Open Season for U. S. Seeds.
Now is the time for all good people to send to their Congressmen and Senators for a packet of seed. The distribution is being made. In the congressional offices at Washington many a young lady is earning pin money by addressing the little franked slips which are sent to the Department of Agriculture and there affixed to an envelope which usually contains five varieties of flower and vegetable seed. Whether he votes each year for the appropriation of a million dollars for this nonsense or not, each Congressman and Senator has 15,000 of these packets placed at his disposal. In Brooklyn they make soup out of the peas, feed the radish seed to the canary, and then send to Uncle Sam for more. In some places they mix the lot and serve them to the chickens. Nevertheless, a great many government seeds find their way into the ground, even if they don't always come up—and most of them, whatever happens to them, serve as valentines from a loving Congressman to his constituents.—Denver Commercial.

NOT ENOUGH CHILDREN
over receives the proper balance of food to sufficiently nourish both body and brain during the growing period when nature's demands are greater than in mature life. This is shown in so many pale faces, lean bodies, frequent colds,
and lack of ambition.
For all such children we say with unmistakable earnestness: They need Scott's Emulsion, and need it now. It possesses in concentrated form the very food elements to enrich their blood. It changes weakness to strength; it makes them sturdy and strong. No alcohol, and no sugar.

Venice Center.
March 27—The shriek of the locomotive is heard once more and it is the most welcome sound we have heard for many a day.

The mountains of snow by which we have been shut in so long are beginning to diminish and if this mild weather continues they will soon disappear entirely. It is hopeful the blizzards are past for this time. We surely have had all we care to see.

Our school, Miss Ketchum, teacher, is having a three weeks' vacation.
On Wednesday evening, March 22,
at the home of the bride's parents,
Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Bennett, occurred the wedding of their daughter, Gertrude L., to Ray Clark. The ceremony was performed by Rev. E.
E. Warner of Venice in the presence of nearly forty guests. The severe storm that was raging that day prevented some from attending. The couple were attended by Miss Gertrude Streeter and Charles Peckham.
The bridal gown was of white silk, and she carried a large bouquet of white roses. The gifts consisted of silver, table linen, lamps and a sum of money, besides the gifts from the parents of the bride of a suite of sitting room furniture, and from the parents of the groom, a cook stove.
They will reside after April 1, at the Snyder place, just east of Venice Center. Their many friends wish them much happiness in their married life.

for Petersburg, Va. Her going is a matter of regret to the members and congregation of the Baptist church, where her fine voice and helpful spirit will be greatly missed.

Silent Enthusiasm.
Theodore Watts, says Charles Rowley in his book, "Fifty Years of Work Without Wages," tells a story against himself. A nature enthusiast, he was climbing Snowdon and overtook an old gypsy woman. He began to dilate upon the sublimity of the scenery in somewhat gushing phrases. The woman paid no attention to him. Provoked by her irresponsiveness, he said: "You don't seem to care for this magnificent scenery?" She took the pipe from her mouth and delivered this settler: "I enjies it; I don't jabber."

Three of 'em.

Who Am I?

By B. C. Forbes

I AM the foundation of all business. I am the fount of all prosperity. I am the parent of genius. I am the salt that gives life its savor. I have laid the foundation of every fortune in America, from Rockefeller's down. I must be loved before I can bestow my greatest blessings and achieve my greatest ends. Loved, I make life sweet and purposeful and fruitful. I can do more to advance a youth than his own parents, be they ever so rich. Fools hate me; wise men love me. I am represented in every loaf of bread that comes from the oven, in every train that crosses the continent, in every ship that steams over the ocean, in every newspaper that comes from the press. I am the mother of democracy. All progress springs from me. Who am I? What am I? I AM WORK.

New York Central railroad officials will have the question of a new passenger depot at Seneca Falls brought to their attention shortly by Congressman Norman J. Gould and Assemblyman William J. Maier as a committee named by the chamber of commerce.

Game Protector Culver said there were more pheasants in Yates county this spring than he had ever before seen at this time of the year. Few of the birds he said have died this winter from exposure but the majority of them are decidedly thin just at present.

A flock of about a dozen pheasants has been wintering in the rear of the Lyons water works plant in Layton street. Engineer Harry Nichols commenced feeding the birds when the first snow fell and now, twice each day, he has a flock of birds at his door regularly.

The most cheering news to workmen of Ontario came with an announcement that the old schedules of wages for piecework in the Brooks plant of the American Locomotive company, existing prior to 1914, have been voluntarily restored by the officials of the company.

The two representatives of Ontario in the state legislature, Senator Thomas B. Wilson and Assemblyman Heber E. Wheeler, have introduced in the state legislature a bill to increase the salary of the surrogate of that county from the present salary of $1,500 to $2,000.

Effective June 1, the bricklayers, stone masons and plasterers of Hornell are to increase their scale of wages from 15 cents an hour to 60 cents. No trouble is anticipated owing to the change on account of the scarcity of masons and bricklayers.

It is reported that the Genesee valley cavalry organization, officially known as the Troop 101, may be required to go to one of the corners of the Mexican border to do garrison duty while the regulars are in Mexico. Troop leader of Avon has received notice from the government to hold 60 horses in readiness.

Charles F. Mott, chairman of the tuberculosis sanatorium committee of the board of supervisors, upon whose head a price of $1,500 was set by the county of Onondaga a week ago, was caught at Forest City, a small mountain village of North Carolina, about 60 miles west of Charlotte.

Which Choice?

SHALL I spend regularly my income, or shall I accumulate little by little a competence? Shall I take no thought of the future, or shall I regulate my expenditures to provide for old age? Shall my selfish desires and tastes control me, or shall I control myself? Shall I throw away the thoughtless nickel and dime, or shall I keep them against need? Shall I meet life's problems as a man or as a child? Shall I grasp opportunity when it thrusts itself upon me, or thoughtlessly brush it aside? Every man must, at one time or another, answer these questions for himself. Every man's answer determines largely every man's material success or failure.

Now Laugh!

Smile. Don't think about it. Probably won't happen that way, anyway.

And, if it does, 'twon't be as bad as you fear.

There's the real trouble—being afraid. We take a little trouble about the size of a gnat and look at it through the magnifying glass of fear until it looks as big as an elephant.

Then we are afraid of our own creation. Thing to do is to squash it while it is still no more than a gnat.

We don't hate squirmy things because of what we know they will do to us, but because of what we fear they might. Our reason tells us they are harmless, but our fear contradicts. Men are just as bad.

No need to tell a woman in what way. Smile.

There's so much joy for the least of us. There's so little pain for the most of us. It seems funny to me that any of us can't smile all the time at the rest of us.

Now laugh!—Los Angeles Times.

Historic Rose Tree.

The most venerable rose tree in existence is said to bloom against the ancient church of Hildesheim, in Germany. Notwithstanding the many parties which at different times have been in the ascendancy, they all seem to have respected and tended the rose tree, which, it is said, was planted by Charlemagne. The trunk is now almost as big as a man's body. There are five principal limbs trained against the church, the tree being protected by iron railings inclosing an area of about twenty-six square feet. The German soldiers in early ages tended the tree; Catholics and Protestants, in turn masters of the town, drained the ground; the soldiers of Turenne fastened up the branches with clamps, and those of Napoleon, a century and a half later, erected the railings.

For the Visitors.

In full view of the crowd in a very busy street two vendors of berries were busy with piles of thin wooden boxes, each scantily filled with immature fruit. Emptying box after box, the vendors deftly punched up one layer of the box bottom to a sharp angle pointed in the middle, propped it there with paper and then refilled the receptacle, taking great care that the finest and freshest looking berries should make a showy top covering.

One of the spectators grew indignant. "How in the world," he demanded, "do you expect to sell your wares when you openly show that they are not what they seem to be?"

"Aw, gwain!" said the vendor addressed. "This is New York, and there are more trains coming with more people.—Everybody's."

First Steam Press.

On Nov. 20, 1814, a newspaper for the first time was printed by steam. Although the application of steam power to printing machinery had been successfully experimented with some years previously, the hostility of the working printers rendered it unadvisable for the masters to introduce such a startling innovation into their printing houses. Toward the end of 1814, however, the growing circulation of the Times made a change of some kind necessary, and in the face of fierce opposition the second John Walter set up a steam printing press. So on the morning of Nov. 29 the leading article of the Times announced to its readers that they held in their hands that day a copy of the first newspaper to be printed by steam.—London Answers.

Wood Engraving.

It is still a mystery whether wood engraving came to Europe from the east or was rediscovered by some European artificer. There is a like uncertainty regarding the precise date of the first European woodcut. It is only known that European wood engraving was going on as early as the first quarter of the fifteenth century. It has been proved that a woodcut in the Paris library was printed in 1406. The very earliest wood engraving consisted of outlines and white spaces with smaller black spaces, but shading is

State and Government Aid Advocated For Highways.

THE NATION'S ARTERIES.

A. G. Batchelder Says That the Country Must Have a Maximum Opportunity For the Maximum Transport of Men and Munitions by Means of the Motorcar and Roads.

Roads of America may mean the very existence of the nation, according to A. G. Batchelder, chairman of the executive board of the American Automobile association. Roads that go somewhere, arteries of communication that bind the nations together, roads serving to the fullest extent commercial and social and possibly military needs—these are the highways now demanded and obtainable by that logical federal co-operation with the several states which has been accentuated by the facts set concisely forth in the stupendous European conflict, according to Mr. Batchelder. The chairman points to the fact that in exactly the same manner as it became necessary that the states should help their county units in the construction of comprehensive road systems it is now essential that the national government shall lend aid to its state parts in the early realization of a road plan that will in the greatest degree weld together coast and coast and lakes and gulfs.

Mr. Batchelder says that the country must have a maximum opportunity for the maximum transport of men and munitions, and the motorcar and the roads are the means for its accomplishment. Thirty thousand miles of road would gridiron the entire United States with interconnecting and interlocking highways and would embrace every state in the Union, giving each one a big main artery for highway travel, according to Batchelder, who believes that four direct east and west roads from the Atlantic to the Pacific, with one "Y" from the great lakes to the Pacific coast along the northern border, five north and south roads—border to border—and three prominent diagonals for important interconnections would be included in this total mileage. At $10,000 per mile Mr. Batchelder estimates that this would mean a road requirement of $300,000,000. This $10,000 per mile is based on an average of extremes from low cost because of topography and nearby material to high cost per mile because of contra-conditions, and the figures also include bridges and culverts. At the present population and the normal increase during the period of ten years this would mean an equated payment of 31 cents per inhabitant per year. Mr. Batchelder points to the fact that a state which does not provide interstate road connection with adjoining states is plainly at a disadvantage and says that a road brings commensurate value for the expenditure and is available to those living in the territory traversed, as well as those who come from a distance. He believes that the commonwealth should build arteries of communication and meet the wants of the largest number of people just as it is done by the railroads.

Congress and Road Building.

At a meeting of its executive board the American Automobile association went on record as favoring federal aid in a good roads measure which has been drafted by the executive committee of the American Association of State Highway Officials. Briefly, the bill provides for national and state co-operation on whatever roads may be mutually decided upon, with the state matching every federal dollar it receives on the basis of its area, population and road mileage in proportion to the total for the whole country.

It seems to be generally recognized that any bill which the congress of the United States will pass is likely to include a requisite that a state shall first establish a highway department in order to have a centralized direction in construction and maintenance of roads.

Just six of the forty-eight states have yet to establish highway departments. Georgia, South Carolina, Mississippi, Nebraska, Indiana and Texas are the six states which have yet to recognize the need of a state highway department.

Cost of Hauling Contracted.

In 1908 France expended $600,000,000 on her roads, the best in Europe, about $15.33 per capita.

It costs 7 cents a ton per mile to haul tonnage upon her public roads an average of 25 cents per ton per mile in the United States, 18 cents per ton per mile more than in France. Over 2,000,000,000 tons in this country are hauled seven miles average upon the road. This average haul upon the public road before it reaches rail or water transportation costs $1.20 per ton more for seven miles than it would cost in France, a loss we pay in haulage of freights for the privilege of having bad roads of $2,520,000,000 a year. The French average, $15.33 per capita, on our 105,000,000 of population would be $1,533,000,000.

BIG FIGHT TO CLEAN UP HIBBING, MINN.

Under Saloon Rule Taxes Have Jumped to $211

Under Saloon Rule Taxes Have Jumped to $211

Hibbing, Minn.—There is a great fight here between the taxpayers and the saloon administration of this village, which has been conducting affairs at a ruinous rate.

Two years ago the saloon element secured control of the city, electing Victor L. Power as mayor. The first step of the saloon administration was to put about 900 of the 1,300 voters on the village payroll. These voters, together with the saloon element, who were given a free hand, could vote for any old thing needed by the gang. The saloons were and are now permitted to run wide open, night, day and Sunday.

Taxes rose by leaps and bounds until the levy for 1916 amounts to the appalling sum of $211 per capita. The average per capita rates of all the towns and villages of Minnesota about 900 population, outside the Range mining districts, is only $5.35 per capita.

Forty Cops For 9,000 People.

While the village has a population of less than 9,000 people, it requires more than forty policemen to keep order among the half a hundred saloons and gambling holes, which never close their doors. The police and fire departments of the village alone cost nearly $100,000 per year under the saloon rule.

Three years ago the outstanding village warrants drawing interest amounted to $284,792.

Under saloon rule they very soon jumped up to $1,252,587, an increase of $967,805 and in spite of the enormous tax levy of $191 per capita.

Now, in the face of a tax levy for 1916, the unpaid outstanding village warrants amount to more than one and a half million dollars.

The interest charged against the village alone amounts to about $90,000 per year, more than the entire operating expenses of any other village in Minnesota of similar size.

The city boasts of more street lights than Cincinnati, a city of nearly 400,000 inhabitants. It costs more than $13,000 to light a single street for a year. The street has forty lights on every corner, which burn all night so that the people can find their way to the saloons and gambling halls at all hours of the night.

Here are a few of the items required to run the city for the year ending Jan. 31, 1915:

Streets and alleys, payroll only.....$236,204

Cemetery..... 6,329

Police department, salaries only..... 46,178

Fire department..... 33,391

Besides paying for labor on the streets and alleys the sum of $236,204, the materials used in the same for the year cost $10,291 more.

Nearly $11,000 was expended in supplies for the fire department. Although the village has two fine brick fire halls, another one was wanted, and it cost the village just $20,584.

Charity and Rats.

They spent $4,895 for "charity" and $267 for burials on rats.

It cost $5,988 to operate the village detention hospital and $395 for material to keep up the municipal ice rink, $495 to maintain the ball park. Besides the $395 expended on material for the ice rink, it cost the village $1,261 in salaries to operate it.

Taxpayers in Revolt.

Recently the largest taxpayers of the village formed a combination and flatly refused to pay any further taxes, and the village is now "broke." The breweries will no longer take village warrants in payment of beer bills, and there are no funds in sight to meet the enormous payrolls of the greedy voters.

The Indian bureau has been appealed to by the citizens to come to their relief and end the situation. Hibbing is a village within the boundaries of the Indian treaty of Feb. 22, 1855, one of the provisions of which was to exclude the introduction of liquor into the territory until otherwise decided by congress. Congress has never revoked the treaty, and last winter the United States supreme court decided that this anti-liquor clause was still in full force and effect.

Thereupon the Indian bureau began closing the saloons in the district, a few towns at a time, until now practically all are closed. Saloons remain in only eight or ten villages, among them being Hibbing.

For some reason the saloons of Hibbing have been permitted to run openly and freely in defiance of all federal and state law, like a western mining camp. The taxpayers have been bombarding the Indian bureau at Washington with letters and telegrams asking that the law be enforced in Hibbing.

It is currently reported that a slush fund of $45,000 has been raised by the Hibbing saloon keepers to purchase further protection.

In the meantime the half a hundred saloons are running wide open day and night and Sundays, and nearly every one of them is said to operate in connection with gambling layouts and other vicious establishments.

Economy Hints

VERY one should have on hand directions for removing various stains which are apt to disturb one's peace of mind at some time or other.

A grease spot on silk is a common thing, and yet in many cases it could easily be removed by applying a paste made of equal parts of powdered French chalk and fuller's earth. Allow the mixture to remain on the spot for a few days, and then brush it off.

Iron rust, the bane of many housekeepers, can often be effaced by applying lemon juice and salt. Spread the stained portion moist with lemon. Wash the article in the regular way when the stain has disappeared.

Milk applied to a fresh ink stain will prove successful in removing it, but the trouble is that the ink usually spills when there is no milk near at hand. In this event the unfortunate one must wait until it is convenient to purchase oxalic acid. Having procured it, the spot should be moistened with cold water before the acid is applied, drop by drop. Allow it to stand a few minutes, and then rinse the stained article in cold water, to which a little ammonia has been added. A medicine dropper is a splendid thing to use to apply the acid.

It is advisable for every woman who was unable to remove fruit stains that marred her linen in the summer to place the linen out in the frost now that real winter days are here.

Stubborn tea stains can be eradicated by spreading the stained portion over a bowl and pouring glycerin through the material. Afterward pour boiling water.

Boiling water poured from a height will also remove coffee stains.

FOR HOUSEKEEPERS.

How to Remember Certain Proportions in Cooking Common Things.

Four eggs to one quart of milk for custards.

One teaspoonful of vanilla to one quart of custard.

Two ounces of gelatin to one and three-quarters quarts of liquid.

Four heaping tablespoonfuls of cornstarch to one quart of milk.

One even tablespoonful of baking powder to one cupful of flour.

One teaspoonful of soda to one pint of sour milk. One teaspoonful of soda to one pint of molasses.

One teaspoonful of baking powder is equal to one-half teaspoonful of soda and one teaspoonful of cream of tartar.

In preparing for baking, mix dry materials in one bowl and liquids in another; combine them quickly and put at once into the oven.

The oven for baking bread should be hot enough to brown a teaspoonful of flour in five minutes. For biscuits it should brown in one minute.

Rubbing a pie crust with butter a few minutes before it is time to take it from the oven will make it crisp.

How to "Do" Your Hair For Evenings This Winter.

Coils of tortoise shell or imitation amber, with touches of gold inlay on the ends, are intended to be thrust through the loose knot of hair.

Pins whose tops are of hinges so that they may be folded down flatly after they are thrust into the hair are set with rhinestones and with colored gems.

Tall Spanish combs of crystal set with brilliants that are beautiful in dark hair or the gray hair of the middle aged woman make stunning hair ornaments.

Gray pins of artistic shades and shapes are popular not only with white haired women, but also with girls who have blue eyes, since the use of gray pins or a gray comb in the hair will accentuate the blue and deepen it.

How to Let Down a Hem of a Cotton Gown.

Almost all cotton dresses shrink in washing and need letting down in the skirt. Before the dress goes to the tub take out the wide hem and turn it again at half the width. This brings the edge of the new hem to the crease in the bottom of the skirt, which gives a straight guide for basting. In almost every case the skirt comes out of the wash just the right length, with no streak of dirt to mark the old line.

How to Tell a Woman's Age Without Asking It.

The American Magazine gives the following rule for telling a woman's age:

"My son, wouldst thou know a woman's age? Watch her when she pouteth on her hat, whether she rammeth it on carelessly or regardeth the mirror with overmuch care, for, behold, her eyes shall tell thee where her mind wandereth!"

How to Make a Scalloped Edge in Embroideries Durable.

Before embroidering a scalloped edge, place the piece under the machine and stitch around on the outline mark, then work from the outside of stitching, and the scallop will be twice as durable.

Purdy--Clark.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred C. Clark at Venice Center was the scene of a happy event on Wednesday, March 29, when their daughter, Bessie V., became the bride of William Penn Purdy, the son of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Purdy of Venice. The guests numbered eighty-five. The rooms were prettily decorated for the occasion with evergreens, a corner of the room where the ceremony took place, being beautifully arranged with greenery for an altar. A large white bell hung from the ceiling, underneath which the bridal couple stood. The wedding march was played by Mrs. Wm. Heald.

The ceremony took place at 12 o'clock, Rev. F. T. Crumley of Locke officiating. The bride and groom were attended by Miss Lena Warner as bridesmaid and Mr. Claude Stevens as best man. The bride was becomingly gowned in tan color satin and carried yellow roses. The bridesmaid wore blue voile and carried yellow roses.

Following the ceremony, a four-course wedding luncheon was served by a number of young people. The bride's table was decorated with yellow roses.

The bride was the recipient of a large number of beautiful and valuable gifts in great variety.

In company with Mr. and Mrs. I. Ray Clark who were married March 22nd, the bride and groom left on the evening train for a wedding trip to unknown points. On their return, Mr. and Mrs. Purdy will commence housekeeping in rooms at the Purdy home near Stewart's Corners.

Sudden Death in Moravia.

Mrs. Adell McIntosh, widow of Duncan McIntosh, died suddenly shortly after 11 o'clock Monday night in Moravia. Heart failure was given as the cause of death. Mrs. McIntosh, who was about 60 years old, had suffered a severe attack of the grip last month and it was thought that to this attack weakness of the heart was due.

Mrs. McIntosh was the daughter of the late Porter and Lucinda Slocum White of Locke. She is survived by one daughter, Miss Mary McIntosh, a teacher in Bellville, N. J.; two sisters, Mrs. Ida White of Moravia and Mrs. Jennie Harris of Cleveland, O., and by three brothers, Charles S. and John P. White of Moravia and Orlando White of Ithaca.

Clark--Bennett.

A pretty wedding was solemnized at the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Bennett at Venice Center when their older daughter, Gertrude L., was united in marriage to I. Ray Clark on Wednesday evening, March 22, 1916.

The marriage ceremony was performed at 6 o'clock by Rev. E. E. Warner, pastor of the Venice Baptist church. The bridal party was attended by Miss Gertrude Streeter as bridesmaid and Charles Peckham as best man, the ceremony taking place in the back parlor under a canopy of a large white wedding bell with white ribbon streamers.

The bride was gowned in white chiffon taffeta and Georgette crepe, and carried a shower bouquet of white roses. The bridesmaid wore an embroidered gown and carried pink roses. The bride's table was decorated in pink and white, having for a center piece a large basket of pink and white roses.

The bride received many beautiful gifts of silver, linen, china and currency.

The wedding journey was necessarily postponed on account of the severe storm.

Mr. and Mrs. Clark have a large circle of friends who will find them at home at Venice Center after May 1.

Death Claims Mrs. James Clark.

Mrs. James Clark of Ludlowville died at the home of her sister, Mrs. J. W. Wager, at Belltown on Tuesday morning, March 21, after a five days' illness from pneumonia. Mrs. Clark went to the home of her sister to assist in caring for the sick and was herself taken ill. Her family were with her when the end came. The funeral was held from the M. E. church at Ludlowville Friday at 2 o'clock, Rev. J. C. Crooker officiating. Philo Meade of Ithaca sang. Mrs. Clark was about 42 years old and is survived by her husband and four children, Lillian, Floyd, Milton and Elsie Clark; her father, Alexander Wilson and one brother, Noble Wilson of Ludlowville, and two sisters, Mrs. Whitney Wager of Belltown and Miss Julia Wilson of Ludlowville.

Savings bank accounts have been maintained by the pupils of the Cazenovia schools for twenty-five years. Every Tuesday morning the teachers receive deposits from their pupils and the entire sum is deposited in the Cazenovia bank. Once a month the principal transfers the money to a savings bank account and every child gets a savings bank book. The Cazenovia Republican says: "The savings department has been in operation so many years that it has been taken for granted as a necessity in the school curriculum and not until other schools in Central New York have recently started the system did we realize how unique we were in having had it so long."

A heavy snow at this time of the year is a rich fertilizer and prepares the soil for planting; besides that, it tends the moisture deep into the earth as a guard against early droughts. It means a fruitful year and an abundant harvest. It is probably the last heavy fall of snow and when it is soaked away into the ground the earth will be found free from frost and the grass green below it.—Waterloo Observer. Let's hope so.

Who would have thought that the tin can is a menace to the public health? The expert malaria investigators of the U. S. Public Health Service have found however that discarded tin cans containing rain water are breeding places for the mosquito which is the sole agent in spreading malaria. A hole in the bottom of the empty can might have resulted in the saving of a human life. Certainly it would have assisted in preventing a debilitating illness. Empty tin cans have no business about the premises anyway, but if we must so decorate our back yards, let's see to it that the can has a hole in the bottom.

"My dear, a burglar fired a revolver at a Boston man and the bullet struck a button, thus saving his life." "Well, what of it?" "Only this. A man could shoot at me with a shotgun and never hit a button."

A most remarkable find was made by Miss Irene Maitland of Geneva, a student at Mechanic's Institute at Rochester. She had noticed a little pebble sticking to the bottom of her rubber and tried to scuff it off. After a time the annoyance caused her to stop and remove the offending stone and when she picked it from her rubber was attracted by its brilliance. A visit to a jeweler revealed that the pebble was a blue white diamond, perfectly cut and appraised at $350. No one has laid claim to the gem and she will sell it and apply the funds to her education, to obtain which she now does office work.

Mr. George Atwood left Jacksonville for the North on Wednesday, March 29, on the steamer Lenape. ON MOVING.

Common Sense Hints to Make a Move Somewhat Easier.

Few people move right, and it is a good plan to know how to pack things for moving, even though you are not threatened this year. When you know you are going to move begin at once to save newspapers and boxes. Several small boxes are more practical than the huge packing cases sometimes used. They are not so hard to handle and consequently receive better treatment. For the same reason barrels are more advisable than boxes for dishes or fragile articles. If boxes are used for this purpose they should be conspicuously marked. When preparing pictures or mirrors for shipment it is considered a good plan to wrap and crate them instead of boxing, so people handling them can see what they are. In the same way a strip lid adds to the security of the box of glass fruit jars or similar articles. Books should be packed in small, strong boxes. Of course the way things are packed depends largely upon their destination. When hauled in a van they require comparatively no packing, the movers assuming all responsibility for scratches and breakage. When preparing for shipment the packing cannot be too carefully done. This work should also be guaranteed. In case your effects comprise more than one load it is essential that the first one should contain the carpets, the dining room and kitchen equipment, for, while they are the last things needed in the old house, they will be demanded first in the new. The importance of carefully made plans cannot be too highly emphasized, nor can the advantages to be derived from securing the expert and competent services of a reliable moving concern.

How to Make Javelle Water.

Javelle water can be bought ready made, but it is absurd for a woman who has much washing to do not to make it for herself. The following are the ingredients: One pound of washing soda, one-half pound of chloride of lime, one quart of boiling water and two quarts of cold water. Add the boiling water to soda and let it dissolve. Dissolve the chloride of lime in cold water and when it has settled strain off the clear solution into the soda solution. Let it stand until all the sediment has gone to the bottom and then strain off the clear liquid into bottles, cork tightly and store in a cool place. When needed for removing stains do not use plain, but dilute with at least an equal quantity of water, and do not leave the goods more than twenty minutes in the solution. Rinse thoroughly in several waters, adding a little ammonia to the last.

Reversing the Rule.

Justice Day of the United States supreme court is not a large man physically. He is perhaps five feet six inches tall and weighs about 130 pounds. Attorney William R. Day, Jr., his son, known at the university as "Big Bill" Day, is impressive in height and width. He looms even among six footers.

Attorney Day went to Washington to make his appearance before the august body of which his father is a member. He strode into the courtroom to the accompaniment of tinkling chandeliers and after due preliminaries launched into his argument. The court listened gravely and impassively, meanwhile enjoying the magnificent proportions of the advocate.

Justice Holmes wrote on a piece of paper as if noting a point for future consideration. Presently the paper reached Justice Day, who opened it and read: "My, the boy's a block off the old chip. Isn't he, Day?"—Everybody's.

What is to Come.

What is to come we know not, but we know
That what has been was good—was good to show,
Better to hide and best of all to bear.
We are the masters of the days that were.
We have lived, we have loved, we have suffered * * * even so,
Shall we not take the ebb who had the flow?
Life was our friend; now if it be our foe,
Dear, though it spoil and break us, need we care?
What is to come?

Let the great winds their worst and wild-est blow,
Or the cold weather round us mellow slow;
We have fulfilled ourselves, and we can dare
And we can conquer, though we may not share
In the rich quiet of the afterglow.
What is to come?

An Easier Job.

Harris Dickson tells of an old negro mummy who was kept from starvation by the white women who gave her occasional odd jobs to do. Mrs. Dickson, the writer's mother, had found some housework for the old negro, but after working a day or two Mandy said she must quit.

"I done have to go out collectin' for de missionary society," she explained.

"But I have work for you to do," said Mrs. Dickson, "and you need all the money you can get."

"I know," said the old mammy, "but I done haf to collect for de missionary society."

"What do you get paid for collectin'?" asked Mrs. Dickson.

"I don't get paid," said Mandy. "I only gets what I collects."—Green Book Magazine.

Lay Interpretation.

An action was brought against a farmer for having called another a rascally lawyer. An old husbandman, being a witness, was asked if he heard the defendant call the plaintiff a lawyer.

"I did," was the reply.

"Pray," said the judge, "what is your opinion of the import of the word?"

"There can be no doubt of that," replied the fellow.

"Why, good man," said the judge, "there is no dishonor in the name, is there?"

"I know nothing about that," answered he, "but this I know—if a man called me a lawyer I'd knock him down."

"Why, sir," said the judge, pointing to one of the counsel, "that gentleman is a lawyer and that, and I, too, am a lawyer."

"No, no," replied the fellow; "no, my lord; you are a judge, I know, but I'm sure you are no lawyer."—Wit and Wisdom.

A Bit of Japanese Wit.

Hanawa Hokkichi became totally blind when he was five years of age, but studying with all his power by having himself read to he became a famous scholar and wrote many books. His house was in Bancho, in Yedo, and many students studied under him, so that people at that time used to say, "In Bancho men with perfect eyesight learn from a blind man." One evening when he was lecturing to his students a gust of wind came in and the lamp was blown out. Hokkichi, knowing nothing of the fact, continued his lecture, and the students said, "Sir, please wait a bit; the wind has blown out the light." Hokkichi smiled and said, "How inconvenient one's eyesight is!"—East and West News.

A Very Large Mine.

There was once in Cripple Creek an odd character named Burns. He was an odd person who always, no matter what his work, wore what used to be called a "Prince Albert." He struck a rich vein of ore and named that the Prince Albert. Being of a generous and convivial disposition, this lucky fellow was, of course, surrounded by many self-seeking friends. When he and they were in their cups some of them, with an eye to the main chance, managed to wheedle out of Burns on one pretext or another a deed of a share in his mine. With royal prodigality he scattered deeds about among his retainers and camp followers until finally something had to be done, and the case was taken into court. One of the lawyers had Burns on the stand.

"Now, Mr. Burns," said the lawyer, "will you please tell the court how you can explain your conduct? The evidence shows that you have deeded away twenty-nine twenty-fourths of your mine. What have you to say to that?" "Well, sir," replied the witness, "you must remember, sir, that the Prince Albert is a very large mine."

LOSING A BASS DRUM.

A Feat That Can Be Performed In More Than One Way.

"Now, don't you leave that bass drum on the train when we get to the terminal," said the conductor sharply as he punched the ticket of a stout colored man who, with his drum, was squeezed into the seat at the forward end of the smoking car of a city bound local.

"No, indeed, boss, I sho' won't do dat," responded the owner of the drum earnestly.

"Do many people leave bass drums on these trains?" asked a commuter as the conductor reached for his ticket.

"It's a regular thing for that fellow," replied the conductor testily.

"He lives up near Rosemere, and once a month he comes down to the city to play in a band. He doesn't need the drum until evening, so to avoid carrying it around all day or paying for checking it in the parcel room, he leaves it on the train. Then along about 5 o'clock he calls for it at the lost article room in the station."

When the train reached the city the conductor left with the first of the passengers. As he approached the gate, however, he thought of something he had forgotten and turned quickly toward his train, which was now almost empty. As he did so his face reddened, his eyes snapped angrily and he started on a run for the steps of the smoking car, from which the owner of the bass drum, looking furtively from right to left, was descending.

"Where's that bass drum of yours?" demanded the conductor as he rushed up to him.

"Well, doggone me, ef I wasn't fo'gettin' dat drum again!" was the innocent response. "I sho'ly thank you, cap'n; I sho'ly do. They ain't no danger o' de train movin' back ef I goes into de kyar to git dat drum, is dey?" he added.

"I'll hold the train here for an hour if necessary," replied the conductor, "but get that drum out, and be quick about it!"

A few minutes later the commuter saw the owner of the drum sitting dejectedly on one of the benches in the station. As the drum again reposed beside him, it seemed likely that for once at least the owner would have to carry it with him through the day or else check it at the parcel room at the usual rate.

But on his way home that evening the commuter stopped at the lost article window to inquire for an umbrella that his wife had left in the station the day before. Much to his gratification, he found it.

As the attendant handed the umbrella out to him he heard a voice over his shoulder, a somewhat familiar voice, plaintively inquire:

"Say, cap'n, did yo'-all find a bass drum in de high station dis mornin'?"

NEW IDEA OFFERED IN AERIAL PATROL

Scouts Along Coast to Be Used In Peace and in War.

PART OF DEFENSE SCHEME.

Seaplanes Would Protect Human Life and Remove Menaces to Shipping in Days of Peace—in War They Would Discover Approaching Enemy and Report.

The aerial coast patrol proposed by the Aero Club of America, a plan entrusted to Rear Admiral R. E. Peary, as its originator, to develop and carry to accomplishment, proposes a new departure in preparedness for war never attempted by any nation and utilization in time of peace of the scheme for humanitarian purposes of saving the lives of those who go down to the sea in ships. The co-operation of the army and navy and of the coast and geodetic survey has been invited. Other government activities, especially the coast guard, which is expected to benefit most by the peace utilization of the aerial patrol, are also included in the scope of desired government co-operation.

Rear Admiral Peary has named a number of members of a committee to formulate working plans to carry out the scheme. Among them is Assistant Secretary Byron R. Newton of the treasury department, in charge of the coast guard. Mr. Newton is also a theoretical aeronaut. As a newspaper man he made a specialty of aeronautical news and was often in a flier. He is also a member of the aeronautical board of the government, named to advise the army and navy.

While the "preparedness" part of the program is insisted upon by those who conceived it, the humanity aspects of it are regarded as of even more vital importance. For there are those that predict that the navy some day—when there cease to be wars and rumors of war—will be only an adjunct of the coast guard, developed to its highest capacity as an economizer of life and property, and that the navy in peace times will have peace work cut out for it that is not entirely making ready for war, but will have a commercial and utilitarian purpose.

To Divide Coast into Sections.

The idea, as set forth by the Aero Club of America, is to divide the Atlantic and Pacific coasts, the shores of the great lakes and the coast of the gulf of Mexico into sections "of convenient length, say about 100 miles each." In each of these sections would be established a coast defense station, where would be erected a hangar for housing a seaplane and equipment to make all minor repairs. Several larger stations would be established at suitable intervals, where all more complicated repairs could be made or a complete overhauling given at regular periods.

Elaborating the plan, as set forth by the Aero Club of America, each hangar would be the home of a seaplane. A driver and an observer would be attached to it. The seaplane would be equipped with light wireless apparatus, powerful binocular glasses and a sensitive microphone.

"The party submerged derelict," says the Aero Club of America, "too light to sink and a constant menace to traffic, would be spotted by the aerial scout and its presence reported. Wrecks, vessels in distress and all other marine accidents would be reported and aid quickly summoned when necessary."

But if ever war should arise, in the opinion of Rear Admiral Peary, the first value of this coast patrol service would be the prompt report, "ready and equipped for service," from a hundred or more trained fliers and observers organized into a state of "military preparedness."

Duty in Time of War.

As war duty each of the seaplanes, according to the outline of the plan, would take position about fifty miles off shore and patrol its respective beat, the shore line of the prescribed section, continuously back and forth. In clear weather, at a height of 2,000 feet above sea level, the observer would have a vision of fifty miles to the horizon. At night or in fog the seaplanes would be compelled to sweep lower or find a landing. At all times they would be expected to be invisible to a distant enemy.

By means of the wireless information as to character, number and apparent destination of approaching ships would be transmitted to shore stations and thence to Washington or a government center, whence if the ships were hostile orders would be issued directing the movements of defending warships and the submarine squadrons for the preparation of coast defenses and for the concentration of troops. If necessary reserve seaplanes, hurrying out, would keep the approaching craft under continuous observation while themselves invisible and in communication with shore.

"Such a system is a new departure," declares Rear Admiral Peary. "The like of it exists nowhere at present. Yet it involves no new principle, but is simply the utilization and multiplication of the known capacities of a single seaplane."

Mrs. Whitney's Recipes.

MRS. HARRY PAYNE WHITNEY recently held a food bazaar at her home in behalf of a hospital. Among her favorite recipes are these:

Balmoral Dessert Biscuits (H. M. the Queen's Baker, Balmoral Castle, 1856).—These are no thicker than passover cakes and very "short." One-half pound of flour, one ounce of butter, four yolks of eggs, only two whites. Mix the above into a stiff paste, roll out very thin and cut into round shapes size of top of tea-cup, with a wavy edge pastry cutter. Bake in slow oven. The biscuits should be quite thin, blistered all over, but not browned and not pricked. The blisters are the same color as the biscuits, not darker. These are only good when quite fresh from the oven.

Lady Heywood's Milk Lemonade.—To the juice of nine lemons add one pound of fine loaf sugar. Pour on this one quart of boiling hot milk and let it stand all night. Into a separate vessel peel three lemons as thin as possible. Pour into it one pint of warm water (90 degrees heat). This also must stand all night, covered, of course. Next morning put both together and strain through a very fine jelly bag till perfectly clear and bright. Add sherry to your taste.

Grandmother's White Soup.—Two quarts stock of veal, lamb or chicken, an onion boiled with it, one quart milk and cream, mixed; a suspicion of mace, yolks of two eggs, a little cornstarch of flour to thicken. Soak a little macaroni till tender. Put it in the tureen just before serving.

Chicken Basket.—Make a ring of mashed potatoes. Fill the center with creamed chicken. Sprinkle browned breadcrumbs on top.

Codfish Foam.—Make a white sauce of one tablespoonful of flour, one teaspoonful of butter, one cupful of hot milk. Stir until smooth and then add two tablespoonfuls of finely picked codfish, freshened, and the beaten whites of two eggs.

Johnnycake.—One cupful of cornmeal, one-half cupful flour, one teaspoonful soda, salt, two tablespoonfuls molasses, one tablespoonful sugar, sour milk to mix.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

THE SALAD BOWL.

FANCY SALAD.—Prepare a pineapple by cutting slices straight across and removing the core with a core cutter, or purchase canned pineapple which will be cut in this manner. As this is to be served on individual dishes, chill bleached lettuce and place a large leaf or several small ones on each plate. Lay a slice of pineapple upon the leaf and fill the cavity with thick mayonnaise. Use English walnut halves to garnish the pineapple around the edge. On the extreme edge lay broken bunches of Malaga grapes.

Nut Salad.—Blanch peanuts and place in a hot oven to brown, with a bit of butter. Chop when cold and to each cupful of nuts add two cupfuls of finely chopped celery and an equal amount of apples. Mix well and serve with mayonnaise. Toasted buttered baking powder biscuit, cut in thin slices before toasting, make a nice accompaniment to any salad.

Red Cabbage and Celery Salad.—Have a fine and firm red cabbage, trim off all outside leaves, cut the inner portion into quarters and remove the stalks. Cut the rest into fine shreds and add to it in the salad bowl a head of celery cut into inch pieces. Make a dressing by beating one egg, stirring into it gradually a tablespoonful of salad oil, a tablespoonful of red wine, vinegar, a pinch of sugar and mustard, salt and pepper. Pour over the cabbage and celery, garnish with sliced gherkins and capers. A grating of cheese adds to the finish.

Cottage Cheese Salad.—Take fresh cottage cheese and add a few broken nut meats and a little sweet green pepper chopped finely. Make the mixture into balls after adding salt to taste. Roll the balls in some finely chopped parsley until completely covered. They may then be used as a garnish for some salad or placed on lettuce leaves covered with salad dressing and served with wafers. If desired some wet molds may be lined with the cheese and the centers of the molds filled with salad, nuts and celery. When cold the molds may be turned out on lettuce leaves and served with salad dressing.

THE PRINCE OF GRAUSTARK

By
GEORGE BARR M'CUTCHEON

Author of "Graustark," "Beverly of Graustark," Etc.

Copyright, 1914, by Dodd, Mead and Company

"I shall be in Edelweiss this week without fail. I have something very important to tell you." So it read.

Nine o'clock of a rainy night, on the steep, winding road that climbed the mountain side from the walled-in city to the crest on which stood the famed monastery of St. Valentine—9 o'clock of a night fraught with pleasurable anticipation on the part of one R. Schmidt, whose eager progress up the slope was all too slow notwithstanding the encouragement offered by the conscienceless Jehu, who frequently beat his poor steeds into a gallop over level stretches and never allowed them to pause.

Late in the afternoon there had come to the general postoffice a letter from Mr. R. Schmidt.

Her letter was brief. She merely acquainted him with the fact that she had arrived in Edelweiss that day from Ganlook, twenty miles away, and was stopping at the Inn of the Stars, outside the city gates.

In closing she said that she would be delighted to see him when it was convenient for him to come to her. On receipt of this singularly matter-of-fact letter he promptly dispatched a message to Miss Guile, Inn of the Stars, saying that she might expect him at 9 that night.

Stealing away from the castle at night, he entered the ramshackle cab that Hobbs had engaged for the expedition and which awaited him not far from the private entrance to the park.

The mud covered vehicle was nearing the Inn of the Stars when Robin stuck his head out of the window and directed Hobbs to drive slower.

"Whoa!" said Hobbs suddenly, "Elio, wot the 'ell is'—"

A dark figure had sprung into the roadway near the horses' heads and was holding up a warning hand.

Robin's head came through the window.

"It is I, m'sieur," said the voice of Marie, Miss Guile's French maid.

Disappointment filled his soul.

"What has happened?" he cried, grasping the girl's arm. "Has she changed her mind?"

"Yes, m'sieur. She will not receive you at the Inn of the Stars. She bids you to drive to the end of this street, where there is a garden with a Magyar band and the most delicious refreshments to be had under vine covered—"

"A public garden?" exclaimed Robin in utter dismay.

"Pingari's, sir," said Hobbs. "I know the place well. It is a very quiet, orderly place."

"I am not accustomed to meeting people in public gardens. I—"

"Nor is my mistress, m'sieur. I assure you. May I put a flea in m'sieur's ear? The place is quite empty to-night, and besides there is the drive back to the inn with mademoiselle. Is not that something, m'sieur?"

"By jove!" exclaimed Robin. "Drive on, Hobbs!"

CHAPTER XX. Pingari's.

PINGARI'S is the jumping off place. It stands at the sharp corner of an elbow in the mountain, with an almost sheer drop of a thousand feet into the quarries below. A low roofed, rambling building, once used as a troop house for nomadic fighting men who came from all parts of the principality on draft by feudal barons in the days before real law obtained.

Hobbs drove bravely into the courtyard, shouted orders to a couple of hostlers and descended from the box.

Robin followed an attendant through a door, down a narrow hallway, up a flight of stairs and out another door upon a small portico, sheltered by a heavy canvas awning. Two men were standing at the railing, looking down upon the impressionistic lights of the sunken city. The prince drew back, his face hardening.

At the sound of his steps the two men turned, stared at him intently for an instant and then deliberately strode past him, entered the door and disappeared. The person in brass buttons followed them.

A soft, gurgling laugh fell upon his ears—a laugh of pure delight. He whirled about and faced one who was no longer alone.

She was seated at the solitary little table in the corner.

He sprang toward her with a glad cry, expecting her to rise. She remained seated; her hand extended.

"My dear, dear Bedella," he murmured. "I had almost given you up. Three long days have I waited for you. You?"

"I have never broken a promise, Rex," she said coolly. "It is you who are to be commended, not I, for you see I was coming to Graustark anyway. I should not have been surprised if you had failed me, sir. It is a long way from Vienna to this out of the way."

"The most distant spot in the world would not have been too far away to cause an instant's hesitation on my part," said he, dropping into the chair opposite her.

"But your personal affairs—your business," she protested. "Can you neglect it so?"

"My business is to find happiness," said he. "I should be neglecting it indeed if I failed to pursue the only means of attaining it. You are happiness, Bedella."

"What would you sacrifice for happiness?" she asked softly.

"All else in the world," he replied steadily. "If I were a king my realm should go if it stood between me and you, Bedella."

"Wait—wait just for a moment," she said, with difficulty steadying her voice. "This night may see the end of our adventure, Rex. Let us think well before we say that it is over. I know, if you do not, that a great deal depends upon what we are to say to each other tonight. You will ask me to be your wife. Are you sure that you appreciate all that it means to you and to your future if I should say yes to that dear question?"

He looked at her intently. "What do you know, Bedella?"

"I know that you are the Prince of Graustark and that it is ordained that you shall wed one whose station is the equal of your own. You must think well, dear Rex, before you ask Bedella Guile to be your wife."

"You know that I am"—he began dully, and then stood up, leaning far over the table, a penetrating look in his eyes.

"How long have you known, Bedella?"

"Since the second day out on the Jupiter," she replied serenely.

He slowly resumed his seat, overwhelmed. She had played with him. She had defied him!

"I know what you are thinking, Rex," she said, almost pleadingly. "You are thinking ill of me, and you are unjust. It was as fair for me as it was for you. We played a cautious game. You set about to win my love as you saw fit, my friend, and am I to be condemned if I exercised the same privilege?"

He gave a great sigh of relief. "You are right," he said. "It is my turn to confess. I have known for many days that you are not Bedella Guile. We are quits."

She laughed softly.

"It doesn't matter," he whispered hoarsely. "I don't care what happens to me, Bedella, I—I shall never give you up. You are worth all the kingdoms in the world. You are the loveliest, most adorable!"

"Hush! Mrs. Gaston is inside," she informed him quickly. "I do not come alone. An hour ago the inn became quite impossible as a trysting place. A small party from the Regentess arrived for dinner. Can you guess who is giving the dinner? The great and only William W. Blithers, sir, who comes to put an obstinate daughter upon the throne of Graustark, whether she will or no."

"Did he see you?" cried Robin.

"No," she answered, with a mischievous gleam in her eyes.

"Hide and seek is a bully game," said he. "It can't last much longer, Bedella. I think it is only right that we should go to your father and tell him that—everything is all right. There is nothing to be gained by further secrecy."

She was watching him closely.

"Are you, after all I said and done, sure that you want to marry the daughter of William Blithers, in the face of all the bitter consequences that may follow such an act?"

"Are you through?" he asked, transfixing her with a determined look. Well, then, I'll answer you. I do want to marry you, and more than that, I mean to marry you. I love!"

"You may tell me, Robin, as we are driving back to the inn together—not here, not now," she said softly, the lovelight in her eyes.

Happiness blurred his vision.

Long afterward, as they were preparing to leave Pingari's, she said to him:

"My father is at the inn, Robin. I ran away from him tonight because I wanted to be sure that our adventure was closed before I revealed myself to him. Take me to him now, Robin, and make the miracle complete."

His fingers caressed her warm cheek as he adjusted the collar of the long coat about her throat and chin. Her eyes were starry bright, her red lips were parted.

"My princess!" he whispered tenderly. "My princess!"

"My prince!" she said, so softly that the words barely reached his ears. "We have proved that Love is the king. He rules us all. He laughs at locksmiths—and fathers—but he does not laugh at sweethearts. Come, Mrs. Gaston returns long ago."

He handed her into the cab a moment later and drew the long, deep breath of one who goes down into deep water. Then he followed after her. The attendant closed the door.

Hobbs was a dependable fellow. He drove far out of the way, passing the Inn of the Stars twice at a lively clip, and might have gone on forever in his shuttlecock enterprise had not the excited voice of a woman hailed him from the sidewalk.

"Stop! Attendez! You! Man!"

He pulled up with a jerk. The dripping figure of Marie ran up from behind.

"My mistress? Where is she?" panted the girl.

"In heaven," said Hobbs promptly, whereupon Marie pounded on the glass window of the cab.

Robin quickly opened the door.

"Who—what is it?"

"Yes, Marie," came in muffled tones from the depths of the cab.

"Mrs. Gaston returns long ago. She is beside herself. She is like a maniac. She has lost you; she cannot explain to—mademoiselle's father. Mon dieu, when he met her unexpectedly in the hall he shouts, 'Where is my daughter?' And poor madame she has but to shiver and stammer and—run away! Ouf! She daub out into the rain! It is terrible. She!"

Bedella broke in upon this jumbled recitation. "Where have we been, Robin? Where are we now?"

"Where are we, Hobbs?"

"We are just getting back to the Inn of the Stars, sir—descending, you might say, sir," said Hobbs.

"Drive on, confound you."

The door slammed, and the final block was covered in so short a time that Robin's final kiss was still warm on Bedella's lips when the gallant cab rolled up to the portals of the Inn of the Stars.

Mr. Blithers had had a trying day of it. Besides other annoyances, his wife raked him over the coals for what she was pleased to call his senseless persistence in the face of what she regarded as unalterable opposition on the part of the cabinet and house of nobles.

And so it was that Mr. Blithers, feeling in need of cheer, arranged a little dinner for that evening at the Inn of the Stars. He invited his principal London lawyer and his wife, also his secondary London lawyer, his French lawyer and two attractive young women who it appears were related to the latter, although at quite a distance, and then concluded that it was best to speak to his own wife about the little affair. She said she couldn't even think of going.

Maud might arrive that very night, and she certainly was not going out of the hotel with such an event as that in prospect.

"But Simpson's wife is coming," protested Mr. Blithers, "and Pericault's cousins. Certainly you must come. Jolly little affair to live us up a bit. Now, Lou!"

"I am quite positive that Lady Simpson will change her mind when she hears that Pericault's cousins are going," said Mrs. Blithers acidly.

He thought for a moment. "If that's the case, Lou, you'll have to come, if only to save my reputation," he said. "I didn't think it of Pericault."

Mrs. Blithers relented. She went to the dinner, and so did Lady Simpson, despite Pericault's cousins, and the only ones in the party who appeared to be uneasy were the cousins themselves.

The millionaire's table was placed in the very center of the dining room and plates were laid for eight. At the last minute Mr. Blithers ordered the number increased to nine.

"My daughter may put in an appearance," he explained to Lady Simpson. "I have left word at the hotel for her to come up if by any chance she happens to arrive on the evening train."

"Haven't you heard from her, Mr. Blithers?" inquired the austere lady, regarding the top of his head with an illy directed loggion.

"We have," said he, "but not definitely."

Two hours later Mr. Blithers looked at his watch again. The party was quite gay; at least 50 per cent disorderly.

"That train has been in for an hour," said the host. "I guess Maud didn't come. I left word for the hotel to call me up if she arrived."

"I also told 'em to send up any telegram that might come," he informed his wife, who merely lifted her eyebrows. They had been lowered perceptibly in consequence of the ebullience of Pericault's cousins.

The vivacious young women were attracting a great deal of attention to their table. Smart diners in the immediate neighborhood appeared to be a trifle shocked. Three dignified looking gentlemen seated near the door got up and left the room.

"We really must be going," said Mrs. Blithers nervously.

"All right," said Mr. Blithers. "Call the cars up, waiter."

Out in the wide, brilliantly lighted foyer a few late stayers were waiting for their conveyances to be announced. As the four departing members of the Blithers party grouped themselves near the big doors, impatient to be off, a brass buttoned boy came up and delivered a telegram to the host.

He was on the point of tearing open the envelope when his eyes fell upon two people who had just entered the hall from without, a man and woman clad in raincoats. At the same instant the former saw Mr. Blithers. Clutching his companion's arm, he directed her attention to the millionaire.

"Now for it, Bedella," he whispered excitedly.

Bedella gazed calmly at Mr. Blithers, and Mr. Blithers gazed blankly at the Prince of Graustark. Then the great financier bowed very deeply and called out:

"Good evening, prince!"

He received no response to his polite greeting, for the prince was staring at Bedella as if stupefied. The millionaire's face was very red with mortification as he turned it away.

"He—he doesn't recognize you," gasped Robin in amazement.

"Who?" she asked, her eyes searching the room with an eager, inquiring look.

"Your father," he said.

She gave him a ravishing, delighted smile.

"Oh, it is so wonderful, Robin. I have fooled you completely. That man isn't my father."

"That's Mr. Blithers, or I am as blind as a bat," he exclaimed.

"Is it, indeed? The one reading the telegram, with his eyes sticking out of his head?"

Robin's head was swimming. "Good heavens, Bedella, what are you?"

"Ah!" she cried, with a little shriek of joy. "See! There he is!"

One of the three distinguished men who had been remarked by Mrs. Blithers now separated himself from his companions and approached the couple. He was a tall, handsome man of fifty. Although his approach was swift and eager, there were in his face the signs of wrath that still struggled against joy.

She turned quickly, laid her hand upon the prince's rigid arm and said softly:

"My father is the Prince of Dawsbergen, dear."

A crumpled telegram dropped from Mr. Blithers' palsied hand to the floor as he turned a white, despairing face upon his wife. The brass buttoned boy picked it up and handed it to Mrs. Blithers. It was from Maud:

We were married in Vienna today. After all I think I shall not care to see Graustark. Channie is a dear. I have promised him that you will take him into the business as a partner. We are at the Bristol. MAUD.

[THE END.]

SYNOPSIS

Mr. Blithers, multimillionaire, discusses with his wife the possibilities of marrying off his daughter, Maud Applegate, to the Prince of Graustark, who is visiting Mr. and Mrs. Truxton King in America in anticipation of getting some one to take up the loan Russia holds. A Mr. Scoville is attentive to Maud.

Prince Robin is accompanied by Count Quinnox, minister of war; Lieutenant Dank and Hobbs, the valet. The prince had balked at a matrimonial alliance with the Princess of Dawsbergen, both of them wishing to choose for themselves. Mr. Blithers visits the Kings uninvited.

Mr. Blithers discusses the Russian loan and gently hints at $20,000,000 his daughter will get when she marries the right man.

Bankers suddenly refuse to handle the loan. Count Quinnox and King arrange a meeting with Blithers. King suspects him of blocking the deal.

Blithers promises to consider the loan. His wife prepares a ball for the Prince and Maud, who suddenly balks at the affair and doesn't attend.

Meeting the prince out for a stroll, Blithers chats on matrimony. Robin says he is not for sale, but agrees to meet Maud when he learns she is opposed to her parents' wishes.

Maud again evades the prince, who reports he must leave for Graustark at once. Maud writes she is off for Europe on the Jupiter with an aged companion. Her father schemes to get them both on the same ship.

The prince as Mr. Schmidt sails on the Jupiter. Blithers buys $20,000,000 of Graustark bonds. A young lady disputes Robin's right to a table and deck chair.

He learns she is Miss Guile of New York, and her aged companion Mrs. Gaston. He soon becomes better acquainted with Miss Guile.

Her given name is Bedella, she tells him. She tells Mrs. Gaston that she suspects he is the Prince of Graustark.

Mrs. Gaston changes her manner toward him. Hobbs discovers Miss Guile's baggage is marked with a B. In Paris she is met by a young man.

Gourou, Robin's police chief, concludes that the B on the baggage means Blithers. Miss Blithers denies her engagement to the prince. Bedella sends Robin a note.

She invites him for a drive to St. Cloud. He intimates she is Miss Blithers, but she resents it. While at lunch they are told some one is spying on them.

They flee and are arrested for speeding. Miss Guile just escaping revealing her true identity to the judge. She tells Robin she will go to Switzerland.

Mr. Blithers sails for Paris. He instructs his agents to kidnap Maud, but she is not to be located.

At Interlaken Mrs. Gaston tells Robin he has a chance to win Bedella, who says she is going to Graustark.

Miss Guile gets letters from her angry father, her disappointed lover and another saying detectives were still on her trail. She disappears.

Mr. Blithers arrives in Graustark. He sees Robin reach home, hailed by his people. He is granted an interview in the castle.

He is awed by his surroundings and angered by Count Romano, who refers to a marriage between Maud and the prince as impossible. Robin goes to meet Miss Guile.

She is at a public eating place, where Mr. Blithers also has a dinner party. She takes Robin to her father, who is the Prince of Dawsbergen. Maud marries Scoville.

NEW GUN FOR GERMANS.

Revolver Cannon Designed For Use Against Allies In France.

The neutral correspondent who worked for a time in the Krupp factory at Essen and who is describing his observations in a series of articles in the London Daily Express gives in his second article details of the new Krupp revolver gun obtained from a fellow workman employed in the shop where these new and powerful weapons are being made.

The caliber of the new gun is 3.5 centimeters, and it far outranges the English machine guns. It has no wheels, but is mounted on a tripod which can be carried by two men. Fifty of these guns already have been completed, and 200 more are to follow. They are designed, he says, to break the defense on the Yser.

The writer admits that he was speedily discharged from the Krupp works for lack of skill.

Some Queer English Names.

We may puzzle our brains over the tongue twisting names which France and Russia have given to some of their towns, but England furnishes a few quite as dazzling as that of Przemysl. Hurstmooroux, for instance, is pronounced Her-so; Kirkcubright, Kir-coo-bree; Daventry, Dautry; Leominster, Lemster, and Evesham is called P-sham.

TO LOCAL AGENTS, COMPANIES AND MEMBERS,
MUNICIPAL AUTHORITIES:

Domestic Dry Cleaning

Our attention has been directed to an advertisement appearing in the press throughout the State, advocating the use of a gasoline soap dissolved in two gallons of gasoline, for household dry cleaning purposes.

The general public does not seem to appreciate the danger to life and property, which is present in the handling of inflammable volatiles, and we are issuing this circular to call your attention to the necessity of discouraging this hazardous practice.

Gasoline at ordinary temperatures gives off an inflammable vapor, which will ignite on contact with an open flame or spark and which forms a highly explosive mixture when combined with the proper proportion of air. This vapor is heavier than air and thus will not readily escape through an open window as would a lighter gas, but will settle upon the floor and find its way to the lower portions of the house where it is likely to be ignited by an open flame.

The operation of laundering in an ordinary open vessel and the subsequent drying process, increases the ordinary evaporation of gasoline to a marked degree and this vapor will travel a considerable distance even in the open air, readily ignite and flash back to the source.

Serious injuries, loss of life, and destructive fires from this cause are of almost daily occurrence throughout our territory, and we cannot urge too strongly the restriction and regulation of the use of such inflammable volatiles for household purposes.

We would also advise you that the use of gasoline in this manner and quantity in a dwelling, is a violation of the requirements of the standard fire insurance policy of the State of New York, and will afford just grounds for the companies carrying the liability to avoid payment of a fire loss from this cause.

We ask your co-operation in educating the general public to an appreciation of the danger to life and property existing in the use of gasoline in this manner and in urging the adoption of municipal ordinances properly regulating this hazard.
