He Coolly Stood Guard In the Prosence of Mexican Bandits

By F. A. MITCHEL

During the administration of the government of Mexico by Porfirio Diaz a young American, Edward Ingersoll. who had just married a young woman. went to the state of Durango to set-Northern capital was then pour-Hickey of Lockport are mentioned as ing into Mexico, and the prospect of prosperity was greater than ever be fore. Diaz had held the discordant elements in check for many years, and it looked as if the continued succession of revolutions was over.

> The young emigrant was a stonecut ter and settled in a town where the wooden buildings were being torn down to give place to those of a more substantial character. Having purchased a small tract on the outskirts of the place, he built on it a dwelling house and a shed, under whch he kept his material. Besides getting out the ordinary stonework for the ornamentation of buildings, he designed and constructed marble monuments. His instincts were artistic, and, although his figures were crude, some of them were fairly well executed.

But scarcely had Ingersoll become settled when the revolution was started which was destined to result in the 'downfall of the man whose iron hand had kept the peace in Mexico. The Madero revolution destroyed the equilibrium under which Mexico had prospered, and Madero was succeeded by Huerta. In addition to the regular forces (if they deserve the name) pitted against each other, bands of men whose only object was plunder were let loose, and if anything were needed the two communities, have settled at to complete the wreck of Mexico they supplied the deficiency.

The orders which had kept Ingersoll busy dropped away. His business was would not approve of our bringing on paralyzed. stoneyard conveying the awful news Shoes it was after dark. He had made a short cut through a forest and a marsh, with both of which he was sufficiently familiar to traverse, but they would be impassable for the bandits, who must take a roundabout route over the road. They had not yet started when the boy left, but were preparing to do so. The Ingersolls calculated that they would have an hour to decide whether to take to flight and if they concluded to remain they would have at least an hour for preparation.

Ingersoll was for immediate flight. His wife was not so minded. They could not take with them their furniture or other effects which they had been a long while accumulating, and the woman could not bear to give them up even if she risked the lives of all of them by remaining to protect their property. She had given much thought to making their fortress effective, but leaning, womanlike, to deception instead of force. She advocated remaining and trying the effect of a certain ruse she had contrived.

It was not a bright light, but enough to reveal to him the head and shoulders of a man in the uniform of a Mexican soldier standing with his musket leaning against his left shoulder and with both hands screening a burning match from the wind. He held the flame over a pipe he held in his mouth and lighted his pipe. Even the little pulls of smoke were visible. Then the match went out as suddenly as it had been lighted, and all was dark again. Nunez halted, and his men did the same. When the light went out he turned and said:

"It seems that the place is defended by a force of regular troops."

"And a fortification," put in one of the men. "Didn't you see that the man stood on a parapet?"

At that moment there came from the stoneyard the notes of a bugle sounding "taps."

"We are not out for soldiers," said Nunez. "I am quite sure the captain

Having plenty of stone in his yard, he built a miniature fortress around his dwelling. A parapet was constructed of headstones, either finished or partly finished. Square apertures were left, intended for loopholes through which to fire. But since there was no one except Ingersoll to do the firing and since he had no ordnance there was little prospect of a successful defense

There were several stone figures in the yard which Ingersoll thought of putting up on his fortress as scarecrows-that is, in the hope that an enemy seeing them from a distance would believe them to be veritable defenders. But unfortunately they were not suitable to the purpose. One was a white marble angel blowing the resurrection trump; another was a saint that had been ordered for a church. There was only one that would be a suitable decoration for a fortification, a life size statue of a soldier that had been ordered to mark the grave of a young man who had died in the Mexican military service. He was represented standing as if on guard, the butt of his musket on the ground, the barrel resting against his shoulder. Ingersoll could not hope that this stone figure

"But, since we must pass the place," said another, "we may get a nearer view."

"Very well," said Nunez. "Let us proceed."

Now every one on the premises, ex pecting an attack, was listening, and when the tread of feet was heard at a convenient distance up the road Tommy Ingersoll, a youth whose figure was much smaller than the one on the rampart, stationed himself behind it with a match in his hand. Ingersoll, at his wife's suggestion, had dug a hole from the back of the stone soldier's neck to his mouth and inserted a rubber tube. A tobacco pipe had been placed between the lips, and by suction at the other end of the tube the figure would appear to smoke. When the bandits were heard approaching Tom used his own arms in place of the soldier's to strike a match and hold it over the pipe. His father, at the other end of the tube, did the smoking, and the soldier seemed to the bandits to relight his pipe. The light, however, was so small that they got a view not much better than before.

One of the articles the American had laid in for the defense of his fortress was a drum. It belonged to a little boy in the neighborhood and was not in itself an important weapon. But it is not the cannon, the rifle, the sword alone in war that are useful. As in the shrill tone of the bugle, so in the beat of a drum there is inspiration. The Ingersoll garrison did not intend their drum as a means of keeping up their courage, but to inspire their ene-

The Ingersolis could hear faint sounds made by their enemies and did not know but that they were crawling up upon them. A hurried council of war was held and the question discussed as to what auxiliary to the stone soldier could be adopted. While they were debating Tom seized the drum and began to beat the long roll, which is a signal in all armies for the men to turn out to repel an attack. As an adjunct to this Ingersoll himself sang out, "Fall in!" in a number of different tones, to lead the bandits to suppose that the orders came from different officers.

Nunez gave an order to tread softly and pass the place without a word, lest the garrison be aroused. National Board of Underwriters Urges Greater Care in the Construction of Dwelling.

Realizing the large annual losses sustained by thousands of home owners through construction which tends to spread fires instead of retarding them, the committee on construction of buildings of the national board of fire underwriters has issued a booklet of 115 pages on methods of increasing the fire-resistive qualities of dwellings, says Engineering Record. Builders everywhere, especially in localities outside the control of building ordinances (and by far the majority of ordinary dwellings are built in such localities), will find valuable information in this presentation of methods for making houses reasonably safe from fire. Particularly important, not only for builders, but for owners and the general public, are the sections devoted to floor and roof construction; chimneys, flues, smokepipes and fireplaces; fire stopping and general precaations for fire protection.

Generally recognized dangers from such old offenders as shingle roofs. unlined chimneys, unprotected stairways and shafts are strikingly illustrated, and many simple and effective, while relatively inexpensive, devices in construction which retard the spread of fire are clearly explained. Every potential house owner will find it profitable to become familiar with these building precautions, which may biggest lines. They were prevent loss of life as well as of property. Engineers, through their positions in building departments and orders and we are going to their participation as plain citizens in civic associations, chambers of commerce and similar organizations, can let it be known that ordinary dwellings can readily be improved as to furs we can save you at least their fire-resistive qualities, and can direct interested parties to the proper source of informs

INVITES AND PROTECTS BIRDS

Massachusetts City Has Common-Sense Plan of Guarding the Trees on Its Streets.

The town of Brookline, Mass., is teaching the country at large a valuable lesson. First of all, of course, Brookline had to learn the lesson for itself. The town prized its trees, and sought by the usual means to guard them against the attack of insect pests. The campaign, however, was this tree enemy poisonous sprays avail little. Birds alone can hold it in check. So Brookline, a few years ago, went seriously about the business of inducing birds to come and stay. In 1910 it wanted woodpeckers, and it issued its invitation, but only a few responded. Three years later Brookline had and placing 100 nesting boxes.

That was the beginning; year by year since then the work has been expanded. The nesting boxes increased in number and variety, and during the winter thousands of birds were fed daily at 125 municipal feeding stations, operated by the town authorities at the public's expense. And now, says a report from Brookline, "the determination than ever."

Vegetable Ashes.

Do not throw away any vegetable ash, for all ashes have a decided garden value. Some seem to have the impression that trashy material returns ashes of little worth, but the reverse is often true. Ashes from cotton hulls have shown as much as 30 per cent of potash and sold for $40 a ton. Some weeds would prove equally rich. In addition there is always some phosphoric acid and a heavy per cent of lime. That most precious element, nitrogen, however, was all burned out. therefore these substances would prove of greater value if allowed to decompose in the soft rather than be destroyed by combustion. Ashes of deciduous trees, being nearly all hardwoods, are of more value than those from evergreens, for the latter are nearly all conifers-pines, cypresses, Making House Entrance Attractive. To one who must watch expenses carefully, the solution of the entrance to the grounds of the country house is often a difficult task. When one can afford to employ the services of a landscape architect the problem is, of course, simplified.

The guiding spirit here, as in the structural features of the house itself, should be to create an entrance, simple, with the surroundings.

Then they said, "We ought to have a Poney Coats with beautiful not entirely successful. The leopard that, too, was organized. This went moth invaded Brookline, and against on for a time, but the more they studied the Bible the more hungry they grew, and by and by they organized a this came from one letter written by an enterprising worker in a little school several hundred miles away.

Why should not Christians aim to make their correspondence count for learned enough through experiment to the Master as well as their conversajustify the municipality in building tion? There might be some letters in which it would not be advisable to introduce the subject of religion, but on the other hand if the subject were uppermost in one's mind, opportunities would frequently be found to say a word for Christ, or drop a hint, or inclose a leaflet. I know a business man who was writing a letter one day when he saw a tract on his table. He inclosed it and mailed the letter withplans for the securing of bird help in out much thought. Then the devil insect destruction will be carried on whispered to him, "You have made a during the coming season with greater fool of yourself. What do you suppose that man will think of you for putting a tract in a business letter?" Being a Christian, he lifted his heart in prayer to God, saying, "Lord, did I make a mistake?"

Back came the answer, "What is to hinder you from putting a tract in every letter you write?"

"By the grace of God I will," he re plied, and for the remainder of his life he followed this practice. He saw so much good coming from this kind of effort that he finally withdrew from business and devoted his life to writing letters and sending out Christian literature of various kinds.

I know a lady who, to help a drinking man, took him into her family as a boarder. Soon he committed some misdemeanor and was sent to prison. She did not forsake him in his disgrace, but remembering the Master's words, "I was sick and in prison and ye visited me," she endeavored to help him by writing encouraging letters. Soon other prisoners requested that she write to them, and by degrees this work increased until finally she was writing between two and three hundred letters a year to the inmates of different prisons.

As soon as a prisoner was led to accept Christ she sent him a Bible and concordance, and tried to interest him in Bible study. If they showed much proficiency in this work she entered their name in a Bible correspondence attractive, substantial and in harmony | school which took her proteges at half price. Collins---Baker.

A very pretty wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. James Baker at King Ferry on Wednesday, Nov. 8, when their only daughter, Alice, was united in marriage to Earl Collins of Sherwood.

The ceremony took place at 12 o'clock and was performed by Rev. Thos. Husk of Scipioville. The bride was beautifully gowned in white crepe de chene and carried a bouquet of white carnations. She was attended by Miss Fern Collins of Rochester, a sister of the groom, and the best man was William Baker of King Ferry, a brother of the bride.

The bride received a large variety of beautiful gifts, including silver, cut glass, china, linen and furniture. Ths bride gave her attendant a gold brooch and the groom gave the best man a gold scarf pin.

An elaborate dinner was served to the company of fifty guests, after which the young couple left for a short trip.

······ TAKE GOOD CARE OF SHOES

If Leather is Kept Soft and Trees Used, Life of Footwear Will Be Much Extended.

With the cost of shoes going up it pays to give special care to one's footwear nowadays.

Some women seem to think that shoe trees are merely pretty ornaments, whereas they are really necessaries. The leather in shoes should not be allowed to shrink, which it is apt to do if shoes are taken from moist feet and left in a warm place. If trees are used the shoes will keep their shape. Wet shoes should never be dried at a stove, or on a radiator, or near a heater of any description. The effect of heat so applied is to dry

The Unshrunken Violet,

There is a certain actor in this country who entertains no doubt regarding his abilities as a leading man. He knows he is good.

Two seasons back he was playing an engagement in San Francisco. The patronage was not all that might have been desired. Most nights our hero and his supporting troupe played to more empty seils than filled ones.

One morning in the middle of the second week of poor business the star, passing the theater, was overjoyedbut not surprised-to behold a long line of waiting persons in front of the box office. He stepped inside and found the manager assisting the ticket seller in caring for the rush.

"It has come at last?" he began. "It took time, but it would appear, from the looks of that crowd outside the lobby, that the citizens of this town have finally waked up to the fact that there is some real acting going on in this house."

"I'm sorry to tell you, Mr. Blank," explained the manager, "but those folks are not buying seats for your show. They're buying in advance for Sir Johnston Forbes-Robertson, who opens here next week."

The actor turned on his heel-he turns beautifully on either heel-and started to stalk away. The manager sought to comfort him in his chagrin.

"You know, Mr. Blank," he called out, "a good many folks out here on the coast regard Sir Johnston Forbes-Robertson as our greatest, English speaking actor."

The departing one paused, and when he spoke his tones were icy.

"And what," he asked-"and what, pray, do the good people of San Francisco think I speak-Chinese?"-Saturday Evening Post.

In a book of stage anecdotes there is an amusing story of the celebrated Samuel Foote, dramatist and actor. who was born at Truro in 1720 and died at Dover in 1777.

While playing in Dublin, Foote introduced a scene in which he mimicked the carriage, speech and personal pecultarities of several local celebrities. The imitations, although presented with a touch of caricature, were not ill natured, and most of the victims accepted the jest at their expense without protest.

BROWNIES' SWIMMING PARTY.

"Very early the other morning," commenced Daddy, "the Brownies gave a Swimming Party. It was a wonderful Swimming Party, too-quite the best they had ever had-for who do you suppose they had invited as their Guests?"

"The Fairies," said Nancy.

"The Gnomes," suggested Nick. "Sorry," said Daddy, "but you're both wrong. You'd never be able to guess, I'm sure-so I had better tell you. Well, they had the White Caps." "Who are they?" asked Nancy, puzzled.

"You mean, what are they?" asked Nick, laughing-for he thought Daddy had some fine joke he was playing on them.

"Not such strange Guests, after all," said Daddy. - "I'll have to tell you just what White Caps are on the ocean, eh ?"

"Oh, no," laughed the Children. Now we see, but when there are White Caps on the water, it means it's so horrid and rough," added Nancy.

"The Brownies in the first place wanted to go down a great long Beach by the Ocean, just after Mr. Sun had arrived for the day. They thought it would be a little chilly without him, and they had asked him to please be sure to come. They had told the Cloud Fairies the very day before to take him that message.

"Then they had requested the White Caps to come to their Party, for they knew it would be so much more fun drinks, and so forth." with them. They asked the Sea Shells on the Beach to whisper the invitations to the Waves when they came up on the Shore. You know the Sea Shells are always whispering and they were glad to take the messages.

"When the morning came and the Brownies were all ready for the swimming Party, dressed in their little Brown Swimming Suits with brown Swimming Caps fitting snugly to their heads, they hurried off to the Beach to see if their Guests were on time. On their way they noticed that Mr. Sun was up and ready to join the fun Conducted by the National Christian Temperance Union.)

"National prohibition is not far distant-of that I feel certain from the satisfaction which prohibition is giving in the West. It is interesting to note that stores report a marked increase in the volume of cash business which they are doing and that the installment houses and others carrying many accounts with people of moderate means report that collections are very much better, payments made more promptly and, in a much increased proportion, without 'dunning.' "One entire set of arguments against prohibition is, it seems to me, knocked out by what is seen to be happening to the saloon. 'The poor man's club,' the saloon has often been called by some who sought to defend it and the attempt has been made to call prohibition class legislation, as depriving the poor man of a place for social intercourse with his fellows since he could not afford membership in a club, as more well-to-do men can. One finds that, under prohibition, many of the places which formerly were saloons are more nearly a poor man's club now than before. Games and a place to read his newspapers are provided for the customer, these places supporting themselves by the sale of temperance

PERSONAL LIBERTY.

A man may not even do with his own body what he pleases. Suppose he tries to kill it-to commit suicide. If he fails he will go to jail. And yet if the United States government should decide to go to war with any other nation it assumes the right, if necessary, to send him to the front to be shot down. He belongs to the state as well as to himself.

If the state should decide that the saloon is a menace, and that it disenses poison, then society has a right to say that the saloon must go, no matter how it may affect anybody's personal liberty. We accept the restriction which the state imposes upon us in other relationships. Why not accept it with regard to the saloon, especially since it has been so clearly demonstrated that the interests of the saloon are always opposed to the interests of the workingman?-Charles ket.

Mrs. John Brown, a friend of Henrietta's, says that when she married, John allowed her to select everything for the new home with the exception of the kitchen stove.

"A man knows better how to select that than a woman," said he. Manlike, he bought the biggest range and the highest priced one on the mar-

In a week or two, wife had found a purchaser in a woman who lived in the second-story apartment next door. When the wagon came to take the stove away, they had an awful time to get it out of the kitchen, and the wife breathed a big sigh of relief when she saw it well out of the yard and on its way up the stairs of the next-door apartment. A few minutes later she looked out, and to her horror they were bringing it back down the stairs. "What's the matter?" she

"We can't get it in the door," said the man, "It will have to be taken up through the window."

Wife decided not to show herself again until the stove was well inside the apartment. The next time she peeped out, they were operating a pulley device, by which the horse went round and the stove went up; it was already five feet in the air.

"Good," thought Mrs. Brown, In a minute or two she again peeped out, and they were still operating the pulley device, but the horse was going up and the stove down. "Me for action," said Mrs. Brown to herself, and hastily throwing a few clothes into a sultcase, she made for the home of her mother, where she and John remained for several days.

What the woman in the next apartment said to Mrs. Brown when she got back home would make another interesting story, but Mrs. Brown only wiped the tears away with her apron, and said that it was just nearly breaking her heart to do without that stove; that there never was an oven that could bake such good ple, cake, etc.-Cleveland Plain Dealer.

LIQUOR DEALERS BARRED.

The Manufacturers and Dealers' association, an organization of the liquor interests with headquarters in Chicago, is offering to furnish newspapers with antiprohibition material. In his letter to the editors Mr. Daniels, business manager of the association, says: "This is not a liquor organization. We do not accept as a member anyone who deals in alcoholic liquors. We are taxpaying business men who help make the wheels of commerce go round." It may be in order to ask, why discriminate against the liquor dealer? From the standpoint of the above-named antiprohibition commercial association he is a necessary factor in making the wheels go round. Does the liquor trade, wholesale and retail, view with approval this ostracism by manufacturers and dealers?

The Girard=

Hawkins Plant

How It Was Saved From Ruin

By BARBARA PHIPPS

The firm of Gilard & Hawkins was organized for the erection and operation of a large manufacturing plant. Edward Givard, son of the head of the firm, soon after the work was begun went abroad for a tour previous to settling down to his life's career. On his return he was to enter the service of the Girard-Hawkins company. He had pot been away long when his father died suddenly. After several cablegrams between Edward and his mother it was decided that he should fluish | er with higher colors than nature is his tour. Mr. Hawkins was abundantly able to supervise the erection of the factory and to start its operation.

Six months later Edward received a letter from his mother announcing the Pincian hill and showed her the panodeath of Mr. Hawkins just as the works were finished and were about to be operated. Mrs. Girard was much worried as to the further development | the Janiculum. He may have had of the Girard-Hawkins company. It was impossible to find a good business man with experience in the same line to take an interest in it and run it. But Hawkins' share had fallen to his only child. Isabel, who was still a minor. She was under the control of her guardian, a brother of her father. who seemed bound to wreck the enterprise. He had failed at numerous business efforts and was now bent on establishing himself as full manager of the Girard-Hawkins company. This Mrs. Girard believed would bring the company to grief, and she would not consent to it. The consequence was a deadlock, with the prospect of a foreclosure under a mortgage on the property.

From an irresponsible gadabout Ned Girard suddenly found himself called upon to extricate a valuable property veloped by such a situation, and young Girard had in him the makings of a successful man. Realizing that he had suddenly been plunged into a great responsibility, he sat himself down to think what he should do. There are persons who have the fac ulty of diving into questions and taking out the meat while others are looking for it in the substances which contain it. Where was the kernel of the nut in this instance? One-half of it was in himself, the half owner with his mother. What constituted the other half? The guardian uncle? Ned looked beyond him and straight at this minor daughter heir. Mrs. Girard had described her as a schoolgirl, sev enteen years old. She was being eitu cated abroad, and at the time of her father's death was at school at Gene va. Switzerland. When Ned began to study the prob lem hefore him he was packing to re turn to America. When he finished his deliberatons he was packing to go to Geneva, his object being to get control of his business partner. That is to say, he aimed to get such an influence over her as would enable him to circunvent her guardian uncle and there by save the Girard-Hawkins company from wreck Ned, on his arrival at Geneva, made inquiries as to Miss Hawkins and between us. If she supports you in found that she had received news of the death of her father and was looking for an escort to return to America. Ned at once wrote to some American friends of his who were at Lucerne and were about to leave for home. These persons were two malden ladies whom he had known since he was a boy. He asked them to stop over on their way home at Geneva, where he would join them and escort them to the United States. Only too glad to have his assistance and his company, they did as he desired. When they reached Geneva he told them he had heard that a young girl, an orphan, who had just lost her father in America was anxious to find an escort across the Atlantic. The ladies sent word to the school where Miss Hawkins was, stating what they had heard and offering to take ber under their care. The offer was accepted, and Ned felt that he had made a be ginning Now, these ladies had engaged pas sage on a steamer that was to sail from Naples, Therefore Miss Hawkins, to avail herself of their care, must also sail from Naples. It mattered not to her what port she sailed from, and the party, Ned included, left Geneva for Naples via Milan, Florence and Rome. Ned knew that the vessel on which they had engaged passage would not sail for several weeks, which the ladies would put in between Florence and Rome. His advantages were thus trebled as to the time he would spend traveling with Miss Hawkins, but far more than trebled in another respect. | year at least. The young lady might be confined to her room by seasickness on the voyage. while on land this was not to be expected, and a couple with nothing to to nothing her uncle insisted upon, givdo but to see sights are in a fair way ing notice that he could do what the to fall each under the other's infu- law permitted him to do for six months ence

Therefore when Ned Girard was introduced to her he was simply Mr. Girard and nothing more. He did not enlighten her or any one else that on the successful management of a manufacturing enterprise their future status in respect to wealth or poverty depended. Nevertheless it was not likely that a girl of seventeen could be dawdling through the picture galleries of Florence or over the seven hills of Rome with an attractive fellow of twenty-three without feeling any interest in him. It is not only the fact that young couples traveling for pleasure have nothing to do but enjoy each other's society that conduces to their becoming attached to each other. There is something in the novelties they see togeth er that adds to the enthrallment. This is especially true of Italy. The enchantment that prevails in the medieval city of Florence is enough to bring about a love affair between a Cyclops and a Medusa. There is the river Arno that runs through 1, the bridges. including that antique structure, the Ponte Vecchio, and the historic asso clations, all inclosed within a circle of beautiful hills which look as if they had been retouched by a divine paintwont to lay on.

And Rome! Girard, who had been there before and was we'l versed in its historic lore, took the girl to the rama of the city, the old Campus Martius, the tomb of Hadrian, colossal St Peter's, flanked by the long hill range, business in mind, but his tongue told of the building of the Eternal City. Then he took her to the Forum, the Coliseum, the baths of Caracalla, and all the while he made these structures live again with a people of 2,000 years agone.

There was time before sailing from Naples to visit Pompeli, where not far distant a light smoke was curling from the mountain that had poured forth fire and smoke, followed by the white ashes which had buried the city, to be forgotten for eighteen centuries. At Sorrento there were the ever changing attention. Over 14 per cent never colors of the bay of Naples spread out several hundred feet below them. In the quiet of an orange grove Girard told the little girl his "story." Naturally she listened to it with rapture. The ocean voyage over, the party separated at the dock at New York. Gifrom ruin.
