The Country Boy on Editors. A country school boy was told to write an essay on editors, and this is the result:

"Don't know how newspapers came to be in the world. I don't think the good Lord does, for He ain't got nothing to say about an editor in the Bible. I think the editor is one of the missing links you read of, and stayed in the bushes until after the flood, and then came out and wrote the thing up and has been here ever since. I don't think he ever died. I never seen a dead one and never heard of one getting lick-

Author of " Monsieur Beaucaire," "The Conquest of Canaan, " "Penrod," etc.

It was a full nour later when he left her tying upon a couch in her own room, still lamenting that the "fuss" which she was making irked him far more than his physical loss. He permitted her to think that ue meant to return directly to his office, but when he came out to the open air he told the chauffeur in attendance to await him in front of Mr. Vertrees' house, whither he himself proceeded on foot.

Mr. Vertrees had taken the sale of half of his worthless stock as manna in the wilderness; it came from heaven-by what agency he did not particularly question. The broker informed him that "parties were interested in getting hold of the stock," and that later there might be a possible increase in the value of the large amount retained by his client. It might go "quite a ways up" within a year or so, he said, and he advised "sitting tight" with it. Mr. Vertrees went home and prayed.

He rose from his knees feeling that he was surely coming into his own again. It was more than a mere gasp of temporary relief with him, and his wife shared his optimism; but Mary would not let him buy back her piano. and as for furs-spring was on the way, she said. But they paid the butcher, the baker and the candlestick maker, and hired a cook once more It was this servitress who opened the door for Sheridan, and presently assured him that Miss Vertrees would 'be down."

He was not the man to conceal admi ration when he felt it, and he flushed and beamed as Mary made her appearance, almost upon the heels of the cook. She had a look of apprehension for the first fraction of a second, but it vanished at the sight of him, and its place was taken in her eyes by a soft brilliance, while cofor rushed in ber cheeks.

"Don't be surprised," he said. "Truth is, in a way it's sort of on business I looked in here. It'll only take a minute, I expect."

"I'm sorry," said Mary. "I hoped you'd come because we're neighbors." He chuckled. "Neighbors! Sometimes people don't see so much o' their neighbors as they used to. That is, I hear so-lately."

"You'll stay long enough to sit down, won't you?"

"I guess I could manage that much." And they sat down, facing each other and not far apart.

"Of course, it couldn't be called business, exactly," ne said, more gravely "Not at all, I expect. But there: something o' yours it seemed to me I ought to give you, and I just thought It was better to bring it myself and explain how I happened to have it. It's this-this letter you wrote my boy." He extended the letter to her solemnly, in his left hand, and she took it gently from him. "It was in his mail, after he was hurt. You knew he never got it, I expect."

"Yes," she said. in a low voice. He sighed, "I'm glad he didn't Not," he added, quickly-"not but what you did just right to send it. You did. You couldn't acted any other way when it came right down to it. There ain't any blame comin' to you-you were aboveboard all through," Mary said, "Thank you," almost in a whisper, and with her head bowed the handwritin', and I read it all-once a wot started.".

"I'm giad you did."

"Weil"-he leaned forward as "f to rise-"I guess that's about all just thought you ought to have it."

"Thank you for oringing it." He looked at her hopefully as it e thought and wished that she might have something more to say. But she seemed hot to be aware of this glance. and sat with her eyes fixed sorrowfully upon the floor.

"Well, I expect I better be gettin back to the office, ' he said, cising desperately. "I told-1 told my partner I'd be back at two o'clock, and I guess ne'll think I'm a poor business man if he catches me behind time. I got to walk the chalk a mighty straight line these days-with that fellow keepin' tabs on me!'

Mary rose with him. "I've always leard you were the hard driver," He guffawed derisively. "Me? I'm couldn't guess to save your life how nothin' to that partner o' mine. You he keeps after me to hold up my end o' the job. I shouldn't be surprised he'd give me the grand bounce some day, and run the whole circus himself. You know how he is-once he goes at a thing!

"No," she smiled. "I didn't know you had a partner. I'd always heard-" He laughed, looking away from her. 'It's just my way o' speakin' o' that boy o' mine, Bibbs." He stood then, expectant, staring out into the hall with an air of careless geniality. He felt that she certainly must say at least, "How is Bibbs?" but she said nothing at all, though he waited until the silence became embarrass-

"Well, I guess I better be gettin' down there," he said, at last. "He might worry."

"Goodby-and thank you," said Mary

"For what?" "For the letter." "Oh," he said, blankly. "You're welcome. Goodby." Mary put out her hand. "Goodby." "You'll have to excuse my left hand," he said. "I had a little accident to the other one." She gave a pitying cry as she saw.

'Oh, poor Mr. Sheridan!" "Nothin' at all! Dictate everything nowadays, anyhow." He laughed jovially. "Did anybody tell you how t happened?" "I heard you hurt your hand, but no-not just how." "It was this way," he began, and both, as if unconsciously, sat down again. "You may not know it, but I used to worry a good deal about the youngest o' my boys-the one that used to come to see you sometimes. after Jim-that is, I mean Bibbs. He's the one I spoke of as my partner; and the truth is that's what it's just about goin' to amount to, one o' these daysif his health holds out. Well, you remember, I expect, I had him on a machine over at a plant o' mine; and sometimes I'd kind o' sneak in there and see how he was gettin' along. Take a doctor with me sometimes, because Bibbs never was so robust, you might say. Ole Doc Gurney-I guess maybe you know him? Tall, thin man; acts sleepy-" "Yes." "Well, one day I an' ole Doc Gurney, we were in there, and I undertook to show Bibbs how to run his machine. He told me to look out, but I wouldn't listen, and I didn't look out-and that's how, I got my hand hurt, tryin' to show Bibbs to do something he knew how to do and I didn't. Made me so mad I just wouldn't even admit to myself it was hurt-and so, by and by, ole Doc Gurney had to take kind o' radical measures with me. He's a right good doctor, too. Don't you think so, Miss Vertrees?" "Yes, he is so!" Sheridan now had the air of a rambling talker and gossip with all day on his hands. "Take him on Bibbs' case. I was talkin' about Bibbs' case with him this morning. Well, you'd laugh to hear the way ole Gurney talks about that! 'Course he is just as much a friend as he is doctor-and he takes as much interest in Bibbs as if he was in the family. He thinks Bibbs isn't anyways bad off yet; and he thinks he could stand the pace and get fat on it if-well, this is what'd make you laugh if you'd been there, Miss Vertrees-honest it would!" He paused to chuckle, and stole h glance at her. She was gazing straight before her at the wall; her lips were parted, and-visibly-she was breathing heavily and quickly. He feared that she was growing furiously angry; but he had led to what he wanted to say, and he went on, determined now to say it all. He leaned forward and altered his voice to one of confidential friendliness, though in it he still maintained a tone which indicated that ole Doc Gurney's opinion was only a joke he shared with her. "Yes, sir. you certainly would 'a' laughed! Why, that ole man thinks you got something to do with it. You'H have to blame it on hlm, young lady, if it makes you feel like startin' out to whip somebody! He's actually got this theory: he says Bibbs got to gettin' better while he worked over there at the shop because you kept him cheered up and feelin' good. And he says if you could manage to just stand him hangin' round a little-maybe not much, but just sometimes-again, he believed it'd do Bibbs a mighty lot o' good. 'Course that's only what the doctor said. Me, I don't know anything about that; but I can say this much-I never saw any don't understand-and I think you don't. What is it you want me to do?"

He sighed again, but this time with relief. "Well, well!" he said. "You're right. It'll be easier to talk plain. ought to known I could with you, all the time. I just hoped you'd let that boy come and see you sometimes, once more. Could you?"

"You don't understand." She clasped her hands together in a sorrowful gesture. "Yes, we must talk plain. Bibbs heard that I'd tried to make your oldest son care for me because I was poor, and so Bibbs came and asked me to marry him-because he was sorry for me. And I can't see him any more," she cried in distress. "I can't!" Sheridan cleared his throat uncomfortably. "You mean because he thought that about you?" "No, no! What he thought was true!" "Well-you mean he was so much in-you mean he thought so much of awkward upon Sheridan's tongue; he seemed to be in doubt even about pronouncing them, but after a ghastly you just couldn't stand him around?"

finest way he loved me, if you like, and he'd have done anything on earth for me, as I would for him, and as he knew I would. It was beautiful, Mr. Sheridan," she said, "But the cheap, had things one has done seem always to come back-they wait, and pull you down when you're happiest. Bibbs found me out, you see; and he wasn't 'in love' with me at all." "He wasn't? Well, it seems to me he gave up everything he wanted to do-it was fool stuff, but he certainly wanted it mighty bad-he just threw it away and walked right up and took the job he swore he never wouldjust for you. And it looks to me as if a man that'd do that must think quite a heap o' the girl he does it for! You say it was only because he was sorry, but let me tell you there's only one girl he could feel that sorry for!

"No, no," she said. "Bibbs isn't like other men-he would do anything for Sheridan grinned. "Perhaps not so much as you think, nowadays," he said. "For instance, I got kind of a suspicion he doesn't believe in 'sentiment in business.' But that's neither here nor there. What he wanted was, just plain and simple, for you to marry him. Well, I was afraid his thinkin' so much of you had kind o' sickened you of him-the way it does sometimes. But from the way you talk, I understand that ain't the trouble." He coughed. and his voice trembled a little. "Now here, Miss Vertrees, I don't have to tell you-because you see things easy-I know I got no business comin' to you like this, but I had to make Bibbs go my way instead of his own-I had to do it for the sake o' my business and on his own account, too-and I expect you got some idea how it hurt him to give up. Well, he's made good. He didn't come in half-hearted or mean; he came in-all the way! But there isn't anything in it to him; you can see he's just shut his teeth on it and goin' ahead with dust in his mouth. You see, one way of lookin' at it, he's got nothin' to work for. And it seems to me like it cost him your friendship, and I believe-honest-that's what burt him the worst. Now you said we'd talk plain. Why can't you let him come back?"

She covered her face desperately with her hands. "I can't!"

He rose, defeated, and looking it. "Well, I mustn't press you," he said,

At that she cried out, and dropped her hands and let him see her face. He gazed at her intently. Mary was proud, but she had a fata) honesty, and it confessed the truth of her now; she day to ask you to stand up before the was helpless. It was so clear that and he grew radiant. "Don't! Don't!" she cried. "You mustn't-"

"I won't tell him," said Sheridan. from the doorway. "I won't tell anybody anything!"

CHAPTER XXXIII.

There was a heavy town-fog that afternoon, a smoke-mist, densest in the sanctuary of the temple. The people went about in it, busy and dirty. thickening their outside and inside linings of coal-tar, asphalt, sulphurous acid, oil of vitriol, and the other familiar things the men liked to breathe and to have upon their skins and garments and upon their wives and bables and sweethearts. The growth of the city was visible in the smoke and the noise and the rush. There was more smoke than there had been this day of February a year earlier; there was more noise; and the crowds were thickeryet quicker in spite of that. The traffic policeman had a hard time, for the people were independent-they retained some habits of the old markettown period, and would cross the street anywhere and anyhow, which you-" The words were inconceivably not only got them killed more frequently than if they clung to the legal crossings, but kept the motormen, the chauffeurs and the truck drivers in a stew pause he bravely repeated them. "You of profane nervousness. So the trafmean he thought so much of you that | fic policemen led harried lives; they themselves were killed, of course, with "No! He was sorry for me. He a certain periodicity, but their main I seen him knock him-oh, he's not bad trouble was that they could not make off. I guess, lady. The ole man got the citizens realize that it was actu- him out of the way all right. The ally and mortally perilous to go about fender shoved the ole man around their city. It was strange, for there were probably no citizens of any length of residence who had not per- dan building without any help. Exsonally known either someone who had been killed or injured in an accident. or someone who had accidentally killed or injured others. And yet, perhaps it was not strange, seeing the sharp preoccupation of the faces-the people had something on their minds; they could not stop to bother about dirt and danger.

Mary Vertrees was not often downtown; she had never seen an accident until this afternoon. She had come upon errands for her mother connected with a timorous refurbishment; and as she did these, in and out of the department stores, she had an insistent consciousness of the Sheridan building. From the street, anywhere, it was almost always in sight. like some monstrous geometrical shadow, murk-colored and rising limitlessly into the swimming heights of the smoke-mist. It was gaunt and grimy and repellent; the great structure may have partaken of beauty. Sheridan had made some of the things he said emphatic enough to remain with her. She went over and over them-and they began to seem true: "Only one girl he could feel that sorry for!" "Gurney says he's got you on his brain so bad-" The man's clumsy talk began to sing in her heart. The song was begun there when she saw the accident.

She was directly opposite the Sheridan building then, waiting for the traffic to thin before she crossed, though other people were risking the passage, darting and halting and dodging parbehind her, talking earnestly, and started across. Both wore black; one was tall and broad and thick, and the other was taller, but noticeably slender. And Mary caught her breath, for they were Bibbs and his father. They did not see her, and she caught a phrase of Bibbs' mellow voice, which had taken a crisper ring: "Sixty-eight thousand dollars? Not sixty-eight thousand buttons!" It startled her queerly, and as there was a glimpse of his profile she saw for the first time a resemblance to his father.

She watched them. In the middle of the street Bibbs had to step ahead of his father, and the two were separated. But the reckless passing of a truck, trolley car-no place for absent-minuedness, but Blbbs was still absorbed had been saying to his father. There the wrong way-and then Mary saw the heavy figure of Sheridan plunge straight forward in front of the car. With absolute disregard of his own life, he hurled himself at Bibbs like a football player shunting off an opponent, and to Mary it seemed that they both went down together. But that was all she could see automobiles, trucks and wagons closed in between. She made out that the trolley car stopped jerkily, and she saw a policeman breaking his way through the instantly condensing crowd, while the traffic came to a standstill, and people stood up in automobiles or climbed upon the hubs and tires of wheels, not to miss a chance of seeing anything horrible.

He Hurled Himself at Bibbs.

Mary tried to get through; it was impossible. Other policemen came to help the first, and in a minute or two traffic was in motion again. The crowd became pliant, dispersing-there was no figure upon the ground, and no ambulance came. But one of the policemen was detained by the clinging and beseeching of a gloved hand.

"What is the matter, lady?" "Where are they?" Mary cried.

"Who? Ole Man Sheridan? I reckon he wasn't much hurt!" "His son-"

"Was that who the other one was" some, but I reckon he only got shook up. They both went on in the Sheri-

cuse me, lady." Sheridan and Bibbs, in fact, were at that moment in the elevator, ascending. "Whisk-broom up in the office," Sheridan was saying. "You got to look out on these corners nowadays, I tell you. I don't know I got any call to blow, though-because I tried to cross after you did. That's how I happened to run into you. Well, you remember to look out after this. We were talkin' about Murtrie's askin' sixty-eight thousand flat for that ninety-nine-year lease. It's his lookout if he'd rather take it that way, and I don't know

"No." said Bibbs, emphatically, as the elevator stopped; "he won't get it. Not from Us, he won't, and I'll show you why. I can convince you in five minutes." He followed his father into the office anteroom-and convinced him. Then, having been diligently but in that consciousness of Mary's brushed by a youth of color, Bibbs went into his own room and closed the

He was more shaken than he had allowed his father to perceive, and his side was sore where Sheridan had struck him. He desired to be alone; he wanted to rub himself and, for once to do some useless thinking again. He knew that his father had not "happened" to run into him; he knew that Sheridan had instantly-and instinctively-proved that he held his own life of no account whatever compared to that of his son and heir. Bibbs had been unable to speak of that, or seem to know it; for Sheridan, just as inlously. Two men came from the crowd stinctively, had swept the matter aside -as of no importance, since all was well-reverting immediately to busi-

Bibbs began to think intently of his father. He perceived, as he had never perceived before, the shadowing of something enormous and indomitable -and lawless; not to be daunted by the will of nature's very self; laughing at the lightning and at wounds and mutilation; conquering, irresistibleand blindly noble. For the first time in his life Bibbs began to understand the meaning of being truly this man's

He would be the more truly his son henceforth, though, as Sheridan said. Bibbs had not come downtown with him meanly or half-heartedly. He had given his word because he had wanted the money, simply, for Mary Vertrees in her need. And he shivered with horror of himself, thinking how he had gone to her to offer it, asking her to marry him-with his head on his breast in shameful fear that she would accept him! He had not known her; the knowing had lost her to him, and this had been his real awakening; for he knew now how deep had been that slumber wherein he dreamily celebrated the superiority of "friendship!" The sleep-walker had wakened to bitter knowledge of love and life, finding himself a failure in both. He had made a burnt offering of his dreams, and the sacrifice had been an unforgivable hurt to Mary. All that was left for him was the work he had chosen, but at least he would not fail in that, though it was indeed no more than "dust in his mouth." If there had been anything "to work for-"

He went to the window, raised it, and let in the uproar of the streets below. He looked down at the blurred. hurrying swarms - and he looked across, over the roofs with their panting jets of vapor, into the vast, foggy heart of the smoke. Dizzy traceries of steel were rising dimly against it, chattering with steel on steel, and screeching in steam, while tiny figures of men walked on threads in the dull sky. Buildings would overtop the Sheridan. Bigness was being served.

But what for? The old question came to Bibbs with a new despair. Here, where his eye fell, had once been ened a group of country women who green fields and running brooks, and voice; startlingly kind, too, and inefwere in course of passage: they were how had the kind earth been despoiled just in front of Bibbs, and shoved and disfigured! The ploneers had be- to hear. backward upon him vidently. that their posterity what nive in peace and wisdom, en oying the fruits of the in thoughts concerned with what he earth. Well, their posterity was hereand there was only turmoll. Where were shricks and yells; Bibbs looked was the promised land? It had been promised by the soldlers of all the wars; it had been promised to this gen. eration by the ploneers; but here was the very posterity to whom it had been promised, toiling and risking and sacrificing in turn-for what?

The harsh roar of the city came in through the open window, continuously beating upon Bibbs' ear until he began to distinguish a pulsation in it-a broken and irregular cadence. It seemed to him that it was like a titante voice, discordant, boarse, rustily metallic-the voice of the god, Bigness. And the voice summoned Bibbs as it summoned all its servants.

"Come and work!" it seemed to call, "Come and work for Me. all men! By your youth and your hope I summon you! By your age and your despair I summon you to work for Me yet a little, with what strength you have, By your love of home I summon you! By your love of woman I summon you! By your hope of children I summon you!

"You shall be blind slaves of Mine, blind to everything but Me, your Master and Driver! For your reward you shall gaze only upon my ugliness. You shall give your toll and your lives, you shall go mad for love and worship of my ugliness! You shall perish still worshiping Me, and your :hildren shall perish ':nowing no other god!" And then, as Bibbs closed the window down tight, he heard his father's voice booming in the next room; he could not listinguish the words, but the tone was exultant-and there ame the thump! thump! of the maimed hand. Bibbs guessed that Sheridan was bragging of the city and of the Bigness to some visitor from out of

And he thought how truly Sheridan was the high priest of Bigness. But with the old, old thought again, "What for?" Bibbs caught a glimmer of far, faint light. He saw that Sheridan had all his life struggled and conquered. and must all his life go on struggling and inevitably conquering, as part of a vast impulse not his own. Sheridan served blindly-but was the impulse blind? Bibbs asked himself if it was not he who had been in the greater hurry, after all. The kiln must be fired before the vase is glazed, and the Aeropolis was not crowned with marble in a day. Then the voice came to him again, but there was a strain in it as of some huge music struggling to be born of the turmoil. "Ugly I am," it seemed to say to him, "but never forget that I am a god!" And the voice grew in sonorousness and in dignity. "The highest should serve, but so long as you worship me for my own sake I will not serve you. It is man who makes me ugly, by his worship of me, If man would let me serve him, I should be beautiful!" Looking once more from the window, Bibbs sculptured for himselfin vague contortions of the smoke and fog above the roofs—a gigantic figure with feet pedestaled upon the great buildings and shoulders disappearing in the clouds, a colossus of steel and wholly blackened with soot. But Blbbs carried his fancy further-for there was still a little poet lingering in the back of his head-and he thought that up over the clouds, unseen from below. the glant labored with his hands in the clean sunshine; and Bibbs had a glimpse of what he made there-perhaps for a fellowship of the children of the children that were children now -a noble and joyous city, unbelievably

The plowing can be done at the right season, no matter what the temperature is or how dry the ground is. The plow can also be set to a good 166,271 to her husband and $80,926 to depth. Nearly all team work is done on some successful farms with the light tractor, allowing the owners to dispose of nearly all their horses and cutting down on the feed bill. A great many people have enough horses laying around eleven months in the year eating their heads off which, if sold. would bring enough money to buy a tractor to do the heavy team work and while idle would not depreciate in

AN EMBROIDERED BLOUSE.

It is Said That Handwork Lingerie la Rivaling Crape:

For some time hand embroidered blouses were kept under cover. It seemed a shame, too, for the hand work on a blouse always showed to good advantage. However, there is no longer any need to lament about the matter, for once more women are privileged to wear blouses which show the results of their labor in the embroidery field. But the embroidery is applied in a different manner. Instead of decorating the front of the blouse in plastron effect, dainty little flowers hang in garlands from the shoulder line. The shoulders are outlined with a band of embroidery. One blouse showing this treatment was embraidered in blue, pink and green. It opened in the front, and the line of closing was finshed with featherstitching and a few tiny white buttons embroidered in

The application of the embroidery on the sleeves was quite a variation. Monday, July 17 to July 29.

The policy of this store has been just two sales each year to close out our summer and winter merchandise.

We do not buy special goods at low prices to use during these sale times but just take our regular high grade merchandise of the same quality that we have always carried and make liberal reductions in the price.

This year the price of goods has advanced so much in many lines that we ought to make no reductions, but in order to not disappoint our many customers that wait for our sales, we shall make the same liberal reductions that we have made in former years. Liberal discounts will be given on every purchase amounting to fifty cents and over.

Sale starts Monday, July 17, and continues for two weeks, No special prices for certain days but sales price for every day. Prices during this sale are for cash only.

Whitman a Candidate.

Obedient to the request contained in many letters reeived since the close of the legislative session from representative men over all parts of Cayuga county and apparently rep resentative of the temperance sentiment and a large portion of the best element of the Republican party generally, I have decided to be a candidate for assemblyman from this county subject to the decision of the Republican primaries in Septem-

In addition to standing for everything that makes for decent citizenship and reflects intelligent Republicanism generally I will, if nominated and elected, use my utmost endeavors to secure the passage of legislat on which will give the people everywhere in the state a voice on the liquor question. I consider that it is an injustice for the country towns to vote on the liquor question when the people of Auburn who are just as truly in this county, and are equally intelligent are denied the right to express themselves.

In my humble judgment the time has come when the Republican party in New York State must stand for majority rule on this question for every citizen in the State or come to grief. I doubt whether it would be wise for the Republican party to declare either for or against prohibition but I believe it the duty of the party to stand squarely for submitting the question of prohibition to the people of the various localities so that they may determine it for themselves. It might not be expedient for any party to try to force prohibition on the people of any community, but it is neither moral nor sensible for any party to help force the liquor traffic on any community against its will.

If elected by the voters of this county I shall spare no effort to secure the passage of the Optional Prohibition Remonstrance Bill which without raising the question of Woman Suffrage and without raising any constitutional issue provides that the women of the state may have equal voice with the men on the question of whether saloons shall continue to exist in the same communities with their homes and children.

He has been pastor of the church for three years and this is the second time that he has had the honor of delivering such a sermon. The selection was made by the graduating class sent out under the guidance and instruction of Prof. Ceigler. Rev. Mr. Searls has endeared himself to the hearts of all the residents of Sackets Harbor during the time that he has been there and he has a host of friends outside of his own church. He is an enthusiastic Mason and every attendant at the communications of Sackets Harbor lodge and Sackets Harbor chapter is a personal friend of his. He belongs to neither the lodge nor the chapter there, but was a member of both Masonic bodies before he came there, as well as of the Commandery and the Shrine. He had served as eminent commander of the commandery in Auburn before coming to Sackets Harbor. He is the acting chaplain of Sackets Harbor lodge and he always has something good to offer when called upon for remarks. He never tires in his labors of trying to do something for his fellow mar."

Churches for Prohibition.

The Methodist Episcopal church with a membership of 5,000,000; the Presbyterian church with a membership of nearly 2,000,000; the Baptis: church (North and South,) with 3,-000,000; the Cumberland Presbyterfan and other church denominations, i their conventions last month, dec.ared themselves in unmistakable terms for nation-wide prohibition. Ringing utterances have also been made in the past few weeks by ecclesisties high in the councils of the Episcopal and Catholic churches.

USES OF KEROSENE.

Why It is an Indispensable Article For the Housekeeper.

Coal oil will help the housekeeper out of many difficulties. A spoonful of kerosene added to a kettle of very hot water will make windows, looking glasses and picture glasses bright and clear. Use a small clean cloth, wring it dry and rub it over the glass after wiping down the framework with an oiled cloth; then proceed to the next window and treat it similarly on both sides. After that go back to the first one and wipe it dry with a large clean cloth. No real polishing is required, and the windows or glass will look clear and shiny. Kerosene will clean your hands better than anything else after blacking a range or stove. Pour a little in the water; wash your hands in it; then wash them in tepid water and finally with plenty of soap and a stiff brush in hot water. Finish up by rubbing the hands with lemon and rosewater and glycerin.

When your kitchen sink is rusty rub it over with kerosene. Squeaky shoes are cured by dipping the soles in kerosene-enough to reach the top of the soles without reaching the upper leather.

The white spots appearing in the spring on the lining of Your refrigerator will disappear if you rub the zinc with kerosene. Leave the refrigerator "The word emancipation has no acid open several hours, then wash with aste here. The American woman uses water, soap and some ammonia. The refrigerator will then be clean and sweet and all spots will have disappeared.

How to Remove Rusty Screws From Wood.

To remove screws and nails that have become rusted into wood so that it is impossible to remove them without damage pour a little kerosene over them and after soaking a short time the rust will give way. Nuts and bolt. that have been fixed by rust for years may be made to turn by similar applications of kerosene, which soon pene-133,077.05 trates the interstices.

PRESIDENTIAL VOTE OF WOMEN IMPORTANT

Will Cast Ballots In Doubtful States.

Who is to be nominated for president of the United States is the one question in men's minds just now. Every American citizen has his eyes turned toward Chicago and St. Louis, where the great national parties are to hold their political conventions. A new element has entered into this presidential campaign, one to which political lead ers are giving much thought.

In twelve states women will vote for president next November. These states will cast ninety-one electoral votes. They will control nearly one-fifth of the electoral college. They will cast one-third of the votes newssary to elect the next president. Four years ago only six states permitted women to vote. The thirty-seven electoral votes of these six states did not then greatly affect politicians.

Now it is different. "The number of woman suffrage states not only is greater this year." said the New York Press of May 5 editorially, "but it is more important than the electoral vote itself indicates, for they are in nearly every case doubtful states, all in the West and none of them having the traditional allegiance to political parties."

Since 1896 in twenty-nine congresses not one of the eleven full suffrage year for the Democratic party and which remained constant to the Republicans. In every presidential election frage states would have required more than 7.8 per cent to turn the presidentions have been carried by a majority of less than 80 votes, in twenty-eight by a majority of less than 500 votes. ance of power for the presidential elec-

"This fact," says the Sun of May 12, "has begun to engage the serious attention of practical politicians. It is hard for men of this type to realize the chised states will vote for presidential electors in November, complicated as sonal party predilections. The enfranchised women of the country are divided among themselves upon such issues as preparedness, the tariff, Mexi-Corners meet at the home of Mr. and can intervention, the rights of neutrals, etc., but they are united in their belief that woman suffrage is at this moment the most important question before the be served. A very cordial invitation | nation, embracing and overshadowing all others, and that their highest duty as voters is to their sex rather than to any party or political platform. It is conceivable that in a close election the solidarity of the enfranchised women's vote might be the decisive factor."

WOMEN UP AND READY.

Suffragists Preparing For Victory In New York Next Year.

One of the best symptoms of suffrage victory in 1917 is the "up to the minute" action of the suffragists. Evidence of it is seen all over New York state, but one of the most recent instances was in Westchester county. when the suffrage convention of the Third assembly district was held in Tarrytown on May 11.

Westchester county has grown to such an extent that it is going to have more representation at Albany - another state senator and another assemblyman. Therefore the Westchsster division of the New York State Woman Suffrage party anticipated official political action and prepared its list of county officers to include a new assembly division under the reapportionment act. So far as is known this was the first section of the state and the first political organization to provide for reapportioned district leaders. "My, but you suffragists are up to the minute!" remarked one man, a local political leader.

No Compromise, Gentlemen! It has been given to a foreign woman, the Baroness de Rauch, to speak a potent word of appreciation of the American woman. Writing in the New York Times of June 4 she speaks of the radiant energy which marks the work of women in this country. "It is the great privilege of American women to have discovered in work woman's vital power," says the baroness. the liberty bestowed upon her with a gracious diguity, and the importance of her high intention is manifested in the fact that men fight with her and against her. Man has mid in woman's hands the supreme task of implanting the fundamental physical and mora principles for the future of the race He has imposed upon her weak shoul ders the heaviest responsibilities, and she stands in her duties serene, jus: part of the world's affairs? ITTAI THE GITTITE

By REV. B. B. SUTCLIFFE Extension Department Moody Bible Institute of Chicago

TEXT-Then said the king to Ittal the Gittite, wherefore goest thou also with us?—II Sam. 15:19.

To get the setting of this text we must read at least the first 23 verses > of the chapter in which it is found. It will be seen that King David was driven from his place by the rebellion under Absalom. It was a dark item in David's history, and his prospects for final victory were not very promising. Some of nis most influential friends were turning from him, and his popularity seemingly was waning. Then it was that Ittai came to him with cheer and encouragement.

Ittal's Choice of David. In the first place it was a proper choice, for even though David was driven out, he was still the rightful king. Then again, it was a very enthusiastic choice, as we see from verse was aware of the difficulties, the privations and the dangers he must share with David. He was not blind to the promise of ease and safety and possible advantage to himself by making another choice. And he had before him the example and influence of some of the leading men who were forsaking David. But he had counted the cost and then deliberately and with enthusiasm he threw himself on David's side. What a picture this presents of what the Christians' choice should be in following the Lord. Doubtless there are certain difficulties and privations, certain promises of ease and advantage from the other side. And there is surely seen the example of many who turn aside. But in spite of this the proper choice for the Christian is a deliberate and enthusiastic choice of the Lord whatever the cost may be.

Ittai's Consecration to David. His consecration is seen in his separation to David's person. Where the king was he would be and where the king went he must go. But this involved a confession of David's purpose. Being found with David meant that what David wanted to do, he wanted to do. It would be plain to all, friend and foe alike, what Ittai wanted. And this in turn meant association with David's people. How strong the church would be if all professing Christians were found among the people of Christ, having the purpose of Christ as their purpose and knowing not only some of the promises of Christ, but knowing too something of the person of Christ. But so many have their own purposes to follow and per year, and this pays for 156 papers work out instead of the Lord's. So many there are whose associations The Genoa Tribune together for one are more often formed among the enemies rather than the friends of Christ. Little is seen of true consecration among them.

Ittai's Compensation From David. To read this we must read I Sam.

18:1, 2. In this passage we are told that Ittai came to a place of responsibility for David's work. He became a leader among David's friends. This put him into a place of honor before David's enemies. They knew Ittai had been promoted and henceforth they must reckon with him in their warfare against David. And this gave him a place in sharing in David's triumph when at last the king came into his own. What an incentive for all Christians to step out and away from the world with a consecration to the Lord which would result in each one having such a place in the Lord's service that would make the enemy take note of them. And in the filling of such a place therewill come at last the sharing of our Lord's triumph when, his foes being made his footstool, he is seated and reigning upon his throne.

Ittai's Secret. Each successful life has had at its foundation some secret spring which has supplied the continuing energy to give that life success. In Ittai's case the secret was threefold. He had a personal attachment to David which never wavered when David came to relief. I was cured by three bottles of troublous times. He was ready with personal sacrifice for David when the usurper was on the throne and David driven out. And finally there was personal satisfaction with David even when apparently David could give him nothing but difficulties and dangers while David's rival could hold out the promise of ease and safety. This same threefold secret applied to the life of any Christian in relation to the Lord will bring success of the highest kind. There is in this following the Lord, sacrifice and privation, difficulty and danger in the present time, but in the end it will be glory and honor, delight and joy in the presence of the Lord Jesus Is an Introduction in Itself and Makes

Why He Liked the Camel.

Harris Dickson, on a hunting trip up. in Sunflower county, Mississippi, met an old darky who had never seen a circus in his life. When the big show came in the following season to Dickson's town of Vicksburg he sent for the old man and treated him to the whole thing-arrival of the trains, putting up the tents, grand free street parade, menagerie, main performance, concert, side show, peanuts, red lemonade, and all. The old darky followed his white patron through with popping eyes, but saying never a word. Late in the afternoon they got back to the Dickson home, "John," said Dickson, "you enjoyed it?" "Boss," said John fervently, "Ah shore by files. In fact more of the boys in did!" SCHOOLBOY TRAPPERS

The teachers in one small-town school in Illinois aroused the interest of their pupils in the campaign to kill flies last spring. The youngsters made traps and sold them to the merchants for a neat profit on each trap. This profit was devoted to a fund for the Boy Scout troop. The kids are planning to do a "big business" in traps this season.

TAKE THESE PRECAUTIONS

One of Our Townswomen Tells How She Rid Her Home of Fly Pest Last Summer.

The thoughtful husband and wife take great pride in the fact that few flies are to be seen about their home during the summer. It should be the proud boast of every family in this town, for the absence of flies indicates a clean and healthful home place.

We were discussing recently the proposition of a local campaign against flies with one of the best known women in this community.

"I will be glad to help in every way possible," she declared, "and I'm sure that if we all work together we can reduce the amount of disease 50 per cent here this summer-especially summer complaint among children and typhoid fever among the men and

"Do you know we had hardly any flies around our place last summer? Of course, it was a cool summer, but I believe our efforts to be free of flies had much to do with their absence.

"We screened the house early. We hung two fly traps near the kitchen door close to the garbage can. We put one trap at the door opening from the dining room into the side yard. We burned most of the garbage—peelings and things. We had the manure hauled away every Saturday morning. And we used plenty of disinfectant around the outhouse. It wasn't much trouble once we got the habit."

KEEP FLIES FROM THE SICK

One Fly May Bring Sickness to Your Family-Take No Chances.

Keep files away from the sick. One fly contaminated by typhoid germs may fall into a can of milk and opread contagion through the entire community. Fly specks from flies which have eaten tuberculosis sputum contain certain live consumption germsshowing that the germs pass through the fly's digestive tract without losing any of their deadly character. CORRECT MEASUREMENTS.

To the old-fashioned housekeeper and cook the methods of accurate measurement do not seem impor tant. When our cooks begin to learn that cooking is an exact science, there will be less said about 'luck" in cooking.

The "hit or miss" methods of measurements are the cause of poor results. Cooks as well as other workmen should have good tools to work with if they expect to realize success. There are standard spoons and measuring cups on the market that are full measure, and there are those which lack from one to two tablespoonfuls in a cup. Be sure that those you buy are full half pint cups and spoons the standard size. Sixteen tablespoonfuls of material will be found in the standard measuring cup. sixty drops are in a teaspoon and three teaspoonfuls fill a standard tablespoon. In using a tablespoonful of material it is leveled off with a knife, so is the teaspoon and the cup. Baking powder and soda should be free from lumps and lightened by tossing before measuring. In measuring flour the average cook takes too much by dipping it in a cup or shaking it down when measuring. Flour should be sifted before measuring, then lightly dropped into the cup with a tablespoon and smoothed off with spoon or knife. In taking the measure for half a teaspoonful or any part, fill it full, level with a knife and cut down through the center, from the handle to the tip, pushing off the half, or divide in thirds by marking the full spoon crosswise,

Directions as to combining materials should be followed if one wants uniformity, for the adding of a beaten egg to a hot soup will cause a curdled one. Pour in a little of the hot soup into the egg and then it can be added to Cabbage, if cooked in boiling salted
