Your correspondent with other friends motored to Barber's Corners on Sunday to see the famous totem tree and it's worth going miles to see. It doesn't seem that human skill could fashion as many images as are carved on that one tree, and the little park in which it stands is full of the owner's handiwork. We noticed among other curios a large Indian head carved from stone. The place is visited by many from far and near, there being nine automobile parties there while we were there.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Smith visited their sister, Mrs. Stewart, and attended church here on Sunday.

We had the pleasure of visiting the home of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Carr last Sunday. The lawn is a perfect wonder. Not only the totem pole but the trees that have lost all nature's beauty can be enjoyed all winter; faces peer at you from under bushes, old rough stones are converted into the semblance of people by the aid of a mallet and chisel. He has relics of the old Frontenac converted into things of beauty and on the bottom of an old sheet iron stove is a fine painting of the Frontenac Island done in oil by Mr. Carr. ### Warmest Eulogy Worth Nothing to Ears That Are Deafened

By REV. ADAM J. LOEPPERT of Chicago

Many people keep the alabaster boxes of their love and tenderness sealed up until their friends are dead. We must not wait until then, but fill the lives of our friends with sweetness.

The kind things you mean to say when they are gone, say before they go. The flowers you mean to send to decorate coffins, send to brighten and sweeten their homes before they leave them.

If my friends have alabaster boxes stored away, full of fragrance, perfumes of sympathy and affection, which they intend to break over my dead body, I would rather they would bring them out in my weary and troubled hours, when life's struggle is on.

I would much rather have a plain coffin without a flower, a funeral without a eulogy, than a life without the sweetness of love and sympathy. The rope must be flung out now while the swimmer can grasp it in his despair. The eulogy's blandest breath is worth nothing if we whispered it in ears that are hushed in death.

How to Raise Value of Market Eggs

Give the hens clean nests and plenty of them.

Gather eggs twice daily during warm weather and daily during other seasons.

Handle eggs just as little as possible. Every time they are handled they deteriorate.

Market eggs of the correct size, 24 to 28 ounces per dozen.

Overly large or very small eggs should be culled out.

Clean eggs only will bring best prices. Have clean nests and clean houses. Never wash the eggs as it spoils the bloom and spoils the keeping quality.

The last thing a hen does before laying an egg is to deposit a fluid about it which seals it, as it were, and acts as a protection.

Produce infertile eggs. They stand shipment better than fertile eggs; they do not develop germs, withstand the heat, cost less to produce, and seldom decay from any trouble in the interior of the egg. Kill, sell or confine the mature male birds as soon as the hatching season is over.

Keep the eggs in a cool place. A dry, cool room, or a dry, cool basement or cellar, will prevent shrinkage, mold and chick development.

Don't let eggs come in contact with bad odors such as paints, kerosene, cabbage or decaying vegetables or meat.

Held eggs deteriorate. They shrink in weight, evaporation takes place and they lose their flavor and freshness. Market the eggs twice a week in hot weather.

Keep one variety of poultry and produce eggs of one color.

Market your eggs in clean, 30-dozen cases, or in cartons holding one dozen eggs, depending upon the demand.

Don't expose eggs to flies and dust and dirt and thus spoil their appearance.

Confine broody hens or remove them at once to the hatching department.

Never expose market eggs to the direct rays of the sun, to extreme heat or to rain.

Keep the poultry houses free from vermin, clean and sanitary.

Feed wholesome food and provide pure water in clean vessels.

Sell your eggs only to buyers who buy loss-off and who are willing to pay you for quality.

Plenty of "Things to Read" Provided for Growing Army of Readers, Inquiry Shows

The "increase of things to read" is treated with some amazing statistics by John Cotton Dana, in his volume of essays and addresses called "Libraries," the New York Evening Post observes. The market for things to read, as he remarks, has grown much wider. The schools turn out more readers than ever before; every street car invites to practice in reading; every vacant lot boards on its awful front a child's first reader, and on every wayside fence from here to the Pacific is a better first reader than our grandfathers found in their treasured hornbooks. In America libraries of 1,000 volumes and over increased in number in the years 1890-1900 from about 2,500 to over 5,000. The number of volumes in them increased in the same period from about 12,000,000 to about 44,000,000. The most modest guess as to the number of books lent annually by librarians in 1900 was 100,000,000, and this formed only a drop in the total book reading.

When we turn to periodicals we find that in America there is printed a daily newspaper every day for every four or five persons, or well over 2,000,000 copies a day. Between 1890 and 1902 the capital invested in the printing and publishing business more than doubled, while in less than the same period the number of copies of papers and journals had done the same—the census of 1900 showing a rise from 4,000,000,000 annually to 8,000,000,000. Other kinds of publications increased much less rapidly than newspapers, which tend to occupy more and more of the periodical field, but they have grown steadily in number.

If sympathy could only be converted into cash it's doughnuts to fudge that there wouldn't be so much of it wasted.

Health and Beauty Hints.

Swinging Indian clubs will fatten the neck by developing it.

Glycerin or benzoin, a few drops of the latter to the water, makes a pleasant astringent for both a throat gargle and mouth wash.

If you are troubled with insomnia try drinking a glass of hot milk after getting into bed. Sip it very slowly and as hot as possible. Some people like a pinch of sugar or salt in it. Hot milk has a soothing effect on the nerves, and helps to induce sleep.

Liquid vaseline may be employed on the scalp or tonic containing oil and other stimulating ingredients. For this purpose use a drop stopper and apply directly to the scalp, not to the hair. In this way the skin quickly absorbs the moisture, leaving the hair free.

A skin bleach is made from one pint of distilled water, two drams of triple lavender water, one dram of powdered salicylic acid and one-half dram of hydrochloric acid. This is strong and should be mixed by a chemist. To use, the skin is wet with it morning and night, the liquid drying in.

One-Third of Indians Left. Detailed studies by James Mooney of the bureau of American ethnology lead to the conclusion that the Indian population of America, north of Mexico, at the period of the earliest white settlement, was about 1,140,000, of whom about 800,000 were within the present limits of the United States. Mr. Mooney estimates that this number has been reduced by about two-thirds through disease, famine and war, consequent on the advent of the white man.

The Plaited Skirt.

Plaited skirts often give trouble with the back closing. To keep it from parting, do not open it in the center back seam if you have an inverted or box plait, but have the skirt ready for the band, all seams stitched, and pin the plaits in carefully. Then slash down on the right inside crease of the center plait. This makes a closing that will not part, and needs about half the number of hooks and eyes. Allow the hand long enough to reach across to the slashed side. Plaits that swing out of place can be stitched to position at the extreme edge on the under side. This is a good method for all cotton and other washable skirts.

Temperance Notes

(Conducted by the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union.)

FOR PROHIBITION NOW.

Mr. Alexander Nesbit has been sheriff of Denver for 12 years—and he didn't vote for prohibition! Here are some of the many things he said about the good effects of the law in an interview published in the Pueblo Chief:

"The habitual loafer has disappeared. The crowds that used to hang around the lower end of the city at free lunch counters have gone. Where, I haven't the least idea. Like last summer's flies, they just disappeared. Again, the wine rooms are no more and the 'after the theater' dinners are over. There is no place to go except to the picture shows, and then for a light lunch and then home, unless they go to the pool halls. You know it doesn't take long to get a lunch after the theater now. Few people say 'have another' on a glass of water. And the old slogan, 'Let's have another' is a misnomer in Denver. Neither do very many people say: 'Let's have another lunch' and they get through and go home."

"We haven't had a case of murder since the first of the year. Our suicides are falling off to a great extent; the mileage of the ambulance and patrol wagon is less than 60 per cent of what it formerly was; our officers on the beats are treated more courteously; there is a better air morally around the city; the places where crime was formerly hatched are gone and the city is better off in every way so far as its police department and their work is concerned."

"Let me tell you another thing, the can-rusher, the old soak who came home with a quarter in his pocket and sent his eight-year-old, ragged, bare-footed girl to the saloon for a can of beer and then tossed her a crust of bread while he swigged the beer and snarled at her through his drunkenness, is no longer a resident of Denver. You can't get a photograph of one of these fellows in the city."

DIVORCE LABOR FROM LIQUOR.

"The sooner the labor movement and the labor press divorces itself from the liquor business, the quicker real organization will become possible," says the Galesburg (Ill.) Labor News. "Our movement advocates the education, the elevation of our membership, the securing of better conditions and wages for our membership. We cannot secure them by affiliating with the greatest power against them."

Another labor paper expresses itself in much the same strain. It says in part:

"Many trade-union journals and dozens of the best-known labor leaders in America have come out openly for prohibition. According to the Plumbers' Journal, the liquor interests are finding out that 'a lot of men who drink whisky won't vote for it.' The locomotive engineers, 70,000 strong, have gone on record for the abolition of the liquor traffic."

Mr. E. J. Keenan, president of an organization of dry labor union men in Ohio, says that with the exception of the brewery workers and bartenders every labor union in Cincinnati is lined up for prohibition. The following pledge is used by Mr. Keenan: "We believe the labor movement will not develop and grow as it should until the influence of the liquor traffic is removed."

DISARMING THE BODY.

We may point out that alcohol, as far as the digestive organs are concerned, not only interferes with their normal digestive functions, but also destroys their natural powers of protecting the body from disease. A person who is suffering from alcoholic dissipation, mild or severe, is less able to destroy the microbes of disease which may be taken in with the food, and is, therefore, far more susceptible to typhoid fever, cholera, and similar diseases. The vital resistance to both heat and cold is also diminished, as well as resistance to infection, and the body is thus disarmed to a large extent of its natural resistive and fighting forces, and thus becomes a more easy prey to sickness, disease and death.—A. B. Olsen, M. D., D. P. H., Catterham Valley, England.

BEER AND BALL PLAYING.

It is stated that the Baseball Players' Fraternity is to prohibit beer drinking among its members. E. I. Ruelbach, pitcher of the Boston Braves, says: "I have seen many stars whose careers were cut short by their intemperate habits. Conserved energy is the only thing which will prolong a diamond career. Temperance among the players will add years to their time on the playing field."

BEEF INSTEAD OF WHISKY.

"My husband used to bring home a bottle of whisky on Saturday night—if I gave him the money for it. Last week he brought home a rib roast—and he earned the money that bought it." These words of a washerwoman of Denver, Colo., sums up the prohibition situation in that city, says the Denver Post.

The Lord Jesus

By REV. J. H. RALSTON
Secretary of Correspondence Department,
Moody Bible Institute of Chicago

TEXT—We exhort you by the Lord Jesus that as ye have received of us how ye ought to walk and to please God, so ye would abound more and more.—I Thess. 4:1.

It is only to the meaning of the two words "Lord Jesus," that attention is now asked.

They are not of very frequent occurrence in the New Testament, but sufficiently so to indicate that their meaning is very significant. They peculiarly interest Christians, but they have as well a very deep significance for those who are not Christians; for to such persons the son of God will appear as Lord, and the acceptance of such will depend on their treatment of him as Jesus.

The Son of God is Savior.

The attitude of the son of God up to the present time that is directly inviting attention is that of savior, which is the meaning of the word Jesus. The term savior at once implies that there is something from which a man is saved, and we may note briefly that by the son of God man is saved, first, from the penalty of sin in this life as in the life to come. Whether one is saved as to the future penalty or not, he is not saved from the consequences of sin in this life, the law of Galatians 6:7 obtaining in the case of the regenerate man as in the case of the unregenerate. " whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap." There is a beyond; there is eternal death to the one that is not saved from it; and the son of God saves from that. Hell is not a myth; nor eternal exclusion from the presence of God; they are realities and the son of God came to save men from these on the simple condition of faith.

Jesus saves also from the power of Satan. This salvation applies very largely to this life, for after a man believes and is justified Satan's grip on him loosens—he is no longer his Lord. The man is legally free, and after the struggles of this life are over, he will be perfectly free. The son of God also saves from the power of sin. In the unregenerate state a man is the slave of sin, but when he is saved by the grace of God that slavery is broken—is practically gone. A new life enters and persists, and never gives up until it is victorious, and so the subject of this struggle enters the other world free from not only the penalty, but from the power of Satan and sin—his salvation is perfect.

Son of God as Lord.

But possibly the work of the son of God as savior will so absorb attention that man forgets that the son of God is Lord as well. When on earth Jesus said: "Ye call me Lord and master and so I am." The moment a man is saved spiritually, that moment has he come under the control of another Lord, the son of God. This lordship must be supreme, reaching to the whole man.

The body is to be preserved as under the lordship of Jesus Christ. As well must the intellect also acknowledge this lordship; a spiritual man must yield his thoughts to those of God. Equally so must his affections or desires be in subjection. He cannot love what his Lord does not love; nor hate what his Lord does not hate. Here is the place where Christians easily fail, many of them having loves that belong to the world, and in just so far they deny their savior's lordship. Equally so must the will be in subjection; the Christian has no right to his own will. The supreme moment of the earthly career of our Lord was when he said: "Not my will, but thine, be done."

Time, Influence and Wealth.

While all a man's personality is embraced in the things just noted, it is well to note that a man's time is not his own, for it is only in the lapse of time that his personality can operate. If the Lord says "work," the Christian must work; if he says "rest," the Christian must rest; and possibly a man can sin as really in disobeying the latter command as the former. Naturally, too, a man's influence must acknowledge the lordship of the son of God; "No man liveth unto himself, and no man dieth unto himself." A man's proper consideration of his influence will often enable him to judge as to right action in connection with the body, mind, affections or will. It is not always a question when a certain action is before one for consideration whether this will injure or benefit the individual, but what will be its influence on others. Quite logically, also, this lordship extends to material possessions.

There is no knowledge for which so great a price is paid as a knowledge of the world; and no one ever became an adept in it except at the expense of a hardened and a wounded heart.—Countess of Blessington.

SUMMER VEGETABLES.

CREAMED PEAS.—Boil the peas until tender, seasoning with a small bit of onion and a sprig of parsley. Drain off the water, take out the onion and parsley and mix in well a thick white sauce and a large lump of butter, to which a further handful of finely minced parsley may be added. Cauliflower au Gratin.—Stand the cauliflower head down in salted water for ten minutes. Trim and the in cheesecloth. Then boil in hot water, uncovered, until tender. Drain and place in a buttered baking dish, head up. Make a sauce of milk, butter, flour, salt and pepper. When it begins to thicken, add two tablespoonfuls of grated cheese and stir until the cheese is melted. Remove from the fire and beat in an egg. Pour it over the cauliflower, sprinkle the cauliflower with crumbs and dot it with butter. Brown in the oven and serve at once.

Baked Onions.—Peel as many good, firm, medium sized onions as the size of your family will require. Put them into a sauce pan and parboil until tender, not done. Remove and drain the water carefully off. Then place in a deep baking dish, close enough together so that they will just swell. Season with salt, pepper and a few tiny pieces of butter. Cover with a layer of finely rolled breadcrumbs, drop two or three pieces of butter on these, pour over all a cupful of cream or rich milk and bake until the crumbs are a rich golden brown. Bake in a moderate oven. Remove and serve in individual dishes, either plain or with a white sauce.

Baked Tomatoes and Cheese.—Two cupfuls of canned tomatoes, two cupfuls of fresh breadcrumbs, a cupful of grated strong cheese, a teaspoonful of salt, a tablespoonful of sugar and a teaspoonful of butter. Brush bake dish with butter. Put one-half of crumbs in bottom, half tomatoes, a little sugar and salt, half the cheese, rest of crumbs, rest of tomatoes, sugar, salt and rest of cheese. Put in moderate oven and bake for thirty-five or forty minutes. This makes a wholesome and hearty dish.

Sweet Pickles.
One peck green tomatoes sprinkled with salt; when sliced, let stand overnight to make sweet pickles. Drain off the water and put in a kettle with sufficient vinegar to cover. Add one-half pound sugar, one-half cupful white mustard, twelve green peppers and ten onions chopped fine. Put in a bag two ounces of cloves, one-half ounce allspice and a little mace. Boil slowly three hours.

MUST BE MILITARY

IDEA THAT DOMINATES IN ALL FEMININE APPAREL.

Old and Young Alike Must Bow to the Decree—Examples of It Shown in Millinery Designed for the Fall.

The military note is sounded strongly in feminine apparel for fall and winter seasons. This ruling applies to garments designed for all ages of femininity. The military note dominates dresses for girls from six to fourteen years. Sailor suits or dresses are strongly featured, and a great deal of narrow flat braid is used, gold and red on navy, white on navy, etc. Motifs done in colored wool or in gold thread appear on many little frocks.

The older members of the family find a military note voiced in the arrangement of collars, in color bleedings, in the use of a great deal of military braid on suits and dresses of the tailored type, and all the warring nations are popularized sartorially in the development of the season's millinery.

Never have so many "visored" hats been seen!

The gamut from motor hat to smart street chapeau is run, and not only is the military note evidenced in the shaping of the hats, but in their decorations as well. Metal motifs, very military and smart, are popular, and upstanding military pompons are also liked.

The sketch shows three hats of the fall and winter crop that may claim military kinship. The wide model is rather Italian, with its quaintly rolled brim tipped with a wool embroidered design in high color. The hat proper combines bright green and red felt and it is featured for sport wear.

The visored cap of the French soldier is shown, developed in scarlet.

Fall and Winter Hats Show Military Influence.

Persian or baby lamb or other crinkly black fur, the front adorned with a single metal or gold thread emblem. This hat may be worn for motoring when midwinter winds sweep about us, and obviously it should be merely an accompaniment of a handsome coat of the same fur.

The third hat is of bordeaux-colored velvet or hatter's plush trimmed with small buttons and gold braid.

A noticeable feature of many of the smart hats developed for next season wear is the use of bandeaux. Following the bandeau vogue to its logical setting, it seems safe to assume that a low style of hair dressing will be favored through the season.

Towering or tilted hats would set rather grotesquely over equally towering mounds of hair, while the hair piled low on the head or neck serves to hold them in place.—Washington Star.

FALL WAISTS MOSTLY SHEER

White and Pastel Shades Are Generally in Favor With Those Who Have Bought Early.

Whether in dark colors to match the suits or in light pastel shades, sheer-ness is the dominant style feature of the fall waists, says the Dry Goods Economist. It is expected that the dark waists to match suits will be in vogue as the fall season advances, but the early buying favors the white and pastel shades. Sheer silk crepe is again taking the lead with the early buyers. Chiffon, however, is being taken up more extensively than in the last two seasons.

Crepe de chine is a decidedly important factor in the practical waists which require service as well as attractiveness. White and flesh color crepe de chine continues to sell freely, but some of the pastel shades, such as gray, tan, and blue, are included in the orders for early shipment.

The white waists of sheer silk crepe, of chiffon and of crepe de chine, hold a strong position. Some of these are touched up with embroidery of beading in soft colors.

STYLISH DRESS AND FUR SET

The round turban, edged with a wide band of fur with the band running under the neck, makes the hat appear like the aviator's hat. Tailored dress with the fur set to match. The dress is of Rodiers wool-embroidered double type in old red with a blue cloth collar and cuffs and blue embroidery. The fur set is of fouine Japonais and blue cloth. The muff is suspended by a blue jeweled muff-ribbon. The edge of the dress is circled with bachelor buttons.

MUCH BENEFIT IN WALKING

Aside From Improving the General Appearance, Exercise Will Reduce a Thick Waistline.

The girl with a thick waistline must walk a great deal. Walking breaks up the fatty deposits and a slim, graceful figure is obtained. What could be pleasanter than to get up a walking club composed of beauty seeking friends and all go out for a tramp every day? Good company will make this beauty task easy. Bear in mind that in order to get the best results from this exercise the chest must be held up and out, the abdomen drawn in, the head held erect and the shoulder blades thrown back.

Holding the body in this position, start out and walk two or three miles, taking deep, exhilarating breaths as you stroll along. The more fresh air you get into your lungs the better developed your bust will be and the slimmer your waist.

WRIST BAG MADE LIKE NEW

Not Necessary to Discard Article Because It Is Showing Some Degree of Shabbiness.

Wrist bags, like most other things, after a certain length of service become shabby and soiled, but for practical purposes remain in as good a condition as when they were new. Our sketch shows a simple and effective way of trimming an old wrist bag and giving it a second lease of life.

Renovated Handbag.

at the same time bringing it quite up-to-date.

A narrow ribbon frill is sewn on at the top of the bag, just under the clasp, and under this frill a second frill is sewn, and so on until the bag has been entirely covered.

The same idea can be carried out with lace frills if preferred, and for summer use a bag so trimmed looks very pretty and dainty. The cord handle and the tassel can, of course, be easily renewed.

If ribbon is selected for trimming the bag, then it is a nice idea to choose it to match the costume with which the bag will be carried, but perhaps for everyday use black moire ribbon or ribbon of some dark shade of color would be best.

Effective Trimmings.

Buttons, skillfully used, are one of the most effective summer trimmings. One clever plan is to fasten the wide tabs of flaring collars down with big and striking buttons.

If you hired a General Manager on two years' trial—

If that General Manager appointed as his assistants men of honesty and ability who earnestly worked to put your business on an efficient basis—

If he eliminated waste, saved useless expenditure and dismissed employees who had been kept on the payroll not because they were needed in the conduct of your business, but because they were friends of other employees—

If he and his associates carried on your business in a quiet, sensible, honorable way, using prudence in spending your money and diligence in collecting for you the money due you from others—

If his work and the work of his associates showed a striking and pleasing improvement over the work of your last three General Managers who had nearly run your business into bankruptcy—

Wouldn't you give him your undivided and loyal support? And wouldn't you make every effort to keep him for two years more rather than "take a chance" with a new and untried manager?

Your present State administration has served you in a capacity similar to the General Manager referred to above. It has "made good" in a large way. It has restored your State Government to a basis of efficiency after overcoming the handicaps of poor State management by three preceding administrations. It deserves your support at the polls no matter what your "politics" may be.

WANTS CITY TO PAY FOR SHOES WORN OUT IN PRISON

Says He'll Sue Unless He Gets 75 Cents.

St. Louis.—Edward Lane, a negro, went to the Municipal Courts building for the avowed purpose of forcing the city to pay him for a pair of shoes which he wore out while serving a 100 day sentence in the workhouse on a peace disturbance charge.

At the police court parole office Lane was told there was no fund from which he could be reimbursed for his shoes.

"Them shoes was worth $5, but I'll take 75 cents and call it square," said Lane. "If I don't get it I'm going to sue the city. I won't hire no cheap lawyer, neither. I'll hire Senator Hoke Smith of Alabama." Smith is a senator from Georgia.

Lane left the building saying he would sue Judge Hogan, who fined him. The judge said the negro did not visit him.

"If he does," he said, "I'll give him the money and save the city from a lawsuit."

ADVANCE PRICE OF YOUR FAVORITE BOOK

Will Have to Pay From 10 to 25 Cents More For Current Publications.

New York.—Book lovers will have to pay from 10 to 25 cents more for current publications. Publishers and retailers already have increased the price. Books formerly selling from 50 cents to $1 now are rated at 10 cents higher. Those in the past priced from $1 to $2 are sold at an increase of 25 cents each.

The publishers claim that there has been an increase in the price of paper, leather, cloth and ink amounting to from 50 to 100 per cent during the past twelve months, and it is impossible to produce books at old prices.

The consensus of opinion among them is that under the present serious conditions a further increase of from 10 to 20 per cent may be necessary. They say their only hope is in the ending of the European war. It is claimed there is also a shortage of chemicals which must be obtained from Europe for the manufacture of their particular grade of paper. The surplus supply of this class of material is exhausted and the publishers will have to depend upon a new supply.

Story of Swimming and Yachting in Summer Seas

By CHARLES S. PEASE

The big white yacht Priscilla lay at her mooring buoy, nodding gently as if in approval of the sort of day offered by the sun as he lifted slowly out of the sea on the other side of Sandy Hook.

The door of the stateroom next to that of Mabel Chester opened and closed. In a few minutes there was a patter of bare feet on the deck overhead, and a stalwart form in blue trunks shot past her porthole, diving cleanly into the sea. Being a medal swimmer, of course Miss Mabel could not resist having a look to see if this person was acting up to good form.

The young fellow was using a powerful overhand stroke and making for a bell buoy not far away.

"He's no novice," said Mabel to herself, "and, oh my, doesn't the water look delicious! What's to hinder my having a swim all by myself? Aunt Virginia Carrolton would likely find some objection if I asked her. Besides, it isn't 5 o'clock yet, and she must be getting her beauty sleep. I couldn't think of waking her on any account, so here goes."

Donning a bathing suit and a close fitting red rubber cap, she tiptoed across the cabin and up the companionway to the deck.

Some sailors were busy forward, and as Mabel appeared a mate came quickly aft.

"I beg your pardon, miss; are you a strong swimmer?"—touching his cap and smiling respectfully.

Mabel was just proud of her college trophies won at aquatic contests at Wellesley and Magnolia and very graciously answered:

"Don't you think three medals are enough?" and overboard she went in the most artistic of curves, cutting the water as perfectly as a professional.

The mate dropped his deferential air and hurried forward.

"Here, Olson, and you, Torwald, unslung the gig. So! Lower away, now, and stand by. Unhook your falls." He said to himself:

"I was a fool to let her go; the flood is just running and strong at that, but what is a man to do with a pretty little guest of Mrs. Carrolton who has taken three swimming medals? Order her back to her room?"

"I don't think I'll go to the bell buoy this time," decided the girl. "Besides, it seems to be occupied by an observant person looking this way." Mabel had a most beautiful time. She rehearsed all the approved strokes and cut up all the tricks she knew about with the keen joy of youth and perfect health.

"I think that's about enough for this morning," said Mabel, after awhile.

MABEL WAS INGLOUORIOUSLY LIFTED OVER THE SIDE OF THE GIG.

"Now I'll head for the gangway," and she glanced at the yacht.

A nasty little chill ran through her. The Priscilla was so much farther away than she thought it would be.

"Mabel Chester," she addressed herself, "stop that. You brace right up, old girl. I'm ashamed of you. You won a two mile race once. The Priscilla isn't so very far away." And she took on her racing stroke. Looking up after a minute, she instantly realized she was not gaining much, and she saw something else, too—the yacht's gig was coming for her. Two men were bending to their oars, and the mate in his shirt sleeves was urging them on. She glanced toward the bell buoy, and halfway toward her the observant person was coming with a crawl stroke of the power of a tugboat.

A deadly faintness fell upon her like a shadow, and the smooth depths seemed to draw her.

"How perfectly absurd for me to go and get myself drowned this beautiful summer morning! I'll see if I can float. I need to float like a cork."

A gleaming, sun-browned figure surged up beside her, a hearty, cheering, boyish laugh rang out, and a strong hand went under her shoulders.

"You are a beautiful swimmer, but the floodtide got you. They will be here in a minute with the boat."

In a few minutes Mabel was rather ingloriously lifted over the side of the gig, while Arthur Benedict, water polo diamond medal holder, ranged on ahead for the yacht's gangway grating.

"Are you all right, miss?" asked the mate anxiously. "I should not have let you go knowing the tide."

"Yes, indeed; I'm coming around. It was all my fault," assured Mabel. "It would take more than three medals to keep me afloat in this tide-way. I owe my life to you and Mr. Ferguson."

"I don't know his name, Miss Chester. He came aboard at midnight from an athletic yacht club's launch. Hoots, but he swims like a king salmon!"

"Oh, Mr. Ferguson."

"Yes, Miss Chester."

"We won't say anything about this, please, and could you arrange to dry my things in the engine room? I'll leave them outside my door in five minutes?"

"Easiest thing in the world, miss; glad to."

Benedict had reached the grating, for the mate had not hurried the gig. The burly Scotchman passed Mabel over to Benedict, to whom she gave her little cold hand. She looked her thanks, but she said:

"Ferguson says you swim like a king salmon, and I think so too."

"That's worth more than cups and medals!" And Benedict bowed gallantly.

Half up the gangway Mabel turned as he was poised for another dip and whispered:

"Mum's the word?"

Benedict put a finger to his lips, nodded three times and disappeared in the blue water.

"Mabel, my dear," said Mrs. Carrolton as the girl looked into her aunt's cabin later, "Arthur Benedict came down last night from Sea Gate, and I want you to be very nice to him. He is a splendid fellow. I have known him since he was in knickers. He is a nephew of your Uncle Henry's business partner and a Yale man."

Young Benedict, in flannels, being duly presented, was asked by his hostess if he was ready for breakfast and promptly admitted that he was as hungry as a shark.

"Due to taking an early swim, perhaps," he added.

"Arthur, I have always thought you were part fish," observed Mrs. Carrolton.

"Any mermaids down here, Miss Chester?" inquired Benedict blandly.

"Why, did you see one?" asked Mabel, unshaken.

"Thought I did. May have been some big fish, though. He had a red head and silver scales."

"And a tail like a king salmon?" inquired Mabel, very much interested.

"Nonsense!" declared Mrs. Carrolton. "Tell us about that meteoric motorboat of yours, Arthur."

Benedict was at once all enthusiasm and gave an up to date description of all the different kinds of "water bugs" that were to take part in the race of the afternoon. He explained that the ideal toward which the designers were striving was a boat that at high speed would practically skim along on the surface of the water, not pierce through it.

"Why, my boat Zip will run on a thin layer of fog, I believe! Watch her. She's entered in the big race this afternoon."

The Priscilla, gay with bunting and flying the commodore's pennant, was saluted by all the river craft as she steamed up the bay, and passing out through the East river, dropped her anchor at the finishing line for the motorboat contests off New Rochelle.

The Zip was brought alongside, and Benedict took her off for a warming up before the race in which she was to start in half an hour.

Mabel, in a smart yachting suit and wearing the colors of Benedict's club, had wished him good luck and then went forward to consult Ferguson.

That canny old Scot was not at all in sympathy with the program for the day, and, pointing to the snapping, cracking, roaring contestants on every hand, streaking over the water, he said as much to Mabel.

"Why, miss, when nature has supplied a good, spanking breeze like this the young fellows should be satisfied to do their racing with honest canvas; carry them along instead of sheet metal traps, full of machinery and gasoline. It's just a craze to go faster than the wind and is of the same piece with mile a minute motorcars, airships and underwater boats. I say it's flying in the face of Providence!"

"Why, Mr. Ferguson," quizzed the girl, laughing gaily at the dour old salt, "you wouldn't want to go back to three stickers and canal boats and stagecoaches, would you?"

"Who knows but what I would? And his weather beaten features relaxed as he glanced at the bonnie lassie who had sought him so much since the morning.

"Miss Mabel, there is enough weight and power in one of those racing cockles to kick it all to pieces if anything goes wrong with the works, let alone the chance of an explosion."

Ferguson scowled again and picked up his marine glasses.

"Here comes our boat, miss. Have a look at her," he said suddenly.

Mabel gave a little gasp as she found the onrushing Zip skimming toward them like a swallow. In the midst of the dying spray stood a figure that looked to her altogether like a viking.

Ferguson, who had lazzies of his own, did not fail to note the girl's shining eyes and rising color as she watched and shook his finger at the venturesome sportsman as he brought his fragile craft to the line.

The commodore beckoned to Mabel from the bridge, but she cried:

"Oh, Uncle Henry; please let me stay here with Mr. Ferguson; it's so much nearer."

"As you please, my dear, and you may fire the starting gun when I give the word."

The mate put the lanyard in her hand, and she turned to the line where there were ten panting water greyhounds waiting and quivering.

Ferguson was watching the commodore.

"Now!"

Mabel twitched the lanyard, bang went the gun, and they were off.

The course was a five mile sprint to a stakeboat and back. One boat broke down at the line, and three others gave up with some kind of motor trouble while the fleet was yet in sight; then the others disappeared in a haze.

"Here, Olsen, and you, Torwald, unslung the gig. Now in with you and stand by to lower away."

"Why, what is that for, Mr. Ferguson?" asked Mabel, with round eyes.

"Just a precaution, miss. I take a good deal of that," muttered the mate, with his glasses trained on the course.

"See them yet?" whispered Mabel, on tiptoe.

"I can just make out three white spots. That means that only three boats have turned the stake. You will see them clearer in a minute or two. Find one with two red spots on her bow. That's the Zip."

"YES," HE SAID SOFTLY, "AND I AM GOING TO TRY AND WIN."

For awhile Mabel could not make out more than three fountains of flying spray; then, dancing with excitement:

"Oh, look, look! Take the glasses. Isn't that our boat in front?"

"It's the Zip, leading by a hundred yards."

"Our boat will win!" called Mabel to the bridge.

So she did and blew up two lengths over the line!

"Lower away," shouted Ferguson, jumping into the gig, and down they went. Mabel didn't stop to think; there wasn't time. She just slid down one of the falls into Ferguson's arms.

"It wasn't anything for a gym girl to do," she said afterward to Mrs. Carrolton, "and, Aunt Virginia, I'm that proud. I was the first one to see him and grab him by the hair!"

"Him?" as though she didn't know well enough.

"Why, Arthur Benedict, of course, and wasn't it a miracle that he was not blown into bits!"

A week later when Mrs. Carrolton was going to the hospital to see about the young man Mabel announced that she was going too. Before the head nurse opened the door leading to Benedict's room she whispered:

"He will be all right in a fortnight, and it's a wonder."

Mrs. Carrolton sat by his cot and patted his hands, wrapped in dressings, and told him how glad they all were he would be around soon and said that he must hurry and get well so he could go with them on the Priscilla to Bar Harbor in August. Then she found that she wanted to say something to the nurse and hurried out.

Mabel was standing, leaning on the high foot rail of the cot, looking very charming.

"Well, you won the race anyway, didn't you?" waving her hand aloft.

Only Benedict's eyes showed out of his bandages, but they shone very brightly.

"Yes," he said softly, "and I am going to try to win"—But Mrs. Carrolton came in just then.

After the close of the season and the Priscilla had been laid up in the Erie basin Ferguson went to the commodore's town house to pay his respects before going to Scotland for the winter.

Mrs. Carrolton took him aside as he was leaving.

"I wanted to tell you that Mabel Chester is going to marry Arthur Benedict in the spring."

"I am very much pleased, madam; I am indeed. Each saved father from Davy Jones' locker in my presence," and his eyes twinkled under grizzled gray brows. "Please use your influence to have them stay on dry land as much as possible, and then I won't need to follow them around with the rig."

BOX LUNCHEONS.

All Housewives Should Make Attractive Sandwiches.

BREAD TO BE EVENLY CUT.

All "Eats" Taken Al Fresco Should Include Plain Food, Relishes, Fruits, Salad Greens and Dessert, Care Being Taken as to Waxed Paper Wrappers.

In sandwich making the bread should be cut evenly, and the thickness of the slice should depend on the vigor and the appetite of the consumer. Thinly sliced bread appeals to the person who is not a vigorous worker and who therefore has not the need for large quantities of food.

Whether thick or thin slices of bread are to be used is not so important as the palatability of the sandwich as are the manner and quantities in which the butter and filling are used. Butter should be softened by creaming it with a spoon or a knife and should be spread evenly over the entire surface of the slice of bread. This method is easier and quicker than spreading the bread with lumps of unsoftened butter, which disfigures the sandwich. Both slices of bread should be buttered, since butter keeps the bread moist and prevents the filling from soaking into the bread and thus making the sandwich wet and unappetizing. A ragged, crumbly, soaked sandwich is not a tempting luncheon. A sandwich should be wrapped in waxed paper in order to prevent it from drying.

Foods that are likely to dry out, to become disfigured by pressure, to absorb other flavors or to distribute their own flavor—such as cake, cookies, pieces of meat, slices of onion, certain fruits, cheese, stuffed eggs or eggs without their shells—should be separated from other foods by wrapping them in wax paper, or, if that is not available, in plain, clean paper.

Preserves, sauces and the like should be put in small, clean, sealed containers. Although many persons know how to prepare package meats, a large number of others do not. After food selection and food preparation the third consideration that demands attention is careful packing. Surely the means and method of the proper packing of a luncheon must receive thought. The box luncheon must be an example of convenience, neatness and attractiveness. Without these qualifications the most nutritious food may lose much, if not all, of its value, for unattractive food has no appeal to appetite and digestion.

The materials essential to good packing include wax paper, paper napkins, box, basket or dinner pail.

Fiber boxes seem inexpensive, but since they easily dampen or become soiled and cannot be washed, they have to be replaced. When not in use fiber boxes should be well aired.

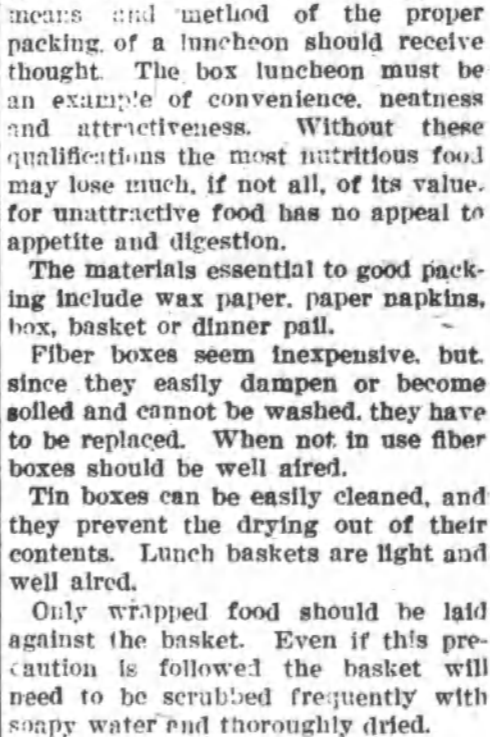

Tin boxes can be easily cleaned, and they prevent the drying out of their contents. Lunch baskets are light and well aired.

Only wrapped food should be laid against the basket. Even if this precaution is followed the basket will need to be scrubbed frequently with soapy water and thoroughly dried.

Midnight Spreads.

For years it has been dinned into our ears that we should not eat before going to sleep, and we have foregone many a pleasant bite for fear of sacrificing our good health. And now along comes a noted physician and tells us that many morning headaches were merely the result of hunger. This does not mean that we can immediately proceed to gorge ourselves with all sorts of sweets and not have to pay the penalty the next morning. Sweets should be eschewed during the midnight repast, and one should substitute wholesome sandwiches. Cheese and apples are wholesome and nourishing and can be eaten with impunity, even being the wee small hours.

BLACKSMITH'S QUEER WIFE

Strange Thing That Happened to Her Neighbors When They Refused to Be Sociable—Some Things of Interest to Little People—Girl on the Beach.

Now, kiddies, said Uncle Ben to little Ned and Polly Ann, I am going to tell—

A DANISH LEGEND.

Once upon a time the daughter of one of the underground people, the Bergmen, was married to a smith who lived in Mors.

Kirstin was a good and most patient wife, although her husband, the smith, was cross and surly and sometimes even beat her when he was in an ill temper.

Kirstin did not like this at all, and one day when he had taken up a stick intending to strike her she seized a great horseshoe which was lying on the anvil and broke it in two without any difficulty.

The smith was astonished. "Are you that strong?" he asked. "Then why have you never resisted when I struck you?"

"Because I love you," said Kirstin. "I'll strike you no more!" said the smith, and he kept his word.

The people of Mors, however, were not friendly to the Bergman's daughter and in spite of her desire to be on pleasant terms with them avoided her and would scarcely even nod to her when they met.

One day, as she and all the people were standing in the churchyard, waiting for the arrival of the minister, Kirstin said to her husband:

"Listen to me—my father is coming to see me, but he is angry."

As she thus warned her husband the Bergman appeared, and a most awe inspiring person he was! Indeed, he was so terrible to look at that the people would have liked to creep into the earth to avoid him.

"My dear daughter," said the Bergman, "I hear the people here will have naught to do with you, so I have come to remedy that!"

"Yes, father," replied Kirstin. "I'll toss them up in the air a bit," said he. "Will you pitch or catch?"

"I'll catch," said Kirstin, for she feared the Bergman would handle the people very roughly.

Then began a merry game. The Bergman stood on one side of the church, Kirstin, his daughter, on the other, and the Bergman tossed all the people in turn over the roof of the church to Kirstin, who deftly caught them.

No one was injured, but every one was badly scared. But the plan worked to a charm, for so long as Kirstin lived she was treated with the greatest respect and consideration.

Size of the Ark.

In Genesis vi, 15, we have the measure of the ark to be as follows: "The length of the ark shall be 300 cubits, the breadth of it 50 cubits and the height of it 30 cubits." We find that authorities differ somewhat as to the exact length of a cubit. It may be from eighteen inches to twenty-one inches. If we take twenty inches as the length of a cubit the ark would measure 500 feet by 83-1/3 feet by 50 feet. A slight variation, one way or the other, will make no material difference in the final measure.

Packing Butter For Winter Use

As a tested recipe for the preservation of butter, by which it will retain its sweet flavor twelve months or even longer and have no tendency to become strong, the following method is excellent: Churn and then wash the butter several times in cold water until entirely free from all buttermilk. Drain well and salt to suit the taste. Work the salt well into the butter and put it in a cellar of even temperature or else in the cooler until the next day. Then work it thoroughly again and shape it into cakes the size of an egg and put each one of these cakes down in the butter bowl one at a time until thin as a wafer so as to drain off all the water possible which may remain. Then pack in earthen jars, filling each of them within one inch of the top.

Wrap out a white linen cloth, which has previously been cut around, in cold clear water. Allow this cloth to lap over a little on the jar. On the cloth put an incl layer of fine dairy salt which will come even with the top of the jar. On this place a sheet of paraffin paper over the salt and seal the jar cover on. Tie brown paper down over it all.

The jars should be filled and sealed at once. Jars holding two to four pounds are preferable in most instances, and they should always be earthenware. Do not allow these jars to stand around a day or two to add another churning of butter, as the butter already packed in would begin to get strong, especially if the packing is done in a warm weather.

HAVE LAWN CENTERS OPEN

Proper Placing of Trees and Shrubs Should Always Be Made an Important Consideration.

Let your lawn centers remain open and clear that the whole yard may appear as large as possible; generous, yet well framed with plant shrubs and trees on all sides. If you must have a Phoenix Canariensis on a 40-foot lot, place it in the rear where it may also serve as a shade tree, though the same rules properly should obtain in the back yard as in the front yard. Better to use fan palms if you will have some, or the beautiful columnar cocos. Do not plant in the center or centers so that one or two large objects may alone be viewed by you, but frame your greensward or picture with shrubs, even trees, so that you will have a little privacy and snugness, a limited seclusion, so that you feel as though on your own property. This open-face, look-at-me type of gardening so prevalent is not at all conducive to home life, and is founded not on generosity and unselfishness, but on false pride and a desire to "show off." Every true plant lover has at least a part of his grounds secluded; and somewhere on the premises may be found, if of sufficient extent, some suggestion of intricacy of design, without which no garden is very interesting or attractive unless in a spectacular sort of fashion, and the latter is debasing to the art.

DEMAND FOR SHADE TREES

Massachusetts Journal Recognizes the Value of Proper Adornment of the City's Streets.

A real good hot summer day brings home to Bridgeport the shame of shadeless streets. In this case it is a burning shame, and no mistake. We wonder what administration will develop the foresight and public spirit to take the steps necessary at the present for the assuring of shade trees for the future?

Shade trees add to the value of property. They help to keep the city cool in summer. They conserve public health and comfort. They please the eye and are one of the greatest factors in the beautification of a city. People have an instinctive appreciation of trees—all the world knows that New Haven is a city of elms, and the most famous street in Germany is "Unter den Linden." Poets have rhapsodized over trees, and Handel wrote his famous "Largo" in celebration of a plain tree, which afforded grateful shade to the composer. And the practical advantages of trees are equal to the esthetic advantages. But it is unnecessary to cite these facts, because practically everybody agrees. What is needed is the taking of definite steps to assure shade trees in the future and to counteract the lack of such a provision in the past.—Bridgeport (Mass.) Telegram.

Wild Rose Hedges.

Wherever there is a wild rose hedge it should be retained and encouraged, if the blossoms are of a good shade. Otherwise one should try to get in a more pleasing variety. Wild roses differ enormously in their color tints, ranging all the way from very pale to a very deep and beautiful pink. Evidently there are a great many varieties among wild roses. There is a fixed belief that wild roses will not stand being picked. The writer one Sunday morning attended church in Minneapolis, where wild roses were twined in great profusion about the pillars and balconies of the church. They were there by the thousands and had been there for many hours. They retained their freshness throughout the day. The secret of their retaining freshness was that they had been gathered very early in the morning before sunrise and while covered with dew. Some varieties of wild roses seem to bloom till very late. The writer has picked wild roses as late as September, and in Cook county, too!

Councilwoman at Work.

A fight against the unsightly, unsanitary and value wrecking billboards of Los Angeles has been reopened by Estelle Lawton Lindsey, councilwoman of that city. Mrs. Lindsey announced recently that she would at once renew the fight to bar the billboards from the residence districts and would ask the council to pass the ordinance barring them. This measure provides that the consent of a majority of the property owners in the same block must be obtained before a billboard may be erected in a residence district. The Chicago ordinance was the model for this Los Angeles bill and the supreme court of Illinois upheld the measure in Chicago, but the billboard posters appealed to the Supreme court of the United States and the case is still pending.

DADDY'S EVENING MARY TALE

GIRAFFES' RACE.

"You know," said Daddy, "that the Giraffes are very fast runners."
"I don't see how they can be, Daddy," said Nick.

"Why, of course," said Nancy, "they have long enough legs. They could win any race, almost before the other Animals had started."
"Maybe that's so," said Nick, "but still their legs are so awfully long that I should think it would be hard."

"They would feel quite sad," continued Daddy, "if anyone thought they couldn't run, so I will surely have to tell you this story now."
"Not long ago some Giraffes belonging to a Circus said to some of the Elephants and other Animals: 'Let's have a Race in the next Parade. Let's Have a Race.'"

"It's no glory to run fast," said Mr. Elephant the Big (he was so named because of all the Elephants he was the largest and tallest).
"You can't frighten people with your voices like I can," said Mr. Lion.
"Nor can you look so wild as I can," said Mr. Tiger.

"Look her," said the leader of the Giraffe family, "if you Animals do any more talking we'll fight you with our hoofs."
"The Giraffes always fight that way and they are quite hard fighters, too, when they get started, though, for the most part they have kind, gentle dispositions."
"We'll be good," roared the other Animals, for it was hot weather and they didn't want to fight at all.
"Well how about a Race then," said Leader Giraffe.

"We'll all Race whenever you say. But if we Race," continued Mr. Lion, "one of these fine days we'll have a match to see who can Roar the loudest."
"Perfectly fair," said Mr. Tiger who was looking forward to the Roaring match, and also to the running match, for he was a pretty fast Runner himself. But then he didn't care to run so hard in the Summer and so he knew he wouldn't win. He hadn't changed his Winter suit—for he said it was too much trouble to be fussing all the time.

"When shall it be?" asked Mr. Elephant. "I'd rather get up a Baseball Game, but then we'll do as the Giraffe family like this time." Mr. Elephant was feeling very pleasant and he wanted to be as nice as could be.
"The Giraffes were very much pleased that all the Animals were so nice about being willing to race, when they all knew that they wouldn't be the winners.

"Well," they said, "we'll all go in for the Games and Sports you Animals like in turn."
"Fine scheme," said the Monkey who was always a little bit ruder, "to each suggest something he can win! Well, for my part I suggest we have a match to see who can Climb a Pole and Jump and Swing—all in turn—the fastest!" And Mr. Monkey grinned with delight—for he knew the Giraffes could hardly do all that.

"All the Animals grinned back at Mr. Monkey and then Mr. Elephant said again: 'When is the Race to be?'"
"Today," said Leader Giraffe, "on the way home from the Parade. Just before we get back to the Circus grounds I'll say one, two, three, and then we'll race to the big tent. All come up and get in line as I say one and two—and go it for all you're worth when I say three!"

"At the end of the Parade the scampering among the Animals was terrific. Of course, those Elephants who were carrying Grown-Ups on their backs couldn't go in the Race but there were some of their Family ready to go in it. And when Leader Giraffe said 'Three'—every Animal was off for the Circus grounds.

"Oh dear, oh dear," wailed the Circus Manager, "I'm afraid all my animals are running away."
"Oh, no," said the Animal Keeper, "you mustn't worry. They've been so happy lately I know something else is up. Maybe they think they'll find some small Boys waiting there with peanuts." And the Circus Manager felt a little happier then.

"Of course, the Giraffes won the race, and when they finished Leader Giraffe said: 'Now tomorrow for the Roaring match!'"

WORKING TO AID WOMEN ON FARMS

Uncle Sam is Doing Much to Make Life Brighter for Country Dwellers.

INGENIOUS DEVICES PLANNED

Home-Made Fireless Cooker and Iceless Refrigerator Among Big Aids to Home Comfort and Sanitation.

Uncle Sam decided not long ago that the 11,000,000 women and girls who pass their lives upon American farms did not have all that they should have to make conditions as lifeable as they might be. As soon as this decision was reached, Uncle Sam, through the department of agriculture, set about improving these conditions as rapidly as possible and the work has now reached big proportions.

The department, realizing that any change must come gradually and naturally, began a few years ago with the girls of the households. Through the canning clubs 80,000 girls in rural communities have been trained to efficiency in a line of work which gives them a means of self-respect by teaching them the proper use of the resources at hand.

The department of agriculture inaugurated and now carries on its work for women through its division of extension work in home economics. The department is enthusiastic over the manner in which the mothers' and daughters' co-operation movement has taken hold upon the women whom it has reached, and its benefits are already enriching a large section. Work Carried on by Clubs.

The work is developed gradually and is carried on by clubs which are organized and directed by trained agents of the department.

Begun with the industry most familiar to the farm woman, egg and poultry raising and selling associations were formed last year upon strictly scientific and business bases. These worked an immediate and large increase in financial returns. There were 6,781 women in 15 states who were materially benefited last year by this one feature of home extension work.

Buttermaking was next taken up, with a correspondingly high average in increased efficiency in preparing the product for home consumption and for sale, with a financial increase correspondingly improved. Every agriculturist knows that the highest quality of butter, which naturally affects the financial return, cannot be made under unfavorable conditions and without proper equipment.

The field agent of the department was prepared for this emergency, and improved churns, butter workers and molds were shown. As properly cooled and kept cool milk is the first requisite for a maximum of quantity and quality of butter, she was also prepared to set before the farmer's wife remote from ice and manufactured cooling apparatus a home-made iceless refrigerator, which she demonstrated would keep milk products in summer at a temperature for the proper forming and ripening of cream to produce high-grade butter.

Assist in Making Devices.

The result was that last year more than 600 iceless refrigerators were constructed at home, which proved efficient aids to home comfort, sanitation and profit. The home-made fireless cooker has proved a boon to thousands of women in remote districts.

So successful has been this introduction that 2,181 effective fireless cookers were constructed by the women themselves at their club meetings under the direction of the department's field agent. A simple home-made fly-trap, suggested by the department attracted the attention of the women, and they have made nearly 2,000 destroyers of this insidiously working little house pest, which has for centuries been one of the banes of summer life in the more remote rural communities.

A simple device of wood and cloth makes jelly straining an easy and a sure operation. A strictly utilitarian article with a grandiose title is a scrubbing chariot, while a dustless mop saves time and strength, and a folding ironing board, which is suspended from the wall, is always conveniently at hand when wanted and out of the way when not in use.

A shower bath which may be constructed at home for less than 50 cents has brought coolness and comfort to many bathless households, and quite frequently leads up to the installation of the $10 home-manufactured waterworks recommended by the department of agriculture.

One of the most active field agents in the promulgation of the ideas of the department of agriculture and in the making of labor-saving devices, notably the iceless refrigerator, is Miss Rhea C. Scott, whose territory is in Virginia. At the request of the department, Miss Scott has compiled a book which combines the concrete results of a year's government club work in home-made labor-saving devices for the use of the housekeeper. This explains in full the construction of the articles as made by the women under the direction of the department of agriculture.

Maxwell Service SERVES

Maxwell has put a real meaning into the word "Service."
Simply by requiring every Maxwell dealer to carry a full supply of Maxwell parts—so that he can replace any damaged or worn part at once, without waiting for parts to be shipped from the factory.

If you are a Maxwell owner your car will always be in running order because our dealer—any Maxwell dealer—can give you real and immediate service. If he couldn't, he wouldn't be a Maxwell dealer.

Not more than one or two automobile builders in the country can give you service that compares with Maxwell Service.

This is a vital point. Investigate it fully before buying your car.

Roadster $580; Touring Car $595; Cabriolet $665; Town Car $915; Sedan $935. Fully equipped, including electric starter and lights. All prices f. o. b. Detroit.

North Lansing W. C. T. U.

Our Union met Thursday afternoon, Sept. 28, at the home of Miss Susie Boyer. There were present, ten members and five visitors. After evangelistic services, conducted by the president, Mrs. Alice Singer, in the absence of Mrs. Allington, the meeting was placed in charge of Mrs. Dorothy Hoyt, superintendent of mothers meetings, who had a collection of papers prepared by her staff—superintendent and assistants, on subjects of interest to mothers and designed to be helpful to them. These were read and the many and varied comments after each selection showed a lively interest in the subjects under discussion. More and more parents throughout the land are waking up to the fact that intelligent knowledge rightly imparted, is one of the strongest safeguards by which we can throw around their children. And we are glad to see that the mothers of our own little hamlet are in no wise sleeping at their posts.

At the close of the meeting we were rejoiced at the welcome addition to our numbers, of Mrs. Hugh Shaw, as a regular member of our Union.

Our next meeting will be in charge of Mrs. Henry Carson, superintendent scientific temperance instruction. Meeting will be at the home of Mrs. Edna Beardsley, 2:30 p. m., Oct. 19. Refreshments will be served. Everybody invited, members and parents especially urged to come.

Celebrate Fiftieth Anniversary.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Jacobs, near North Lansing, was the scene of a very pleasant surprise Saturday evening, Oct. 7. The occasion was their fiftieth wedding anniversary.

The guests gathered on the corner and at 8 o'clock went in a body to the house. It was a genuine surprise to both Mr. and Mrs. Jacobs. The guests numbering nearly fifty were made welcome and the evening passed all too quickly with games and visiting.

A very appetizing supper was served which all enjoyed very much. After supper Mr. and Mrs. Jacobs were presented with a fine large leather rocker as a token of the love and esteem in which they are held by their children and neighbors. Their daughter, Mrs. John Snyder, made the presentation speech in which she expressed the desire and wish of the whole company that Mr. and Mrs. Jacobs might enjoy many, many more anniversaries. The guests departed at a late hour to their several homes each one feeling that the evening had been one that would be long remembered by all.

State Dairymen to Meet.

Improved methods of handling milk and of giving cleaner milk and better dairy products to the consumer will be demonstrated at the fortieth annual convention of the New York State Dairymen's association, to be held at the New York State Armory at Syracuse from Nov. 4 to 16 inclusive. An exhibition of the latest in dairy apparatus, farm barn equipment, motortrucks, and dairy products and supplies, will be shown in the Armory.

Prominent speakers will make addresses on questions in which dairymen are most interested. There are now many subjects and questions with regard to dairying which are being discussed by dairymen and which are also of general interest.

The officers of the association who are urging all members to attend are: W. E. Dana, Avon, president; George E. Hogue, Arcade, vice-president; S. C. Shaver, Albany, secretary; K. R. Kirkland, Philadelphia, treasurer; L. D. Spink, Attica, assistant secretary.

Winter Courses in Agriculture.

The announcement of the winter courses of the State college of agriculture at Cornell University sets the date from Nov. 8 to Feb. 17, a full twelve weeks period. The date of opening the winter course has been set after election day, so there may be no conflict between voting at home and registration at the college, since the winter courses are ordinarily taken by practical farmers, dairy managers, poultrymen, and others engaged in the business of agriculture. Farmers week at Cornell is included in the last week of the winter course, Feb. 12 to 17.

Complete announcements of the winter courses will be sent to any one who applies to the Secretary, State College of Agriculture, Ithaca, N. Y.

Resolutions.

The following resolutions were adopted by Five Corner Grange, No. 1000, P. of H., on the death of Sister Elizabeth Atwater who was a member of that order: Whereas—It has pleased our heavenly Father to again enter our gates and remove from our midst another loyal and esteemed sister, and Whereas—We realize that by this act of Divine Providence our order has been deprived of an interested member, a willing helper and one whose voice on all moral questions always gave us courage to press on toward the "mark of the high calling;" therefore

Resolved—That, while we feel deeply the loss of our loved sister, we would bow in humble submission to the will of our God whose wisdom we would not question.

Resolved—We hereby extend our heartfelt sympathy to the immediate members of her family. May they each find comfort and strength, leaning on the arm of Him who doeth all things well.

Resolved—That a copy of these resolutions be placed on the records of our order, a copy sent to the husband and each of her sons, and also to our Genoa paper for publication.

More Wood Wasted than Utilized.

Over 300,000 cords of slabs, sawdust, edgings and other mill waste were used for making paper pulp last year. Several of the largest saw-mills in New York state are installing special apparatus to save material which was formerly wasted or sent to the burner. The price of paper has risen so greatly since the outbreak of the European war that paper pulp manufacturers are becoming more and more interested in the utilization of wood waste. When it is realized that more wood is wasted than actually utilized in our great lumber industry which uses 40 billion board feet a year, it is seen that there are great opportunities to save this waste.

The infantile paralysis epidemic has greatly stimulated the demand for crutches for the victims of the epidemic. Willow is found to make the best crutch wood on account of its comparatively light weight, relative strength and easy workability. There are a great many varieties of willow but most of the commercial willow comes from the lower Mississippi valley.

Age cannot With.

When the University of California opens this year, it will have as one of its enrolled pupils Mrs. Amy D. Winship, aged 85. Last year she was a pupil in the University of Wisconsin. After a life time of other duties she entered the Ohio State University a few years ago, specializing in botany, physics and international law.
