The Daredevil

By Maria Thompson Daviess

Author of "The Melting of Molly"

"You'll see her at the governor's house for you'll see her, if you sooner, and just with a few and the general car drive with each other. He opens his eyes when Mrs. T. gets in, and he looks for her in the whole Harpeth valley with his definition his excellency of feeling from her eyes. Just watch him." And this time it was three weeks that we still between and beyond.

"Here we are at the general's, and I can smell Kizzie's cream gravy with my mind's nose—I understand that your father was the last Henry Carruthers of five born up in the old manorogny bedstead that the general inherits between the hours of 1 and 5 a. m. Some shack, this of the general's, isn't it? Nothing finer in the state." And as he spoke that Mr. Buzz Clendenning stopped the car before the home of my uncle, the General Robert, and we alighted from it together.

I do not know how it is that I can put into words the beautiful feeling that rose from the inwardness of me as I stood in front of the home of my fathers in this faraway America. The entire city of Hayesville is a city of old homes I had noticed as I drove in the gray car so rapidly along with Mr. Buzz Clendenning while he was speaking to me, but no house had been so beautiful as was this one. It was old, with almost the vine covered age of the Chateau de Grez, but instead of being of granite it was of a red brick that was as warm as the embers of an oak fire with the film of ashes crusting upon it. Thus it seemed to be both red and gray beneath the vines that were casting delicate green traceries over its walls. Great white pillars were to the front of it like at the mansion of the governor, and many wide windows and doors opened out from it. Two old oak trees stood at each side of the old brick walk that led from the tall gate, and as I walked under them I felt that I had from a cruel world come home.

CHAPTER VI. The Girl Bunch.

AND if I felt in that manner as I entered the house I felt it to a still greater degree when I was welcomed by that most lovely old black slave woman of the high temper and good cookery. She opened the door for us herself, though a nice boy the color of a chocolate bonbon stood in waiting to perform that office. She had a spoon in her hand, and upon her head was a spotted white turban, as also was an apron of an equal spotlessness tied around her very large waist.

"You, Mas' Robert, you done come home from the heathen land to keep

"You, Mas' Robert, you done come home from the heathen land to keep my food waiting just like yo' father did from the minute I ontled him from my apron string. Come right into the dining room 'fore my gravy curdies and the liver wing I done saved for you gits too brown in the skillet," was all of the introduction of greeting that she gave to me as she waddled along behind Mr. Buzz Clendenning and myself, driving us down the hall and into the dining room.

"Yes, I hope Kizzie killed by the half dozen last night. If there aren't three shi-tens pieces you'll be hungry, L'Aigion," said Mr. Buzz Clendenning, with a laugh, as he seated himself beside me and unfolded his napkin.

"I wish that you might call me Robert, Mr. Clendenning," I said, with a great friendliness, as we finished the above.

"Sure, Bobbie, and you'll forget that I wouldn't let you kiss me, won't you?" he answered as he drew back from the table and lit a cigarette after passing me the case. "Everybody calls me Buzz the Bumble Bee because of a his toxic encounter of mine with a whole nest of bumblebees right out here in the general's garden. It is a title of heroism, and I'd like to have you use it as if we'd been kids together, as we were slated to have been. Say, let's go 'call on Sue, and you can get a nice little initiation into the girl bunch before the general stops you by locking you away from them."

"I go," I made answer with a great pleasure.

Then we descended to the gray car of much speed and did use that speed in turning many streets until we came to another very fine old house, where, I was informed by my Mr. Buzz Clendenning, resides that Mile Susan of so much loveliness.

And it is of a truth that I discovered that loveliness to be as great as was told to me by her true lover. When I crossed my hand from the kiss of presentation I gave to her hand I looked into very deep and very wonderful girl eyes that had in their depths tenderness that were for a sympathy for me, I knew. My heart of an exile beat very high in my own girl's breast that ached for the refuge of her woman's arms, and I must have partly betrayed my yearning to her, for I saw an expression of confused question come into her eyes that looked into mine; then the beautiful thing that had come into my Mr. Buzz Clendenning's eyes for me came also into hers in place of the question. I saw then in those eyes a sister born to the boy Robert Carruthers of a great French strangeness.

"I've been thinking about you all morning, Mr. Carruthers, and hoping Buzz would bring you with him to see me first of all. I wanted to be the first one of the girls to say, 'Welcome home' to you." And as she spoke those words of much tenderness I again lent over her hand in salutation, because I could give forth no words from my throat.

"Sue, you are the real sweet thing—and now notice me a bit, will you?" said my fine Mr. Buzz Clendenning with both emotion and a teasing in his voice. "I know I haven't got French manners and don't look like L'Aigion, but I'm an affectionate rough fellow."

"Please don't mind Buzz, Mr. Carruthers—he just can't help buzzing." "For always I will be your humble slave, Mile Susan," was the answer I made into her laughing eyes.

"That will do, Robert. You don't know how spoiled Susan is, and you're making trouble for me. Besides, you haven't seen the baby Belle in war paint yet—let's go call on her now!" And that Mr. Buzz Clendenning was in a moment ready for making more new friends for me. "Come on, Susan, we can tie Prince Bob on the running board."

"Why, there's Belle at the gate now, and—yes—it's Mrs. Whitworth with her. I wonder when she came from New York," said Mile Susan as we went to meet the guests approaching. I on the one side of her and the Mr. Buzz on the other.

"The beautiful Madam Whitworth came down upon the same train which I occupied," I said as I remembered to raise from my head my hat by that action on the part of my Mr. Buzz.

"Oh, then you have been presented to L'Aigion?" said Mr. Buzz to that Madam Whitworth, who stood smiling while I was presented to the very lovely girl of very great blondness, who both blushed and what is called giggled as I kissed her hand, though in her eyes I found a nice friendliness to me.

"We are old friends who know all about each other, aren't we, Mr. Robert Carruthers?"

"Indeed, I have much joy that I was given the opportunity to know the very beautiful Madam Whitworth at so early a time in my life in America." I made answer to her question in words as I bent also over her hand for a kiss of salutation.

And then I had a great amusement at the skill with which that Madam Whitworth brought it to pass that I walked with her from that gate and left the three new and lovely friends I had made looking after me with affection and regret at my departure.

"Of course, it was horrid of me to snatch you like that from those infants, but—I really had the claim to have you for a little time to bear your impressions of Hayesville, now, didn't I?—you boy with eyes as beautiful as a girl's," she said to me as I walked down the wide street beside her.

"I hope you will always make such claims of me, madam." I made answer with the great sweetness with which I was determined for the time to keep covered the steel knife.

"I know how to claim—and also to reward," she answered me with a warmth that gave me a great discomfort. "And how did you escape from the general into feminine society on your very first day? Wasn't there work for you at the capitol? I understand that they are expecting that French commissioner very soon now." She asked the question with an indifference that I knew to be false.

"I think it is that I am allowed to get my—what you say in English?—hand legs," I answered with much unconcern.

"Speaking of that Frenchman who is coming down for the mule contracts of which by this time you have doubtless heard, I wonder why it is that the Count de Lasselles, your friend, is sending one of his lieutenants instead of coming himself. Did he say any thing of coming down later? I wish he would for to my mind he is one of your greatest soldiers, and I would like to look into his face. That portrait in the Review is one of the most interesting I have almost ever seen. Is there any chance of his coming down?" And

I was of a great curiosity at the anxiety in her face about the movements of my capitaine, the Count de Lasselles. "He told me only that he would go to the grain fields of English Canada, madam," I answered her by guardedly telling her no more than my words upon that train had revealed to her.

"If he writes to you you must tell me about it," she said, with great friendliness. "I am interested in everything that happens to him."

"I will do that, with thanks for your interest," I answered to her, with an air of great devotion. "And behold, is it not the Twin Oaks of my uncle I see across the street?" I asked as I stopped in front of that fine old home that was now mine.

"I know how to claim—and also to reward."

"Come on down the street to my home and I'll give you a cup of tea," she invited me with very evident desire for my company for more questioning.

"I give many thanks, but that is not possible to me, as I must write notes to my Pierre and old Nannette for the evening railroad. I bid you good day, beautiful madam." And again I bent over her hand in a salutation of departure.

"Then I'll see you again soon," she said and smiled at me as I stood, with my hat in my hand, as she went away from me down the street.

"Vive la France and Harpeth America!" I said to myself, as I ascended the steps, was admitted by the Bonbon and conducted up the stairway to my apartments by good Kizzie, whom I met in the wide hall.

And there entered in honor of the greatest interest to me, as the very good old slave woman led me from one of the rooms in the large house to another, with many stories of great interest. At last we came to that room in which had been deposited my bag and my other equipment for my journey, and there we made a very long pause.

"This is your Grandma Carruthers room, the general's grandma, and she was the high-headed lady of the whole family. That am her portrait over the mantelshelf. You is just like her as two peas in the pod, and I reckon I'll have to take a stick to you like I did to yo' father when he was most grown up and stole all the fruit cake I had done baked in July fer Christmas," she said, with a wide smile of great affection upon her very large mouth.

"I beg that you put under a key that cake, beloved Madam Kizzie," I made answer to her, with also a laugh. "Never was no key to nothing in this house, chile," she answered to me. "I loved to the general that he oughter git a lock and key for this here flowered silk dress in the glass case on the wall dat de ole mule wore at de ball where she met up with Mas' Carruthers, but they do say that she comes back and walks as a ha'nt all dressed in it and these here slippers and stockings and folderols in the carbed box on the table here under her picture. Is you 'fraid of ha'nts, honey?"

"I will not be afraid of this beautiful grandmamma in this dress of so great magnificence, my good Kizzie." I made answer to her with more of courage than I at that moment felt.

"Well, it's only in case of a death in the house that she—lands alive! Am that my cake burning?" With which exclamation the good Kizzie left me to the company of the beautiful grandmamma.

As soon as breakfast was over the next morning I departed with my uncle, the General Robert, to the capitol of the state of Harpeth, which is a tall building set on an equally tall hill.

I found much business awaiting me in the form of making a correct translation of all of the letters in a very large portfolio, all of which were pertaining to that very tiresome animal, the mule. But I made not very much progress, for a very large number of gentlemen came into the office of my uncle, the General Robert, and to all of them I must be presented.

In fact, in all of what remained of that entire week, for most of my moments in the capitol I was having very painful shakes of the hand given to me and receiving assurances of my great resemblance to my honored father.

All of which I did greatly enjoy, but nothing was of so much pleasure to me as the visits I accomplished into the office of that Gouverneur Faulkner with messages of importance from my uncle, the General Robert.

It was with a very fine and cold smile of friendliness that he at first received me as I stood with humble attention before his desk upon my first mission to him, but with each message I perceived that the stars in his eyes so hid beneath his brows, shone upon me with a greater interest.

And in observing the many heavy burdens that pressed upon his strong shoulders until at the close of each day a whiteness was over his very beautiful face I grew to desire that I could make some little things for him easier to seek to so do, and I discovered that it was possible to beguile many very heavy persons to tell to me what it was they wished to impose upon him.

"Robert," said my Gouverneur Faulkner on a late afternoon, "I'm going to ask the general to lend you to me for a couple of weeks while I am so pressed. Buzz can do more for him than you do, and—and, well, just looking at you and hearing you tell about the flies you brush from my wearied brow rests me. Report to me tomorrow instead of to him. I know it will be all right, for he really needs Buzz. Now, you run home and get ready for one great time at a party I'm giving to you tonight. And, Robert, remember to tell me everything the flies say, translated in your United States."

"I will, and I go, my Gouverneur Faulkner," I made an answer to him, with a laugh, in which I did not show entirely all of the pleasure I experienced when I discovered I was to be in the place of his secretary, that fine Buzz Clendenning.

And with much haste I took my departure from the capitol of the state of Harpeth to Twin Oaks in the car of my uncle, the General Robert, for I knew that upon this evening I must make a new and terrible toilet and I would require much time thereto.

CHAPTER VII. Drama of the War Mule.

I HAVE a desire to know if it is into the life of every person there comes one night which he is never to forget until death and perhaps even after. I do not know, but I am sure that I shall always keep the memory of the night upon which Mr. Robert Carruthers of Grez and Bye was introduced to the friends of his ancestors. It is my jewel that seems a drop of heart's blood that I will wear forever hid in my breast.

At dinner I sat beside the Gouverneur Williamson Faulkner, and tears came into my eyes as he rose from his side me at the head of the table and said:

"Ladies and gentlemen, I ask you to drink to the homecoming of Robert Carruthers, my friend, your friend and everybody his friends."

"And now what have you to say to me, boy, the oldest friend you've got in America who hasn't seen you for days that have been too long?" said that Madam Whitworth, who was seated at my side, and as she spoke she turned one lovely bare shoulder in the direction of my uncle, the General Robert, and the beautiful Mile. Sue and also Buzz, as if to shut them away from her and me in a little space of world just for two people.

"I can say with truth, madam, that your loveliness tonight is but the flowering of my suspicions of it that morning upon the railroad train." I answered her in words that were a very nice translation of what that fine young Cossack had once said to me at the Chateau de Grez of my own flowering into rose chignon after an afternoon's hunting with him in corduroys. And in truth I spoke no falsehood to that Madam Whitworth, for she was of a very great beauty of body, very much of which was in view from a scantiness of bodice that I had never seen excelled in any ballroom in France.

"I knew you for a poet from that adorable black mop which I see you have very nicely plastered in an exact imitation of Buzz Clendenning's red one," she answered me, with a laugh. "Follow me from the ballroom just after supper at midnight for a half hour's chat alone in a place I know, and don't let either the general or the governor see you," she then said in an undertone as the Gouverneur Faulkner bent forward and began a laughing conversation with her.

"I will," I answered her under my breath; and I leaned back in my chair so that the Gouverneur Faulkner could more conveniently converse with her. And to that end he placed his arm across the back of my chair, and thus I sat in his embrace with my shoulder pressed into his.

"At midnight," I whispered, while I bent for a second to kiss the hand of the beautiful Madam Whitworth as she left the room. As I raised my head from the salutation I encountered the eyes of the Gouverneur Faulkner, which looked into mine with an expression of calm question. And for a moment I let the woman rise superior to the raven attire, and I looked back into those eyes, in which I saw the mystery of the dawn star, as would have gazed Roberta, marquise of Grez and Bye, had she been attired in the white tulle and lace abandoned in that New York. Then I bent back down into my heart and gave him the smile of fealty that was his due from Robert Carruthers, his friend.

The hours that followed my entry into the ballroom in the mansion of the exalted Gouverneur Faulkner were like minutes of time that dropped from a golden clock of joy. I danced on feet that were strong wings to glide over a floor that was a many colored cloud from the reflection of the soft lights and the silken skirts which ruffled over it. And, what was most enjoyable to me in this case, I glided in whatever direction pleased me and took with me the armful of cloud, which was the girl with whom I was dancing, on long swoops of my own will instead of being led in my flights by another, as had always before been the case with my dancing. It was the most of a joy that I had ever experienced, and as I so enjoyed that freedom I did not know how it was that I should have such a feeling of dissatisfaction when I beheld that beautiful Madam Whitworth dancing within the arms of the Gouverneur Williamson Faulkner. I blushed that I should be so unworthy, with such an unreasonable fury in my heart, and I looked away so that I seemed not to see the smile that he sent to me over the head

Everybody Agrees With Us New Idea Spreader Is Best

Since we began telling in the public press about the New Idea Manure Spreader, our store has been a central point of interest with farmers for miles around.

And to a man, they all agree that the "New Idea" is the most practical spreader they ever saw. Even men who have used other spreaders for years, quickly concede the superiority of the "New Idea."

Now, this is very gratifying to us because we took the New Idea Agency only after personal investigation, and this unanimity of approval confirms our good judgment. There isn't a doubt that the will handle manure—fresh or stored—easily, economically and efficiently. A chain conveyor carries the manure to two cylinders, revolving one over the other, where it is thoroughly fined and pulverized. Then, swiftly revolving steel paddles distribute this fine manure over a strip wider than the wheel base of the machine itself—actually across three corn rows. The "New Idea" will spread 3, 6, 9, 12, 15, 18 loads per acre according as the feed lever is set and so it evenly. It is built low; mounted on wide tire wheels, and strong enough from kingbolt to drive wheels to stand steady hard service for a lifetime. Never clogs nor strains a team unduly.

First Wide-Spreading Spreader Ever Built

Leads now as it did when first invented 17 years ago. Called "New Idea" because wide-spreading was a new idea at the time.

We've An Interesting Book To Give You

"Helping Mother Nature." This book is valuable. Tells fertility facts you never dreamed of. Gives suggestions about the care and use of manure that it will pay you to follow out. Don't miss your copy—ask when you come in—it's waiting.

Scientific Farming

ALFALFA SEED BEDS.

How to Prepare Them and How to Inoculate the Plant.
[Prepared by United States department of agriculture.]

The following suggestions for preparing the seed bed and inoculating the seed to secure a stand of alfalfa in the moister regions of the eastern United States east of the ninety-fifth meridian were prepared by H. L. Westover, scientific assistant, bureau of plant industry, and H. B. Hendrick, states' relations service, United States department of agriculture.

The tender nature of the young alfalfa plants requires that the soil be in excellent tilth at the time of planting. Many of the failures to secure a good stand may be traced directly to the improper condition of the seed bed.

UNINOCULATED AND INOCULATED PLANT.

The aim should be to get the soil finely pulverized, thoroughly compacted and comparatively free from weeds. The surface two or three inches should be fine and loose, and below this it should be sufficiently firm to favor the capillary movement of water, yet porous enough to permit good drainage and free circulation of air through the soil. Fall plowing is desirable in sections where early summer seeding is practiced. If fall plowed the land should be thoroughly disked as soon as it will work up well in the spring and should then be harrowed until seeding time at intervals sufficiently frequent to keep down the weeds and to make a perfect seed bed. Where land is plowed in the spring for alfalfa at least four to six weeks should intervene between the time of plowing and seeding, during which time the land should be harrowed every ten or twelve days to keep down the weeds and to conserve the moisture. Where the soil is inclined to be too loose or when there are any clods the roller pulverizer is an excellent tool to use. When alfalfa is to follow winter wheat or other small grain crops a thorough disking, followed by frequent harrowings, will often be all that may be required, provided the land is worked shortly after the grain is removed. When plowing in this case is necessary the preparation of the seed bed will often be facilitated by disking ahead of the plow and by following the plow at once with a pulverizer and harrow. On land that has been in an early maturing cultivated crop, such as potatoes, peas, sweet corn or soy beans, no other preparation will be needed than the necessary harrowings.

Nitrogen fixing bacteria should be provided, unless the soil is known to be supplied naturally with these germs. Inoculation may best be accomplished by scattering over the area to be seeded surface soil taken to the depth of four or five inches from another field upon which the crop has been previously successfully grown. The soil should be broadcasted, at the rate of from 250 to 500 pounds per acre, and harrowed in immediately. The spreading should take place on a cloudy day or late in the afternoon, as the sun's rays are destructive to the germs. Soil from the roots of sweet clover plants also will inoculate alfalfa. Care should be taken to avoid introducing noxious weeds or fungous diseases. The practice of sowing a small quantity of alfalfa with the regular seeding of clover or other hay crops each year for a few years before it is intended to devote the land to alfalfa has in some cases apparently introduced sufficient bacteria for inoculating the succeeding crop of alfalfa. Another method which may be used is that of inoculating seed with an artificial culture, a limited quantity of which can be procured from the United States department of agriculture, free of charge. Full instructions for use accompany each bottle of culture. This culture is produced also for distribution by the laboratories of several of the state agricultural experiment stations. The combined use of the soil and the artificial culture gives added assurance of successful inoculation and is recommended when both can be readily obtained.

The amount of seed that is required varies with the perfection of the seed bed, the character of the soil, the grade of seed used, and the kind of weather at the time of seeding. In general, from twenty to thirty pounds per acre should be used, depending upon the conditions given above.

SOW GOOD SEED.

There is no greater folly than that of planting seed that is inferior, for it will not grow. It is in total disregard of the first principle of successful farming. Do not do it. It is better to pay cheerfully twice the price of the same kind of seed used last spring than to use seed that will not grow or that will not yield well after it does grow. Good plowing, good soil, good season, good care—all these avail nothing unless the seed is right. If the home grown seed is of no account on account of a poor maturing season, get some that is. And it is a strong hint that the quicker you decide what you want and buy it the better, because seed is going up. With every one clamoring for seed and little high testing seed to be had, this is sure to be the case.—Better Farming.

TREATING POULTRY DISEASE

Potassium Permanganate in Drinking Water Remedy For Colds.

[Prepared by Pennsylvania station.] During late autumn and early winter diseases, and especially colds, are apt to appear in the poultry stock. Drafts in the houses should be prevented. Birds affected with colds should be closely watched and given prompt treatment. The practice at the Pennsylvania agricultural experiment station is to isolate a sick bird and wash its head in some mild disinfectant.

Simple colds may be doctored, but contagious diseases like roup, when severe, leave no alternative but the destruction of afflicted hens. Indications of colds are sneezing, a watery discharge from the nostrils and a swelling under the eyes. The discharge does not have a disagreeable odor as in the case of roup.

Potassium permanganate used in the drinking water in a proportion to turn the water to a deep wine color will prevent, in a measure, the spread of colds.

Before pullets on the Pennsylvania State college farm are placed in the winter laying houses these houses are thoroughly scrubbed with hot water and sprayed with some good coal tar solution. Exercise should be provided by scattering grain feed in the litter which should be clean.

Clean, sanitary quarters, sunshine, fresh air, freedom from drafts, exercise and good, wholesome feed mean a minimum of disease and a happier, healthier, more contented flock, all of which contribute to uniform production of winter eggs.

Convenient Wagon Step.

The top section of this step is fastened permanently to the wagon box. The lower sections each fold into the one above and are held in this position by the flexible flanges of the side rails, writes Edgar Taylor in the Agricultural Digest. It is claimed that the step is much more convenient than a portable ladder.

Don't Feed at Milking Time. Cows will stand more quietly and the milking can be done more comfortably if the cows are not trying to eat while they are being milked. Feeding at milking time may also add dust and other impurities to the milk.

ALFALFA FOR POULTRY

Alfalfa is one of the best sources of green food for poultry growing chickens and laying hens alike. Many farmers practice feeding ground or short cut alfalfa to their poultry in a dry form in combination with other ground feeds. A dry mash ration of 100 pounds cornmeal, 100 pounds middlings, 50 pounds bran, 50 pounds beef scrap and 20 pounds alfalfa has, according to H. C. Knandel, in charge of poultry extension at the Pennsylvania State college, proved very satisfactory.

Some farmers feed alfalfa through the entire year for succulence or green food. In winter bundles of alfalfa are steamed or soaked in hot water until it compares very favorably with fresh cut alfalfa. Others have found it advisable to feed alfalfa in winter by throwing it into the runs and allowing the birds to eat the leaves. According to the United States department of agriculture, the nitrogenous material in alfalfa is just what is needed by growing birds and is a good aid to egg production. The chemical analysis of alfalfa is practically the same as that of bran, except that it has a higher per cent of protein than bran. It is a little harder to digest, but it is important in the poultry ration for the purpose of furnishing protein and giving variety and bulk to the ration.

Asbestos Mats.

The convenient disks of metal bound asbestos, plain on both sides or covered on one side with thin metal, are a boon to housewives, as they make it possible to simmer with security. Almost invariably, however, the first time of contact of the asbestos with gas flame or heated stove top results in filling one's house or apartment with a "reek" as of pungently scorching paper. In order to avoid this inconvenience let the new asbestos mats before going into use remain for several hours either in a tightly closed and well ventilated oven or else on top of the oven, under the lids of the back of the stove, where the direct up chimney draft will carry off the odor. One good baking will generally make an end of the trouble, but if the inside of the oven be chosen for the purpose take it at a time when no food is to be baked or roasted in it, as otherwise one's cake or soufflé may absorb the scent of scorching.

Chocolate Sauce.

One square chocolate (bitter), one cupful sugar, one tablespoonful butter, one-third cupful boiling water, one-half teaspoonful vanilla. Melt the chocolate in a saucepan over hot water, add the butter and pour the boiling water on gradually. Bring to the boiling point, then add sugar and boil for fifteen minutes. When cold add the vanilla. If not sweet enough add more sugar.

Overshirts That Ripple.

Sometimes the ripple overshirt is dropped from the hip instead of being gathered at the waist line. In making up a frock which combines two materials—say serge and plaid silk or plume colored mohair and pussy yellow—yoke and sleeves are of the silk, bodice and yoke or skirt of the wool materials; style overshirt of silk and the skirt of the wool woven stuff.

Be an Enthusiast Talking Up the Go to Church Movement

Be an enthusiast in the GO TO CHURCH movement. Enthusiasm always is a splendid thing. It is doubly and trebly so when it is exercised to get people to GO TO CHURCH. Billy Sunday enthuses over religion. He carries his hearers off their feet.

There's one thing about talking up GO TO CHURCH. It is godly. It is unselfish. Your neighbor, in the wildest stretch of his imagination, cannot accuse you of an ulterior motive when you ask him to GO TO CHURCH.

A parent will insure himself in order that his wife and children may not suffer in the event of his death. That is a praiseworthy act. How about the insurance of their souls? No Christian parent will ask his children to remain away from church. On the contrary, he will urge them to go. The surest way to get them to GO TO CHURCH is to GO TO CHURCH himself.

IT IS SO EASY TO BECOME ENTHUSIASTIC OVER RELIGION AND THE GO TO CHURCH MOVEMENT. THE SUBJECT INSPIRES ENTHUSIASM. IT INSPIRES ELOQUENCE. IF A MAN HAS ANY CHRISTIANITY LEFT HE'LL LISTEN TO A PLEA TO GO TO CHURCH. WE ASK THE MAN WHO DOES NOT GO TO CHURCH TO GO BACK TO HIS BOYHOOD DAYS. AS A BOY HE WENT TO CHURCH. HE WAS GODLY THEN. IT IS HARD TO UNDERSTAND WHY, WHEN A YOUTH REACHES HIS MAJORITY, HE FALLS AWAY FROM CHURCH. SOME OF THE FLIPPANT YOUTHS ARE INCLINED TO SNEER AT THE YOUNG MAN WHO GOES TO CHURCH. IN THEIR BLINDNESS THEY ARE LIKELY TO CALL HIM A WEAKLING. ON THE CONTRARY, HE IS STRONG AND THEY ARE THE WEAKLINGS.

If on your way to church you meet a friend who does not GO TO CHURCH plead with him. Ask him to be a good fellow and grant you a favor. You are not asking a loan. You are asking him to better his body, his mind and his soul. He'll see the light.

Get others to GO TO CHURCH.

Familiar, but Unseen.

Things we see but don't notice were under discussion at the club luncheon table. This was the opportunity of the member who took pride in his superlative powers of observation. Talking from his note case a crisp one pointed note, he laid it on a plate and offered its equivalent to every member at the table who could answer correctly the following simple every day questions: (1) On looking at the face of a penny with the dated side toward you and the date at the bottom, does the head of the image on the coin face toward your left hand or toward your right? (2) How many ribs are there in the cover of an umbrella? (3) In a pack of cards one of the kings has only one eye visible—what is, his profile only is portrayed—which of the kings is it? (4) Which way do the seeds in the core of an apple point, toward the stem or opposite to it? The one pointed note did not change hands.—London Standard.

A Japanese Composing Room.

The most interesting department of a Japanese printing plant is the composing room. Great cases of type of all sizes extend the whole length of the mammoth room. As the Chinese and Japanese characters used in a printing office run far into the tens of thousands, the life of the compositor must be a continual search for the letter he desires to use.

The compositors were scuffling around the abides of the room hunting for these characters and all sitting at the tops of their voices, which apparently caused them to forget the terrors of their work. There seemed to be hundreds of them, and the din was deafening. After the proof is finally corrected the forms are made up, quite as they are in an American newspaper office, stereotyped and sent down to big cylinder presses.—Archie Bell in World Outlook.

Harriman Told Him.

Harriman had an almost supernatural instinct for knowing what was going on and who was doing it in the mysteries of stock manipulation. Once when Southern Pacific had been going up fast, Harriman and various banking houses buying in concert, he called up on the telephone one of his private brokers. "Somebody is selling," he said. "Yes, sir," was the answer. "Well, hand the market 25,000 for me." Immediately he called up the head of a banking firm much interested in the market. "Who's selling Southern Pacific?" he asked. "I don't know. We haven't been able to find out," was the answer. "I'll tell you," snipped Harriman; "it's your house." And he cut off the connection before any reply to him could be made.—Exchange.

Somewhat Different.

Fred—There are times when I care nothing for riches, when I would not so much as put forth a hand to receive millions.

Kittle—Indeed! That must be when you are tired of the world and its struggles and vanities, when your soul yearns for higher and nobler things. Is it not?

"No; you are wrong." "Then when is it?" "When I'm sleeping."—London Mail.

Success or Failure.

"How's that young doctor getting along in your neighborhood?" "It depends." "On what?" "If that crowd that hangs out in the city are patients he's doing well. If they're all doctors he's doing none at all."—London Mail.

The Judge Hit Back.

A late police magistrate was a most peevish judge in all his cases, and in important ones it was his custom to defer summing up until the next sitting of the court. On one occasion he gave an exhaustive decision on a case, after which the lawyer for the plaintiff rose and questioned it.

"Pardon me," said his worship. "I cannot allow you to reopen the case after I have given my final decision. It may be wrong, but that is my opinion."

The lawyer quickly replied:

"Then, your worship, I know it is no use knocking my head against a brick wall. I suppose I must sit down."

The magistrate adjusted his eyeglasses and, looking sarcastically at the lawyer, said:

"Sir, I know it is no use you knocking your head against a brick wall but I may add that I know of no one who could perform such an operation with less injury to himself than you."—Case and Comment.

Old Lord Mayors' Banquets.

There used to be a good deal of savagery about London's lord mayors' banquets, even in times comparatively recent. The humbler guests at least struggled with each other for food and had to bring their own table cutlery if they wished to eat decently and in comfort. For instance, Samuel Pepys tells us how, at the banquet served up two years after the restoration, there were many tables, "but none in the hall but the mayors and the lords of the privy council that had napkins or knives, which was very strange." Still more strange to such a lover of female beauty as Pepys was the plainness of feature of the city dames. Of the ladies' room he says: "I could not discern one handsome face." Being wearied with looking upon a company of ugly women, I went away and took coach and through Chopside and there saw the parents, which were very silly.

Old Time Theater Rowdies.

Rowdiness in London theaters was a common occurrence in the old days, as is shown by the following from the London Post of Oct. 27, 1798: "Two men in the pit at Drury Lane theater last night were so turbulent and riotous during the last act of 'Henry V.' that the performance was interrupted upward of a quarter of an hour. The audience at last ascertained their power and turned them disagreeably out of the theater. This should always be done to crush the race of disgusting puppets that are a constant nuisance at the playhouse every night."

A "Friendly Match."

I speak of a "friendly match," not at all forgetting that dictum of the old Scot to whom his opponent, breaking some trivial rule, said, "I suppose you won't claim that in a friendly match?" "Friendly match" was the reply. "There's no such thing at golf!"—London Telegraph.

Morbidly Suspicious.

"If you want to fight I'll hold your coat," said the bystander to the quarrelsome man.

"Great Scott! Can't a man even stand in the street without having a check boy try to work a tip out of him?"—Washington Star.

Couldn't Fool Her.

The Mother—Do you think he has matrimonial intentions, dear? The Maid—I certainly do, mother. He tried his very best to convince me last night that I appeared to better advantage in that twelve dollar hat than in the fifty dollar one.—Puck.

Poxy Jack.

Edith—Oh, Jack told a dozen girls he loved them before he proposed to you. Edith—Well, that's all right. When I spoke of it he told me they merely represented steps in his progression to his present ideal.—Exchange.

Let You Know You Ought to Go.

We're going up to Farmers' Week to hear a lot of experts speak about the things they've learned about, all tested, tried and studied out. I know some folks who hoard their dimes and hike away to southern climes when February's snow and sleet makes them demand a summer's heat; but we make tracks for old Cornell and not for some high priced hotel. We meet a lot of old-time friends; we're sorry when the whole thing ends.

But we come back full to the brim, to tackle all our work with vim; for last year we spent happy hours in finding how to grow her flowers, and how to make and serve a lunch that puts the "pep" in all the bunch; and how to get a lot more eggs and cure her hens of scaly legs; while little Johnny won a prize for corn of standard shape and size. And father found a balanced feed that gives his cows just what they need; and added to his orchard craft a brand new way to bud and graft.

So all, who better methods seek, should reach Cornell for Farmer's Week. There still is time to pack your grip and jump the train to make the trip in February in between the dates of twelve and seventeen.

Lived Almost a Century.

Henry Batten, aged 99 years, said to be the second oldest citizen of Cayuga county, died at the home of his granddaughter, in Auburn Wednesday afternoon after a short illness. He had been in good health since last August and was confined to his bed but a few days.

Mr. Batten was born in England, Oct. 21, 1817. He came to America in 1855 and settled in the town of Scipio, where he remained as a farmer until thirty years ago when he went to Auburn to live with his granddaughter and took up the raising of flowers as a pastime.

Mr. Batten is survived by two daughters, Mrs. James B. Hitchcock of Scipioville and Mrs. Clement Joyce of Fleming; four grandchildren, Mrs. R. D. Aumock of Auburn, Mrs. Eugene Dean of Cortland and Byron Hitchcock and Clayton Joyce of Scipioville and seven great-grandchildren.

The funeral will be held at the home of Mrs. Aumock at 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon, Rev. Frank M. Williams, pastor of the Trinity church, officiating with Rev. Thos. Husk, pastor of the Presbyterian church of Scipioville, assisting. Interment will be made in Fleming Hill cemetery.

Responsible Senate Clerkship.

Miss Jessie L. Simpson is the first woman to hold the position of clerk to the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations. Miss Simpson's position is in many ways the most responsible of all Senate clerkships, as she will be in intimate touch with the work of the committee which has more confidential and secret matters entrusted to its care than any other.

In her hands will be treaties with foreign governments pending before the Senate and much other information of a delicate nature. She will be the second highest paid woman in the government's service. Her salary of $3,000 a year is exceeded only by that of Miss Julia Lathrop, chief of the Children's Bureau, who receives $5,000.

John McCormack, Tenor.

A great treat is in store for all who come to the Auditorium, Auburn, N. Y., on Friday evening, Feb. 16, when John McCormack and assisting artists give one of their great concerts. All should hear him for it is certain that cities up this way will not get McCormack outside of the big cities. His concerts are popular, he sings in English and all can understand him. The theatre is a big place so come and order seats now. All prices 75c, $1.00, $1.50, $2.00 so none need remain away. Special trains on all roads, special trolley service. Address J. A. Hennessey, Box 192, Auburn, N. Y., Phone 519M or 522.

Shake Into Your Shoes.

Allen's Foot-Ease, the antiseptic powder that takes the sting out of corns and bunions. Over 100,000 packages are sold every day by the Genoa and Albany stores of the town. Sold everywhere.

Death of Chas. Carson.

The death of Chas. Carson, a well known resident of this vicinity, occurred at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Richard Clark, in the town of Venice, on Tuesday evening, after an illness of nearly two weeks with heart trouble.

Mr. Carson was born in Genoa, March 14, 1843, and was one of the family of five children born to Otis and Polly Carson. He was married in 1867 to Miss Anna Barber of Ohio, and soon after went to Iowa to live. Four daughters were born to them. The death of Mrs. Carson occurred at Coralville, Iowa, in 1882, and Mr. Carson and daughters came back to New York state to live the same year.

About twenty years ago, Mr. Carson married Miss Anna Whipple of East Genoa, and her death occurred in Genoa in December, 1910.

Mr. Carson was proprietor of the Genoa House for a number of years. After leaving here, he conducted a hotel at Memphis in company with his brother-in-law, Chas. Johnson. About a year and a half ago, the property was destroyed by fire and Mr. Carson returned to Venice to reside with his daughter. He was a veteran of the civil war, having been a member of the 75th Regt., N. Y. Vols.

Surviving are the four daughters—Mrs. Luella Powell of Coffeyville, Kansas, Mrs. Clara Clark of Venice, Mrs. Belle Steel of Genoa and Miss Irene Carson of Baldwinville, and one sister, Mrs. Chas. Johnson of Auburn. There are also six grandchildren and six great-grandchildren.

Funeral services were held on Thursday, a brief service at his late home and further services in the Presbyterian church in this village at 1 o'clock. Rev. L. W. Scott officiated. Genoa lodge, No. 421, F. & A. M., of King Ferry, of which the deceased was a member, conducted the funeral service of their order. Three appropriate hymns were sung by Mrs. Robert Mastin, Miss Ida Mastin and Messrs. Foster and Springer. There were numerous floral tributes, including one from the Masons and one from Stellar Rebekah lodge of Genoa. Burial was made in Bird cemetery near Locke.

Lane-Upson.

At the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Upson of East Genoa on Tuesday, Jan. 30, 1917, their daughter, Lenora Jessie, was united in marriage with Milo C. Lane of Locke, the ceremony being performed by the Rev. Frank J. Allington, the full Methodist Episcopal wedding service being used.

Promptly at 1 o'clock the bridal couple preceded by the flower girl, Olive Strong, dressed in pink, entered the room taking their places before an alcove of calla lilies and potted plants. The bride was beautifully gowned in white silk poplin and carried a bouquet of pink and white carnations with smilax.

Following the ceremony and congratulations, a four-course dinner was served, the table decorations being pink and white. An unique feature was the bride's table. The table, dinner service and silver were family heirlooms, dating back more than a century; the linen table cloth, fashioned in an old time pattern from flax grown and spun by a great grandmother who had lived on the same home farm.

Only a few near relatives and intimate friends were present. The bride and groom are well known and popular young people of the community, having a wide circle of friends and acquaintances and are deservedly esteemed and loved by all.

After a short wedding journey Mr. and Mrs. Lane will be at home with Mr. and Mrs. Upson.

From Land of Sunshine.

The following is a portion of a letter received by King Ferry friends from Mrs. E. A. Bradley of that place, who is at Stuart, Florida, this winter.

Stuart, Fla.

This certainly is the sunshine land; 78 deg. now and just grand. We have not had any rain, but the dews are very heavy. We are at "Danforth" on the St. Lucie—an ideal spot but not much grass. The white sand is everywhere and it takes so much fertilizer, water and labor to grow anything, excepting sand flies, that the green lawns are few.

We visited a 90 acre pineapple field. They are not in bearing at this time. It takes 22 months after plants are set for them to produce any fruit. They last from 3 to 5 years if they are well cared for, then the land is no good for a time. All kinds of garden truck so far excepting melons, have not been seen any of those yet; have had strawberries many times and they are fine. We have been for one long boat ride on the St. Lucie. It's so smooth and we enjoyed it.

By the way this is the house where Grover Cleveland and Joe Jefferson made their home while fishing in the St. Lucie. Cleveland's chair is here yet and of course we all have to sit in it. Geo. W. Perkins from New York City has a beautiful home on the left. The caretaker is getting ready for him to come most any time; the lawn and flowers are beautiful, but two men are working there all of the time.

We certainly enjoy "Henry." He has taken us through some dreadfully wild jungles, then into a wonderful paradise. I just wanted to look, admire and think. The sunset, water and palms, in one place, was almost heavenly (beautiful is too tame a word.) How I wish I could picture it to my friends but I am a poor artist.

Silent Evangelism

By REV. HOWARD W. POPE of the Moody Bible Institute of Chicago

TEXT—And the leaves of the tree were for the healing of the nations.—Rev. 22:2

The indiscriminate use of tracts by those whose zeal exceeds their wisdom has led many good people to question their value. It is foolish, however, to allow our prejudice against poor tracts to blind us to the value of good ones, and good ones can be had. The choicest thoughts of the best writers can now be found in leaflet form, and many a soul has been awakened by one of these silent messengers which God has put into the hand at just the right moment.

A man stepped into a street car in New York, and before taking his seat gave to each passenger a little card bearing the words, "Look to Jesus when tempted, when troubled, when dying." One of the passengers carefully read the card and put it in his pocket. As he left the car he said to the driver, "Sir, when you gave me this card I was on my way to the ferry, intending to jump from the boat and drown myself. The death of my wife and son had robbed me of all desire to live, but this card has persuaded me to start life anew. Good-day, and God bless you."

There is no such thing as chance in this world, and those who seek to be led by the Spirit often find themselves messengers of mercy to some weary soul. A lady once traveled two hundred miles to tell the writer personally how a card which he had given her had led to her conversion. It lay in her bureau drawer, bearing its silent testimony from time to time as she read it, until finally it led her to Christ.

Some ministers make constant use of leaflets in their personal work. They open the way for conversation, and often they are better than words, for a soul under conviction is sometimes disposed to quarrel, but one cannot quarrel with a tract. It never loses its temper, never answers back, and it sticks to what it has said. Besides, you can send a leaflet into many places where you cannot go yourself.

People in sorrow or sickness love to be remembered, and boys think more of a minister who occasionally gives them a bright leaflet. A man wrote me that in a town where he had used, "Why a Boy Should Be a Christian," forty-five people on their examination for church membership testified that they attributed their conversion mainly to that leaflet.

Housekeepers can use tracts to good advantage. Lay them on the parlor table that callers may read them while waiting. Often there is time enough for one to be converted while a lady is finishing her toilet. Give them to the milkman, the grocer, the postman; inclose them in letters, library books and packages.

Business men have fine opportunities for this kind of work. A man once said, "I cannot speak in meeting, but if you will supply me with choice reading matter, I will pay for it and inclose it in the packages which go out of my store." Recently a customer uttered an oath in a New York business house. The proprietor quietly handed him a "Little Preacher" entitled, "Why Do You Swear?" The man read it, tears came to his eyes, and he said, "I beg your pardon, sir." "Never mind me," said the other, "but don't you think you had better ask God's pardon? It was his name that you profaned." "I will do it, sir," said the man, and he shook his hand warmly. It is not an easy matter to rebuke a swearer, but anyone can say, "Here is a leaflet which you may find helpful," or he can mail one to every profane person whom he knows.

Teachers can make good use of leaflets. Those who cannot talk with their pupils can put into their hands the wise words of others. Old-fashioned tracts will not do for boys. They want something which sparkles with life, which rivets the attention, and which stops when it gets there.

This is a busy age, we all know. People have not time, or think that they have not, to read books on religion, but if you put into their hands something which is attractive, interesting, and which can be read in a few minutes, it is sure of attention. I am convinced that anyone can easily multiply his influence twentyfold by a wise use of printer's ink.

Never give away a tract unless you know its contents. Use all the tact you have and pray for more. An old man said to a train boy, "No, I don't want your popcorn, don't you see I haven't any teeth?" "Buy some gum drops then, nice fresh gum drops." That boy knew how to adapt himself to his customers, and so should we. Occasionally select a good tract, and printing on it the name of your church or Sunday school, with an invitation to the services, and give it away to every house.

Temperance Notes

(Conducted by the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union.)

WORK FOR A DRY STATE.

A Trades Unionists' Anti-Booze League has been organized in Nebraska. It will work for the dry amendment to be voted on by the people of the state next November. "Attempts to show that union labor as a whole is supporting the liquor interests will not be permitted to go unchallenged," says the president of the league, Mr. I. J. Copenhaver of the Omaha Typographical union.

The league has issued the following statement: "The object of this league is to impress upon the general public that certain 'labor organizations' and 'Trade Union Liberty Leagues,' controlled by the liquor interests, do not voice the true sentiment of the labor organizations of Nebraska in their effort to make it appear that the laboring class is subservient to the whims of said liquor industry.

"It shall be the aim of this organization to publicly disclaim in every way possible that union labor of Nebraska looks upon the use of liquor as an aid to its welfare and advancement, but rather that the use of intoxicating liquor is the greatest handicap union labor has to contend with in making its fight for justice for the working class.

"The members of this league resent any effort of the liquor element to place union labor of Nebraska in the attitude of supporting an industry that never has and never can aid the workman in his struggle for better conditions for himself and family."

WET BRAIN.

Dr. W. A. Evans conducts an "How to Keep Well" department in Chicago Tribune. The other day, under the above caption, he devoted considerable space to the drinker's brain.

"The man," he said, "who takes a social drink should know of a new danger that lies in store for him. It is wet brain. He has probably heard that drink lowers the moral tone, that it weakens resistance, that if he indulges presently he will be unable to resist, that it makes his judgment poor, and that, finally, he develops delirium tremens. Delirium tremens was the veil beyond which nothing lay.

"Doctors Scielesh and Beifeld now come forward with the warning that beyond delirium tremens lies wet brain, that only one man in four attacked by wet brain recovers. And Doctors Scielesh and Beifeld ought to know, for the former has been physician to the bridegroom for many years and he has cared for about 2,500 drunks a year during all of that time. A great many of these drunks have had delirium tremens. Many of them have had wet brain. Most of the wet-brain cases have died and autopsy has been made on them. Every drink is a mixed drink. There are no other kinds. When a man takes a drink, however simple it may be, he mixes in some degeneration of his nerve cells, some chance of delirium tremens, and a few other ingredients. Let him understand that he also pours into the glass about one finger of wet brain."

CONSUMPTION OF ALCOHOL.

That the use of beer and wines does not tend to decrease the consumption of strong liquors, is shown by Gabrielson, a Swedish statistician who has published the results of his researches. The figures are for the period 1906-1910.

France consumes more than three times as much alcohol per capita as the United States, due to its general use of wine. Italy consumes nearly three times as much, Spain twice as much, Greece twice as much, Switzerland twice as much, Portugal nearly twice as much. Belgium consumes considerably more alcohol, although it is one of the leading beer countries. In Germany 49 per cent of the total drink consumption is of spirits, while in the United States more than 55 per cent of the total drink consumption is beer, which seems to indicate that the Germans, despite their beer prejudices, use considerably more spirits per capita than the United States.

A GREAT LESSON.

Among the incalculable losses resulting from this great war there stands out prominently one benefit; it has brought to all countries engaged in it—and to others—a realization such as they never had before of the relation between alcohol and efficiency. Something, and perhaps much, of that new knowledge is sure to remain after peace returns, for, of course, it is not only with success in fighting that strong drink interferes, or only in war that men need to have all their wits about them all the time.—New York Times.

STATE ISSUE.

To save a hog from cholera and divorce a tick from a cow is national, but to prevent drunkenness and to divorce the saloon from the mothers and the homes of the land is a state issue.—Congressman J. W. Bryson.

FOR TRADE DEFENSE.

What would be said if prohibitionists in paying their bills would deduct 1 per cent to be applied to fighting the liquor traffic. That is what the liquor dealers of this country are doing.

Home Town Helps

GARDENS IN BACK YARDS

Mistake is General, According to Authority, of Starting Them Too Ambitiously.

Even the city dweller can cut expenses by utilizing small yards for raising vegetables, and the Garden Club of America has engaged experts to tell how it can be done. The information is being embodied in a book for backyard farmers. The book was begun in the fall, when members of the club anticipated hard times and scarcity of money for the working man, and it will be ready for publication and free distribution in a few weeks.

"We plan for the average yard of about 25 by 10 feet," said Mrs. J. Willis Martin, president of the club.

"Our aim has been to state the principles of gardening as simply as possible, planning the needs of the average family of four through the entire summer."

Philadelphia has the distinction of being the birthplace of the Garden Club of America, which embraces 22 clubs in other parts of the country, and Mrs. Martin is also a resident of that city.

The mistake that is made by nine out of ten amateur gardeners, however, is that of trying to do more than they are able to accomplish, and of endeavoring to grow too many things within the restricted bounds of an average suburban lot. It were well to bear in mind the fact that, after one has worked eight or nine hours in an office, one's strength is equal only to an hour or so of work in the garden. It should also be remembered that only about so many plants of any kind will grow and mature on a given area of garden ground.

Instead of trying, therefore, to grow half a dozen plants each of a score or more of vegetables, confine your efforts to those vegetables of which the family as a whole is most fond. Everybody, almost without exception, likes some vegetables more than others, and when the list of favorites is compiled it frequently will be found to be remarkably restricted. Here is the tentative list, which may be modified to suit individual tastes:

Sweet corn, an early and late variety or a single variety planted for succession; string beans, planted for all summer succession; peas, two or three plantings ten days apart; tomatoes of a long bearing variety or planted for succession; lima beans, either the bush variety, if the garden is small, or the kind grown on poles, if more space is available; a small plot for lettuce, preferably the kind that form heads; another small bed of onions; two or three hills of cucumbers; and, if desired, a short double row of beets for early summer use.

TAX ON STREET ADVERTISING

How They Do Things in France to Make and Keep Their Cities Beautiful.

The imposition of a tax on mural advertisements, which Mr. McKenna is reported to be considering, has produced satisfactory financial results for many years past in France, the London Chronicle states. Not a bill can be displayed on any boarding or in any window in that country without having affixed to it an inland revenue stamp costing at least a penny. Theatrical posters, cards announcing apartments to let, and bills offering rewards for recovery of lost dogs all come under the same law. On printed matter the stamps are usually attached fore printing. Frequent inspection deters evasion difficult.

In this connection our French neighbors put into operation, just over three years ago, another excellent idea which might well be adopted in this country, is the plan adopted to get rid of the hideous advertising boardings which then desecrated so many of the national beauty spots. A bill was brought in proposing a tax of $10 a square yard per annum on all boardings under six yards square, $20 a yard up to 10 yards, $40 up to 20, and $150 on those above 20. If two separate advertisements appeared on the same boarding, the tax was doubled; if three, trebled, and so on. The bill was introduced solely on artistic grounds and was passed with the enormous majority of 500 votes to 3.

Shady Lanes.

That the chief aim of man is not destructiveness finds so few exceptions in these puerile times that any evidence to the contrary calls for mention. A comforting instance of this sort is contained in a brief news item from an exchange, thus: "On a leading roadway out of this city farmers for six miles have agreed to plant shade trees on both sides 60 feet apart. The same variety of tree will be used the entire distance."

This is a little message with an appeal that is vital. These public-spirited farmers have their counterparts in all directions from the shaded avenues that will result from this wholesome, sensible, artistic and altruistic endeavor, already conceived, and, it is fervently hoped, already on the way toward being made an accomplished fact.

Fill In Picture Puzzle No. 2

As you have found out already, you drew an elephant when you drew picture No. 1. All you young people no doubt have seen him at the circus or in the zoo when he is tame. When angry his great strength makes his keepers tremble for their lives. It is fascinating to watch this animal sweep up articles with his trunk. Now, here is another puzzle cut. Start at 1 and let your pencil move to 2, 3, 4, 5, etc., and the picture of another well known object will be your reward.

America and Germany.

In its leading editorial Monday morning The Syracuse Post-Standard (Independent Republican) urges undivided support of President Wilson in the present National crisis. Under the heading "America and Germany," the editorial says in part:

The President should have and will have the support in this hour of crisis of every American citizen regardless of party, of nativity, and of personal prejudice. He deserves the hearty support of all parties in Congress, of newspapers of every shade of opinion, of men of every blood and race. There is none, no matter how strong may have been his opposition to the President's diplomacy, no matter how deep may be his antipathy to war, no matter how fervent may have been his sympathy with Germany, who can say that the President should have done less than he has done. There is neither party, race nor faith nor method now, there is only our common patriotism.

The Post-Standard will have extra wire service to carry all the important news from Washington and Europe up to the hour of going to press each morning. Every possible added facility is being utilized to give the news complete and unbiased. The movement of Federal and State troops and the Navy movements will be recorded so far as permitted by the Government.

Mysteriously Disappeared.

The Northern Christian Advocate has the following to say regarding the disappearance of Rev. J. C. B. Moyer, a well known Methodist clergyman:

"We regret to say that nothing has been heard of Rev. J. C. B. Moyer, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church of Troy, Pa., since Jan. 15. Every effort is being made by the family and their friends to locate the missing man. The suspense of the family is terrible and the nervous strain almost unbearable. All our readers will remember them at the Throne of Grace, especially the precious wife, who is bearing up so nobly. It is now being thought that Brother Moyer must have perished in the cold storms of the past two weeks."

Alice M. Fitts.

Miss Alice M. Fitts, a life-long resident of the town of Sempronius, died Wednesday morning, Jan. 31, after a few hours' illness from heart trouble, at the home of her brother, George W. Fitts, in Moravia.

Miss Fitts was in her 63rd year. She was born in Sempronius, the daughter of Lucius and Isabelle Hall Fitts. She is survived by two sisters, Mrs. Ann Smith of Sempronius and Mrs. Lura Clark of Scott and by three brothers, George W. Fitts of Moravia, Milton Fitts of Sempronius and Edward Fitts of Detroit. The remains were taken to her late home in Dresserville where the funeral was held at 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon. Burial was made in Sandhill cemetery in that place.

Patriotic Correspondence School.

Attention is called to the adv. in this issue of the Patriotic Correspondence Americanization School. This course is being recommended by Congressmen, ministers and patriots. The first book to be studied is "Americanization" by Royal Dixon. The possibilities of the course may readily be seen when it is known that Peace, Naturalization, Immigration, Commerce, Sanitation, Suffrage, Education, the Church, the Press, and kindred and allied subjects are presented to the masses in a simple manner and in a form as interesting as a story.

Stevenson-Connor.

A quiet wedding took place at 8 o'clock Saturday evening, Jan. 17, at the Oakwood Avenue Methodist church parsonage, Elmira Heights, when Miss Ruby Connor, the youngest daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. George Connor of Ludlowville, and William Stevenson of Groton, were united in marriage by Rev. Charles D. Purdy. The bride wore a dress of light blue chiffon over crepe de chine. The couple was unattended.

The organization is operated on the co-operative plan by farmers in that vicinity. It pays Farmers' League prices for milk.

A butcher shop in which horse meat is sold exclusively has been opened in New York with the sanction of the board of health. A sign over the shop reads: "Horse flesh for sale here. Round and sirloin steaks are quoted at 12 cents a pound, while inferior cuts sell as low as six cents a pound. Horse meat frankfurters retail as 10 cents a dozen.

Announcement was made in Dunkirk that two orders for a total of 44 engines have just been placed with the Brooks plant. They are for late summer delivery. The Southern Pacific is to have 24 oil-burning freight locomotives or the Santa Fe type, while 20 superheated freight engines of the Mikado type are to be built for the Northern Pacific.

Justice Charles H. Brown has refused to grant a certificate of reasonable doubt to John Edward Teiper, convicted of murder in the second degree for killing his mother, Mrs. Agnes M. Teiper. An appeal will be taken, but Justice Brown's decision means that Teiper must be taken to Auburn forthwith to begin serving his sentence of 20 years to life.

The Empire Powder Corporation, which is about to erect a large factory, two miles northeast of Le Roy, has purchased a 70-acre tract of land adjoining the company's property. The new plant will be started this spring and bids have already been received for the construction work. The company, besides other things, will manufacture high explosives.

Potatoes in Hornell have reached the unprecedented price of $2.40 a bushel and grocers have arrived at the point where they are selling them by the half peck lots. The grocers are able to buy only small quantities, sometimes a bushel at a time. Never before, since the Civil war, have the prices been so high and even at that it is practically impossible to get the tubers.

WHY WE ALL NEED MILITARY SERVICE IN THIS COUNTRY.

— In urging universal military education in America the Medical Record says that in spite of our excellence in trained athletes the large numbers of pale, undernourished and poorly developed youths and pasty, flabby men in the cities will convince any open minded observer of the desirability of regular physical training. And the country bred are little superior to those brought up in the cities. Dr. Lucien Howe states that the standard of health of the average American is so low that more than 50 per cent of the applicants for the army and navy were rejected for physical disability in 1914, and in the following year less than 10 per cent of the applicants for the marine corps were found physically fit. But it is for its effects on character and efficiency that the Medical Record specially urges universal military training. It says "the lack of deference shown by the American boy to his elders is notorious and parallels his lack of self restraint and self sacrifice, qualities out of which character is developed." And again, "the one great lesson taught by military service is the one great lesson most needed by the citizens of this country—obedience."

FOR SNOWBIRDS.

How to Feed Them All Winter to Their Own Tastes.

One of the main things necessary in feeding the birds in winter is to see that it is done regularly. They get used to coming to the feeding place and suffer when food is not there. The food should always be in good condition and suitable for the birds for which it is intended. Mountain ash berries are always welcome. A small box containing old mortar, salt, fine poultry grit, should be placed where the birds can get it. Water free from ice is also most important. Keep the English sparrows away as much as possible.

As for the kinds of food, corn is much relished. Hemp is one of the best seeds for seed eating birds. Japanese millet is also good. Broken nuts of all kinds, sunflower seed, squash seed and cracked corn will attract nuthatches, chickadees and bluejays. Blemished or wilted oranges cut in half or specked apples are greedily eaten. Most birds prefer oats to wheat. Sheaves of wheat, oats or barley securely fastened to a pole and put out on the lawn become a feeding place de luxe. Common table salt is much relished by many birds. Old mortar and fine poultry grit are enjoyed by cross bills and other birds. Bread or cake crumbs, broken biscuits, ground oats and wheat, canary seed, boiled rice, celery tops and chopped meat will all be eaten by the various birds. Mountain ash berries are fine to use during the spring migration; also butternuts, scraps of meat, pumpkin and apple seeds.

Trim your porches in the fall with evergreen branches. The green attracts the birds. Place feed boxes among the branches and suspend them from the ceiling. Fasten snet and fat meat where the birds can get it. Coconut shells cut in half and suspended by wires make safe and good feeding places.

For birds that will eat only on the ground keep a space clear from snow directly under your window from which food can be dropped without disturbing the birds.

Birds attract birds. Gradually draw them close to the house by scattering broken nuts on the trees and ground.

How to Select Cloth Relative to Quality of Weave.

In a circular prepared by Miss M. Jane Newcomb, assistant in home economics extension at the Pennsylvania State college, appear the following suggestions concerning the selection of cloth relative to quality of weave:

More attention should be given to the weave of cloth, as much material on the market is made up for effect. Many times, for example, cloth is loosely woven, then the spaces filled with starch or some other substance and the whole polished in such a way that it presents an attractive surface, but does not have the wearing quality. The presence of a filling substance can be discovered by rubbing a piece of the material vigorously between the hands. The weaves that are most common in cotton materials suitable for children's clothes are the plain, the twill and the satin. All of these are good when they are firm and meet the foregoing test.

How to Sew on Buttons So That They Will Stay.

Take a small stitch, bringing the knot on the right side. Run up through one hole of the button and draw it down just over the knot. Lay a pin across the button and work the stitches over the pin. When the button is firmly sewed on remove the pin. Pull the button out from the material and wind the thread around the threads between the button and cloth several times to form a shank. Pass the needle through to the wrong side and insert the thread with several small stitches.

The shank formed makes buttoning easier and lessens the strain on the cloth. The knot is brought up on the right side and under the button to keep it from being worn off.

SUITED THE SULTAN.

As Expense Cut No Figure, He Got Just the Car He Wanted.

It appears that Ali Dinar, the late sultan of Darfur, whose truculence brought about the recent English expedition which took possession of his territory, was very much taken with the various inventions which science has of late years produced, says the Cairo correspondent of the Pall Mall Gazette.

When the expeditionary force entered El Fasher, the capital of Darfur, they found that this town, buried in the center of Africa, was connected with most of the outlying villages by a telephone, which had its exchange in the sultan's palace, where also were found several of the most modern phonographs equipped with the latest European and Arabic records.

One of their most astonishing "finds" was a huge steam roller which had upon it a most luxurious armchair. Inquiries as to its purpose soon cleared up the mystery.

It seems that Ali Dinar, who had received two very fine motorcars as a present, found to his disgust that it was impossible for him to use them owing to there being no roads near his capital. He had communicated with his agent in Cairo and ordered him to find something which he could use.

The agent consulted some friends and on their suggestion purchased a steam roller, on which he had placed an armchair, it not being considered consistent with the dignity of the sultan that he should ride in the cab of the engine.

The machine cost no less than £2,500, but expense was no object, and in due course the steam roller arrived at El Fasher. It completely took the fancy of the capricious sultan, who, posing in the armchair, lost no time in trying it.

To every one's surprise it negotiated the "roads" without difficulty, though its speed was necessarily very slow. The sultan was mightily pleased with the arrangement and never failed to use his steam roller whenever he proceeded on tour through his territory.

One can well imagine that the royal progress in this style did not fail to increase the awe with which this fierce monarch was already regarded by his subjects.

Advertising a Sale!

YOU don't leave your rig in the middle of the road and go to a fence-post to read a sale bill do you? Then don't expect the other fellow to do it.

Put an ad in this paper, then, regardless of the weather, the fellow you want to reach reads your announcements while seated at his fireside.

If he is a prospective buyer you'll have him at your sale. One extra buyer often pays the entire expense of the ad, and it's a poor ad that won't pull that buyer.

An ad in this paper reaches the people you are after. Bills may be a necessity, but the ad is the thing that does the business.

Don't think of having a special sale without using advertising space in this paper.
