Ithaca Fair Postponed.

Ithaca's fair has been postponed to Oct. 10. The carnival, which was to have been held in Ithaca at the same time, has also been postponed so as to be held during the Tompkins County fair.

The new dates, Oct. 10-13, are expected to result in a larger affair as this will mark the opening dates for Cornell University and other local schools.

Those at the meeting of the Tompkins County Agricultural and Horticultural Society, when action looking to the postponement was taken, were:

Nelson F. Hopper, president of the society, E. H. Marshall, vice-president, Prof. H. H. Wing, treasurer, W. E. Pearson, secretary, Theodore Hildebrandt, Dr. John A. Genung, and Hon. John E. Preswick.

Dr. John A. Genung paid a high compliment to the Ithaca Board of Commerce for the co-operation which has been manifested by business men in planning for the coming Carnival and said that he believed that the new dates will mark even a greater success for the Tompkins County fair than was originally expected.

THINKING MEN ARE AROUSED

The Wilson Administration
Has Reversed the Country's Entire System of Taxation.

EXTRAORDINARY TAXES NOW

In Time of Peace, With Gross Extravagance in All Branches of the Government, the Country is Facing Deficit.

How do the thinking men of the country view the policy of the Democratic national administration in abolishing the protective policy and substituting in place of it a system of direct taxation?

United States Senator Henry Cabot Lodge of Massachusetts, who has served continuously in the upper house of congress since 1883 and who is one of the clearest thinkers in the country in a recent speech on this question said:

Changed Entire System of Taxation.
"The Democratic party did more than simply overthrow the protective policy; it altered our entire system of taxation. By the constitution of the United States the great source of revenue to be found in duties on imports was reserved for the general government alone, and it was the policy of the framers of the constitution and the founders of the government to use duties on imports as the normal source for the national revenue. The field of direct taxation, except for the excise on liquors and tobacco, was left to the states, and it was tacitly understood that this field was not to be invaded by the general government except in times of stress. In a period of profound peace the Democratic party threw away a large part of the revenues to be derived from duties on imports, thus abandoning the field reserved exclusively to the United States, and deliberately substituted direct taxes, in this way crippling the resources of the states and increasing the burdens upon the people."

A Miserable Failure.
Congressman Frank W. Mondell of Wyoming, discussing the failure of the Wilson administration in dealing with the tariff questions, said:

"The Democratic party had its wonderful opportunity to reasonably modify tariff rates, to make the modifications and adjustments which a considerable portion of the country believed necessary and advisable, to reform but not destroy. But that was impossible; impossible then, impossible now will be impossible any time in the future to a party that clings to the ancient errors of free trade and tariff for revenue only, a party with whom protection if tolerated must be incidental, accidental or sporadic. The measure they evolved was neither free trade, tariff for revenue nor protection, but a miserable, indefensible, illogical combination of them all, a failure as a revenue producer, a joke as a measure of proper protection. Its presence on the statute books presents a menace which the close of the European war will translate into a calamity."

Opens Home Market to Foreigners.
Congressman Dick T. Morgan of Oklahoma:

"When the present Democratic administration made the Underwood tariff bill a law it meant that every producer must share his home market with foreign producers."

Drifting Into Direct Taxes.

United States Senator Penrose of Pennsylvania:

"We are drifting into a system of direct taxes at a time when nearly every civilized nation is going in the other direction. Before the outbreak of the war in Europe every nation in Europe except England had a protective tariff. Bismarck openly declared in urging a protective tariff for Germany that the wonderful recuperation of the United States after what had up to that time been the greatest war in history, the civil war, was due to our protective legislation. If Germany had not had a protective tariff and been able to meet a large part of her requirements from protective duties on home industries and agriculture the war would have been over long ago as far as Germany was concerned. And there is every reason to believe that with the close of the war new trade alliances and treaties will be made which will make it more imperative than ever that the United States should get ready for industrial preparedness."

Extraordinary Taxes and a Deficit.
United States Senator McCumber of North Dakota:

"During the fiscal year ending June 30, 1915, in addition to our customs duties and our ordinary internal revenues collected in round numbers $2,000,000 from its war revenue measure and about $50,000,000 from income taxes, or $130,000,000 in extraordinary taxes. And yet, Mr. President, notwithstanding that additional draft on our people our expenses exceeded our income that year by $57,442,500. During that year we had not added to our army or navy program. There was not one dollar for preparedness."

Direct Taxes and Extravagance.
Congressman Ellsworth of Minnesota:

"The 1915 platform and campaign accentuated tariff legislation, cost of living, trust legislation, extravagance and many things which were almost completely lost sight of in legislation which was in complete antithesis of all of them. Instead of cutting the cost of living it has gone up; instead of trust legislation we are talking of the allowance of forming a trust to control world trade; instead of tariff legislation there was none offered except upon the schedule for dyestuffs—the one on which tariffs had not been before—direct taxation was put into effect, and instead of cutting down extravagance we have been the most extravagant of any time in the history of our own or any other nation."

MUDDLED FOREIGN POLICY.

No One Knows What It Is, and This Country Today Has Few Friends Among Nations.

More American soldiers and citizens have been killed by Mexicans in the last few years than in the Spanish American war. Embargoes have been placed and raised, battles have been fought, ultimatums have been issued and withdrawn, demands made and today, with the militia preparing, going and gone to the border and the regular army backing gradually out of Mexico, the American people do not know whether we are going to Mexico or coming home.

The American people today do not know what the foreign policy of America is, so muddled have been the acts of the administration. Foreign nations do not know. One thing is certain: The United States has but few friendly nations in either the eastern or western hemisphere. We have lost prestige from our dealings with the nations of the world, and we must pay the penalty. It takes a firm, stanch, straightforward leadership to redeem our prestige. Then America will take her allotted place in the sun.—Congressman Franklin F. Ellsworth of Minnesota.

An Up State Joke.

"I looked upon his candidacy as a sort of joke. The idea of sending a country lawyer to the United States senate is to me either funny or preposterous," says Patrick E. McCabe, of Albany in a statement referring to Thomas F. Conway's candidacy for that office.

Former Lieutenant Governor Conway is in the race for the Democratic nomination for United States senator as the candidate of the up state Democrats and has charged that Mr. McCabe is behind the candidacy of William F. McCombs of New York city, who is Tammany's choice.

The up state Democrats were in hopes that an up state Democrat would be nominated for governor this year, but the conference at Saratoga killed that hope. They are now trying to land a candidate for United States senator in the person of Mr. Conway and find themselves confronted by a New York city man backed by Tammany and Tammany's up state friends.

It is frequently possible to get an accurate line on what Charles F. Murphy is thinking by attending to what Patrick E. McCabe is saying, and McCabe says he regards Conway's candidacy as a joke.

McCabe never has questioned Tammany's supremacy in Democratic politics in the state. He is probably as close to the Tammany leader as any man in the state, and when the Democratic party is in power it is doubtful if any other four Democrats living north of the Harlem river control as much patronage as he does. This is not because of his strength at the polls, because his county is strongly Republican, but he is a resourceful fighter inside of his own party and has been able to hold his organization in line with Tammany on all occasions.

When Governor Sulzer broke with Murphy it was McCabe who fired the opening gun in the fight that ended with Sulzer's impeachment.

When Patrick E. McCabe says that he looks upon Thomas F. Conway's candidacy for the Democratic nomination for United States senator as a joke it is a not unreasonable assumption that Charles F. Murphy entertains similar views. Tammany not infrequently regards the up state Democrats as a joke.

America First.

The verdict of the people at this election will make us a strong and resourceful nation or leave us a prey to the aggressiveness of foreign nations. We are to decide by our votes the future and the fortune of our hundred million people. If we decide aright in the valley of decision we will rise to the heights of great achievement and make of this country a nation deserving of our utmost loyalty. And we will decide aright if we place America first—first in devoted loyalty and first in industrial progress.

Thus protection, the "American system" of the fathers of our country, becomes a vital and essential issue of the campaign and a necessary feature of any true conception of Americanism. Protection is pro-American, and Americans, if they are true to their country, must be protectionists.—Thomas C. Marvin, Secretary of the Home Market Club.

It is now reported that the Democratic members of congress contemplate a bond issue to pay for the cost of the present troop mobilization at the Mexican border. *** If we have to issue bonds to pay for a few months' muster of troops, what shall we do when the time comes to foot the bill for substantial military preparedness?—New York Sun.

UPON HIS RECORD.

Upon his record as Governor of New York state the Republican party asks the people of this country to elect Mr. Hughes as President. The qualities he showed as administrator of the state of New York are the qualities most needed in a national executive for these United States.—Congressman William S. Bennett of New York.

Partisanship and Favoritism.

In his declaration of principles Judge Seabury, who is to be the Democratic candidate for governor, says: "Business methods shall take the place of partisanship and favoritism."

It is not necessary to question Judge Seabury's sincerity in order seriously to doubt the correctness of that statement. Partisanship and favoritism have been the distinguishing characteristics of the state administration whenever the Democratic party has been in power.

Partisanship and favoritism cost the state millions of dollars on the canal during four years of Democratic administration. One of the first acts of the present Republican state administration was the abolition of unnecessary offices and positions in connection with the barge canal work, with a resultant saving of half a million dollars a year. Partisanship and favoritism led to the creation and filling of such positions under preceding Democratic administrations.

What partisanship and favoritism did to the state in connection with highway building under Democratic administration was a nation wide scandal. Governor Sulzer stated that he knew where $10,000,000 had been criminally mis-spent. Contractors, Democratic officials and Democratic politicians were the subject of grand jury investigation and prosecution in all parts of the state.

Partisanship and favoritism under the Democratic administration between 1910 and 1914 in the state prisons wrecked the entire prison system of the state.

Partisanship and favoritism permeated every department of the state government during the administrations of Governors Dix, Sulzer and Gynn. Partisanship and favoritism swelled the payrolls. Public business was neglected. Conditions were created so unseemly to the people of the state that the Democratic party was voted out of power two years ago by an enormous majority, and the work of doing what Judge Seabury says he would like to do was entrusted to the Republican party.

The present state administration has progressed the work as much as possible. It has put an end to the contract scandals, paid off the state's accumulation of bills, cleared up an enormous amount of business accumulated during four years of Democratic neglect and discharged hundreds of unnecessary partisan favorites from the public payroll.

The Republican party is a far better agency to do what Judge Seabury says he would like to do than Judge Seabury ever can hope to be as the candidate of the party responsible for the scandalous interregnum between 1910 and 1915.

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

Every manufacturing center in Europe will be joyous over the way in which the Democratic party proposes to "protect" American industries if it is permitted to remain in power at Washington.—New York Mail.

Mr. Hughes is making votes in the west. His speeches are proving him to be what his friends confidently thought him, a campaigner of resourcefulness and ability. He hits hard and strikes the mark every time.—Buffalo Commercial.

Less than 22,000 Democrats took the trouble to vote in the Democratic primaries in Kansas against 181,000 voters in the Republican primaries. Perhaps Chairman McCormack can find some indication of a Democratic victory in those figures.—Rochester Democrat and Chronicle.

To oppose a strong protective tariff for the days when the war in Europe has ceased and the cheap labor of the whole world is again engaged in industry is to take sides, not with foreign labor even, but with foreign wealth, against the American workman and working woman.—Albany Knickerbocker Press.

The Wilson managers have carried Maine—in August. But then it is quite the common thing for the Democrats to gain great victories at the polls before the election. No Republican need be disturbed by the day dreams of the Democratic miracle men. They are seeing things, but they will wake up on the morning after election.—Newburg Journal.

By the time the Democratic caucus finally takes its rings out of the tariff commission bill which President Wilson so suddenly decided to advocate it will be stamped all over with the imprint, "Good for campaign purposes only."

As the bill stands today it is a repudiated measure. Into every line is written the traditional opposition of the Democratic party to any effort to protect American industries through the tariff.—New York Mail.

Maxwell

$595

F. O. E. DETROIT

The world's record—twenty-two thousand and twenty-two miles without stopping the motor—is held by a Maxwell stock touring car.

NO other car at any price has ever approached this wonderful record of endurance.

In addition to this proven sturdiness, remember that the Maxwell averages between 25 and 30 miles per gallon of gasoline.

Moreover, the Maxwell is complete. It has electric starter and lights; demountable rims; one-man mohair top; speedometer; roomy, comfortable seats and an attractive appearance.

Are you particular about details? Do you demand evidence of value? If so, you will investigate the Maxwell, the features, record and reputation of which proclaim it the world's greatest motor car value.

MARKING FISHING SPOTS.

How to Recall the Places and Properly Locate Them.

A. Hamilton, Jr., writes for the New York Sun on how to mark good fishing spots as follows:

"It is necessary for the successful fisherman to mark the good fishing spots, and it is a simple matter.

"The first thing a civil engineer is taught is to tie his survey to something permanent. Of what use would a deed be setting forth the boundaries of a piece of property if it did not have a permanent point of beginning?"

"If you are fishing in a body of water with land on all sides it only becomes necessary to look in four directions—first north, and then take some object due north of your fishing spot and remember it, such as a big tree, smokestack or building.

"Then look due east and fix upon an other object, and your fishing spot will be at the intersection of imaginary lines drawn from both those points.

"If you desire to be doubly sure you can site on objects due south and west, but any two objects ninety degrees apart will be sufficient to fix a point.

"It is assumed that you are seated in a boat directly over the spot you wish to mark; hence it is easy to take 'shots' due east and south or north and west. Any two are sufficient."

CARE OF AUTO TIRES.

How They Should Be Treated to Conserve Their Life.

Buy a tire tester. It will cost about $1. To prevent rim cutting and broken down fabric keep tires inflated to the following pressure: Three inch tire, 60 pounds; three and one-half inch, 70 pounds; four inch, 80 pounds; four and one-half inch, 90 pounds; five inch, 100 pounds.

Seal all cuts in rubber either with a preparation made for the purpose or by vulcanization. This is important to prevent moisture and sand from reaching the fabric.

When not in use keep tires in a cool, dark place.

Do not start or stop the car suddenly. Do not turn corners at high speed. Be sure the front wheels are parallel. Do not allow oil to get on the tires. Do not use too much or too little talc in the tires. Too little causes the tubes to stick, while too much causes a gradual accumulation into a solid lump, which is a frequent cause of a puncture.

Do not put a tire on a rusted rim.

Why United States Marines Suffer Little From Foot Troubles.

That United States marines suffer little from foot troubles on long hikes in the tropics is attributed to the fact that they invariably sprinkle soap powder into their shoes or soap their stockings just prior to the march, according to a naval surgeon just returned from Haiti.

In the Haitian campaign the United States marines were sometimes forced to march thirty or more miles a day over rough mountainous roads, and the use of blistering or painful swelling of the feet were almost negligible.

WHY THE EYES ARE STRAINED AT MOVIES.—Physicians are constantly advising patrons of the movies to protect their eyes. A writer in the Journal of the American Medical Association tells why eye strain is produced and how to obviate it.

"The progress made in the character of subjects presented in the movies today makes it desirable for all inquiring people to at least attend occasionally," he says. "Annoying after effects on the eyes of many prevent them from enjoying the social diversion and often the educational advantages thus derived. The great majority of those who suffer from eye strain after watching moving pictures can find much, if not complete, relief in perfectly fitted glasses. The picture may not be quite so sharp, but this is more than compensated for by the increased comfort."

"For those with very sensitive eyes a colored glass, either amber, yellowish green or amethyst, may be necessary to give complete relief. There have been put on the market recently several varieties of colored glasses, each of which has some advantages, so that some suitable color can usually be secured. A subdued light in the theater is much less irritating than when the only light visible comes from the screen. It is also advisable to avoid sitting in a place where it is necessary to look upward, as the additional strain becomes very tiresome and frequently leaves a headache."

kindergartens in Greater New York and that most of the large cities have adopted them may be surprised to learn that throughout our country only 11 per cent of the children are in kindergartens, making 89 per cent still unprovided for. In other words, 500,000 children are receiving this training, of whom nearly 4,000,000 are deprived. In a country which stands for equal privileges for all it is manifestly unfair that a few should be enjoying this educational advantage, while the large majority have to go without it.

"A short time ago we wrote to all the civilized countries of the world asking what they were doing for the education of their little children, and we found that Belgium had made the greatest progress, more than a half of all its children between three and six years of age were in kindergartens. Numerically, Belgium is now a small nation, one of the smallest, but as we think of this afflicted country let us not forget that it is the quality of a people rather than the quantity that is important and that education, especially education given in the early formative years, is one of the most influential factors in the making of quality."

Miss Locke pointed out the fact that the children of our own country spend on an average only a little more than five years in school, and in some sections less than four years, maintaining that two extra years added to this meager four or five would greatly increase the average intelligence of our people.

TEST FOR CLOTHS.

How to Tell if Cottons Hide in Your New Wool Suit.

To test silk boil the sample in 5 per cent solution of caustic potash for fifteen minutes. If the silk is pure the fabric will be practically destroyed, leaving but a small residue like paper ashes. If there is cotton in it the cotton will remain. Another excellent test is to remove the threads which form the warp and the woof. Keep these separately, and test them in strong hydrochloric or sulphuric acid. If they are pure silk the threads will dissolve within two minutes. If there is either wool or cotton in the fabric the threads will remain unaffected.

Pure wools are adulterated even more than silk because they are in greater demand and also because they are quite easy to imitate. Many a yard of cloth sold as "pure wool" contains from 30 to 60 per cent cotton. Blankets sold as "half wool" have frequently been found to contain only 10 per cent of pure wool. There are machines today which cleverly wrap wool around cotton threads, and the finished product has every appearance of being all wool. Another method of adulterating is by taking cotton cloth and "felting" short woolen threads upon its surface by means of heat, moisture and pressure.

A purchaser may be fully convinced from the appearance and feeling of cloth that it is all wool, but the only safe method is to take home the sample and make tests. Immerse the sample of so called wool in oil of vitriol for about two minutes. This will destroy the cotton, but the wool will not be affected. Another test is to moisten a sample with 50 per cent nitric acid. This will turn the wool yellow, but the cotton will retain its color.

Use the same tests for linens that you do for wools. If the sample is genuine linen it will not be affected by oil of vitriol, but any cotton that is in it will be destroyed. Imitation damask is made today by means of printing upon the surface, with a sort of transparent mullage, the designs. These designs appear to be woven into the cloth. By immersing a sample in boiling hot water and allowing it to boil for several minutes the design will disappear.

STANDS FOR MORE SCHOOLS.

Also Maintains That Two Extra Years Added to the Meager Four or Five That Most Children Get Would Greatly Increase Average Intelligence.

At a conference of the National Congress of Mothers held in New York city in connection with the recent convention of the National Education association Miss Bessie Locke, chief of the kindergarten division of the United States bureau of education, said: "Those who are familiar with the fact that there are nearly a thousand kindergartens in Greater New York and that most of the large cities have adopted them may be surprised to learn that throughout our country only 11 per cent of the children are in kindergartens, making 89 per cent still unprovided for. ### FOR MRS. NEWLYWED.

How to Combine Tasty Relishes and Sauces With Different Meats.

With roast beef, tomatoes, grated horseradish, mustard, cranberry sauce, pickles.

With roast pork, apple sauce, cranberry sauce.

With roast veal, tomatoes, mushrooms, boiled onions.

With roast mutton, currant jelly and caper sauce.

With boiled mutton, boiled onions, caper sauce.

With boiled fowls, boiled onions, lemon sauce, cranberry sauce and jellies.

With roast lamb, mint sauce.

With roast turkey, cranberry sauce and currant jelly.

With boiled turkey, oyster sauce.

With roast goose, apple sauce and grape or currant jelly.

With boiled fresh mackerel, stewed gooseberries.

With boiled bluefish, white cream sauce, lemon sauce.

With boiled shad, mushroom sauce, parsley or egg sauce.

With fresh salmon, green peas and cream sauce.

Pickles are good with all roast meats—in fact, with all meats. Lemon juice is a grateful addition to all kinds of fish. Spinach is the proper accompaniment to veal; green peas to lamb. Potatoes are required with all kinds of meat. With fowls they are nicer mashed.

Diet and Morals.

Famous dietitians and doctors who have given careful study to foods and their effects upon the morals and disposition of human beings and animals claim that they can determine the character of food eaten by the physical organism. This being true, it behooves us in the interest of our right to beauty, to confine our diet to such foods as are the allies of beauty and not its demonstrated enemies.

How to Avoid Smoke When Lighting a Fire.

Simple way of avoiding the smoke, and gas which always pour into the room when a fire is lit in a stove, heater or fireplace on a damp day: Put on the wood and coal as usual, but before lighting them locate a handful of paper or shavings placed on top of the coal. This produces a current of hot air in the chimney, which draws up the smoke and gas at once.

HOW AUTOS CAN OBTAIN GREATER MILEAGE TO THE GALLON.

Gasoline is elastic. A gallon will drive a car almost any distance—the record is nearly ninety miles—says a writer in the current number of Motor Priat. This is food for thought for those who are worrying over the high price of fuel. By taking a few simple precautions it is possible for every owner to reduce greatly the consumption per mile.

If the car is run too slowly or fast there is fuel waste. Fifteen miles per hour is a good average. Until now the average motorist has been careless about the amount of fuel he used because it was comparatively cheap and was a small percentage of the total car expense.

Make sure that you are getting all the gasoline that you pay for. Some owners are not. Watch the counter on the pump to see that it registers the correct number of gallons and that the operator does not tamper with it while filling your tank. Furthermore, be certain that you obtain full measure. Some gasoline pumps leak; others have been "fixed" to give a short gallon. It is almost impossible to find the error by examining the pump, so it is necessary to check the amount in your tank by frequent measurement, or, if this is not feasible, it is advisable occasionally to buy a gallon in a can of your own and measure the quantity when you get home.

Most cars can be operated with a leaner mixture without affecting the production of power. Some motorists may even deem it advisable to run with a very lean adjustment, notwithstanding a reduction in hill climbing ability or speed. The exact adjustment must be determined by trial.

An auxiliary device which may be attached to the manifold and operated from the dash should be used. It will be found helpful when running with light load along a smooth, level road or downhill. When the motor is used as a brake the suction on the carburetor is reduced to a minimum by opening the auxiliary air device wide.

The car should run easily. All the bearings should be well greased and free. It should be possible to push the car without difficulty with one hand on a smooth, level surface. The importance of reducing friction to the minimum is shown by the fact that a racing car in good condition may be pushed with one finger.

THE HUSTLER.

How to Look Well Dressed Without a Great Expenditure.

In the American Magazine is an account of one of the most successful insurance solicitors in the country, who attributes a large part of his success to the fact that he always looks well dressed and prosperous.

"If you have only one suit of clothes keep that one suit clean and pressed all the time," he says. "Press your trousers yourself every day if necessary. I have pressed my trousers lots of times. Keep your shoes shined."

"If you can afford several suits change off from one suit to another frequently, and keep all of them spotless and well pressed. I never wear a suit longer than the second day at a time. To change every day is better. It gives the clothes a chance to 'rest.' I always hang my clothes on hangers the minute I take them off. It gives them a chance to 'come back' into shape and the nap to come up again."

"It is a great economy to have lots of good clothes. A suit will last twice and three times as long and always look well if you keep changing off from one to another. Besides, people get tired of seeing a man in the same suit day after day for a whole season."

INFANTILE WARDROBES.

How to Dress a New Baby With Little Expense.

If you are preparing a layette for a brand new baby these are the things you will need: Four abdominal bands of soft flannel, unhemmed, six or eight inches wide and twenty inches long; four shirts of silk and wool or cotton and wool; four flannel skirts made to hang from the shoulders; four night gowns or wrappers of outing flanne open in front.

Three knitted bands of wool and cotton, with shoulder straps; six very simple white slips; four dozen diapers—cheesecloth, birdseed or diapering; three pairs of socks for a summer baby or three pairs of long stockings for the winter baby.

One simple coat and cap; one pair of mittens for winter; two short, loose socks for sudden changes of temperature; two crocheted, knitted or flanne blankets.

PAPER FAMINE NOW IN PROSPECT

Newspapers Will Be Forced to Economize in the Fall.

MILLS RUN AT CAPACITY.

Unable to Care For Increased Demand and Surplus Nears Minimum—Supply Now on Hand Wouldn't Last Ten Days if the Factories Were to Shut Down.

Unless there is a concerted curtailment of waste of news print paper newspapers of the United States will be on the bread line, figuratively speaking. They will be compelled to take their material on allotment, receiving no more than manufacturers can give them from vanishing supplies. That a famine in news print paper will result within a few months unless economies are affected is the prediction of paper manufacturers.

Only a husbanding of resources by the publishers themselves can stave off the crisis, it was admitted throughout the trade.

At the present time in the United States and Canada fifty mills are working three shifts of men eight hours daily and six days a week. Their output for June—the last completion—was 149,151 tons, representing 95.4 per cent of their maximum production, the highest efficiency ever attained in the industry. This output represents an increase of 27,000 tons a month over the peak for June, 1915, but even this month's increase has been insufficient to feed the demand. Full production has had to be augmented by 5,000 tons more a month, which was drawn from a rapidly depleting reserve stock.

Surplus Gradually Shrinks.

Surplus stock has been swallowed up at this rate for several months now. At the end of June only 65,194 tons remained in storehouses that at the same time last year held 92,967 tons. Were production to cease today there is not enough news print paper stored to keep newspapers alive for ten days. It has been necessary for the publishers' mutual good and the benefit of the news reading public to curb the tendency toward increasing the size of papers at this time of year.

The figures cited here for June will take a considerable advance in October, usually the banner month in the newspaper year. As a rule, circulation increases in the fall, and advertising keeps pace with it. As a result more pages have to be added to the daily paper, and the Sunday takes on unusual bulk. Without the measures taken by the publishers this fall's increase would wipe out the total production and the reserve stock.

It may be asked by the public, "Why did not the paper manufacturers anticipate this tremendous increase in demand?" They did, so far as it was humanly possible to anticipate a prosperity. Since June, 1915, there has been added to the mills of this country and Canada 15 per cent more facilities for turning wood into paper. When the orders were given it seemed, according to the manufacturers, an extremely risky venture to install additional machinery on conditions temporarily roseate.

Working at Capacity.

The mills are at the peak of their capacity. They can turn out no more, although they have the materials and the men. In June of 1915 the maximum of efficiency derived from the machinery was 78.9; this year it reached the mark of 95.4.

With machinery making this record, men operating the day around and every other aid given to production, still the outlook for the fall falls to brighter. New mills cannot be put up in weeks or even months; generally it takes a year and a half to get a mill working. New machines have been ordered. In a few weeks several that turn out fifty tons a day will be in operation. But these added to the machines now producing cannot save the situation at the present rate of consumption. Machinery cannot be ordered in wholesale lots at present.

As manufacturers view the situation the existing stringency will exist for several months. Here is part of a letter sent out by one of the biggest producers in the country to all his news print customers:

"We are at a loss to know to what extent we should advise you to curtail consumption, except to suggest that the more you curtail the surer you will be of a supply during the late months of the year. It is to your interests to co-operate with one another in every possible manner in order to bring about the required results."

"We give you due notice of that which you may expect so that you may place your houses in order and be prepared for the inevitable. It certainly grieves us to have to admit that we are forced to assume such a position."

Treasure Trove in Flanders. When some Canadians were recently digging a new line of trenches behind their line in France a jar was found in which were 200 silver francs. The coins, which were in a fine state of preservation, bore dates between 1745 and 1747, a period in which heavy fighting was taking place over the whole ground in Flanders. Each member of the working party was given one of the coins, worth 25 each.

Sunday evening service at 7:30. Message by the pastor. Come and enjoy with us the song service, followed by message from the pastor.

Thursday evening service at 7:30 p. m. You are urged to come and help make this service helpful to all who attend. Choir practice will be held immediately after this service.

Sunday, Sept. 24, is to be Rally Day for all the services of the day. Plan now to attend all the services of that day that should claim your support. Let us make this a rousing day throughout the whole church.

Sunday, Oct. 1, is the time for our Communion service. We expect that at that time there will also be a reception of members into the church. If any desire to unite by letter at that time, see that your letter is in the hands of the pastor before that date.

Bowers H. Leonard Dead.

Bowers H. Leonard, aged 81 years, died Sunday morning at his home, 93 East Genesee St., Auburn. Mr. Leonard was born in Sennett, where he followed farming for several years. He opened a general store in the village of Owasco in 1858, which he conducted until 1873. He moved to Auburn in 1876 and engaged in the fertilizer business.

He is survived by a wife, two sons, William E. Leonard of Genoa and Lewis F. Leonard of Auburn, and a daughter, Mrs. Benjamin C. Wickes of Auburn. Eleven grandchildren and two great-grandchildren also survive him.

The funeral was held at the house at 2 o'clock Wednesday afternoon. Rev. Arnold S. Yantis, a former pastor of the First Universalist church of Auburn, came from Manchester, N. H., to conduct the services. He was assisted by Rev. H. M. Cary, the present pastor. Interment in Soule cemetery.

FOR SHERIFF OF CAYUGA COUNTY,
THOMAS M. WALKER.

Mr. Walker has served his county satisfactorily for years and his record as Constable, Deputy, Under Sheriff and Office Deputy is above criticism. He has had six years more actual service in the sheriff's office than any other candidate. His record is open to examination or any statement made by him.

Clerically he is suitable. After leaving High school he attended Lowell Business College of Binghamton, has worked as a telegraph operator, bookkeeper and stenographer and is thoroughly familiar with civil processes, court procedures and the general technique of the sheriff's office.

He is unquestionably a south-end man and has always lived in Moravia except while employed in the sheriff's office. He has never voted anywhere but Moravia, following the precedent of a county officer retaining a residence in the town from which he is appointed or elected. He has been a taxpayer in Moravia for nearly 20 years. Consistently he deserves recognition and promotion for his faithful service to his party, often at great personal risk in the handling of criminals.

Mr. Walker is qualified, eligible, experienced, a man who has stood the test. If you can consistently give him your support make a cross X in the space at the left of No. 23 on the Republican Primary Ballot, Sept. 19, 1916 as follows:

Seeks Re-Nomination On His Record.

I was born in the town of Venice in 1862 and have lived there all my life. My occupation is farming. I was educated at the Moravia High School. My political career began when I was elected assessor in 1884, an office I held for several years. I was chosen to the office of Supervisor in 1911, serving four years, the last year as Chairman of the Board. In November, 1914, I was nominated and elected to the office of Member of Assembly and have served two years. In the session of 1915 I was appointed a member of the following committees by Speaker Sweet—Internal Affairs, Penal Institutions and Public Printing. In the session of 1916 I served on the Excise, Penal Institutions and Public Printing committees.

I will be a candidate in the fall primaries at the solicitation of hundreds of the Republican electors of the county. My opponents urge that a third term is violation of precedent. I submit that facts of record are against the claim. Mr. George S. Fordyce served four years, Mr. Ernest C. Treat four years, Mr. Charles J. Hewitt three years, and Mr. Judson Hapeman three years. Thus four men served fourteen years in the last twenty-two years.

The argument with reference to the geographical location of a candidate is equally fatuous. The man and his qualification are of interest to the people—not his residence.

Another issue is that in signing a petition the voter is bound to vote for the candidate whose petition he signs. This contention is also illusory and fallacious. It is violation of the election law which specifically provides for a secret ballot.

I believe that a candidate should be permitted to submit his cause to the people for decision. I believe it to be the duty of a representative to be guided by public sentiment in every action affecting the people. I believe in the cardinal principles of the Republican party and the constitutional rights of American citizenship. If my action in the legislature has been satisfactory and I am returned, I shall continue to give the best that is in me.

For Sheriff

1902—John S. Drake 1916

Jailer, Deputy Sheriff, Under Sheriff, whose candidacy for Sheriff is on the issues of a clean, honest and capable administration of the Sheriff's office and as prescribed by the statutes which are paramount issues. Whose reference is his official record of nearly 15 years of which he invites investigation. He believes in fair play and a square deal in a public office, the same as elsewhere. A courtesy he has not received in the Sheriff's office for nearly a year past, as the Sheriff with the active co-operation of the Office Deputy, whose official position is clerical have used the machinery of the office apparently to embarrass his candidacy for Sheriff and to give publicity to the candidacy of the Office Deputy by not permitting him to perform his duties of Under Sheriff as prescribed by his oath of office and the statutes, nor to have a knowledge of important business of the office. A condition never before known in the history of the office. Mr. Voter, do you approve of such conduct of a public officer? If not, vote for John S. Drake for Sheriff at the ensuing Republican primaries Sept. 19, 1916. Who nominated and elected pledges the same 100 per cent. service he has always given. For campaign purposes Mr. Drake is not clouding real issues by grandstand playing, nor causing to be published weird detective tales, instances in which the credit belonging to others have been appropriated for campaign purposes as the Bartels case whose capture by the Niagara Falls police was made from a description the same as was furnished to numerous Canadian police departments. The Italian boy arrested by the Detroit police, the credit of which to the Auburn police department who furnished the information. The Wood case which was becoming one of mystery until the Auburn police furnished valuable information which led to his arrest. Wood's narration of his capture robbed it of the spectacular as given the press for campaign purposes.

To The Public:

Referring to a conference held Tuesday, Sept. 5, 1916, which resulted in a farce, it was not at the suggestion of candidates. Agreement for conference was entered into by candidates for sheriff in interest of harmony in party. Drake stood by agreement thus showing his unselfishness—opponent by the position he took opened the door of opportunity to political enemies. Any statement made that Drake was to withdraw from the race is without foundation or fact.

His First Penitent

How the Supreme Arbiter Directs Human Affairs.

By JAMES OLIVER CURWOOD
Copyright by Frank A. Munsey Co.

In a white wilderness of moaning storm, in a wilderness of miles and miles of black pine trees, the Transcontinental flier lay buried in the snow. In the first darkness of the wild December night engine and tender had rushed on ahead to division headquarters to let the line know that the flier had given up the fight and needed assistance.

In the coaches it was growing steadily colder. Men were putting on their overcoats, and women snuggled deeper in their furs.

In the smoking compartment of the Pullman sat five men gathered in a group. Of these one was Forsythe, the timber agent; two were traveling men; the fourth a passenger homeward bound from a holiday visit, and the fifth was Father Charles.

All were smoking and had been smoking for an hour, even Father Charles, who lighted his third cigar as one of the traveling men finished the story he had been telling. They had passed away the tedious wait with tales of personal adventure and curious happenings.

The priest's pale, serious face lit up in surprise or laughter with the others, but his lips had not broken into a story of their own. He was a little man, dressed in somber black, and there was that about him which told his companions that within his tight drawn coat of shiny black there were hidden tales which would have gone well with the savage beat of the storm against the latched windows.

Suddenly Forsythe shivered at a fiercer blast than the others and said: "Father, have you a text that would fit this night—and the situation?"

Slowly Father Charles blew out a spiral of smoke from between his lips, and then he drew himself erect and leaned a little forward.

"I had a text for this night," he said, "but I have none now, gentlemen. I was to have married a couple a hundred miles down the line. The guests have assembled. They are ready, but I am not there. The wedding will not be tonight, and so my text is gone. But there comes another to my mind which fits this situation—and a thousand others—'He who sits in the heavens shall look down and decide.' Tonight I was to have married these young people. Three hours ago I never dreamed of doubting that I should be on hand at the appointed hour. But I shall not marry them. Fate has enjoined a hand. The supreme arbiter says 'No,' and what may not be the consequences?"

"They will probably be married tomorrow," said one of the traveling men. "There will be a few hours' delay—nothing more."

"Perhaps," replied Father Charles, as quietly as before. "And—perhaps not. We can say what this little incident may not mean in the lives of that young man and that young woman—and it may be in my own? Three or four hours lost in a storm—what may they not mean to more than one human heart on this train?"

The supreme arbiter plays his hand, if you wish to call it that, with reason and intent. To some one, somewhere, the most insignificant occurrence may mean life or death. And tonight—this—means something. Long ago I knew a young man and a young woman who were to be married. The man went west to win a fortune. Thus fate separated them, and in the lapse of a year such terrible misfortune came to the girl's parents that she was forced into a marriage with a man whose name she never heard of. When the young man returned he found that his sweetheart married, and she was earth was their lot. But hope lingers in young hearts. He waited four years, and then, discouraged, he married another woman. Gentlemen, three days after the wedding his old sweetheart's husband died, and she was released from bondage. Was not that the hand of the supreme arbiter? If he had willed but three days more the old happiness might have lived.

"But wait! One month after that day the young man was arrested, taken to a western state, tried for murder and hanged. Do you see the point? In three days more the girl who had sold herself into slavery for the salvation of those she loved would have been released from her bondage only to marry a murderer!"

Forsythe scratched a match and relighted his cigar.

"I never thought of such things in just that light," he said.

"Listen to the wind," said the little priest. "Hear the pine trees shriek out there! It recalls to me a night of years and years ago—a night like this, when the storm moaned and twisted about my little cabin and when the supreme arbiter sent me my first penitent. Gentlemen, it is something which will bring you nearer to an understanding of the voice and the hand of God. It is a sermon on the mighty significance of little things, this story of my first penitent. If you wish I will tell it to you."

"Go on," said Forsythe.

The traveling men drew near.

"It was a night like this," repeated Father Charles, "and it was in a great wilderness like this, only miles and miles away. I had been sent to establish a mission, and in my cabin that wild night, alone and with the storm shrieking about me, I was busy at work sketching out my plans. After a time I grew nervous. I did not smoke then, and so I had nothing to comfort me but my thoughts, and in spite of my efforts to make them otherwise they were cheerless enough. The forest grew to my door. In the fiercer blasts I could hear the lashing of the pine tops over my head, and now and then an arm of one of the moaning trees would reach down and sweep across my cabin roof with a sound that made me shudder and fear. I have heard the pine trees shriek like dying women. I have heard them wailing like lost children. I have heard them sobbing and moaning like human souls writhing in agony!"

Father Charles paused to peer through the window out into the black night, where the pine trees were sobbing and moaning now.

"And when they cry like that," went on Father Charles, "a living voice would be lost among them as the splash of a pebble is lost in a roaring sea.

"As I sat shuddering before my fire, there came a thought to me of a story which I had long ago read about the sea—a story of impossible achievement and of impossible heroism. As vividly as if I had read it only the day before, I recalled the description of a wild and stormy night when the heroine placed a lighted lamp in the window of her sea bound cottage to guide her lover home in safety. Gentlemen, the reading of that book in my boyhood days was but a trivial thing. I had read a thousand others, and of them all it was possibly the least significant, but the supreme arbiter had not forgotten.

"The memory of that book brought me to my feet, and I placed a lighted lamp close up against my cabin window. Fifteen minutes later I heard a strange sound at the door, and when I opened it there fell in upon the floor at my feet a young and beautiful woman. And after her, dragging himself over the threshold on his hands and knees, there came a man.

"I closed the door after the man had crawled in and fallen face downward upon the floor and turned my attention first to the woman. She was covered with snow. Her long, beautiful hair was loose and disheveled and had blown about her like a veil. Her big, dark eyes looked at me pleadingly, and in them there was a terror such as I had never beheld in human eyes before. I bent over her, intending to carry her to my cot, but in another moment she had thrown herself upon the prostrate form of the man, with her arms about his head, and there burst from her lips the first sounds that she had uttered. They were not much more intelligible than the wailing grief of the pine trees out in the night, but they told me plainly enough that the man on the floor was dearer to her than life.

"I knelt beside him and found that he was breathing in a quick, panting sort of way and that his wide open eyes were looking at the woman. Then I noticed for the first time that his face was cut and bruised and his lips were swollen. His coat was loose at the throat, and I could see livid marks on his neck.

"'I'm all right,' he whispered, struggling for breath and turning his eyes to me. 'We should have died—in a few minutes more—if it hadn't been for the light in your window.'

"The young woman bent down and kissed him, and then she allowed me to help her to my cot. When I had attended to the young man and he had regained strength enough to stand upon his feet she was asleep. The man went to her and dropped upon his knees beside the cot. Tenderly he drew back the heavy masses of hair from about her face and shoulders. For several minutes he remained with his face pressed close against hers; then he rose and faced me. The woman—his wife—knew nothing of what passed between us during the next half hour. During that half hour, gentlemen, I received my first confession. The young man was of my faith. He was my first penitent."

After several minutes the newcomer released Father Charles and turned to the others, with a great, hearty laugh. "Gentlemen," he said, "you must pardon me for interrupting you like this. You will understand when I tell you that Father Charles is an old friend of mine, the dearest friend I have on earth, and that I haven't seen him for years. I was his first penitent."

and Father Charles stopped to draw his thin black coat closer about him.

"He had come into the north about a year before," continued the priest, "and had built for himself and his wife a little home at a pleasant river spot ten miles from my cabin. Their love was of the kind we do not often see, and they were as happy as the birds that lived about them in the wilderness. They had taken a timber claim. A few months more and a new life was to come into their little home, and the knowledge of this made the girl an angel of beauty and joy. Their nearest neighbor was another man several miles distant. The two men became friends, and the other came over to see them frequently. It was the old, old story. The neighbor fell in love with the young settler's wife.

"As you shall see, this other man was a beast. On the day preceding that night of terrible storm the woman's husband set out for the settlement to bring back supplies. Hardly had he gone when the beast came to the cabin. He found himself alone with the woman.

"A mile from his cabin the husband stopped to light his pipe. See, gentlemen, how the supreme arbiter played his hand. The man attempted to unscrew the stem, and the stem broke. In the wilderness you must smoke. Smoke is your company. It is voice and companionship to you. There were other pipes at the settlement, ten miles away, but there was also another pipe at the cabin, one mile away. So the husband turned back. He came up quietly to his door, thinking that he would surprise his wife. He heard voices—a man's voice, a woman's cry. He opened the door, and in the excitement of what was happening within neither the man nor the woman saw or heard him. They were struggling. The woman was in the man's arms, her hair torn down, her small hands bearing him in the face, her breath coming in low, terrified cries. Even as the husband stood there for the fraction of a second talking in the terrible scene the other man caught the woman's face to him and kissed it. And then it happened. It was a terrible fight, and when it was over the beast lay on the floor bleeding and dead. Gentlemen, the supreme arbiter broke a pipestem and sent the husband back in time!"

No one spoke as Father Charles drew his coat still closer about him. Above the tumult of the storm another sound came to them, the distant piercing shriek of a whistle.

"The husband dug a grave through the snow and in the frozen earth," concluded Father Charles, "and late that afternoon they packed up a bundle and set out together for the settlement. The storm overtook them. They had dropped for the last time into the snow, about to die in each other's arms, when I put my light in the window. That is all, except that I knew them for several years afterward and that the old happiness returned to them—and more, for the child was born, a miniature of its mother. Then they moved to another part of the wilderness and I to still another. So you see, gentlemen, what a snowbound train may mean, for if an old sea tale, a broken pipestem—"

The door at the end of the smoking room opened suddenly. Through it there came a cold blast of the storm, a cloud of snow and a man. He was bundled in a great bearskin coat, and as he shook out its folds his strong, ruddy face smiled cheerfully at those whom he had interrupted.

Then suddenly there came a change in his face. The merriment went from it. He stared at Father Charles. The priest was rising, his face more tense and whiter still, his hands reaching out to the stranger.

In another moment the stranger had leaped to him—not to shake his hands, but to clasp the priest in his great arms, shaking him and crying out a strange joy, while for the first time that night the pale face of Father Charles was lighted up with a red and joyous glow.

After several minutes the newcomer released Father Charles and turned to the others, with a great, hearty laugh. "Gentlemen," he said, "you must pardon me for interrupting you like this. You will understand when I tell you that Father Charles is an old friend of mine, the dearest friend I have on earth, and that I haven't seen him for years. I was his first penitent."

RELATIVES OF SOLDIERS MAKING TEXAS

Railroads Want Those Who Usually Go to Europe, to the Seashore or to the Mountains to Visit Their Soldier Sons on Rio Grande.

TEXAS a summer resort? This may sound like a joke at first, but that is exactly what the stay of the national guardsmen at the border is going to make out of the Lone Star state. Hundreds of the elite of the effete east and the fashionable north who ordinarily seek Europe for their summers when there is no war there or who usually turn to the seaside resorts or the mountains are now on the border, and many others are going.

They are the fathers, mothers, sisters, wives and sweethearts of the "boys" from New York, Chicago, Philadelphia, Boston and other big cities who now are sweltering along the Rio Grande—nothing "grand" or "big" about that creek but its high sounding name, by the way—waiting for word from Washington to cross the international boundary and go after Villa—or Carranza or Zapata or anybody else.

The passenger agents on all the railroads coming into Texas got together and filed with the interstate commerce commission at Washington an application to have cheap round trip railroad rates made effective to Texas points this summer. Low rates are sought for the benefit of the many people desiring to visit relatives and friends who are numbered among the 100,000 militiamen engaged in border patrol duty.

A telegram was sent to the interstate commerce commission requesting the necessary authorization, and it is believed this will be given without delay. In view of the exceptional circumstances the opinion is general among railroad men that the desired tariffs will be prepared and made effective within ten days or two weeks.

The rates requested are approximately the same as the winter tourist rates applying to Texas from northern and eastern points, one and one-third fare for the round trip. The interstate commerce commission has been asked to make these cheap summer rates from St. Louis, Kansas City, Chicago, New York and points beyond the gateways from which militia movements have originated to San Antonio, Brownsville, Laredo, Eagle Pass, El Paso and other border points where militia organizations are stationed.

At the present time summer excursion rates do not apply to Texas from other parts of the country. A person coming into the state from a distance cannot purchase a round trip ticket and effect a saving on the straight fare. It is to remedy this situation for the benefit of the families of guardsmen that the passenger agents made their application. The excursion tickets will be good until next May.

The question of going home continues to be the chief topic of the camp discussion and betting at McAllen among New York troops. In the cavalry, where, according to one estimate, between $3,000 and $4,000 already has been laid, the odds at present are 3 to 1 that the order to entrain will not be received before the 1st of September.

It is rumored, though, that it will be transmitted shortly after. One bet of $100 was made by a private of Troop E, First cavalry, at those odds. It is estimated that $500 has been wagered altogether in the second squadron of that regiment. In the Seventh perhaps an average of $100 to a company, or $1,200 altogether, has been placed at which most of the betting centers. This date probably is to be credited to a "rumor club," which recently started the story that the troops were to be sent home on "the 15th," but without stipulating whether it was to be Aug. 15 or Jan. 15.

The view expressed by Major General O'Ryan that the troops might eat their Christmas dinner on the border finds few to second it in camp. In the First cavalry a wager of 5 to 1 was offered that the guard would not remain here until Christmas, but there were no takers.

Making full allowance for legitimate desire of the men to return home if they are not here to serve the purpose for which they enlisted, it is pointed out by observers that the national guard has been planked down in the nest which to a large extent it prepared for itself.

New Hair Cut For Society.

Major Cornelius Vanderbilt has adorned himself with a hair cut known in sporting circles as a "hush leaguer." It includes shaving the back of the neck from a line across the base of the skull down to the collar. This hair cut is favored by professional baseball players.

The fact that it has the sanction of Major Vanderbilt will undoubtedly give it a vogue on Fifth Avenue and Broadway, where it has been taboo.

Camp Life Depicted.

"With the novelty of being a soldier fast disappearing and their mind set upon their work, the guardsmen of the Second Infantry of Philadelphia are now down to it good and hard," says one letter. "From reveille until tap the citizen soldiers are doing their bit. The three hours' drill and hike which each company received five mornings out of a week have made a phenomenal change among the rawboned rookies—in fact, enough to make the average regular take notice.

"The ranks include men who are from virtually every walk of life—from a laborer to a banker, marching and working shoulder to shoulder in their khaki uniform, answering the same mess call, all temporarily putting aside their families, friends and business, showing their red, white and blue blood" by answering the call to uphold the dignity of Uncle Sam.

"From noon until taps the boys have much time to themselves, which is spent in various ways, as playing ball, taking trips up the mountain, going to town, while others read and some sleep in their tents, and still some play cards and others answer letters from their loved ones. In the evening there are the band concerts and lots of stinging among the men. In fact, there is not a company in the regiment that does not contain talent, some of which is very good, but it all helps to keep the idle moments from being dull."

After Dr. Darlington.

Investigators headed toward McAllen may take due notice that Dr. Thomas Darlington, former health commissioner of New York, felt that after he had been waited on by a committee of citizens of McAllen he would be safer under a military escort. The alert doctor was not long in ignorance of the fact that a Texas officer of the peace, armed with a large, brilliant revolver, had been inquiring about him at camp and speaking of spattering of lead and other unpleasant things in connection with anybody who would asperse the health giving qualities of the McAllen water.

Dr. Darlington was not seen about McAllen after his meeting with the citizens' committee. When he left these parts he went in an auto to a railroad station outside McAllen, and it is reported that he was escorted by a soldier carrying three revolvers, who was furnished at the doctor's request by Major Wright of the First cavalry. Dr. Darlington, as befitted an old campaigner and badger lassoer, carried a pistol, but not openly. It was in his valise. Incidentally the regret that the departure of Dr. Darlington spoiled the prospects of the biggest badger fight ever pulled off on the Rio Grande has not abated.

White Elephant.

The Eighth Illinois regiment has a white elephant on its hands, or, rather, in the guardhouse. It consists of seven men who refused to sign the federal muster at Springfield and were brought to San Antonio as prisoners. Were it not for red tape Colonel Denison would gladly order the guardhouse sentries to let them escape or even spur their escape.

As it is, the judge advocate's department is the only authority that can release the men.

The guests themselves form a restful colony. After reaching San Antonio the seven consented to be mustered in, but were found physically unfit. They are, however, the most provokingly healthy "unfits" a regiment ever boarded. Eat, sleep and eat.

The question all hinges on how to get the men home. Who pays the fare? They are not government men. Who pays the mess? They are not in the federal service. Who pays their salaries? Government didn't hire them.

Colonel Denison put the problem to Brigadier General Hill, and he passed the buck to the judge advocate's department. Things sent to the judge advocate's department come out after much delay.

Didn't Need a Fork.

Captain Hamlet C. Ridgway of E company, First Illinois infantry, has passed the man who eats peas with a knife by a good many bounds. There was a shortage of mess kits in camp. Captain Ridgway said he could make out without one. He went to his bag, came back and started to eat. For awhile the officers couldn't make out what sort of trowel he was stooping himself with. Then he laid it down—and it was a safety razor.

With a little salt breeze blowing one could easily fancy himself at sea if he hung around the mess tent of the machine gun company of the First Illinois. The cook, John V. Steger, otherwise known as "Dynamite," and his assistant, Will Willing, are both ex-navy men. And their jargon is all seafaring. Instead of "Put the tent fly over the buzzycot," which is army stuff, they say, "Put the rigging over the gallery." A plain bucker is "the scupper," and the potato masher is a "belaying pin." But, as the men fervently assert, the sailors are "dinged line chefs."

City Men Stronger.

Military men say the bodies of city lads are more responsive to military training than those of their rural brethren, and this is supported by the recent mental sick rolls. The Eighteenth Pennsylvania infantry, made up exclusively of city reared men, has out-

The Thrice-A-Week Edition OF THE New York World

Practically a Daily at the Price of Weekly

No other Newspaper in the world gives so much at so low a price.

There has never been a time when newspaper was more needed in the household. The great war in Europe has now entered its second year, with no promise of an end for a long time. These are world-shaking events, in which the United States, willing or unwilling, has been compelled to take a part. No intelligent person can ignore such issues.

The Presidential contest also will soon be at hand. Already candidates for the nomination are in the field, and the campaign, owing to the extraordinary character of the times, will be of supreme interest. No other newspaper will inform you with the promptness and cheapness of the Thrice-A-Week edition of the New York World.

THE THRICE-A-WEEK WORLD'S regular subscription price is only $1.00 per year, and this pays for 156 papers. We offer this unequalled newspaper and THE GENOA TRIBUNE together for one year for $1.65.

The regular subscription price of the two papers is $2.00

The theory that lightning never strikes twice in the same place was again demonstrated as false, when lightning struck two large barns on the farm of Norman Clearwater at Accord, Ulster county. They were burned to the ground. Barns occupying the same site were destroyed by lightning 28 years ago.

The resources of New York state savings banks increased from $1,930,396,230, July 1, 1915, to $2,053,191,951, July 1, 1916, the state banking department reported. There are 131,000 more open accounts, or $2,335,536. A total of $12,221,291 less was withdrawn to July 1, 1916, as compared with the same period in 1915.

Frank A. Doe, the local amateur weather forecaster of Ogdensburg is out with his set of predictions for September. He says the first week will be mostly fair, with a little rain and moderately cool; the second week, generally fair with hot weather the fore part, succeeded by cooler; the third week, mostly fair; fourth week, fine and pleasant and fairly warm.

One of the surest keys to success lies in thoroughness. No matter how great may be the enterprise undertaken a regard for small things is necessary. Just as the little courtesies of everyday life make life worth while the living, so the little details form the bone and sinew of a great success.—Edward Bok.

GOOD THINGS FOR TABLE.

The delicious crumpet are most eatable baked in ordinary gem pans. Take half a yeast cake, three cups of warm milk, two tablespoonfuls of melted butter, one saltspoonful of salt, a teaspoonful of soda, dissolved in hot water and flour to make a good batter. Set these ingredients with the exception of the soda and butter over night. In the morning beat very hard and add the soda and butter; if too thin add a little more flour and pour the mixture into buttered gem pans; let rise 15 minutes and bake quickly. They will not need to be warmed over.

Canned Peas With Fresh Carrots.—Scrape two carrots and cut into quarters lengthwise, then in pieces an inch long and one-fourth inch wide. Let simmer with barely water to cover; add peas that have been reheated to the carrots, season with sugar, salt, butter and lemon juice.

Baked Milk.—Baked milk is a delicacy often recommended for invalids. Put milk in a stone jar, cover closely and let it bake slowly for several hours, when it should be thick and creamy. The flavor is unique and somewhat like Devonshire cream. It may be served as a custard or in combination with fruit.

Asparagus Luncheon Salad.—Mix together two cupfuls each of cooked asparagus and shredded lettuce with a tablespoonful of olive oil and a teaspoonful of vinegar. Mix with a boiled dressing and arrange in nests of lettuce or dress and garnish with hard cooked eggs and more dressing.

Roasted Onions.—Select large onions of uniform size and arrange in an earthen dish without removing the peelings. Bake until tender, then peel them; place in a covered dish steaming hot; make a rich white sauce with butter and thin cream and flour for thickening, season well and pour over the onions. They are delicious when served cut open, seasoned with butter, salt and a bit of cream.

A happy man or woman is a better thing than a five-pound note. He or she is a radiating focus of good will, and their entrance into a room is as though another candle had been lighted. We need not care whether they could prove the Forty-seventh proposition; they do a better thing than that, they practically demonstrate the great theorem of the Livableness of Life.—R. L. Stevenson.

SERVING OF CHICKEN.

The wonder is often expressed that there is so little variety in the way chicken is cooked and served, especially upon the farm, where they may be had daily if so desired. Generally the broilers are rushed to market because they bring a good price, and the old fowl is the one served more often on the table for the family.

There are so many delightful ways of serving chicken that it is strange that stewed or roasted chicken holds such place in the average household.

When making chicken pie a slice of onion added to the chicken when it is cooking and removed before it is put into pie, will add much to the taste of the dish.

Chicken en Casserole With Peas.—When small new potatoes and green peas are in abundance, have a fowl cut up as for fricassee, lay the pieces in a casserole or in a granite pan. Cover with water, and place tightly covered in an oven with moderate heat. Bake for two hours. Have small, even-sized potatoes, those the size of a walnut, allowing three or four for each person; have a pint and a half of shelled peas. Put these into the casserole around the chicken. There should be at least a pint of liquor in the casserole. Season with salt, pepper and two tablespoonfuls of butter; cover the bake three-quarters of an hour. Remove the cover and add a cupful of good cream and bake 15 minutes longer with the cover removed. Serve this in the dish in which it is baked.

Rice added to the chicken instead of the peas and potatoes makes another most savory dish. This is the one which will be seasoned with ginger.

The southern people like chicken, lima beans and peppers. The beans are soaked over night and then the dish is cooked at least four hours in the oven.

Vote For Robert Bacon For United States Senator

Use your right as an Enrolled Republican
To make YOUR OWN CHOICE
On Primary Day, September 19

Robert Bacon

This is not a factional fight. The Primary Law was intended to give to the voters absolute personal freedom in selecting their candidate, so that no faction may dictate who shall be YOUR nominee.

IT IS UP TO YOU

Do your duty as a citizen and vote for the candidate for Senator who you believe will most ably represent New York in the United States Senate and add the most strength to the National and State tickets.

HERE IS WHAT ELIHU ROOT SAYS OF ROBERT BACON:

Not only is Mr. Bacon a citizen of the highest type, high minded, generous and public spirited, but he has special qualifications. He was long assistant secretary of state, then for a short time secretary of state, then for a number of years ambassador to France. He filled all of those positions with distinction and success.

He has special relations of friendship and personal regard with the leading statesmen in all the principal South American countries and has personal familiarity with the conditions in those countries and their feelings toward the United States. His service in the United States senate would be of immense value to Mr. Hughes in the conduct of the foreign affairs of the United States. If the people of the state of New York can put into the senate a man of the highest character who understands the business of foreign affairs they will have rendered a very great service to the president who is about to be elected and to the people of the United States. They can do that by electing Mr. Bacon.

Elihu Root

Hundreds of similar letters have been written by the most eminent men in the Republican Party in New York and throughout the country.

These letters express the opinions of thousands of voters.

Robert Bacon's qualifications for public office have been recognized and endorsed by such men as ex-Presidents Theodore Roosevelt and William H. Taft; Elihu Root, David Jayne Hill, Joseph H. Choate, Myron T. Herrick, Harvey D. Hinman, Job E. Hedges, Andrew D. White, J. Sloat Fassett and other representative men prominent in national and state affairs.

Go to the polls on Primary Day, September 19, and vote for Robert Bacon for United States Senator.

His experience in the State Department, in the Diplomatic Service, in South America, his business training, his patriotic, fearless stand for Americanism, his deep knowledge of our National Needs, his staunch stand for protection of the farmer as well as of the manufacturer and working man, equip him ideally to represent YOU in the United States Senate at this critical time in our history.

Who Gave Chamberlain Mortgage on South End?

Walker is a Moravian, Has Always Been a Moravian and Service Here Has Not Affected Residence, Friends Say.

[Auburn Citizen, Tuesday, Aug. 29.]

Friends of Deputy Sheriff Thomas M. Walker and Mr. Walker himself take exceptions to the claim of Day K. Chamberlain of Scipio that he is the only legitimate south end candidate for sheriff since Fay Teeter of Venice withdrew. They also take exceptions to what Mr. Chamberlain had to say regarding the possibility that Mr. Walker had lost his voting residence in the town of Moravia.

The decision of the Appellate Division Third Department, Supreme Court, to which reference was made and which concerned a voting residence does not refer to county officers and is in no way a parallel case, it is maintained.

In fact, the report of the attorney general in 1894, says: "A sheriff neither gains or loses a residence." This applies equally to deputies. Mr. Walker says his residence has always been in Moravia and the decision has no effect in his case, as he is in Auburn only by virtue of his office.

Furthermore, it has been the established custom for county and state officers to hold their residence in the towns from which they were elected or appointed.

Jewett's Election Manual, third edition, page 229—Voters and Their Qualifications, says: "The voting residence of a person is largely a question of intention."

"A residence is not changed by engaging in the service of the government," says an opinion of the attorney general.
"A residence once acquired continues to be the residence of a person until such person absents himself therefrom and locates at another place with the intention of there remaining. Temporary absence, with the purpose of returning does not effect a change of residence," says another opinion of the attorney general. There is no new law upon the subject.

Mr. Walker's friends point out that he was born in Moravia, has always been a resident of Moravia and has never voted anywhere but Moravia and has a legal right to do so. Mr. Walker says he does not claim to be "the only legitimate south-end man." He is not in any way egotistical, he says, but he is a legitimate south-end man and is also qualified in every way for the office of sheriff by 15 years' experience, both in the civil and the criminal branches of the sheriff's office. If he was not qualified he would not have been appointed under the last five sheriffs. He declares he has served his county faithfully with his life in the performance of his duties and has always been solicitous of the welfare of all its citizens.

Regarding qualifications for a county office, any man who is a citizen and resides in the county is eligible.

Recently Mr. Walker secured 1,804 signers to his petitions, the highest number filed, which was more than twice the number filed by all the other candidates for sheriff. Of this number 278 were from his home town, Moravia, which was more than he needed for the entire county.
