell you once you'd never get back alive if you ever tried to come up around the Third? You want me to show you how we do up there, 'bo?" He began a slow and deadly advance, whereupon Penrod timidly offered a diversion:

"Say, Rupe, I got a box of rats in our stable under a glass cover, so you can watch 'em jump around when you hammer on the box. Come on and look at 'em."

"All right," said the fat faced boy, slightly mollified. "We'll let Dan kill 'em."

"No, sir! I'm goin' to keep 'em. They're kind of pets. I've had 'em all summer. I got names for 'em and"-"Look here, bo. Did you hear me say we'll let Dan kill 'em?" "Yes, but I won't"- work upon, he approached Duke in the back yard, and, bending double, seized the lowly animal by the forepaws.

"I let you know my name's Penrod Schofield," hissed the boy. He protruded his underlip feroclously, scowled and thrust forward his head until his nose touched the dog's. "And you better look out when Penrod Schofield's around, or you'll get in big trouble! You understan' that. 'bo?" The next day, and the next, the increasing change in Penrod puzzled and distressed his family, who had no idea of its source. How might they guess that here worship takes such forms? They were vaguely conscious that a rather shubby boy, not of the neighborhood, came to "play" with Penrod several times, but they failed to connect this circumstance with the pecultar behavior of the son of the house, whose ideals (his, father remarked) seemed to have 'unddenly become identical with those of Gyp the Blood.

> CHAPTER XV. The Imitator.

EANWHILE, for Penrod himself, "life had taken on new meaning, new richness," He had become a fighting manin conversation at least. "Do you want to know how I do when they try to slip up on me from behind?" he asked Della. And he enacted for her unappreciative eye a scene of fistic maneuvers wherein he held an imaginary antagonist helpless in a net of stratagems.

Frequently, when he was alone, he would outwit and pummel this same enemy, and, after a cunning feint. land a dolorous stroke full upon a face of air. "There! I guess you'll know better next time. That's the way we do up at the Third!"

Sometimes in solitary pantomime he encountered more than one opponent at a time, for numbers were apt to come upon him treacherously, especially at a little after his rising hour. when he might be caught at a disadvantage-perhaps standing on one leg to incase the other in his knickerbockers. Like lightning he would hurl the trapping garment from him, and, ducking and pivoting, deal great sweeping blows among the circle of sneaking devils. (That was how he broke the clock in his bedroom.) And while these battles were occupying his attention, it was a waste of voice to call him to breakfast, though if his mother, losing patience, came to his room, she would find him seated on the bed pulling at a stocking. "Well. ain't I coming as fast as I can?"

At the table and about the house generally he was bumptious, loud with fatuous misinformation and assumed a domineering tone, which neither satire nor reproof seemed able to reduce, but it was among his own intimates that his new superiority was most outrageous. He twisted the fingers and squeezed the necks of all the boys of the neighborhood, meeting their indignation with a boarse and rasping laugh he had acquired after short practice in the stable, where he jeered and taunted the lawnmower, the garden scythe and the wheelbarrow quite out of countenance. Likewise he bragged to the other boys by the hour, Rupe Collins being the chief subject of encomium-next to Penrod himself. "That's the way we do up at the Third," became staple explanation of violence, for Penrod, like Tartarin, was plastic in the hands of his own imagination, and at times convinced himself that he really was one of those dark and murderous spirits exclusively of whom "the Third" was composed according to Rupe Collins.

It was Duke who brought it about.

waiting here to tell you, Bob, you mustn't come near the house. If I were you I'd stay away from even this neighborhood-far away! For awhile I don't think it would be actually safe for"-

"Margaret, will you please"-

"It's all on account of that dollar you gave Penrod this morning," she whiled. "First he bought that horrible concertina that made papa so furl-9US"--

"But Penrod didn't tell that I"---

"Oh, wait." she cried lamentably "Listen! He didn't tell at lunch, but he got home about dinner time in the most-well, I've seen pale people before, but nothing like Penrod. Nobody could imagine it-not unless they'd seen him. And he looked so strange and kept making such unnatural faces and at first all he would say was that he'd eaten a little piece of apple and thought it must have had some microbes on it. But he got sicker and sicker, and we put him to bed, and then we all thought he was going to die, and, of course, no little piece of apple would have well, and he kept getting worse, and then he-said he'd had a dollar. He said he'd spent it for the concertina, and watermelon, and chocolate creams, and heorice sticks,

With chill dignity she withdrew, entered the house and returned to the sick room, leaving the young man in outer darkness to brood upon his rime-and upon Penrod.

That sincere invalid became convaescent upon the third day, and a week elapsed, then, before he found an opportunity to leave the house unaccompanied-save by Duke. But at last he set forth and approached the Jones neighborhood in high spirits, pleasantly conscious of his pallor, hollow cheeks and other perquisites of illness provocative of interest.

One thought troubled him a little because it gave him a sense of inferiority to a rival. He believed, against his will, that Maurice Levy could have successfully eaten chocolate creams, licorice sticks, lemon drops, jaw breakers, peanuts, waffles, lobster croquettes, sardines, cinnamon drops, watermelon, pickles, popcorn, ice cream and sausage with raspberry lemonade and cider.

Penrod had admitted to himself that Maurice could do it and afterward attend to business or pleasure without the slightest discomfort, and this was probably no more than a fair estimate of one of the great constitutions of all time. As a digester, Maurice Levy would have disappointed a Borgia. Fortunately, Maurice was still at Atlantic City, and now the convalescent's heart leaped. In the distance he saw Marjorie coming-in pink again, with a ravishing little parasol over her head. And alone! No Mitchy-Mitch was to mar this meeting.

Penrod increased the feebleness of his steps, now and then leaning upon the fence as if for support.

"How do you do, Marjorle?" he said in his best sickroom voice as she came near.

To his pained amazement she proceeded on her way, her nose at a celebrated elevation-an icy nose. She cut him dead.

He threw his invalid's airs to the winds and hastened after her.

"Marjorie," he pleaded, "what's the matter? Are you mad? Honest, that day you said to come back next moroing and you'd be on the corner, I was sick. Honest, I was awful sick, Marjorie! I had to have the doctor"-

"Doctor!" She whirled upon him, her lovely eyes blazing. "I guess we've had to have the doctor enough at our house, thanks to you, Mister Penrod Schofield. Papa says you haven't got near sense enough to come in out of the rain after what you did to poor little Mitchy-Mitch"-

"What?" "Yes, and he's sick in bed yet!" Marjorie went on with unabated fury. "And paps says if he over catches you In this part of town"--"What'd I do to Mitchy-Mitch?"

"You know well enough what you gasped Penrod.

"What'll make Duke sick?" Penrod demanded.

"Eatin' dead buildogs people leave around here."

This was not improvisation but formula, adapted from other occasions to the present encounter. Nevertheless, it was new to Penrod, and he was so taken with it that resentment lost itself in admiration. Hastily committing the gem to memory for use upon a dog owning friend, be inquired in a sociable tone:

"What's your dog's name?"

"Dan. You better call your ole pup. 'cause Dan eats live dogs."

Dan's actions poorly supported his master's assertion, for upon Duke's ceasing to bark Dan rose and showed the most courteous interest in making the little old dog's acquaintance. Dan had a great deal of manner, and it became plain that Duke was impressed favorably in spite of former prejudice, so that presently the two trotted amicably back to their masters and sat down with the harmonious but indifferent air of having known each other intimately for years.

They were received without comment, though both boys looked at them reflectively for a time. It was Penrod who spoke first.

"What number you go to?" (In an "oral lesson in English" Penrod had been instructed to put this question in another form, "May I ask which of our public schools you attend?")

"Me? What number do I go to?" said the stranger contemptuously. "I don't go to no number in vacation." "I mean when it ain't."

"Third," returned the fat faced boy. "I got 'em all scared in that school."

"What of?" innocently asked Penrod, to whom "the third"-in a distant part of town-was undiscovered coun-

"What of? I guess you'd soon see what of if you ever was in that school about one day. You'd be lucky if you got out allve!" "Are the teachers mean?"

"What won't you?" Rupe became sinister immediately. "It seems to me you're gettin' pretty fresh around here."

"Well, I don't want"-

Mr. Collins once more brought into play the dreadful eye to eye scowl as practiced "up at the Third" and sometimes also by young leading men upon the stage.

Frowning quite appallingly and thrusting forward his underlip, he placed his nose almost in contact with the nose of Penrod, whose eyes natu-

Then, when Penrod had exhausted himself repeating to nausea accounts of the prowess of himself and his great friend, he would turn to two other subjects for vainglory. These were his father and Duke, Mothers must accept the fact that between babyhood and manhood their sons do not boast of them. The boy, with boys, is a Choctaw, and either the influence or the protection of women is shameful. "Your mother won't let you," is an insuit. But, "My father won't let me," is a dignified explanation and cannot be hooted. A boy is ruined among his fellows if he talks much of his mother or sisters, and he must recognize it as his duty to offer at least the appearance of persecution to all things ranked as female, such as cats and every species of fowl. But he must champion his father and his dog, and, ever ready to pit either against any challenger, must picture both as ravening for battle and absolutely unconquerable.

Penrod, of course, had always talked by the code, but, under the new stimulus, Duke was represented virtually as a cross between Bob, Son of Battle. and South American vampire, and this in spite of the fact that Duke himself often sat close by, a living lie, with the hope of peace in his heart. As for Penrod's father, that gladiator was painted as of sentiments and dimensions suitable to a superdemon composed of equal parts of Goliath, Jack Johnson and the Emperor Nero.

Even Penrod's walk was affected. He adopted a gait which was a kind of taunting swagger, and when he passed other children on the street he practiced the habit of feinting a blow; then as the victim dodged he rasped out the triumphant horse haugh which he gradually mastered to horrfble perfection. He did this to Marjorie Jones. Aye, this was their next meeting, and such is Eros, young. What was even worse, in Marjorie's opinion, he went on his way without explanation and left her standing on the corner talking about it long after he was out of hearing.

langhter, after which he pointed suddenly at Penrod's right hand. "Where'd you get that wart on your finger?" he demanded severely. "Which finger?" asked the mystified Penrod, extending his hand. "The middle one." "Where?" "There!" exclaimed Rupe Collins, seizing and vigorously twisting the wartless finger naively offered for his inspection. "Quit!" shouted Penrod in agony.

'Queeyut!" "Say your prayers!" commanded Rupe, and continued to twist the luckless finger until Penrod writhed to his knees.

"Ow!" The victim, released, looked grievously upon the still painful finger. At this Rupe's scornful expression altered to one of contrition. "Well, I declare!" he exclaimed remoreefully. "I didn't s'pose it would hurt. Turn about's fair play; so now you do that to me."

He extended the middle finger of his left hand and Penrod promptly seized it, but did not twist it, for he was instantly swung cound with his back to his amiable new acquaintance. Rupe's right hand operated upon the back of Penrod's shender meck; Rupe's knee tortured the small of Penrod's

Young Conquerors.

Napoleon said that a man ages quickly on battlefields. Speaking of one of his generals, he said at Austerlitz that Ordener was worn out, adding: "One has a short time for war. I am good for another six years, and then I shall have to stop."

"Strangely enough," says Lord Rosebery in "The Last Phase," "his judgment was exactly verified. Six years and a month from Austerlitz (which was fought on Dec. 2, 1805) would have brought him to 1812, to the Russian campaign. which, if he had observed his own rule, he would have avoided."

When his "star" was eclipsed for ever at Waterloo he was but forty-six years of age, but he had been a broken man in body, and to an increasing extent in mental power, long before. Wellington fought his last battle at forty-six, Ney at forty-five, Nelson at forty-seven. Alexander the Great was only thirty-three when death ended his career of conquest. Hannibal was in his forty-sixth year when he was finally defeated at Zama by Scipio.

A Pair of Eminent Grave Diggers.

The profession have a saying that parts make actors. When the $20,000 benefit to Lester Wallack was given in New York, with one of the historic "Hamlet" casts of the century, the public, of course, expected to see a performance that could never be forgotten because of its all round greatness. There was disappointment for the expectant innocents. All star casts want proportion, and this particular performance of the sublime tragedy was "queer."

For example, Joseph Jefferson and William J. Florence played the grave ers. and in their dressin er Horutio's "there crack'd a noble heart." Mr. Jefferson said to his companion:

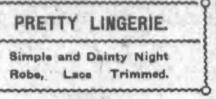

(Conducted by the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union.)

NATION ON THE WATER WAGON. "The German emperor has put us in the way of saving ourselves. Not he, but drink, was our enemy, and the kaiser has slain our enemy for us. He has made us adopt temperance and nothing can defeat us now." This was said in Petrograd by Mr. Benislowsky, director of the Russian-American Steamship company and a member of the duma, as reported by Mary Isabel Brush in an article, "A Nation on the Water Wagon," in the Saturday Evening Post. Tc the czar the writer gives credit for the empire-wide stoppage of drink. Others, she says, would have stopped the sale of vodka merely for the mobilization, but it had long been the determination of the czar to abolish the evil and with the war came the psychological moment. When his prime minister declared a total abstinence measure "impossible" he requested his resignation, and shortly afterward issued the mandate which lifted the liquor curse from a domain which covers one-seventh of the entire globe.

"Russia," says Mrs. Brush. "entirely sober for the first time in her national existence, stands up bright and buoyant, with a new hope and a new joy. She has no regrets and no problems. Even the minister of finance, His Excellency Mr. Bark, says she has not, as he stands smiling with optimism in the capital of his emancipated country and faces the situation of raising-to replace the revenue from vodka-the modest sum, of a thousand million rubles a year."

BEER CONDEMNED.

After twenty-five years of practice Dr. S. S. Lungren, a leading physician and surgeon, has this to say about beer: "It is difficult to find any part in the confirmed beer drinker's machinery that is doing its work as it should. This is why their life cords snap off like glass rods when disease or accident gives them a little blow. Beer drinking shortens life. This is not a mere opinion; it is a wellsettled, recognized fact. Physicians and insurance companies accept this as unquestionably as any other andisputed fact of science. The great English physicians decide that the heart's action is increased 13 per cent in its efferts to throw off alcohol introduced into the circulation. The result is easily figured out. The natural pulse beat is 76 per minute. If we multiply this by 60 an hour, and 24 hours in a day, and add 13 per cent, we find that the heart has been compelled to do an extra work during that time in throwing off the burden of a few drinks equal to 15.5 tons lifted one foot high.

Moral Failings of Nervous Children. Stealing is not as common as un truthfulness and usually takes the mild form of the pilfering of jellies or sweets. Thus frequently we find the physical basis right there in the demand of the system for more sugar. Some children will take from others what they consider trifles merely from a desire to possess and would not think of appropriating anything of great value. Such a child does not consider this a form of theft and if rudely awakened to the fact that it is will suffer marked nervous shock. In a hysterical desire to ingratiate themselves with parents or teachers some children will steal money and other valuables, but always with a desire to give it to others and reserve none for themselves.

Now, in dealing with any of these forms of theft the child must not be accused of being a thief; neither must his act be called theft. It must be clearly shown to him that the act is not right; that he has no right to anything which belongs to another, and then the promise may be exacted that he will respect these rights in the future. The child should not be impressed with the full gravity of the offense because he will then be in dread of the punishment which he sees meted out to ordinary thieves. But the parent must not overlook even apparently harmless pilfering of sweets. A continuance of such habits may lead to the taking of valuables, and it must he checked as soon as possible.

A Mother's Seven Commandments. Make love to every one, including your own children. If you say pretty things to the kiddles they will say pretty things to you.

The larger number of children in a family the better are the opportunities for a natural education. Your youngest child is always the brightest, because one child learns from another quicker than from an older person. Never say "don't" to a child. If he becomes mischievous try to interest him in something else.

The Firlinfoens,

At Brianza, in Lombardy, there flourishes a very curious sort of band, all the members of which play the same kind of instrument, known as the "firlinfoens." This corresponds to what we know as "panpipes" and is constructed of reeds fastened side by side, the bass pipes being often several feet long, while the others gradually decrease in size.

The "firlinfoens," as the players are called, after their instruments, are as a rule ignorant of music and they learn their tunes by ear, often from a phonograph. It is said that the panpipe players experience all the sensations of intoxication after a march due to the energetic blowing and the constant wagging of the head to and fro. The music, although conveying to the stranger at first a most curious effect, is said to be not unpleasant --Washington Star.

The March to Meooa.

The great caravan which every year sets out from Cairo for Mecca has a conductor on a camel leading the way. Day and night, whatever the weather is, he remains without any covering. naked to the waist. With him march men with large torches, which are kept alight during the night and illuminate the column of smoke above them, so that it appears a pillar of fire. During the day, when the head of the caravan is difficult to see on account of intervening hills and mounds of sand, the torches are kept burning, so that instead of the light which served during the night a column of smoke indicates to the straggling caravan from afar the direction of the march and the time and place of a halt.

The Professor's Reproof.

During a certain athletic event at a big university the students of a certain professor's class, well aware that their studies had been neglected, were prepared for reproof, but not for just the way in which it came.

At the end of the hour the professor slammed down his book on the desk and exclaimed:

"That's the worst recitation 1 ever listened to. Why, I've actually done nine-tenths of it myself,"-Exchange.

REASONS FOR ABSTINENCE.

It's hard to be a physical adviser and keep off the subject of alcoholic liquors when you realize that there never can be anything like a high average of physical well-being in a country where a large part of the male population insists on poisoning itself regularly or periodically. I will simply sum up a few of the reasonsstrictly from the standpoint of the physical trainer-why men should not drink alcohol.

Alcohol is not a food; it is a drug. It injures the blood.

- It retards the digestion.
- It is the worst enemy of the brain worker.
- It hardens the liver.
- It destroys the kidneys.
- It furnishes no support to the body. It is a depressant.
- It is a most destructive agent in the - state of health or of disease.
- It deadens the body and the senses It affects the mental and moral side of nature.
- Alcohol users show death rate of 20
- per cent greater than nonusers.

THE PRIME CAUSE.

Chicago's recently appointed morals commission will, it is said, study the city's vice problem and find ways and means to solve it-will "investigate causes and devise methods of prevention." This is another blow for the saloon. There can be no investigation into causes of vice and disease which will not show that the liquor traffic does more than anything else to produce and foster all phases of immorality.

VALUES IN MAINE.

The valuation of Maine increased in 1914 by the substantial sum of $9,503,696. There was an increase of $741,071 in the value of live stock; and an increase of $695,991 in the value of automobiles. The total valuation of automobiles was $4,047,516; live stock, $17,961,690. The total valuation for the state is $439,529,198. This if divided among the population would give every one of the 742,371 inhabitants $592.50 each.

NEW WAGON NOT NEEDED.

But after seeing police patrol just before the new Hqhow I behave in society she refuses to uor law went into effect. It was not take any of the blame."-Brooklyn Cit. delivered for some weeks and after seeing the result of the new law they cancelled the order, saying that the old horse-drawn vehicle could do all

This to the time to begin your warfare upon the fly and precautions taken now ane worth all sorts of preventives later on. Every fly that you see buzzing through your rooms and allow to live-may breed millions, each one of which may in turn breed millions more. Very often a housewife will not take the bother to chase a single fly, whereas if her rooms were filled with any number of them she would start a clearance at once. If she could only realize that the numbers would never be there if she killed the single one perhaps she would exert herself more at the first glimpse of the dreaded pest. The spring of the year is the breeding time for flies. In another month. for every single fly that you allow to live today you will find hundreds of thousands. When a child wakens frequently this is generally due to nervous irritability. Not infrequently this depends upon poor or improper nourishment. Careful consideration should be given to the question of diet, for it may be insufficient in amount or of such character that it is not easily digested.

If the sleeping apartment is overheat. ed or is poorly ventilated, so that the child is robbed during sleep of good fresh air or the bed coverings are insufficient or uncomfortable this will result in disturbed sleep. Naturally with these causes present any undue excitement will aggravate the trouble.

Moral Responsibility.

At seven a child should know clearly the difference between right and wrong. We do not mean by this that he can then decide finer questions of duty and morals, but he will be able to discern what is right from what is not; and, having that power, he is accountable for his acts, if normally developed. If there is a failure at this age to discern these clearly the child should receive the benefit of a thorough physical examination to discover the fault.

Small Town Intolerance.

We are a small town with all a small town's intolerance in our viewpoint. We are prone, I am afraid, to be self-sufficient and narrow; we gossip a great deal; we listen to ill of our neighbors much more readily than we do to good of them. We pride ourselves on being just, if stern, in our judgment of our fellowmen; but in reality we are without much mercy and we are sadly lacking in charity. We are altogether too ready to bolster up our own virtues by the lack of them in others. In short, we are a typical small town.

We move in our little ruts and proudly fancy ourselves of some importance and of some use to the world. This is true as far as the world is represented by our own town boundaries. Outside of that we First Universalist church gave a sadon't count-which is, perhaps, the cred concert. Be Sure of the Fact. In the Scripture case the man had been born blind and everybody knew 33tf it. He met Jesus one day and in a very brief period of time was made to see, a fact to which there was no contradiction. Now this is a most important matter in the application of the 14tf text to moral or spiritual transformations. The genuineness of these are usually supported by some radical phone change in a person, and also by the permanence of the change. The permanent change being established, no one questions the fact. If it is an individual that is interested in this matter, he may simply ask himself the question, "Are things different from what they were?" He can usually answer that question with the greatest positiveness. He knows what he now loves, and what his life is as compared with what it was, and he has hopes for the future that give him a satisfaction that he never knew before. In short we can say, "He knows that he is saved, it is a fact." Job knew that his Redeemer lived. Paul was fully persuaded that the good work had begun in him. John knew that he and other Christians had passed from death unto life. As to the outward steps that may have to be taken, they may be known, as in the case of the man born blind. In most cases of genuine conversion the outward steps can be seen, but so much has been made of these that souls have been made to believe that unless they could see the steps in their own conversion they had no claim to be called children of God. The books that have recently appeared, such as "Twice-Born Men," by Harold Begbie, relating moral and spiritual transformations, have left the impression on many that they must pass through similar experiences. In short they must know "how.

In genuine spiritual transformation the work is that of the Holy Spirit, who works when and where and how he pleases. It must be kept in mind that the Holy Spirit is God, and God has always reserved to himself the chase. right to keep his purposes secret, and as well his methods of operation, and MOSHER, it is more than foolish to try to enter GRISWOLD & C., where angels fear to tread. Why Not Ask "How?"

Summing up these thoughts, we may observe that the asking of the question "how" is frequently a mere quibble, the avoiding of the main proposition. It is oftentimes not sincere, the purpose being other than getting an answer for proper ends. In the case before us the question was asked to involve Jesus in some technical breach of the Jewish Sabbath day.

There is great impertinence in ask ing the question, for it may belong to the secret things of God. The physician does not ordinarily feel under any obligation to tell the patient how the medicine works

Sometimes the answer of the question would be the disturbing of the comfort of the inquirer, and it is merciful in God to keep the process a seoret.

Mr. Automobile Owner:---

Your car represents an investment of several hundreds-possibly thousands of dollars. You exercise every precaution for protecting this investment.

You insure your car-of course.

But as to the up-keep? Do you exercise the same precautions? The heart of your car is the engine; do you use the right kind of oil? The tires are no less important; do you buy at so much per tire or so much for 4,500 miles guaranteed mileage. Perhaps you make your own repairs; do you know if you get the best? You should know and we can help you.

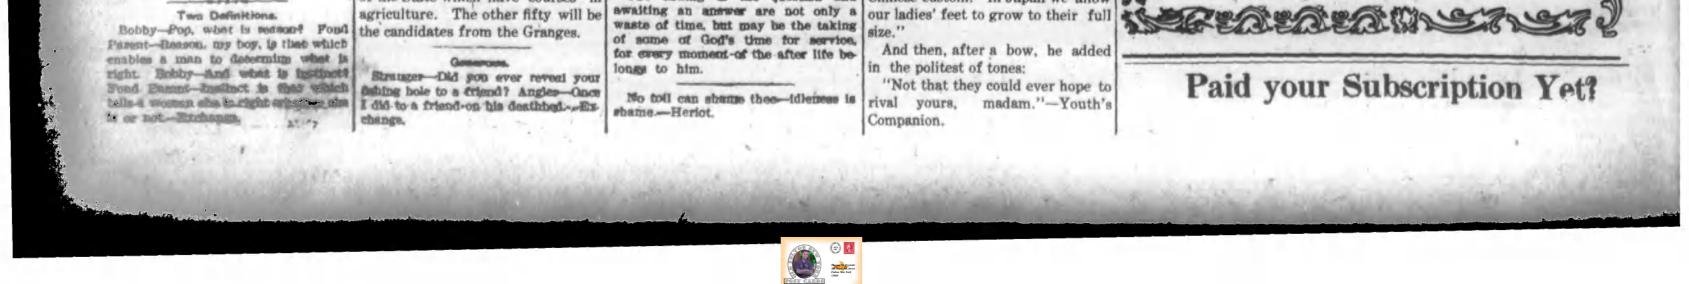

We are now carrying a very complete line of Automobile Supplies. The Messenger of Health

PUBLIC HEALTH HINTS

Prepared Each Week For the Readers of This Newspaper by the New York State Department of Health.

MANY people think of the nurse as a person to call in when they are very sick, but the public health nurse is as important a factor in keeping a town well as the ordinary sick nurse is in caring for a person who is sick.

Much public health work is necessarily somewhat remote and cold and official. It deals with statistics and with public works. The nurse deals with people.

It is the public health nurse who follows up the child who has been excluded from school on account of communicable disease or in whom the school physician has found some defect of eyes or ears or teeth and sees that the other members of the family are protected or the defect properly treated.

It is the public health murse who teaches the young mother how to keep her haby well, how to modify and pasteurize milk, how to clothe and bathe and care for the little one.

It is the public health nurse who goes into the home and helps the tuberculosis victim to overcome his invisible enemy and finds the early cases while there is time to effect a prompt and complete cure.

The public health nurse teaches people how to keep well. She deals with the causes of disease. She detects the unsuspected conditions in tenement and factory, which are sure to breed disease if they are not remedied, and wisely and tactfully she persuades those in authority to cure them. She is a sort of expert mother to the whole community ander her charge.

In the fall of 1913 the State Charities Aid Association offered the services of a public health nurse for a period of two months to each of the two local Granges which sold the greatest number of Red Cross Seals. Webster and Lewiston were the winners, and the work done last summer was a revelation of what may be accomplished in even a short space of time. The Grange nurse at Webster in two months made 165 visits to patients (including forty-five tuberculosis families and thirtytwo mothers with young babies), 285 other visits (to schools, factories, dentists, physicians, social agencies, etc.) in order to secure proper care and treatment and hygienic conditions for patients and gave twelve lectures.

The work of the nurse in Webster appealed so strongly to the public that the Grange took the lead in raising money to employ a nurse this summer until the fall, when the question of a regular public health nurse for the town will be submitted to the taxpayers.

Has your community a public health nurse? If not, there is probably no one thing which would do more to prevent disease and to promote health than to provide for one.

THE GENOA TRIBUNE and N. Y. World $1.65

Six presidents of the United States have spoken on this platform. The leaders in American life and thought have here found their most responsive audiences. This auditorium seats 5,300 people comfortably and will accommodate 7,500. Its open air sides afford perfect ventilation and comfort during the hottest days, friends. Its summer schools and reading courses are also furnished at actual low cost figures.

Twenty thousand "friendly folks" make an average population at Chautauqua. They come from all the states of the Union. They come from China and Japan, from South America and joyed a tremendous privilege. To have from Europe, where Chautauqua. N Y., has the reputation of an "American world's public forums is a distinction Mecca.

Chautauqua Life is "Different."

One can be as quiet at Chautauqua as one chooses or as busy all day long. The long program of lectures by really great men, the diversity of the musical ments by world celebrated artists will and yearly donations from generous sides give perfect ventilation and comfort during even the hottest days of the year. Five years ago a magnificent Massey organ, the gift of the manufacturer and worth at least $30,- 000, was installed. To have been a member of this Chautanqua audience is to have enbeen a speaker on this greatest of the which thousands covet and but a comparative few enjoy.

Expensive "Talent."

More money is spent on "talent" for Chautauqua's eight week program than would be suspected by the 50,000 peoprogram and the platform entertain- ple who get its full benefits for the small gate fee of $8 per season. The budget runs into the tens of thousands. But the very best is thereby obtainedstatesmen fresh from their duties at Washington or the various state capitals, authorities on social and profes Lional lines from the big universities. musicians just off tour, preachers whose names are household words and entertainers of the highest grade. .

> Very often there are forty events or more scheduled daily. And at least 120 lectures and 200 popular concerts are given during the period, so that every type of mind and individual taste may find something of information, education or inspiration to carry home for the coming year.

Chautauqua life brings speakers and audience close together with its air of comfort and informality.

WORLD'S GREATEST PUBLIC FORUM-CHAUTAUQUA, N. Y.

Sixty Day Assembly Will Have Big Speakers and Mammoth Program. The leaders in American life and thought have always found the Chautauqua platform hospitably open to them, and there have been very few of the nation's great statesmen, authors. educators, travelers and propagandists who have not appeared before Chautauqua assembly at some time during the last forty years.

This coming season a noted and varied array of such talent is offered:

Mary Antin, world famous as a young Jewish author and champion of the immigrant, will lecture, E. J. Ward, Wisconsin's state adviser on civic development, will direct a week's work on "Community Service." Henry Turner Bailey, America's greatest exponent of art in every day life, just returned from his task of awarding find many worth while conferences and prizes at the Panama-Pacific Exposition, will spend the summer at Chautauqua.

tauque; Bisbop Francis J. McConnell of Denver and Dr. Samuel B. McCormick, University of Pittsburgh, will also be on the program for a series of talks.

Special weeks this summer will be devoted to particularly live topics. Justice and the courts will be an open question for some 500 lawyers to wrangle over, under the leadership of Justice William L. Ransom of New York City's city court. George W. Alger will be featured with his series of lectures. based on matter recently published in the World's Work Magazine. And Dr. Katharine Bement Davis, New York city commissioner of correction, will speak on "Prison Reform."

Temperance week will bring a live discussion of the national prohibition campaign. Ex-Governor Malcolm R. Patterson of Tennessee will tell "Why I Changed Front on the Liquor Question," and Hon. J. Denny O'Nell of Pittsburgh will speak on "Prohibition From the Business Man's Point of View." Many other prohibition and temperance speakers will attend, and William Jennings Bryan has indicated his desire to be present.

Week of the Great War.

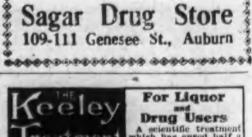

A week devoted to a study of the "War of Eleven Nations In Europe" will find several speakers of authority who are just back from the front. Dr. Lincoln Wirt, special representative for the World Peace Foundation and the Boston Herald, will return to make his first public report at Chautauqua. Norman Angell, whose books showing the logical fallacy of war upset modern ideas as to its necessity, will expound his widely quoted views. Dr. Herbert Adams Gibbons, special writer for the New York Herald and anthor of two recent books dealing with "Changes In Europe," will conduct summer classes and lecture on the subject. Director Arthur Bestor will describe Europe's war lords from his recent intimate studies of their personalities, and Sanford Griffith, who has just returned from Belgium, where he served as "special field investigator," will describe the borrors of war and life at the front as he saw it. Community affairs will be discussed in every possible connection during a week in which sessions will be led by Mr. E. J. Ward, Wisconsin's state adviser on civic improvements and the like. Social centers in the city and public school centers in the country will be particularly featured. Internationalism and Christianity will be the final week, and the theme will be "What Is the Duty of Christianity as a Power In the Present Military Crists?" Dr. Frank Gunsenlus, Dr. Charles E. Jefferson, Bishop James W. Bashford,
